

SMALLPOX.

Its Symptoms and Mortality.

Dr. H. O. Hyatt, of Kinston, read the following paper before a meeting of the Board of Health of that town, which we copy from the Free Press:

There are two varieties. Smallpox proper, and varioloid. Both are produced by the same poison. Varioloid is the Latin name for smallpox.

A party coming in contact with the disease is liable to take it. It usually breaks out in about fourteen days after it is caught. No one is safe until four weeks have elapsed from the time of being exposed.

Symptoms. It begins with a chill and moderate fever. There is headache, pain in back and legs. These symptoms last three days. Then the eruption appears. On the eighth day after the eruption appears matter oozes from the sores. At the time the secondary fever occurs, the matter dries and forms scabs. When these fall off they leave little depressed spots on the skin.

The eruption appears first on the forehead and lips, and then goes over the whole body. The secondary fever occurs on the eighth day after the breaking out, or the eleventh day of the disease, and produces blood poisoning. In mild cases this secondary fever does not occur, and there is no blood poisoning.

Mortality. In mild cases about four in a hundred die. In confluent or severe cases one half die. In the malignant form all die. A malignant case can be caught just as easy from a mild case as a severe one. The violence of the disease depends on the condition of the patient.

One attack of this disease generally protects forever. Should a patient have a second attack, it is generally fatal.

The means of preventing smallpox is isolation and vaccination. Vaccination was first practiced by Dr. Jenner, May 14th, 1796. Since then it has been adopted by the whole civilized world. It affords an almost entire immunity from smallpox. The very few people who take smallpox after a successful vaccination have it in a very light form.

Smallpox is now prevalent over the whole United States. In this State it is very mild and for this reason the danger of its spreading is very great and it will be very hard to stamp out. It is the rule in smallpox epidemics for the disease to start out mild, often so mild that parties having it don't call in a doctor, thinking it to be nothing worse than chicken pox, which needs little or no treatment. These mild cases go everywhere and mingle with everybody.

If the epidemic was malignant, as it likely will become if unchecked, everybody would be terribly frightened and render the doctors all possible aid in stamping it out.

There are many people in this community, as there are in all communities, who presume to know more about smallpox and vaccination than all the doctors in the world. There are many of such base and low instincts as to imagine the doctors want the disease to spread so as to get practice or to make money by vaccination. To such we would say that we think we are doing our full duty. The volunteer work done by the doctors of the town would already amount to thousands of dollars, and will amount to many thousand more before the epidemic is stopped. We are giving our time and talents to those too poor to pay, without any hope of reward. We have heard disparaging remarks about the profession individually and collectively, until we are tired of it. We expect the hearty cooperation of all the decent people to aid us in our efforts to stamp out this scourge.

Inform the superintendent of health of every suspected case. He will investigate it. Everybody should come forward and be vaccinated. It is the duty of every one to do this. All who are willing to accept vaccination as charity can be attended to at the mayor's office at any time from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m. Fear of sore arms ought not to deter any one. If the arm is kept clean and not scratched with the finger nails there will be very little trouble. A bad arm comes from poisoned finger nails.

A successful vaccination takes in eight days. If it does not take in that time the patient should be revaccinated.

There is a prevalent idea that as long as the scar of an old vaccination is plain that the subject is free from liability to take smallpox. Such is not the case. Most people are protected through life, some are not. The only way to be sure is to be vaccinated again. If it does not take the subject is protected; if it does take the subject is not protected. We are of the opinion that several vaccinations will render smallpox impossible. Having a bad arm one time does not signify that the arm will be bad next time. Dirty finger nails are responsible for bad arms and not the vaccine matter.

About The Philippines.

The following newspaper squib manages to convey quite a cargo of information about the Philippine islands:

- No Brooms.
- No hats worn.
- Girls marry at fifteen.
- No knives or forks.
- They sleep at midday.
- Horses are a curiosity.
- More women than men.
- Rice is the chief product.
- Cattle as small as goats.
- Manila enjoys electricity.
- Natives bathe thrice daily.
- The grasshopper is a delicacy.
- We buy half Manila's hemp.
- Laborers earn ten cents a day.
- Cocoanut-oil is an illuminant.
- Manila was founded in 1571.

Notice.

On and after April 1st there will be no free telephone connection between Greenville and Washington. Parties wishing communication with Washington will have to pay 15 cents for five minutes. The same condition as heretofore continues for Grimesland. We hope our subscribers will appreciate our efforts in giving them free service for the past two years, but we find it is impossible to make arrangements for free service in the future.

F. L. STANTON.

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of pensions free—
Of thee I sing!
Land where war told the tale;
Land where the beef was stale;
Land where war-generals rail
Like anything!

O hear me rise and shout;
"Thank heaven, I'm mustered out!"
(That's what I sing!)
Fighting on sea and shore
Ever for me is o'er;
Bullets and beef no more!

The Man Who Succeeds.

The man who makes a success of an important venture never waits for the crowd. He strikes out for himself. It takes nerve. It takes a great lot of grit. But the man who succeeds has both. Any one can fail. The public admires the man who has enough confidence in himself to take a chance. These chances are the main thing after all. The man who tries to succeed must expect to be criticised. Nothing important was ever done but the greater number consulted previously doubted the possibility. Success is the accomplishment of what most people think can't be done.—C. V. White.

Saturday Evening Post.

In a day or two quite a number of people here will receive a copy of The Saturday Evening Post with prospectus. These are sent by the publishers at the request of D. J. Whichard, who is the special agent for both the Post and the Ladies' Home Journal. We hope those receiving a copy of the Post will examine it carefully. The regular price of it is $2.50 a year, but for a short time we will take subscriptions to it at $1 a year. Those wanting to take advantage of this low price should not delay.

This is horrible if true. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger writes that paper: "I have just learned from the Surgeon General's office that 21 per cent of our men (soldiers in the Philippines) are afflicted with a loathsome disease." Each day but adds to the deplorable results of this war. What may yet be in store for us, at home as well as "out there," the Lord only knows. This Republican administration does not know and, what is worse, seems not to care.—Raleigh Post.

The Southern Girl.

In concluding an editorial inspired by a Southern girl's regret that she cannot go to college, Edward Bok, in the April Ladies' Home Journal, has this to say of the girls of the Southland: "The Southern girl is surrounded by a life far truer and more conducive to self-development than girls living in other sections, because social conditions are more normal. Her life is healthier because it is saner, and her mind, by reason of it, is clearer and more constantly at rest. The rush of life of the North and West is not so stimulating as many Southern girls suppose. On the contrary, it wears women out as often as it develops them. In no part of our country do women look younger at maturity than in the South. To the Southern girl, too Nature blooms in a profusion as she does nowhere else. The natural history which the Northern girl must get out of books the Southern girl gets direct from Nature's own hand. She is born of a soil as rich and colorful in romantic history as is the literature of Spain. This she receives as a natural heritage. Her parents are, and her ancestors were, among the best types of American chivalry and American womanhood. She hears but one language spoken, and that is her own. If there is the introduction of another tongue it is French, and with these two she can travel the world over and never be at a disadvantage. The religion which she learns from her mother is the highest and best because it is untainted with modern 'revelations.' The truest friend and safest teacher in 'highest living' a girl can have is her mother, and in the South mothers have a way of finding time for their daughters and being companions to them. The Southern father is fond of his children, and proves it by his presence at the domestic hearth after his day's business is over."

It is said that there have never been so many octogenarians in the British House of Lords as there are at present. Lord Harlech attained the age of eighty on March 10, and there are now no less than thirty-three peers who are in or have passed their eightieth year. The House of Commons has but three octogenarians.

An Orphan's Acre.

We want to make a suggestion to our farmer friends and readers. Merely a suggestion and we leave you to act according to your own sense of duty. It is just this: That you select this year a rich spot on your farm, plant it in what you think can be raised most profitably tend it carefully and conscientiously and send the proceeds or the produce to aid in the support of the two hundred and fifteen orphan boys and girls in the Oxford Orphan Asylum, or the children in some other orphanage in North Carolina. This is done in other states and we know the farmers in our own state are as charitably inclined as any that the sun shines upon.

We are all wholly dependent upon our Heavenly Father for food, for raiment and for all the blessings of life—for life itself. From Him must come the sunshine, the rain, the fruitful season, the abundant harvest. It is from His bounty that all must be fed.

You could not bestow your loving labor where it would yield a greater harvest of redeemed lives, than by following our suggestion. If you could get your son interested in this "orphans' acre;" it would teach him a valuable lesson of unselfishness, of generosity and of service to others. In the sweat of your brow you toil hard for your own loved ones. May you always be given the strength and the opportunity to provide for them. But never overlook these little, unfortunate children, bereft of father, of home, of support, dependent upon our charity. Feeding an orphan child will never take bread from the mouths of your family. We have God's word for that.

David declares after a long life of varied experience and close observation: "I have been young and now an old; yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread. He is ever merciful and lendeth and his seed is blessed."

Solomon says: "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

Read in Ecclesiastes: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."

Again we have the promise: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble."

Farmer friend, sit down and think over the prime importance of this work for the destitute, orphan children of our state—a state highly favored of God in fertile soil and bountiful harvests. If you give the matter serious consideration, I believe you will plant this year a little garden or "orphans' acre," and that, next year, if you are permitted to live, you will plant another, that you will continue the practice from year to year and thus materially aid this cause in North Carolina and be blessed in giving.

A Woman Presides.

The novel picture of a lady presiding over the deliberations of the lower branch of the Colorado legislature is something new. The speaker desiring to, make a speech called Mrs. Lee, a lady representative, to the chair. Mrs. Lee surprised the members by her dignified manner of presiding and familiarity with parliamentary usages as well as throwing them into embarrassment as to the proper manner to address her, whether as Madame President, Madam Speaker, Mrs. Speaker or Mrs. President. She held the chair and rigidly enforced her order for three hours.—Ex.

While we have no doubt of the result of the fighting in the Philippines, and however complete our victory may be in any given battle, we need not think we have secured a peaceful settlement of the islands. War, or what will amount to the same thing, in loss of lives and the money of the taxpayers, will be continued for some time to come. Ten million of people—savages—naked though they be, but on and fighting for their own land, will not be crushed into cheerful submission soon.

Just before the war with Spain was declared, it was announced, we have no doubt authoritatively, that Spain would yield or retire from Cuba for $200,000,000. This was scornfully rejected. Up to December 31st last the war had already cost in actual, paid-out cash, over four hundred and eighty-two millions of dollars, besides the loss of over 6,000 lives in battle or by wounds or disease, and the end not yet in sight.

What a fearful accounting to Providence, if not to our people, this Republican Jingo party will have to make! Yet the sacrifice of men and money, if not the integrity and character of the government itself, is going on day by day.—Raleigh Post.

His Absent Companions.

At a banquet given in Rochester two of the expected guests were unable to be present. The order of seating happened to be such that a particularly jovial and companionable gentleman sat with one of the vacant chairs on each side of him. The empty chairs and first course of oysters were left in place for some time in case the expected guests arrived. The solitary gentleman therefore could move neither to the right nor to the left, but amiably beamed throughout the repast, seemingly none the worse for his enforced isolation. After the banquet some one innocently asked him:

"How did you enjoy yourself, old chap?"
"First rate," he replied briskly enough. "I sat next to a couple of fellows who weren't there."—Rochester Herald.

A Verbal Melee.

Going up on a Cedar avenue car the other night the passengers were much entertained by a verbal spat between a small citizen of German parentage and a tall native. The trouble all originated from the fact that the car was very much crowded, so crowded that the two disputants were brought face to face in such close proximity that they couldn't make a gesture.

"Push up a little, can't you?" inquired the tall man in an irritable tone. Several people were pushing him, and his irritability was quite excusable.

"Vell, no, I can't," replied the little man, "and, vat is more, I don't hef to."

"You're not much of a gentleman," said the tall man.

"Oh, I ton't know!" said the little man airily. "Ven I vant an opinion on chentlemen, I go to some fellow vat has got a leetle knowledge of der subject."

"You're a very funny boy," said the tall man in a tone of deep sarcasm.

"Vell," said the little man, "I may haf some senses of humor, but I'm not so hart hearted as to laugh at der foolishness of one idiot."

"Do you call me an idiot?" gasped the tall man.

"As long as I ton't know your name," said the little man. "I couldn't make der identification any more complete."

Pretty soon the car stopped to let off half a dozen passengers, and when things finally settled down the tall one and the short one were separated by a dozen seats.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Immortality Cranks.

Immortality of fame is something desired by many, but attained by few, says Dr. John Fiske in The Atlantic. Physical immortality is something which has hitherto been supposed to be inexorably denied to human beings. The phrase "All men are mortal" figures in textbooks of logic as the truest of truisms. But we have lately been assured that this is a mistake. It is only an induction based upon simple enumeration, and the first man who escapes death will disprove it.

So at least I was told by a very downright person who called on me some years ago with a huge parcel of manuscript, for which he wanted me to find him a publisher. He had been cruelly snubbed and ill used, but truth would surely prevail over bigotry, as in Galilei's case. I took his address and let him leave his manuscript. Its recipe for physical immortality, diluted through 600 pages, was simply to learn how to go without food!

Usually such a regimen will kill you by the fifth day, but if at that critical moment, while at the point of death, you make a heroic effort and stay alive, why, then you will have overcome the king of terrors once for all. I returned the gentleman's manuscript with a polite note, regretting that his line of research was so remote from those to which I was accustomed that I could not give him intelligent aid.

Rheumacide is not recommended for the cure of every ill; it does not cure everything. But it is a certain cure for rheumatism, and is a fine blood purifier and laxative try it.

TETTER ON THE HANDS.

For several years I was a sufferer from Tetter on my hands. It would come in little watery pimples and the itching was almost more than I could stand. The skin was tender and the itching would swell so I could hardly bend my fingers. Sometimes my hands would become perfectly raw from scratching or breaking of the pimples. When I was in this condition I tried one-half dozen bottles of Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy and some Wash in 1884, and by the time I took it my hands were cured, and I am now well of the trouble. It has since broken out a little at times, but not enough to inconvenience me or make me try more medicine. I am now well. MRS. M. E. KING. Burlington, N. C., May 27, 1896.

A TALK ON ASBESTUS.

SOME LIGHT UPON HOW LONG IT HAS BEEN IN USE.

A Man With a Mine of Information Astonishes Another Who Knew All About the Mineral, but Who Would Not Take a Tempting Bet.

An elderly man, with a gray mustache, looked up from a plate of spaghetti which he was eating in a restaurant and spoke to three others: "Say," he said, "what do you people know about asbestos?"

Two of his companions preserved a modest silence, but the third, who was a little man, spoke up: "I know all about asbestos," he said. "Do, eh?" queried the man with the spaghetti on his plate. "Then how long's it been in use?"

"Well," said the little man, hesitatingly, "p'raps 30 years."

"You're away off. Of course you didn't know that Charlemagne had an asbestos tablecloth?"

"Who's Charlemagne?"

"Well," said the elderly man, "Charlemagne was king of the Franks and emperor of the Romans about 1,100 years ago. He was a great fighter and owned an asbestos tablecloth."

"Don't believe it," said the little man. "I never heard of asbestos until the Centennial."

"Well, Charlemagne had the cloth all right," said the elderly man. "He used to astonish his friends from the interior by throwing the tablecloth into the fire after dinner, and of course it didn't burn. Asbestos became quite fashionable after that for towels and napkins. It saved laundry bills. All a man's wife had to do was to throw the week's wash into the stove and it came out as clean as chalk."

"Say," said the little man, incredulously, "do you think you can string me like that?"

"It's so," declared the elderly man. "But of course you never heard that Benjamin Franklin had an asbestos purse?"

"No. Had he?" asked the little man, with a sneer.

"Of course he had. He took it over to England with him and sold it to a man in Bloomsbury, London, for a big sum."

"I suppose," said the little man, with a wink, "that the Englishman was a friend of yours, and you know his name?"

"No," replied the first man, "I never saw him, but he was called Sir Hans Sloane, and he had a museum."

"Dime museum?" grinned the little man.

"Not a bit of it," smiled the elderly man good naturedly. "It was a sure enough museum, and as a matter of fact it constituted the nucleus of the British museum. I dare say that Benjamin Franklin's asbestos purse is there yet."

The little man looked a little crestfallen, but the elderly man consoled him.

"Don't worry," he said, "there are lots of people besides yourself who are shy on knowledge regarding asbestos. It wasn't much used during recent centuries. In 1676 an asbestos handkerchief was shown to the Royal society as a great curiosity by Dr. Plot, who had bought it from a traveler on his return from China. They called it salamander's wool. Dr. Plot saturated the handkerchief with oil and threw it into a fierce charcoal fire. The oil burned off, but the handkerchief remained intact. The fellows of the society were much interested and were not greatly surprised when the price of asbestos in Chinese Tartary was quoted at $400 a Chinese ell, which isn't much more than an English yard. It's likely that the price had risen since the days of the ancients, for those old fellows had big sheets of asbestos, which they wound around corpses before cremating them."

"That's a long time ago," said the little man sententially.

"Well," continued the elderly man, "if you want to, come down to later years, there was a book published in London, 40 years ago, giving accounts, among other things, of remarkable experiments previously made at Milan, in Italy, by the Chevalier Aldini, who had used asbestos in the construction of a suit of fireproof armor. The coverings for arms, legs and body were of heavy cloth which had been soaked in a strong solution of alum. The helmet, gauntlets and stockings were of asbestos. Then there was an overdress, covering the body, thighs and feet, of wire gauze, 20 meshes to the inch. With this armor on, men stood on a big gridiron over a blazing fire for ten minutes and buried their heads in piles of burning hay and shavings, but nevertheless they came out unharmed. They also handled bars of white hot iron and did other things which seemed quite miraculous. That was over 40 years ago."

"Well," said the little man, "it's hard to believe that for several hundreds of thousands of years the world was so full of chumps that there wasn't room for a man smart enough to utilize asbestos. On the whole, I guess I'll go on doubting."

"All right," returned the elderly man. "I've got $5,000 that says I'm right. Perhaps your doubts are strong enough to uphold a bet of $10 against it."

But the little man wouldn't bet.—New York Times.

On Landing Troops.

In landing a force on a hostile shore a great deal more has to be provided than the vessels to carry it. There are people who discuss an invasion, and who seem to have an idea that the matter is limited to crowding a number of soldiers on a ship and directing them to be landed at a certain place. There is no consideration of how they are to get on shore with their arms, guns and ammunition; that merchant ships have only a few boats, and that artillery cannot be transferred from ship to beach without any previous preparation. When we consider that, notwithstanding the support and resources of a large combined fleet and the presence of transports, more than a month of hard work was required before an army of 50,000 men could be landed in the Crimea, we are justified in doubting those who assert that the invasion of our shores with 150,000 or 200,000 men is not only within the bounds of possibility, but by no means so difficult an undertaking as is often stated.—"Wilmot's Life of Vice Admiral Lord Lyons."

Lakes That Change Color.

It is well known that the water of many lakes exhibits characteristic colors. The lake of Geneva, at the western end of Switzerland, is blue, while the lake of Constance, at the eastern end of Switzerland, is green. Blueness implies purity, since the natural color of water is blue. A green lake has its water slightly clouded with impurities, which may be exceedingly fine particles, separately invisible. Professor Spring of the University of Liege says that green lakes sometimes become absolutely colorless for a time, and he has found that this sudden change of color is due to the washing into the lakes of mud colored red by oxide of iron. Red is complementary to green, and the result of the mixture is that the green color of the water becomes for the time neutralized.

Children's Sense of Duty.

One of my granddaughters said the Duke of Westminster, who is about 5 or 6 years old, burst into tears on passing a blacksmith's shop, and on her mother inquiring the cause said, "Oh, my, my, they are making the duncy's boots on!"
