

AMERICAN FLAG.

Raised by the Commander of the Bennington Over Wake's Island.

Washington, March 21.—The conditions under which Wake island, midway between Honolulu and the Philippines, was taken possession of in the name of the United States by the commander of the Bennington, on her voyage across the Pacific, are given in a report to the navy department from Commander Taussig, dated at sea two months ago. The officer says he approached the island with the navigator at the masthead, steaming slowly along the southern and eastern sides to discover signs of habitation, and looking in vain for an anchorage. He did not circumnavigate the island, but seeing that the outlet on the north was barred not only by a wall of coral but also by a sand pit, he returned to the lee of the island. A landing was made at 1 o'clock on the 17th of January and a flag pole raised. Beside some pieces of wreckage, no signs of human occupation were visible.

When the flag staff was in place the sailors were formed in two ranks facing seaward, and having called all to witness that the island was not in the possession of any other nation, Commander Taussig ordered the American flag to be raised by Ensign Wettengel. Upon reaching the truck the flag was saluted by twenty-one guns from the Bennington.

After the salute the flag was nailed to the masthead with battens, and a brass plate with the following inscription was screwed to the base of the flag staff:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
WILLIAM M'KINLEY,
President.
JOHN D. LONG,
Secretary of the Navy.
COM. EDWARD D. TAUSSIG,
U. S. Navy, Commanding the U. S.
S. Bennington.

This, 17th day of January, 1899, took full possession of the island known as Wake's Island for the United States of America.

STATE NEWS.

Happenings in North Carolina.

Hendersen has adopted a compulsory vaccination ordinance.

The North Carolina Car Company, at Raleigh, has made an assignment.

Two young white men of Wake county have been arrested for arson. They are charged with burning a barn.

Raleigh people have adopted the use of the special delivery postage as a means of quick communication with each other over the city.

A man rolling a wheel-barrow from New York to Vancouver, British Columbia, on a wager of $5,000 that he can make the trip in two years, was making his way through North Carolina this week. He is traveling about 20 miles a day.

A Winston special says: "Rev. 'Father' Needman, of Surry county, will be 100 years old on May 26th. He has accepted an invitation to preach the annual sermon at the commencement of Trinity Academy at Pilot Mountain, on the date of his 100th anniversary.

W. H. Lupton, a shad fisherman on the Neuse river, while fishing on the river eight miles below here, was run over by the schooner sailed by Capt. Bob Rice. Lupton's boat was broken up and his shad net badly cut. It is said the wind blew so strongly that the schooner could not avoid running down the small boat.—Newbern Journal.

A young man by name of S. T. Bendett, a painter, fell from a scaffold in front of Brown & Stricklands undertaking establishment. He was standing on a narrow plank painting when he made a misstep and fell to the ground, a distance of 15 or 20 feet. Fortunately he landed on his feet and was, except for being stunned, not hurt.

The young man had been frequently cautioned to be careful by Mr. Strickland, who noticed that he handled himself rather carelessly.—Durham Herald.

Bad Wreck on N. & W. Road.

A fatal wreck occurred on the main line of the Norfolk and Western Railroad, at Ada, yesterday morning, killing fireman R. F. Vandingham, of Roanoke, and a brakeman named E. A. Graham. A tramp was also killed. Several trainmen were more or less injured. Three freight trains were wrecked. All were going east. The first train had stopped. The second broke in two, and the sections in their flight down the mountainside crashed into the first train. They were soon followed by the third, which had not been flagged.—Winston Sentinel.

An Unusual Man.

Speaking of people who have peculiarities or oddities, Mr. Thos. A. Kerr, of Fallstown township, tells The Landmark of one of his neighbors, which is a case worthy of record. Mr. John Bass is 81 years old. He never in his life bought a box of matches or a gallon of kerosene oil, and never carried an umbrella nor a fan. He has two mules and one of the mules is 35 years old and was never shod nor trimmed.—Statesville Landmark.

A YOUNG WIFE DIES

Mrs. A. W. Outterbridge Called from Earth

Sorrow filled many hearts this morning when it was learned that Mrs. Minnie Outterbridge, wife of Mr. A. W. Outterbridge, was dead. She died at 9 o'clock at their home in South Greenville. She had been sick for some days, but for the past day or two her condition had been such as to give her friends hope of her recovery, yet how soon were these hopes blasted.

Mrs. Outterbridge was 24 years of age. Her maiden name was Miss Minnie Askew, and it was only in April of last year that she was married, at her former home near Lewiston, to Mr. Outterbridge. In the brief time that she lived in Greenville she became very much endeared to all who knew her. She was a member of the Baptist church, and hers was truly a consecrated Christian life. In her death the church and the community loses one of its best and noblest women.

The sorrowing husband has the heartfelt sympathy of all in the deep grief that has come into his life by the death of his devoted wife.

Funeral services will be held in the Baptist church Friday afternoon at one o'clock from which the remains will be taken to the Outterbridge burial ground, six miles from town, for interment.

Vaccinated on The Leg.

There are 123 young ladies from various parts of the west in attendance at Omaha's aristocratic seminary for young women, Browne Hall, and 115 of the students are at present walking on crutches. In fact, for the present the seminary is a walking hospital, and two wagon loads of crutches have been sent there within the past few days. The trouble is the result of an experiment the young ladies indulged in with reference to being vaccinated. Some time ago the faculty announced that every girl in the seminary must be vaccinated. The only matter of preference left to the girls was the manner in which they would be operated on. The girls met in their societies and engaged in a prolonged and heated debate as to whether they would be vaccinated on the arm, hand, leg or foot. Ten days were consumed in the discussion and the faculty was forced to call an immediate vote. Finally a vote was taken and a majority decided that they would be vaccinated on the calf of the right limb. All were therefore vaccinated in that manner, and now the seminary is in full mourning, with the girls hopping around like so many grasshoppers.

The Married Husband is Worthless.

Helen Watterson Moody believes that the husband who can be managed is not worth managing. "and there is no better principle," she adds, in The Ladies' Home Journal, "for both husband and wife to adopt in adjusting themselves to the new relation than that of trying to do each by the other what men are accustomed to call 'the square thing.' Many a woman understands 'managing' a husband better than she does doing the square thing by him, and many a man understands and practices doing the square thing by other men who would be affronted if he were to be told that, judged by his own business standards, he habitually dealt unfairly with his own wife."

Mrs. Watkins' Club Inheritance.
"I don't see," said Mr. Mulberry, "why you women have that Mrs. Watkins in your literary club. The rest of you are bright enough, but she's as dull as dull can be."

"It's this way," answered Mrs. Mulberry. "Mrs. Watkins' great-grandmother's half sister's second cousin by marriage could trace her descent from Chaucer. So, you see, after all, with such literary claims, we couldn't very well leave Mrs. Watkins out."—Harper's Bazar.

A Candid Suitor.
"What do you think? Papa asked Jack if he expected to get any money in marrying me."
"Was Jack insulted?"
"Insulted? He told pop that a good name was more of an object to him than wages."—Detroit Free Press.

Not Mentioned.
"Everybody seems to have been mentioned for the office except you," observed the sympathizing friend.
"Yes," replied the disappointed politician. "My name is Pants."
"Then, of course," scathingly replied the other, "you might expect to be among the unmentionables."
And still he wore a positive frown.—Columbian.

A Verbal Melee.

Going up on a Cedar avenue car the other night the passengers were much entertained by a verbal spat between a small citizen of German parentage and a tall native. The trouble all originated from the fact that the car was very much crowded, so crowded that the two disputants were brought face to face in such close proximity that they couldn't make a gesture.

"Push up a little, can't you?" inquired the tall man in an irritable tone. Several people were pushing him, and his irritability was quite excusable.

"Vell, no, I can't," replied the little man, "and, vat is more, I don't hef to."

"You're not much of a gentleman," said the tall man.

"Oh, I ton't know," said the little man airily. "Ven I vant an opinion on chentlemen, I go to some fellow vat has got a lictle knowledge of der subject."

"You're a very funny boy," said the tall man in a tone of deep sarcasm.

"Vell," said the little man, "I may haf some senses of humor, but I'm not so hart hearted as to laugh at der foolishness of one idiot."

"Do you call me an idiot?" gasped the tall man.

"As long as I ton't know your name," said the little man. "I couldn't make der identification any more complete."

Pretty soon the car stopped to let off half a dozen passengers, and when things finally settled down the tall one and the short one were separated by a dozen seats.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Immortality Cranks.

Immortality of fame is something desired by many, but attained by few, says Dr. John Fiske in The Atlantic. Physical immortality is something which has hitherto been supposed to be inexorably denied to human beings. The phrase "All men are mortal" figures in textbooks of logic as the truest of truisms. But we have lately been assured that this is a mistake. It is only an induction based upon simple enumeration, and the first man who escapes death will disprove it.

So at least I was told by a very downright person who called on me some years ago with a huge parcel of manuscript, for which he wanted me to find him a publisher. He had been cruelly snubbed and ill used, but truth would surely prevail over bigotry, as in Galilei's case. I took his address and let him leave his manuscript. Its recipe for physical immortality, diluted through 600 pages, was simply to learn how to go without food!

Usually such a regimen will kill you by the fifth day, but if at that critical moment, while at the point of death, you make a heroic effort and stay alive, why, then you will have overcome the king of terrors once for all. I returned the gentleman's manuscript with a polite note, regretting that his line of research was so remote from those to which I was accustomed that I could not give him intelligent aid.

The Irrepressible Small Boy.

This is a true story, and it really happened in a New York family. It looks as if it might be an old story brought up to date or renovated for the occasion, but it is exactly as the small boy arranged it and not to the edification of his family. The small boy was very fond of ice cream. It never cloyed his palate. It was with the same delight that he saw it each time brought on the table, and upon each of these times he showed the exuberance of his feelings by crying in rapturous tones "Oh-o-o! Ice cream! Ice cream! Ice cream!" much to his mamma's annoyance.

"People will think we never have ice cream or anything else to eat," she said to her son one day. "Now, we are going to have company to dinner tonight, and I don't want you to say a word when the ice cream is brought on." The small boy promised. He really was a good little boy, and he intended to mind. But when the cream was brought on the old feeling of rapture was so strong that he forgot entirely and cried out as usual. Then he remembered and stopped short, looking very repentant. He had not intended to call out, and his mother was mortified. He changed his tone entirely.

"We have ice cream almost every night," he remarked carelessly.—New York Times

Painfully Polite.

The people of Dresden are very polite, so overpolite that they not infrequently bring down ridicule upon themselves. It used to be told in that city that a stranger was one day crossing the great bridge that spans the Elbe and asked a native to direct him to a certain church which he wished to find.

"Really, my dear sir," said the Dresden, bowing low, "I grieve greatly to say it, but I cannot tell you."

The stranger passed on, a little surprised at this voluble answer to a simple question. He had proceeded but a short distance when he heard hurried footsteps behind him, and, turning round, saw the same man running to catch up with him.

In a moment his pursuer was by his side, his breath nearly gone, but enough left to say hurriedly "My dear sir, you asked me how you could find the church, and it pained me to have to say that I did not know. Just now I met my brother, but I grieve to say that he did not know either."

Costly Error in Revenue Act.

A mistake in the Revenue act will cost the State several thousand dollars. The error occurs in Section 32 of the act, which assesses the bank tax, and Treasurer Worth expressed the opinion yesterday that it would cost the State several thousand dollars. The law as it reads says that every banking institution shall pay $25 tax on a capital stock of $10,000 and $2 for each $1,000 of capital stock in excess of $25,000. The law intended to read, "and $2 for each $1,000 of capital stock in excess of $10,000."

The full section is given herewith. It will be noticed that the error occurs in the last line:

"Section 32. Every State bank, savings bank, or association, conducting a business as contemplated in this section, any private banker, every money exchange, bond or note broker, whether operating as corporations or associations, or privately as individuals, in addition to the ad valorem tax on their capital invested, shall pay annually to the State Treasurer a tax according to capital as follows: On a capital stock of ten thousand dollars or less, twenty-five dollars, and two dollars for each one thousand dollars of capital stock in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars."—Raleigh Post.
