The Romance Ended.

Our readers remember the romantic marriage, last fall, of Mr-James Gilliam, of this township, to a widow from New York, who had advertised in a newspaper for a husband. Well, just as might have been expected, this romantic marriage has ended in a separation, for, on last Tuesday, Mr. Gilliam returned to her Northern home. And there was quite a contrast between her coming and going-between her arrival and departure. When she arrived here Mr. Gilliam, with all the joyousness of an expectant groom, met her at Moncure and escorted her from there to take her to his home, about and their illusions, or who is Golden Seal. three miles from here. But when afraid that fancies and imageries she departed she walked alone from his house to this place .-Chatham Record.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis.

Many Southern people have criticised Airs, Jefferson Davis for making her home in the North. That she has good reason for making New York her place of residence is very evident from an interview with Edgar S. "Mrs. Davis told me," said Mr. Wilson, "that the plantation at Bezuvoir did not afford a living for herself and daughter, on account of freshets. floods, the low price of cotton, etc., and that it was necessary for her to work for a living. CASTING OFF A LINE.

Mr. Glimby Meets With a Little Experiente da a New York Wharf.

"I'm afraid there's one towboat captain who would not give me a job if I should apply," said Mr. Blimby, "and that is the man whose line I cast off in South street the other day. The tug was lying along the end of the wharf, hanging by a single line, with the loop around the head of a spile, and the other end made fast around the forward bitts aboard the boat. The captain was in the pilothouse, and he called to the deckhand that he guessed they standing on the end of the wharf, and when the deckhand began casting the line off from the bitts I started for the spile to cast it off

"I like boats, and I've loafed along South street a good deal, and I've seen a million men cast off going to now. All the men I ever saw cast off a line just took hold of it and lifted it right off, easy. I took hold of this one with perfect confidence, but the first thing I knew it sagged down and stuck on the other side of the spile, and it did the same thing again when I tried, which I dfd somewhat hastily from another point. It didn't come off easily at all, and finally I had to take hold of it with both hands and lift it up carefully clear of the spile, while the captain, looking out of the pilothouse window, and the deckhand, standing by the bitts and looking up at me from the deck, smiled good humoredly at my clumsiness. By that time I had discovered that in casting off a line, as in most other things, a man must learn five extra frames amidships. This how to do it before he can do the work well. But the worst was yet to come.

"I had always observed that when a man cast off a line he hung on to it for a moment and walked along the wharf till he was somewhere near abreast of the man who was taking it in aboard and then gave it a little toss, so as to keep it out of the water, keeping it dry to make it last longer and make it easier and Savanna 1.45 night Charles ly as I came along. A QUEEN OF THE SEAS.

The Record Breaking Trips of the Famous Old Red Jacket.

In Maine they dwell with pride upon the performance of the Red Jacket, built in Rockland in 1853 by Deacon George Thomas. The Red Jacket made the run from New York to Liverpool in 13 days 1 hour and 25 minutes in the month of January, 1854. This was the best trip up to that time, and it probably never has been beaten, although a faster trip, by a few hours, was claimed for the Boston ship Lightning. When the Red Jacket started would go up to pier 919. I was on her trip, the record was held by the ship Sovereign of the Seas, built in East Boston by Donald McKay-13 days 19 hours.

The Red Jacket was 234 feet keel, 44 feet 7 inches beam, 16 feet lower hold, 8 feet between decks, 225 feet over all and measured 2,500 tons, making her the largest ship affoat lines, but it's a funny thing I had at that time. There was great exnever cast off one myself, but I was citement, both in New York and in Liverpool, over the first trip of the Red Jacket, for it was known all over the maritime world that she had been built expressly to beat the record of the Sovereign of the Seas. She was also to set a mark for the Live Yankee, a ship built at Rockland at about the same time, and for several others. Large amounts of money were wagered on the result of her passage.

The Live Yankee had a hard passage and came nowhere near the Red Jacket's time.

As illustrating the shrewdness of Deacon Thomas, it is related that, hearing that several other builders were about to construct ships on the same lines as the Red Jacket, he altered his molds slightly, putting in probably helped the speed of the Red Jacket. At any rate, in that respect she differed from her rivals.

A Rockland man, who was in Liverpool when the Red Jacket arrived there, gives an interesting account of her triumphal entry into the great English seaport. The excitement was intense—scarcely less than in New York. A day before the Yankee clipper was expected to arrive the American steamer came pleasanter to handle. When I had in and reported the ship as just finally got this line off, I held on to outside, and in a few hours the Red it and walked with it toward the Jacket appeared at the harbor's boat to toss the loop aboard, but I mouth. Hundreds of cheering sailnoticed that the man on deck took ors had boarded her, and two tugs up the slack very promptly and ful- had lines to the ship, although her about, threw her yards hard aback

About a year afterward the clipper ship Lightning was built by Donald McKay at East Boston for an English firm for the express purpose of beating the Red Jacket's time between New York and Liver-A Jersey City druggest is making pool, and it was claimed that she accomplished the feat by a few hours, but the claim has always been disputed, and it is likely that Simple Language.

Simple language is on all accounts preferable to high sounding words when ordinary matters are discuss-We wish that young people could be taught that it does not add a foot to the stature of a house to call it a "residence;" that a church or even a meeting house is as venerable as "the sacred edifice;" that it is no more genteel to say "retire". covered with side plaitings and so ment is really a gown and not a "promenade costume," that it need not bring a blush to the fair cheek of even Mr. Popsnap's young person to say leg instead of "limb," when leg is meant; that the supper at an evening party is not "the entertainment," and that there are well founded objections to the use of "nicely" as an adjective describing one's health.-New Orleans Times-Democrat.
