

WARNING TO HUNTERS.

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

All hunters know that the close season is at hand, yet some who seem to wish to kill all the game, keep on hunting. I think if a few of them were prosecuted it would have a wholesome effect. If we are to have any game much longer let us ask the next Legislature to limit the hunting season to two months, November and December. After that time birds and turkeys get poor, especially in a winter like the one just passed. There were lots of famished birds killed during the snows in February. If it is not stopped the last ones will soon be killed. We intend to try to have every one indicted who robs birds' and turkeys' nests this year. I call on the public if they know of any violations report it to the Solicitor. There has been for the last two years over a hundred wild turkey eggs destroyed in Pitt county and I could give the names of men and witnesses to have them convicted. Now let us who love to hunt see if we can't stop this destruction of game that does no one any good. HUNTSMAN.

Jailed in Washington.

Washington, March 23.—Israel D. Hargett, the colored postmaster at Rocky Mount, N. C., was arrested here yesterday on a warrant sworn out by the postoffice authorities, charging him with the misappropriation of the funds of his office. He was brought before United States Commissioner Mills, and committed to jail in default of bond in the sum of $2,000. He will later be given a preliminary hearing.

If a man smokes some cigars it is true that there is a fool at one end and fire at the other, but we are glad to tell you that if you smoke Winterville Cigars, while you have fire a plenty yet it does away with the fool part. However we would not advise anyone to smoke, but if you do smoke then try our cigars.

Mr. Dick Parker says he never has been satisfied about that bear story Mr. George Parker told on him, and to get even with him would like to narrate a little incident which happened this week.

He says:—Mr. Cox had a lot of us watching his fence (a rail fence) while he was burning out a new ground, and all the fence got burned up where Mr. George was watching. Dick says he burnt it up so as to get to sell wire fence. If this is the case we would advise everybody to close a contract with Mr. Parker for some wire fence at once or put guards around their rail fence to watch it.

The Southerner hereby makes claim to the handsomest county treasurer in the State—and when it comes to urbanity and bonhomie, it is prepared to meet all comers.—Tarboro Southerner.

The Gold Leaf shies its castor into the ring and promptly accepts the challenge on behalf of Vance. Edgecombe's candidate may be handsome, and bonhomie, and all that, but he can't hold a candle to our man. He has all these embellishments and more—he is positively beautiful.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

You boys must not be used to seeing good looking folks. You ought to come down here and see the man who carries the key to the safe in Pitt.

They Take Kindly to Smallpox Treatment.

A negro introduced the smallpox in Rocky Mount. Three negroes who roomed with him before it was discovered that he had the disease afterward showed signs of smallpox also and were promptly removed to the pest house where the first case was sent. The Argonaut says the negroes who have the disease do not seem to mind it but appear rather to enjoy themselves and look upon the pest house as a pleasant country retreat.

It was a cool rain that came this afternoon.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., Mar. 24, '99

The Bryan-Belmont correspondence has naturally been the principal topic of conversation among democrats since it was made public. All sorts of opinions are expressed concerning its effect upon the party in next year's campaign, but the general tendency is that Col. Bryan only did what any other man of spirit would have done, in striking back at those who have been hitting at him for months, and that the fight which the correspondence has precipitated had to come anyway and that it is better to have it now than next year. It is an open secret that the element of the party represented by Mr. Belmont, which bolted the regular party platform and ticket in '96, has been working to down Col. Bryan and to get control of the next National convention of the party. Col. Bryan's friends have contended that men who bolted in '96 and who openly threatened to bolt again in 1900, if the same platform is adopted, have no right in reason, to dictate to the democratic party; these rule or ruin men have not a single electoral vote that they can promise with a reasonable degree of certainty, even if they were allowed to dictate both candidate and platform, and consequently that their defection will not reduce the electoral vote of the democratic party by a single vote; also that the party in every State that went democratic in '96 is overwhelmingly in favor of a re-adoption of the principal planks of the Chicago platform, next year. The discussion of this correspondence will have a tendency to show whether these claims are correct or not; also to cause the rank and file of the party to make sure that they are properly represented in the next National convention. A movement has already been started to make every delegate admitted to that convention pledge himself to support the ticket nominated and the platform adopted.

When they have no power to be otherwise republicans are always fair. A case in point is the distribution of the Senate patronage. When the republicans were in the minority they thought the plan of dividing the patronage of the Senate among democrats, republicans and populists, in proportion to the strength of each in the Senate, as just right, as it unquestionably was. But now, having a majority of the Senate, they have undergone a change of mind and are advocating a change that will give them entire control of the Senate patronage, and without waiting for a change to be formally adopted democratic employes are being dismissed to make places for republicans.

There are some men in the Alger party, now on the way to Cuba, that are ashamed of being with him, or else he has some along that he is ashamed of, as particular pains were taken to prevent a complete list of the eight or ten men getting published.

Secretary Hay had a bad spell when it was learned that the report of ex-Secretary Sherman's death was false. He had caused copies of an article highly eulogizing the public career of Sherman to be sent to a number of the big newspapers. He isn't much of a politician, but he knew that with Sherman alive and his attitude in Ohio politics uncertain, neither Hanna nor McKinley would wish the administration to stand sponsor for any praise of the man they had forced out of the Senate and out of the Cabinet. Telegrams were sent requesting that the eulogy be suppressed.

Military officers who have closely followed the testimony taken by the Court of Inquiry say the verdict is bound to support the charges made by Gen. Miles. One prominent officer said: "I don't see how the court can do anything else but report that every charge made by Gen. Miles was justified, and I expect it to go further and fix the responsibility upon Alger and Eagan. I know that great pressure will be brought to bear to prevent such a straightforward report as the evidence calls for and to get some word juggling done that can be made to mean anything or nothing, according to the wishes of the reader; but there are men on that court who are not in the habit of suppressing their conscientious opinions.

Another blessing of annexation has just been officially uncovered. When it was stated in Congress that the annexation of the sugar producing islands would mean a speedy end of the sugar industry in the United States, the rabid annexationists hooped at the idea. Now, an agent of the Agricultural Department, sent to Porto Rico to carefully investigate the subject, makes an official report saying that the sugar industry in the United States is doomed, if Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines are allowed to send us their sugar free of duty. He says the same grade of sugar that costs 3 1/2 cents a pound to produce in the United States costs but 2 cents a pound to produce in those islands. This will be a hard nut for the next Congress to crack.

His Absent Companions.

At a banquet given in Rochester two of the expected guests were unable to be present. The order of seating happened to be such that a particularly jovial and companionable gentleman sat with one of the vacant chairs on each side of him. The empty chairs and first course of oysters were left in place for some time in case the expected guests arrived. The solitary gentleman thereupon could move neither to the right nor to the left, but amiably bent throughout the repast, seemingly to ease the void for his enforced loneliness. At the banquet some one inquired of him:

"How did you enjoy yourself, old chap?"

"Just fine," he replied briskly enough. "I sat next to a couple of fellows who were just like me—Rochester boys."

A SCENE OF BUTCHERY.

The Slaughter That Came With the End of the Janizaries.

On the 15th day of June, 1826, the whole corps of the janizaries in the capital assembled, overturned their camp kettles (the signal of revolt) and advanced upon the seraglio. With his own hand the sultan unfurled the sacred "sanjak sberif" and called upon the true believers to rally round their dishah and caliph and the zealous Mussulman citizens rushed from all quarters and rallied under the sacred symbol. The ranks of the janizaries were raked with grape and solid shot by "Black Hell" (a nickname for Ibrahim, general of artillery) and his gunners as they pressed through the streets, compelling them to fall back to the Etmeidan, where they defended themselves with extraordinary fierceness, slaying great numbers of their assailants. The artillery, supported by the marines and the bostangi, pressed forward and compelled them to retreat to their barracks, where they offered desperate resistance to the assault.

From every street cannon thundered on the walls without intermission, the building was soon in flames, the walls torn and battered down by grapeshot, and the janizaries, overwhelmed by ruins, shot and flames, perished in their burning and blood stained barracks. For two days the gates of the city remained closed, and with relentless vigor every corner was searched for such janizaries as had escaped the general massacre, and when found they were hastily executed. Nearly 20,000 janizaries were destroyed on this memorable day, and many thousands were afterward put to death in the various cities of the empire, and thus not one of the number under arms was left to tell the tale. TETTER ON THE HANDS.

For several years I was a sufferer from Tetter on my hands. It would come in little watery pimples and the itching was almost more than I could stand. The skin was tender and the itching would swell so I could hardly bend my fingers. Sometimes my hands would become perfectly raw from scratching or breaking of the pimples. When I was in this condition I tried one half dozen bottles of Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy and some Wash in 1884, and by the time I took it my hands were cured, and I am now well of the trouble. It has since broken out a little at times, but not enough to inconvenience me or make me try more medicine. I am now well. MRS. M. E. KING. Burlington, N. C., May 27, 1896.

GERM CELLS OF LIFE.

THEY RETAIN VITALITY EVEN AFTER APPARENT DEATH.

A Startling Theory Showing That Instant Death Is an Impossibility and That We May Be Conscious For Some Time After Dissolution.

"You often meet with the phrase 'death was instantaneous,' and you believe it, but instant death is impossible.

A professor has been studying the subject, a man of renown in his own world, and he has discovered certain important data proving conclusively that no one can meet with instant death. He works out his theory on the data afforded by the physiology of cells. He states that no one yet has proved the difference between a dead and a live brain cell. When this has been done, then we can more easily ascertain how long a time elapses before the death of a cell takes place.

But, first, what is a cell? To be brief, both plants and animals, including, of course, man—are built up of units, elementary units, which you can only detect under the microscope. Now, each tiny cell is a vital elementary unit. We are nothing but highly developed results of the individual vitality of huge quantities of these fundamental cells.

As this is undeniably so, how is it possible, by simple decapitation, say, to cause instant death in the millions of cells which compose the brain? It is known that brain cells have their own cell life and are liable to live a certain time after they are cut off from outside nutrition without the supply of any blood whatever from the body. The nourishment is supplied inside the cell walls, and it can go on living after being cut off from other resources.

From this argument it is clear to the professor that these millions of cells in the brain must continue to live after death has apparently intervened—that is, when death appears, but only on the outside, to have been instantaneous.

After a man's leg is cut off, or an animal's, you can stimulate the nerves for a long time, but you cannot do it after the cells are dead. You cannot get any response at all.

Electricity has been thought to be the germ of life, but this is a fanciful theory when confronted with the new laws as by research established.

The countless millions of cells of which our bodies are entirely composed contain the germ of life, and it is impossible for these to be visited with an instantaneous unconsciousness.

You can take living cells from a pig's glands, and this same professor will demonstrate to you that after these glands have gone through their preparation the cells are still living.

But the curious fact remains that at present there are no data showing the supposed length of time it takes for the cells of the brain to empty themselves of the germ of consciousness or life, but it is certain that consciousness does not cease immediately after, say, a head has been cut off a body. The belief, however, is that at least four or five minutes must elapse ere death finally steps in to arrest life.

It has been noticed in the case of a decapitated head that the cheeks remain red for some minutes after the severance, a conclusive proof that the cells are living.

The heads of decapitated animals have continued to bite and snap at the air for three or four minutes after severance. This phenomenon is well marked in the head of a tortoise separated from the body. The life of the brain, therefore, must be retained for some time after the head is severed, from the very fact that, though being separated from the trunk, its nutritious blood and gases, taken from the fund stored up in the cells, are in sufficient quantity to carry on life, but for what exact period is unknown.

Do the brain cells die simultaneously? No, because they have their own individual cell life. Our scientific friend also makes the very startling statement that in many diseases the brain cells, although the person to all appearances is dead, may live for three or four hours after supposed death has taken place.

In the case of a healthy person being hanged, seeming death is not instantaneous at all. Organic motion is arrested, but real death is certainly not instantaneous. The brain cells are the last to die, and life is not really extinct until rigor mortis sets in, which in the case of a healthy person dying suddenly is protracted.

Now when it is known that an ordinary cell lives after being removed from a living body, why then cannot the brain cells retain their life when the conditions immediately surrounding them are much the same as during their previous existence?

The head of a chicken was cut off, and after certain stimuli had been made it opened its mouth and gasped five minutes after its head had been decapitated from the body.

The head of a certain animal was cut off and found susceptible to light for many minutes after it was apparently dead. A strong electric light was held in front of the eyes and moved alternately near to and far away from them. The pupils of the eyes followed the light in its movements, expanding and contracting, that is to say, focusing themselves upon the light as it moved backward and forward. It was proved that the animal was capable of smelling by the use of certain pungent odors placed near the nasal organs—and all this because the brain cells were yet living.

Raising Ducks Without Water.

Ducks don't need water to thrive. There are many duck raising plants in this country where thousands of the fowls are bred each year for market and where there is not even a puddle for them to flounder in. One of these farms is credited with an output of 20,000 ducks a year.

Accounted For the Fit.

Hon. George R. Peck so keenly appreciates a good joke that he tells the following on himself.

"When after a foreign trip, I was being welcomed by some of my friends in Topeka, I wore a suit of clothes made by a London tailor that was uncomfortable tight in places. I expressed my surprise that a loose fit in London should prove a tight fit in Topeka, whereupon an Irishman of the party exclaimed:

"Mr. Peck, don't forget you're a bigger man in Topayka than you were in London."—Chicago Journal.

An Excellent Combination.

The pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO., illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative, cleansing the system effectually, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers gently yet promptly and enabling one to overcome habitual constipation permanently. Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal qualities of the remedy are obtained from senna and other aromatic plants, by a method known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only. In order to get its beneficial effects and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.
