JOHNSON'S MILLS ITEMS.

JOHNSON'S MILLS, N. C. Oct. 11. E. F. Cox went to New Berne today.

The farmers are saving lots of hay.

W. E. Mewborn, traveling salesman for Walters & Martin, was in our town yesterday.

Miss Jane Phillips died last Friday at Mr. L. B. Cox's, at the age of 68. The remains were buried at St. Johns Saturday evening.

Sudden Death.

Today we heard a sad story from Greene county. Mr. Frank Carr came over to Greenville Sunday. When he left home that morning his little 7-year-old boy was playing about the yard, well and hearty. When Mr. Carr reached home that evening his little boy was dead. The little fellow had a chill during the day and died in about an hour after he was taken sick.

Mayor's Court.

William Moye was before Mayor Moye this morning to answer the charge of being very drunk and disorderly and raising a disturbance on tobacco sale Wednesday. He was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $8.65.

Two other cases have been disposed of since last report.

Estelle Rollins and Ada Davis for being drunk and disorderly were fined $1 each and half costs, making a total of $6.15.

R. Greene and Charlie O'Hagan for being disorderly were fined a penny and costs each.

"Publishing House Deal."

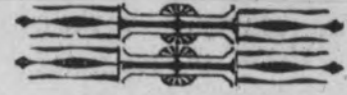

Winston, N. C., Oct. 10.—Evangelist James Schoolfield, of Danville, who is conducting a meeting here, stated in his sermon last night that he did not believe God would bless the Southern Methodist Church until it repudiated the whole transaction of the Southern Publishing House, by which it obtained money from the United States government. The evangelist added that he had given the matter careful study and consideration, and he meant what he said. The Sentinel this afternoon endorses Mr. Schoolfield's views, and editorially says the publishing house deal "ought to be denounced by every Methodist preacher in the land. It is a blot on the fair escutcheon of the church, and all the whitewash in christendom will not hide it. It ought not to be covered, and no attempt should be made to cover it. It should be removed, and the work of the church will be hampered unless it is removed. We cannot reconcile consistency and the action of any preacher who denounces the sin of prevarication and dodging the truth and all that sort of thing, and yet undertake to exonerate the agents of the publishing house in this matter. Drive the money changers from the temple, not so much to punish them as to remove the defilement they have placed upon it. Millions of dollars would be no recompense for what has been done, because no amount of money is comparable with a church without blemish."

The Meeting.

Rev. J. N. Booth preached an excellent sermon last night from the subject announced yesterday, "the sin of neglect."

The subject for tonight will be "The Gospel Invitation." All are cordially invited. Services begin at 7:30.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER, 12, 1899.

Some of Christopher Columbus' descendantsover inSpain are perhaps wishing on this anniversary of the day that the old skipper had never discovered America.

At Greensboro the other day Hon. R. B. Glenn was attacked by a man who was a witness in a case and had been denounced by Mr. Glenn in his speech to the jury. We do not know enough of the particulars to make special comment on it, but the occurrence calls to mind the fact that as a rule lawyers far overstep their moral right in abusing and trying to break down the character of witnesses on the opposite side of the case. It is a wonder that resentment does not oftener follow such attacks. A witness should not be abused or ridiculed in court. If he commits perjury the Judge is the man to deal with him.

The Price of Cotton.

It is a commercial axiom that the surplus of a product fixes the price. The truth of this is obvious to any one who will think a moment.

Farmers in this section have been making and selling cotton long enough to know that the price of this product is determined in Liverpool, because that place takes the surplus.

Just now the papers, like farmers' minds, are rather full of schemes to bring about a higher price for this staple. The schemes are more or less impractical.

Holding back a million or two bales would probably bring about such a temporary scarcity that a rise in prices would ensue, but only temporarily; because these millions of bales in reserve would be a constant menace.

Such a holding does not do away with the surplus. It only makes a surplus unavailable for a short time. Sooner or later it must be thrown upon the market with the result of lower prices than ever.

There is just one way to get rid of this surplus if the farmers will use it, and that is to manufacture it. Then Liverpool or any foreign land that needs cotton to spin must go into the market which will be stimulated.

Just now the South is spinning not quite one-fifth of her crop. She should spin every lock of it. The labor cost in the manufactured product will remain here.

The farmers in the South can do this if they will. Instead of meeting and resolving to curtail the acreage which they know will not be done, no matter how many resolutions are passed, they should meet in their localities and subscribe to factory stock. When they have a fair amount they should go to the town and business men there and say, Now we have subscribed so much will you complete the list, so that another factory can be started. A ready favorable response will be forthcoming. Two or three more mills are needed here to spin all the cotton raised in the county. If these mills were in operation, cotton would be a half a cent higher than it is.

The cotton crop of the county will average 25,000 bales. These factories then would mean $50,000 a year to the producers to say nothing of dividends on stock and the increased demand for farm and garden products.

If the entire South would do as suggested more than $25,000,000 would be gained from the sale of cotton.

Nor is this all. The foreign mills must have cotton, with a demand here for all we make the foreign need must of necessity increase the price.

Instead of a surplus of cotton fixing the price the same will be enhanced by a surplus of demand.—Tarboro Southerner.

Carr and the Senatorship.

We are in a position to state that Col. J. S. Carr, who is at president in New York, feels very much worried that he is reported as having announced himself as a candidate for the United States senatorship. Col. Carr has not, nor does he propose to make any such announcement. He feels that for the futures, as in the past, the democratic party has known his whereabouts and how to avail itself of his services should they be needed, and he is entirely content to let it go at that.

In a note to the editor of the News and Observer, Col. Carr says the paramount question to all lovers of North Carolina just now, is not who is to be the next United States senator, but one that in every way comes very much closer to the good people of the state, to wit: The adoption of our proposed constitutional amendment. Col. Carr writes that he is fully persuaded that a much more formidable opposition to the adoption of the amendment is being developed than the democratic party is disposed to believe, and feels that every true and loyal democrat should lend all his energies to the success of the amendment. That he for one at least does not now nor in the future propose to join in a scramble for office. He never has, and he never will.—News and Observer.

A brewer of the city accepted an invitation to spend a fortnight with a friend in London, whose quarters were in the dense purlieus of Clerkenwell. On joining his host at breakfast the morning after his arrival the following colloquy took place, much to the annoyance of the mistress of the house: Host—Well, Sandy, old man, how did you sleep? Sandy—Aweel, mon, to say truth, na so vara weel.

Host—I am sorry to— Sandy (interrupting)—Ah, dinna fash yerself, mon! I was better aff than the fleas, for they never closed a blessed e'e the whole night.

A Little Mistake. Some time ago a well known and popular Congregational minister received a basket of champagne from one of his worldly and wealthy parishioners. A few days later the minister's little son was called up in his geography class to answer the teacher's question, "Where is Lake Champlain?" "I don't know where it is," said the small boy, "but I've had some of the water, and it is real nice."—Boston Herald.

A Good Answer. Ernest McGaffey, the poet, is accredited with a good bonnet. A lady said to him: "Oh, Mr. McGaffey, I have just seen your wife for the first time since your marriage. But I had supposed that she was a taller woman. She seems shorter than when I saw her last." "Certainly," replied the poet solemnly; "she has married and settled down, and she knows."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Custer's Indian Attack.
 The late Charles Osborn, the New York broker, and General Custer were intimate friends, and Osborn annually visited the general at his camp on the plains. During one of the Indian campaigns he invited Osborn and a party of friends out to Kansas and, after giving them a buffalo hunt, arranged a novel experience in the way of an Indian scare. As Osborn was lying in his tent one night firing was heard at the outpost and the rapid riding of pickets. "Boots and saddles!" was the order in the disturbed atmosphere of the night, and Custer appeared to Osborn loaded with rifle, two revolvers, a saber and a scalping knife. "Charles," he said in his quick, nervous way, "you must defend yourself. Sitting Bull and Flea-in-Your-Boots, with Wiggle-Tail-Jim and Scalp-Loek-Skowheban, are on us in force. I did not want to alarm you before, but the safety of my command is my first duty. Things look serious. If we don't meet again, God bless you!" The broker fell on his knees. "Custer," he cried, "only get me out of this! I'll carry 1,000,000 shares of Western Union for you into the firm to get me home. Only save me!" But Custer was gone, and the camp, by shrewd arrangement, burst into a blaze, and shots, oaths and warwhoops were intermixed until suddenly a painted object loomed on Osborn's sight, and something was flung into his face—a human scalp. He dropped to the ground, said the Lord's Prayer backward and sideways until the noise died away and there was exposed a lighted supper table with this explanation on a transparency: "Osborn's treat!"—Chicago Record.

A Change All Around.
 "There goes a party that will be heard from," said Smith, pointing to a young man who was going down the street. "He has managed to keep his head in love and financial matters, and they are the two great tests."

"Two months ago he was a young man with all the world before him and with no prospects ahead of him except a determination to fight life's battles. "He was in love with a young lady living in this city, but his financial condition prevented him from declaring his passion; besides he was not sure that the young lady in question cared for him."

"But by one of those curious turns of the wheel of fortune an old aunt, that he had never seen, died and left him a large sum of money. Without delay he called upon the young lady and asked her to marry him, saying nothing about the fortune that had been left him. He met with a point blank refusal."

"Two days later the girl heard of his unexpected windfall and wrote him a note saying, 'I have changed my mind.'"

"His answer was just as short. It said: 'So have I.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Not Very Flattering.
 Last winter a delegation of Indians from a far western state, on a tour of inspection through the interior department, visited the land office, where they were introduced to the clerk who had especial charge of their section of the country, a bumptious little individual with a big head. This official proceeded to overpower the red men with his importance. Grappling each one of them cordially by the hand, he patted them patronizingly on their backs and then delivered a long speech, explaining in detail the work of the office, their interest in it, laying particular stress on the fact that he was the middle power of it all. As soon as their entreaties ceased for breath the visiting Indians began to grant and talk among themselves. "What are they saying?" asked the egotistical clerk, expecting to hear high praise of himself. "Tell me what they are saying." "I cannot tell you," replied the interpreter. "It was not for you to hear." But the little man insisted, and with great reluctance the interpreter finally yielded. "They said," he translated, "Little man, big head, bump talk, say nothing, much feel."—Washington Letter in New York Tribune.

Cleaning the Cemetery.

Alderman H. A. White, the committee in charge of the white portion of Cherry Hill Cemetery, tells us that he is now at work having the walks and public portion of the cemetery cleaned up. He asks that all lot owners have their plots cleaned off now so that all the work can be done at once. This is certainly needed, and every lot owner there should feel interested in the matter. Don't neglect this.

The Passing of Populism.

In all the accounts we get of political conditions in the West there occurs practically the same statement as to the decay of the Populist party. In Kansas it has all but disappeared. The divisions there are again under the names of the two old parties. In Idaho, Wyoming, the two Dakotas, even in Washington, the Republican and the Democratic seceders have in large numbers returned to their old associations. Only in Nebraska are the Populists now strong, and there they have quite absorbed the Democrats, and are at head of the opposition to the Republicans.—Washington Star.

After separating twenty times a married couple in a Pennsylvania town finished up by taking a final parting by way of the divorce mill. The man's principal objection to the woman was the custard pie she made for him and the trousers she made for other men.—Wilmingtion Star.

A dispatch from Tennville, Ga., says that Mr. John Doolittle, of Washington county, that state, picked 487 pounds of seed cotton Friday, and claims to be the champion cotton picker. He ought to change his name, which is not at all appropriate.—Kinston Free Press.

THE FURNITURE MEN

The boat which has been in course of construction for some time by Mess. J. A. Humphrey and J. H. Turnage, was yesterday put in the river and makes a neat and trim appearance. The boat is 29 feet long, a width at its greatest of 6.8, has a five-horse power gasoline engine, is run by a propeller and is expected to make a speed of about five or six miles up stream and about nine miles down stream. It has a covering overhead, and is enveloped by side curtains which can be removed when desired. The boat can carry about forty people, and will be used for light transportation, carrying passengers and pleasure parties to Seven Springs and other places.—Kinston Free Press.

Mr. John Lee Mabin, of the Chicago advertising agency of that name, relates that Mr. Frank Cooper, of Siegel, Cooper & Co., told him some years ago that when Mr. Cooper ran a store at Peoria he never asked the bank for $10,000 when he needed it, but went through his stock, marked down things that ought to move, and took a page in the papers and told the people about it and in three days he had his $10,000.—Printers' Ink.

Never Got Any Information.

A countryman strolled into Will Matthews' clothing store the other morning, when he was politely addressed by the "winter goods" salesman, "Can I serve you, sir?" "Yes," replied the countryman, "I want some of them."

"Some of what, sir?" said the salesman.

"Some of them New Ideas I see you advertise on your door," replied the countryman.

"All right, sir; walk this way," said the salesman.

When they had proceeded down the store some distance which was filled with new winter goods and gents' furnishings, the salesman said: "Now, sir, here is our stock—the latest styles; what can I show you?"

The countryman looked somewhat surprised, and remarked: "Is these what you are advertising?"

"Yes, sir," said the salesman.

"Be gowah!" said the countryman; "everybody knew you had all these fine goods, but I sorter thought you had got some 'ideas' you wanted to sell and I thought I would come in and buy some, being as how they are mighty scarce in my neighborhood."

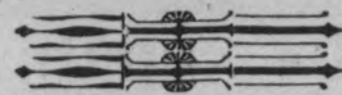

Whereupon the gentlemanly and obliging "winter salesman" said: "We will order some tonight and have them on hand by the time you come to town again.—Greensboro Record.
