WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Feb. 28, 98.

Shall the most dastardly piece of treachery perpetrated in the nineteenth century be condoned for a cash consideration? That is the question Mr. McKinley raised when he sent Secretary Sherman—at last the old man is given something to do, but it was a nauseating job—to circulate among his former colleagues of the Senate, for the purpose of informing them that the administration had decided, if the naval court reported that the Maine was blown up by intention, to demand a cash indemnity of Spain. If Mr. Sherman correctly reported some of the remarks made by Senators with whom he discussed the matter Mr. McKinley must have blushed.

Ever since it has been practically known that the court had found unmistakable evidence that the Maine was wrecked by treachery, the administration has been gradually, through divers newspaper interviews, and by other methods, preparing the public for this indemnity business, by dropping hints about the injustice of holding Spain responsible when it disavowed the crime or any knowledge of it, and of the probability that the crime was committed by some Spaniard who was an enemy of the present Spanish Ministry, etc., etc. The Spanish charge d'affaires in Washington also took a hand in the attempt to have his country let down easily by officially stating that no mines or torpedos have ever been planted in the harbor at Havana. The fact that this fellow was once associated with de Lome was enough to prevent belief of any statement he might make.

There is not the slightest doubt that an overwhelming majority of Congress believes with a majority of the people of the country that Spanish blood should be shed to avenge the poor devils who were the victims of Spanish treachery in Havana harbor; but there is also a strong desire in Congress to act in concert with the administration, if possible, in order that it cannot be said by the Spaniards, or other foreigners, that there is a division of sentiment in the United States. This desire may result in Congress allowing the demand for a money indemnity to be made on Spain, but it will be, even then, largely because of the belief that Spain could not pay the indemnity and would not if it could, and that war would be the result, anyway.

Although Mr. McKinley continues to talk peace, his actions, through his subordinates, show that he believes with almost everybody else in Washington, that war with Spain is inevitable, and, to his credit be it placed, he is taking vigorous steps to see that we are fully prepared to do our share of the fighting when it once gets started. The more promptly and vigorously he acts upon that Maine report, which is expected this week, the better he will stand with Congress and the people.

Mr. McKinley must have been a little bit afraid that the well-known scrapping propensities of Teddy Roosevelt made him a dangerous man to have in charge of the Navy Department at this time, or Secretary Long would now be taking several days rest and Teddy would be in charge. Mr. Long announced his intention of going away for three or four days, but Mr. McKinley persuaded him to change his mind. Most persons would rather see Teddy running the machine just now.

Representative Sulzer, of New York, who has been somewhat harshly criticised because of his objection, when unanimous consent was asked in the House that the bill, already passed by the Senate, providing for the enlistment of two additional regiments of artillery, be taken up and considered until disposed of, immediately after the passage of the sundry civil bill, says he did so because he thought there was no necessity to increase the regular army, and that he regarded the bill as an attempt on the part of the plutocrats to take advantage of existing conditions to increase the army and thus still further entrench themselves against the people. As to the special needs of these men now to fight Spain, Mr. Sulzer said: "Why, if war should be declared, I would resign my seat in Congress in 24 hours and would raise a regiment in my district. I would get a thousand young able-bodied fellows who would fight and we would go to the front under some Federal brigade commander; and there would be no lack of such regiments."

The defeat of the Republicans by the combined votes of the Democrats and Populists several times recently, when the House was in committee of the whole, has so aggravated the Republican leaders, that they have notified the Republican members that they must be more regular in their attendance and have given them a hint that if they are not, a list of the absentees will be daily published, as was done in the forty-seventh Congress.

Mrs. Cotten Honored.

The New Haven, Conn., Palladium gives a full account of the brilliant reception in that city given by Mrs. Godfrey Dunscomb in honor of the Colonial Dames from which we make the following extract:

"The special feature of the reception was the recitation by Mrs. Cotten, of North Carolina, of an original poem, 'Virginia Dare.' The poem, itself is really a remarkable bit of literature and Mrs. Cotten recites it beautifully. It is long, occupying an hour for delivery, yet not once does the author refer to her notes, and throughout the entire time, her enunciation is delightfully clear and the attention of the listener is never lost. Mrs. Dunscomb heard Mrs. Cotten recite in Washington and induced her to come here.

"At the close of Mrs. Cotten's recitation, she was presented with a huge bunch of bride roses tied with blue and yellow ribbons, by the Colonial Dames."

Signs of Thrift in the South.

There is manifest throughout the South at this time, in spite of the depression which prevails elsewhere...

The Constitution has already called the attention of its readers to the gratifying review of southern industrial conditions...

Family of Four on $200 Per Year.

A. H. Zander contributes an article to the March Ladies Home Journal in which he tells how he maintains a family of four persons, his wife, two children and himself on $200 per year.

Of course, the South may not make good during the present year the predictions of the staff correspondent. To do this she must exceed by 1,200 miles the record made by the entire country during the past year; and she must exceed her own record by 2,100 miles.

While it may savor of enthusiasm to declare that in latent possibilities the South is unsurpassed by any other section of the country, yet such is undeniably and absolutely true.

years vast changes are destined to occur in the commercial and industrial status of the South. Everything seems to point clearly in this direction; and, cheered by the prospect which the future holds out to us...

Senator Lindsay's Wish.

"If I had plenty of money to do with as I wished," said Senator Lindsay, of Kentucky, to a party of friends, at the Hotel Wellington the other morning.

"I'd have music played at all my meals and get cigars made at $50 a hundred. Those are two luxuries I would most surely indulge myself in.

"The platform on which I stand and have stood for twenty years and more is simple, unadulterated, unpurchasable, unballied manhood."

Sam Jones Platform.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 21.—Rev. Sam Jones today announced his platform as a candidate for Governor. He made the announcement in a public address.

Next to himself the evangelist favors Allen D. Candler for Governor, and he fires hot shot into the opponents of that gentleman.

"When you shoot in the hole where they are they will come out a-humping and swear they were not in there. But they are full of shot all the same.

"The platform on which I stand and have stood for twenty years and more is simple, unadulterated, unpurchasable, unballied manhood."

As to the financial issues the evangelist said: "I am sick and tired of the average little politician racking around over the State preaching gold bugger or championing silver diggery...

Summing up, Mr. Jones thus concludes: "Let's pen up the jackasses for a while in the back lot and rot out some thorough-breeds."

"The Army and Navy Year Book" rates the navies of the world as follows: 1, Great Britain; 2, France, 3, Russia; 4, Italy; 5, United States; 6, Germany; 7, Spain; 8, Japan; 9, Austria, and 10, Netherlands, but, under present naval contracts, according to the New York Tribune, Japan in 1899 will go to the fifth place, crowding down the United States and Germany one point.

IN PICTURES AND PRINT.

Advantages of the Author Artist Over the Mere Writer.

The artist author has something that he wishes to tell, and to do this he has at his command two modes of expression, each of which supplements and supplies the shortcomings of the other. Where the limitation blocks the way of words he can imagine out his idea with his pencil. When it fails, words can supply its need, and so he can present his idea before the world at a tremendous advantage.

It seems as if he must be better fitted than any one else for that presentation of what he means. He has lived and moved with his characters. He has eaten and drunk, slept and wakened with them, and to him as to no one else they are visible personalities. But let him describe them, however minutely and accurately, and they will not be impressed on the mind of the casual reader as they would be if he saw them in a picture, or, if the reader is imaginative enough to clothe those characters with a body, it is probably not at all what they were really meant to be.

How intensely interesting it would have been if Poe, like Blake, had been able to imagine out some of those strange visions that filled his brain not only in words, but in actual lines as well, or if Cervantes had left us some idea of how Don Quixote and his Spanish squire really looked, however roughly drawn they might have been!

It is under the Byzantine emperors that the earliest manuscripts of modern Europe were produced, and they exist in great numbers and are of surprising splendor. A timid suggestion may indeed be ventured that the Byzantine scribes were less careful of their calligraphy than of their paintings. That may be true, and it may yet remain true that the Byzantines had a splendid calligraphy of their own and a splendid notion of how to adorn their pages.

The Irish monks of the sixth and seventh centuries, the English monks of the ninth century and the French of a somewhat later time were the fellows for beautiful lettering. The splendid manuscript which is called by the name of King Knut and which lies in the British museum contains lettering which is so beautiful in its strange modification of the classical Roman letter that even the splendid renaissance work of five centuries later scarcely equals it. Every one knows the "Gothic" character of the twelfth and thirteenth century manuscripts, a character which the modern German typographer has preserved for our sins and to punish the eyes of those who would fain study German thoroughly, but few persons know the pre-Gothic character, the beautiful lettering founded on the antique forms, which was preserved in the north and in the south, alike in Lombardy, in France, and in England, down to a time at least as late as the year 950. Take any initial page of a tenth century manuscript, northern or southern, and see how much more beautiful is the writing than are the figures of men and animals which are supposed to adorn it. The ignorance shown in drawing these visible objects is great, and the absence of any power over their forms is really ugly and offensive, but the power of abstract form, of making a letter into a beautiful thing, is, however, so great as to be quite inconceivable to a race of people like ourselves, who have lost the trick of decorative design.—Independent.

Of the 119,900,000 old copper cents which were sent out from the mint only the 900,000 have ever been accounted for, and only now and then is a stray one of the remaining 119,000,000 seen in circulation.

The Hyacinth.

For more than a century, from 1559 to 1680, the tulip had an undisputed reign till a rival appeared in the shape of a double hyacinth. Rea says of the "hyacinth, or ja-cinth:" It is "of divers sorts, and many of them of small esteem." Some double varieties were, however, known at that time, three being mentioned by Bauhin, but the double kind from which modern ones have been derived was raised at the end of the seventeenth century by Peter Voorhelm, a celebrated Dutch florist. The hyacinth was never quite such a rage as the tulip, though during the height of its popularity great prices were paid for bulbs in Holland. It is said as much as 2,000 florins, or about £150, was given for one root by some enthusiastic Dutch collector.—Longman's Magazine.

DOG ELECTED MARSHAL.

A Four Footed Candidate That Fought Thirty-one Votes Over His Opponent.

Forty years ago a man in Aurora, Ind., owned a huge Newfoundland that was known all over the town by the name of Bob. The man was Jim Kelso, a conspicuous character of those days. The dog possessed wonderful sagacity and would do almost anything within reason that its master directed it to do, and when told to "take him" would throttle and down the strongest man and hold its victim without harming him seriously until ordered to release him by its master.

So great was the reputation of this sagacious animal for police duty that in the spring of 1859, at the city election, the dog, under the name of Bob Kelso, was voted for at the polls and beat for the office of city marshal Clint Theetge, the principal candidate, by a majority of 31 votes. Old Captain Weaver and several other wealthy citizens of that period promptly proposed to have the dog properly invested with the rights of the office to which such a decisive majority had duly declared at regular election a preference for over its human competitor and prepared in legal form an official bond in the sum of $50,000, signed by numerous sportive parties and with a certificate from the election board, that Bob had received a majority of 31 votes over Candidate Theetge.

They presented themselves before Mayor Starks, with the dog wearing an officer's star on its breast and carrying in its mouth the official bond, certificate of election, etc., and then, ordering the canine to stand on its hind feet and hold up its right paw in position to take the oath of office, requested the mayor to swear the animal to faithfully discharge the duties for which it had been elected, as required by law.

The mayor refused, regarding the proceedings as a joke, but the backers of the brute asserted their sincerity in the matter and insisted that the dog be recognized as the city marshal, or they would defeat the mayor for re-election. The determination of the parties kept his honor in a quandary for several days until Theetge could invoke the aid of the law to put him in the position, but he afterward became so disgusted over the affair that he resigned and moved to Missouri and died there soon after.

Kelso met with misfortune and committed suicide and the dog became the property of Tom Wain-scott, who enlisted in the army at the breaking out of the war and made a gallant soldier of the Eighteenth Indiana volunteers. Wain-scott took the dog to the war with him, and whether on the march, in the camp or amid the thunders of battle he was never separated from his four footed companion.

At the battle of Pea Ridge Tom Wain-scott was shot to death. The next day when the detachment of soldiers sent to bury the dead appeared on the sanguinary field they found the devoted animal standing guard by the side of its lifeless master, and no efforts could induce it to leave the body or allow any one to touch it.

Finally a soldier seized hold of the corpse to drag it away when the dog attacked him with such ferocity that his comrades, in fear of his life, ran it through with their bayonets to rescue him from his peril, but in recognition of the undying devotion of the faithful creature to its dead master they buried it at his feet in token of their respect for its fidelity. Thus heroically perished this brave brute, a martyr to its instincts of duty.

A Narrow Escape.

One day a mother who had been to a country house near Marseilles was returning at twilight to the city with her son, a child of 8 years, who had been put in a peach basket borne by a donkey, and the mother, fearing the child might catch cold (it was in November), had covered him with a thick brown shawl. Tired with rumping around the country all day, cozy and warm under the thick shawl, the child was soon asleep and hidden by the sides of the basket. There is a local custom house at the gates of Marseilles, and when the inspector surmises that any package contains contraband articles he thrusts a sharp steel pick through it. He was preparing to do this with the basket when the mother, some distance behind, saw his intention and shrieked out that her son was in the basket. It was Adolphe Thiers.—Exchange.

Fakes

It is strange what sensational reports can come out from Cuba. In the last day or two Gen. Lee and Capt. Sigbee have both been assassinated, on paper.

Dissolution

W. F. Morrill has withdrawn from the Greenville Supply Company, J. W. Higgs now being sole proprietor. See notice of dissolution published in this issue.

Depot Improvements

Agent J. R. Moore has had stoves placed in the waiting rooms at the depot and discarded the use of open fire places. The change will be more comfortable for people waiting for trains.

Cutting Scrape.

Last night about ten o'clock, Finn Tilghman, white, of this place, and Henry Forbes, colored, of Greenville, N. C., got into a difficulty in Perkin's bar, in which Tilghman got a slight cut over the left eye.—Kinston News.

The Boys Are Ready.

Several South Greenville kids armed with air guns were out on parade the other day. They said they were getting in trim to go lick Spain. Possibly the boys would be about as ready to go as some of the elder folks.

Afraid of War.

Capt. J. T. Smith worked a joke on some of the boys of the Pitt County Rifles, Monday evening, by telling them the company was ordered to report in Wilmington in twenty-four hours. And they do say that one of the soldier boys actually cried.

If war should be declared you would see more people taking to the woods than could be found out in the open.

Notice of Dissolution.

The firm of the Greenville Supply Co. composed of J. W. Higgs and W. F. Morrill is this day dissolved by mutual consent, W. F. Morrill withdrawing from the firm. J. W. Higgs will continue the business under the same firm name and assumes all liabilities and all accounts are to be paid to him. This Feb. 28, 1898.
J. W. HIGGS,
W. F. MORRILL.

Notice.

I wish to inform the public that I will continue in the Brokerage business, and will carry a full line of all kinds of groceries and fruits. Thanking my friends for the patronage given me in the past, I solicit a continuance of their orders. Office at present in S. T. White's store.
