WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1899

The board of aldermen met last Saturday and as a precaution against smallpox passed an ordinance to the effect that it shall be unlawful for any person to go, remain or be within two hundred feet of the passenger depot here while a passenger train is standing on the track. This ordinance does not apply to passengers going to or from the trains, or the employees of any railroad, express company, telegraph company, doing business in the town, or to any person engaged in the United States mail service. Any person violating this ordinance is subject to a fine of $2.00. Since this ordinance went into effect the town marshal has had little trouble in keeping the people away from the trains.—Sanford Express.

Greenville might do a good thing by adopting an ordinance similar to the above and keep all persons who have no business there from loafing around the depot at train time. So many loafers around the depot are a nuisance any time, and now while there is so much danger of spreading disease there is all the more reason that they should not be allowed to congregate there.

Ex-Justice Stephen J. Field, of the United States Supreme Court, died in Washington on Monday evening.

A Town Without a Street.

Thurmond, Fayette county, twelve miles from Quinimont, a very important point on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, is one of the most unique towns in the State, says a Fayetteville, W. Va., dispatch to the Baltimore Sun. The place is important because it is the junction point of two coal branches with the main line, and unique because it is without a street or road. The only space to walk is on the railroad track, and thus do the two or three hundred inhabitants go to and fro. The mountain side is so precipitous that a street is an impossibility, and the New River Valley is so wild and rough that no wagon road traverses it for a distance of over thirty miles; roads cross at Sewell and at this place, but the other towns are totally isolated and the people of Thurmond never see a horse unless one passes on the cars.

The Spaniards are all good Catholics, or are supposed to be, but that did not prevent Spain from unloading $60,000,000 in Cuban bonds on the pope. The bonds are practically worthless, and the loss of so much money leaves the pope in a bad way financially. Not satisfied with doing up the pope the Spanish Government has cut the salaries of the priests fully 20 per cent, leaving many of them without a living.—Greensboro Record.

Death Hid in Old Clothes.

New York, April 10.—In a report submitted to the Board of Health this morning Dr. M. B. Feeney, Chief Sanitary Inspector, sets forth a frightful condition of things in regard to the handling of second-hand clothing, and its shipment to Raleigh, Richmond, Norfolk, Charleston, Baltimore and other Southern cities.

Dr. Feeney on Friday and Saturday nights visited several shops in Hester, Bayard and Eldridge streets and discovered that clothes taken from the bodies of persons who died from contagious and infectious diseases were handled and sold without the least compunction. Clothing taken from drowned men is dried and then repaired in these shops and sent South, where it is sold in stores.

Dr. Feeney says that through these clothes diseases are communicated, and that the clothes are responsible for epidemics in the South and for much sickness and death among the poor in the communities mentioned.

After referring to piles of foul-smelling clothing ready for shipment to North Carolina and contiguous States, he says: "An examination of these articles showed that every one of them was extremely filthy. In many cases they bore evidence of having at some time been deposited on a manure heap, while other articles had suffered from saturation to such an extent that they must have been immersed in water for long periods of time, and bore evidence of the fact that they had given their former owners long service.

"In fact many had the same appearance as the clothing taken from dead persons at the morgue after they have been recovered from the river.

"In view of these facts I would recommend that the filthy clothing found in these places be forthwith removed and fumigated. I would also recommend that all second-hand clothing be submitted to an examination before being sold by peddlers and manufacturers."

Hawk and Chicken Fight.

Alex, Anderson, a colored man of this township, tells a strange story of a hawk and chicken fight. One day last week a hawk attacked a hen and small chickens, about one hundred yards from his house. His wife ran, screaming at the top of her voice, as a woman will when a hawk is after a chicken. In the meantime, the old hen had engaged his hawkship in a lively combat and had knocked him into a small hole of water, and was still fighting, so Alex says, when his wife ran up, accompanied by a small dog. She seized the hawk by the head, just when the dog caught him, and pulling with all her might pulled his head off. The honors of the fight seem to be about equal with woman, dog and old hen.

Pretty Small.

Teacher—What is the smallest State?
Little Francis—The state of a person's feelin's when your ma tries to have you go free by tellin' the conductor that you ain't six years old yet.—Chicago News.

Some Chinamen have no more partiality for water than the average Kentucky Colonel. One of the Johns was baptized the other day in New York, but hadn't been fully posted, for when he caught his breath after the dip he exclaimed: "Me likee Mission. Me no likee bath!"—Wilmington Star.

The Color Line in Baltimore.

The municipal campaign now in progress in Baltimore, is a very warm one. The issue is the same as that upon which the last campaign was fought and won in this State—white supremacy. Under Republican rule, Baltimore has had trouble with the negro. That city has had a taste of what Southern communities have endured and is rebelling against it. "Baltimore is a white man's city," is the Democratic slogan and upon this issue the Democrats hope to win control of the city for the next four years. A press dispatch says that "the nomination by the Republicans of a negro for city council, negro rowdyism, the gerrymandering of certain precincts and wards so that the black vote outnumbers the white, have caused the color line to be as sharply drawn in Baltimore as in Richmond or any other Southern city. When at the big ratification meeting one of the Democratic clubs entered the hall bearing a transparency: "This is a White Man's City," the vast crowd went wild. The cry, taken up by the thousands of men on the floor, was echoed by the women in the galleries, and "This is a white man's city" at once became the cry of the Democrats."—Charlotte Observer.

War's Cost and its Fruits.

The war, with its consequences, will eat up $1,000,000,000 before we are ready to close the accounts, and then we shall have nothing to show for it, except distant islands, which we do not want, and which, if we are wise, we will turn over to the inhabitants thereof with our blessing. We did not count the cost in time. Now there is nothing to be done except to carry our work to its logical conclusion without regard to cost. The American white man's burden has been already a heavy one. It is certain to be a much larger one before it is laid down.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Did Not Die in Vain.

The heroes of the Spanish-American war whose bodies now rest in Arlington Cemetery came from every section of the Union, and each newly-made grave pledge is a and assurance of an indissoluble bond of national unity under the Stars and Stripes. Those brave men who gave their lives for their country in Cuba and Puerto Rico did not die in vain.

"Strangers sometimes mildly wonder what newspapers or sheets of blank paper are tied on the windows or balconies of certain houses for," says The Mexican Herald (City of Mexico). "A sheet of paper thus arranged is a sign meaning that there are rooms to rent in the house on which it is displayed, and is just as significant in its import as three golden balls over a pawbroker's shop are in other countries."

A tombstone in Palo Pinto Texas, bears this inscription: "He remained to the last a decided friend and supporter of Democratic principles and measures. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

The pay roll of laborers employed in the search for bodies in the Windsor Hotel ruins, in New York amounted to $38,000.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

A PLEASANT, SIMPLE, SAFE BUT EFFECTUAL CURE FOR IT.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable.

The usual symptoms are a full or bloated sensation after eating, accompanied some times with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the lungs and heart and difficult breathing; headache, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out and languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue, and if the interior of stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate disease is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily and thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach.

To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do, and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptine Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids.

These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and, not being a patent medicine, can be used with perfect safety and assurance; that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. N. J. Booher, of 2710 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom, passing back into the throat, reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me three years for catarrh of the stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I can not find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of the stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

Send for book, mailed free, on stomach troubles, by addressing the F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. The tablets can be found at all drug stores.

TETTER ON THE HANDS.

For several years I was a sufferer from tetter on my hands. It would come in little watery pimples and the itching was almost more than I could stand. The skin was tender and the itching would swell so I could hardly bend my fingers. Sometimes my hands would become perfectly raw from scratching or breaking of the pimples. When I was in this condition I tried one-half dozen bottles of Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy and some Wash in 1884, and by the time I took it my hands were cured, and I am now well of the trouble. It has since broken out a little at times, but not enough to inconvenience me or make me try more medicine. I am now well. MRS. M. E. KING.

LOUIS XVII.

The Boy King Rudely Torn From the Arms of His Mother.

Miss Anna L. Bicknell writes an article on "The Last Days of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette" for The Century. Miss Bicknell says:

The respect shown to the boy king irritated those who governed at that time, and they were further exasperated by the insurrection which had broken out in La Vendee, where Louis XVII was styled king. Thenceforward the poor child's fate was sealed. On the night of July 3 of that memorable year, at 10 o'clock, the guards appeared bearing a decree by which it was ordered that "the son of Louis Capet" should be separated from his mother and given into the hands of a "tutor," who would be appointed by the Commune.

The scene that followed is one of the most harrowing recorded in history. The terrified child uttered loud cries and entreaties, clinging desperately to his mother, who knew only too well into what hands he was about to fall and what would be his fate. She refused to give him up and defended him with the strength of despair, telling them to kill her before taking her son from her. A whole hour passed thus—in desperate resistance on the part of Marie Antoinette, in threats and violence on the part of the guards, in tears and supplications from Mme. Elisabeth and Mme. Royale. At last the guards declared so positively that they would kill both of her children, that the queen, exhausted, ceased her resistance. Mme. Elisabeth and Mme. Royale then took up the child from his little bed and dressed him, for the queen was powerless. When ready, she gave him herself into the hands of the guards, with floods of tears, "foreseeing," says Mme. Royale, "that she would never see him again. The poor little fellow kissed us all very affectionately and followed the guards, crying bitterly."

After the poor little dauphin was taken away they were left to mourn in peace, "which was some comfort," says Mme. Royale. The municipal guards locked them up in their rooms, but did not remain with them. No one now did the housework. Mme. Elisabeth and Mme. Royale made the beds, swept the rooms and waited on the queen. The guards came three times a day to bring food and to examine the bolts and the bars of the windows lest anything should be disturbed.

The prisoners were able to go up by an inner staircase to the top of the tower, where the queen spent hours looking through a crack in a wooden partition in the hope of seeing her son go by. Mme. Elisabeth was informed by the guards of the ill usage to which the poor child was subjected, "and which was beyond imagination," says Mme. Royale, "more especially because he cried at being separated from us." But Mme. Elisabeth entreated the guards to keep all these particulars from the queen, who was only too much enlightened when she saw the child pass by and watched his pale, sorrowful face.

The last time that such miserable comfort was granted to her was on July 30. She had watched long, and at last she saw him, cowed and terrified, bereft of his golden curls, wearing the red revolutionary cap, and, alas, singing a song of coarse insult against herself! She knew then how the child must have suffered before he could have been brought to this.

The Inexpressible Small Boy.

This is a true story, and it really happened in a New York family. It looks as if it might be an old story brought up to date or renovated for the occasion, but it is exactly as the small boy arranged it and not to the chagrin of his family. The small boy was very fond of ice cream. It never cloyed his palate. It was with the same delight that he saw it each time brought on the table, and upon each of these times he showed the exuberance of his sentiments by crying in his gurgling tones, "Oh, ice cream! Ice cream! Ice cream!" much to his mother's annoyance. "People will think we never have ice cream or anything else to eat," she said to her son one day. "Now, we are going to have company to dinner tonight, and I don't want you to say a word when the ice cream is brought on." The small boy promised. He really was a good little boy, and he intended to mind. But when the cream was brought on the old feeling of rapture was so strong that he forgot entirely and cried out as usual. Then he remembered and stopped short, looking very repentant. He had not intended to call out, and his mother was mortified. He changed his tone entirely. "We have ice cream almost every night," he remarked carelessly.—New York Times

DIALECT.

Critics, pray do not reject
What is writ in dialect,
For the common people's thoughts
Should in common speech be wrought,
And the crude but pungent word
Should be written as it's heard.
Wise or foolish, if 'tis true,
That should be enough for you!
With man's speech is something blent
Caught from his environment—
Strong, rebellious and the schools
Only scotch it with their rules.
Man may fashion a disguise
Balling to his neighbors' eyes.
But upon his tongue will be
Stamped his true identity.
Therefore, critics, pray reject
Nothing writ in dialect
Which in story or in rhyme
Is a record of the time,
Vital, fresh and fit to be Found in honest company.
—Meredith Nicholson in New York Sun.

WHEN NAPOLEON WALKED.

An Incident of the Memorable Retreat From Moscow.

It was on Nov. 25, at about 7 o'clock in the morning, when we saw the head of the column. The first we saw were generals a few of whom were on horseback, but the majority on foot. The latter painfully dragged themselves along, almost all having their feet frozen and bound up in rags and pieces of sheepskin and dying of hunger. We then saw what was left of the cavalry of the guard. The emperor came next on foot, with a stick in his hand. He was muffled up in a large capote lined with fur and wore on his head an amaranthine velvet cap edged with black foxskin. On his right marched, also on foot, King Murat; on his left, Prince Eugene, viceroy of Italy; then Marshals Berthier, prince of Neufchatel; Ney, Mortier, Lefebvre and other marshals and generals, whose corps had been partly destroyed.

They were followed by 700 to 800 officers and subofficers, marching in order and bearing in the greatest silence the eagles of the regiments to which they had belonged and that had so often led them to victory. They were the remnant of over 60,000 men. My poor Picart, who had not seen the army for a month, gazed on silently, but his convulsive movements showed only too well what he felt. I saw big tears roll down the cheeks and fall on his mustache, from which icicles were hanging. Then, turning to me, "Really, compatriot, I do not know whether I am asleep or awake; I weep because I have seen our emperor marching on foot, a stick in his hand, he that was so great and who made us so proud!" "Memoirs of Sergent-Bourgoigne"

"De trouble wil some men dat knowe a heap," said Uncle Eben, "is dat dey hab sech a positive way o' tellin' it dat dey makes folks too mad to listen."—Washington Star.

"Many a man," once said Phillips Brooks, "can say, 'I did the things my father told me, but the man I am my mother made me.'"

WINE OF CARDUI

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "local examinations" by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"—disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

McELREY'S Wine of Cardui

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. L. ADDISON, M. D., Cary, Miss., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it a most excellent preparation for female troubles."
