Contentment is Happiness.

A New York letter to the Philadelphia Record says:

Charles T. Yerkes, Millionaire who made his immense fortune from street railroads, said today: "Wealth does not buy happiness; it only buys luxuries. Luxuries are only the fringe of happiness."

"Is a king or queen any happier in the possession of millions than the laborer who earns an extra penny and brings an apple home to his wife? No monarch could ever enjoy such happiness as that poor man. It is beyond his sphere."

"Contentment should be the great ruling power of mankind. If a man or woman can only be content with what he or she has, there would be more happiness. It is the hunt for wealth that can never be gained that makes men unhappy and often drive them to wrongdoing."

"We cannot all be millionaires. I am not going to preach a sermon I am merely going to give my belief that riches do not necessarily bring happiness. Men often think because a man is a millionaire he has everything in the world he wants. Well, in a way, he has, but often he has no more happiness than the poor man, and in many cases not as much."

"The great thing to remember is that we are all parts of a great nation. If it were a nation of 70,000,000 millionaires it would have no power. It is the competition of the poor against the rich that makes the nation prosperous. Were I a man with an humble home I would try to make that home just as happy as a home could be."

"I would be contented with it, and I would make my family happy and contented too. I would be just as good as any man."

"I want to say, too, that I consider a good business education far better for a young man than sending him out in the world a classic scholar. Combine the two. Tell young men who are starting out with the new century to keep good company or none. Never be idle. Employ your mind when your hands are not employed. Good character is above everything else."

"I suppose there are thousands who will say that it is easy for me to talk this way. They will wonder why I do not practice what I preach. I was always contented. I never hunted for great wealth; it just came."

Hanging and Flogging for Women.

Georgia has a notable case in that of Mrs. Nobles, an old woman who murdered her husband under circumstances of great barbarity, who was convicted and sentenced to death, but whose sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life for the reason, according to The Atlanta Constitution, that public opinion revolts at the idea of the hanging of a woman. Nevertheless, the old woman being refractory, it is necessary, according to the same authority, to flog her every Monday morning to induce her to go to work, which moves The Washington Post to wonder why the same sense of chivalry and dictates of humanity which forbade her hanging do not interpose to save her from flogging. The inquiry is pertinent. There doesn't seem to be a great deal of difference between the two. The shamefulness of the one is hardly greater than that of the other; the humiliation to her and her friends—if she has any—is not materially different. The more practical and the harder-hearted may say that what follows is mere sentimentalism, but the fact is that a woman should not be hanged, flogged nor worked on a chain gang. What when, as in this case, they commit atrocious crimes? Why, lock them up. But, it may be said, prisoners should not be maintained in idleness, but should be made to contribute something toward their own support, and if they will not work voluntarily, what then? If the prisoner is a woman, let her loaf. They are exempt from the rules which apply to men in all other cases and should be in case of crime, too. This may not be the best means of deterring them from crime, but it is at least humane, and a manifestation of that regard for the sex which is the entitlement of every woman, no matter how low she may have fallen.—Charlotte Observer.

The quality of the circulation can best be judged by the character of the reading matter. Papers of high tone that are constantly aiming to be helpful to their constituency, to educate them on the right lines, will always have a high toned, wealthy, reliable constituency. Papers that are merely retailers of commonplace ideas with no known editor, that are mere commercial enterprises, with no educational aims, never secure this kind of constituency, and advertisements of a high character placed in these papers are for most part money thrown away.—Wallace's Farmer.

Justice delayed is justice denied. Delaying to pay a debt without the consent of the creditor is refusal to pay, and causing the creditor to be a heavy loser thereby is next to criminality. This is liable in most business. Negligent payers should think of it and not claim the virtues of truthfulness, fair-mindedness, dignity and honesty.—Concord Standard.

Advertising Always Seasonable

There is no close season for advertising, unless the merchant desires a close season for business. Continuous advertising brings the best results; and the wide awake merchant is satisfied only with the best of everything.

There seems to be some misunderstanding among some people as to what effect the constitutional amendment will have on men who cannot read. This misunderstanding is the fruit of the misrepresentations of those office-seekers whose salvation in this world depends upon the defeat of the amendment. There is no reason that any one should not see into every feature of the proposition. It says in words as plain as the English language can make it, that no man who is white shall be deprived of his vote; that no man who voted before 1867 shall be deprived of his vote; and that no man who is a descendant of people who voted prior to 1867 shall be deprived of his vote. All this class of people can register and vote under the provisions of this great constitutional amendment no matter whether they ever saw or heard tell of a single letter in any book. And to further protect and forever make sure the rights of these white people to vote, this amendment says that these white men or descendants of white men, when once registered, shall never stop voting until the good Lord shall call them to that country where voting is not necessary and where demagogues are not found.—Lexington Dispatch.

On top of the alleged discovery of a scientific treatment for the perpetual renewal of youth comes the announcement that two French Physicians, Sappeller and Thebault, have found a specific serum against alcoholism. The serum is derived from a horse which has been "primarily rendered alcoholic by artificial means," and gives to the dipsomaniac a lasting distaste for alcoholic drink.

There are some folks in this quarter of the globe who ought to get a big dose of the same.

Now that they were married, the ugly old man had a confession to make to the lovely young woman. "I am not rich," he faltered in much apprehension. She did not start as if stung; far from it. Indeed, she smiled, not unkindly. "No matter," she replied. "Every body who sees us will think you are rich, and credit is just as good as money." Moreover, it was no small comfort, if one must be married, to be married to a person whom one need not treat with respect unless one feels like it.—Detroit Journal.

NOTICE.

This is to state that the firm of Drs. O'Hagan & Laughinghouse has not been dissolved. The only change made is, that for the better convenience of our patrons we have established a down town office.

Dr. O'Hagan will occupy the old stand. Dr. Laughinghouse will occupy the new office situated on Fourth street, just behind Frank Wilson's store in the Perkins block of buildings where the old post office used to be.

Skill in Advertising.

No matter in what class of goods a merchant may deal, advertising is the most important branch of his business; for it causes enlargement of sales and a consequent increase of profits. The alert tradesman knows that skill is as essential in the composition of his business announcements as it is in the selection and handling of his wares. Anybody can sell when people insist upon buying; but eloquently worded advertisements make patrons of thousands of person who had not intended to buy.

Don't Give Us Out.

With sickness at home and a multitude of duties on hand this week we have been prevented from looking after much outside business or calling on our advertisers to close up last year's work. We will get around to them all as fast as opportunity will permit. In the meantime anyone wishing to see us can call at the office.

Two Offices.

Drs. O'Hagan & Laughinghouse have established a down town office to be closer to their patrons. Dr. O'Hagan will be in charge of the old office near his residence and Dr. Laughinghouse will be in charge of the new office. He has just moved in and is getting his new quarters splendidly fitted up. The new office is in the Perkins building behind Frank Wilson's store.
