LORENZO BROWN AT LARGE.

He Escapes Jail The Second Time.

Lorenzo Brown, colored, who was confined in jail under sentence of death, the day of execution being set for the 26th inst., has again gained his liberty, breaking jail Monday night for the second time.

Sheriff G. M. Mooring gave THE REFLECTOR these particulars of how the prisoner made his escape: Monday evening about the usual hour for feeding, Deputy Sheriff S. I. Dudley, accompanied by George Sparrow, colored, who has been serving as a waiting boy about the court house and jail, went to the jail to give the prisoners their supper. It is the custom at such times to carry all the meals in one basket, unlock the cells and allow the prisoners to come out in the corridor and get their rations from the basket, this consuming about five minutes time. Monday evening as the prisoners were getting back into the cells Deputy Sheriff Dudley heard some of them whispering together. This somewhat aroused his suspicion and he concluded to walk around the corridor and see if everything was all right. Three other prisoners occupied the cell with Brown, and as the deputy went by he counted four men as usual in the cell and passed on. When he left the jail he told Sheriff Mooring about hearing the whispering.

A little later Deputy Dudley and the waiting boy both went back to the jail to take some oil for the lamps, and the deputy again walked around the corridor and as before counted the four men in Brown's cell. This seemed to reassure him that all was safe.

Before retiring that night Sheriff Mooring also went over himself to look around the jail. This was about 11 o'clock, and as he neared the jail he saw a colored man standing as if keeping watch. The Sheriff passed on in the jail yard when he saw another colored man draw up in the shadow of the jail as if to escape observation. Going up to this man it proved to be George Sparrow, his waiting boy. Upon going around the building the Sheriff found a hole cut through the wall. He then went inside the jail to see if any of the prisoners were gone. Every cell was securely locked just as Deputy Sheriff Dudley had left them, but in Brown's cell there were now only three men and Brown was missing.

The Sheriff believes that the other prisoners, aided by George Sparrow, had planned Brown's escape and that while supper was being given to them Brown hid himself on top of the cell while a dummy was fixed inside to represent the fourth man. There were marks on the jail wall which showed that some of the cutting of the hole had been done on the outside. When the Sheriff asked George about it the latter feigned drunkenness and began jabbering about something else. The Sheriff discharged him this morning.

Lorenzo Brown was convicted of rape at the April term, 1899, of Superior court, and sentenced to be hanged on the 10th of the following June. An appeal was taken to the Supreme court. Soon after court he escaped from jail, but was captured in LaGrange the next month and brought back. When the Supreme court heard the case in September the judgment of the lower court was confirmed and the Governor set the 26th day of this January as the day of execution. For sometime an effort has been made in behalf of the condemned man and there is now a strong petition in the hands of the Governor asking a commutation of the sentence.

We thought the town ordinances prohibited loud outcry by hotel porters who go to meet trains, but as much noise as ever can be heard around the depot.

Advertising Always Necessary.

The best time to advertise is when it is desirable to draw profits from a business venture. Since the enjoyment of profits is the permanent object of financial investment, it follows that advertising is always necessary. All successful merchants have found this to be true.—Philadelphia Record.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15, 1900.

If the republican grumblers in the House had nerve in proportion to their dissatisfaction, the McKinley muzzles would be quickly thrown aside and the House would do some business, instead of wasting time, as has been done ever since the reassembling of Congress, waiting until the Committees have prepared some bills in accordance with their instructions, as the democrats stand ready to help them at any time to restore the proper functions of the House. They nearly all have bills in which their constituents are interested, that they would like to get action upon, but they dare not move without permission. When the republican floor leader neglects to move an adjournment promptly enough, Speaker Henderson prods him by saying: "The gentleman from New York moves that the House do now adjourn." As Mr. McKinley's agent, Speaker Henderson is out-Reeding Tom Reed right along.

That the republican leaders do not feel sure of their ability to jam the ship-subsidy job through Congress is shown by the presence in Washington of Ex-Senator Edmunds, who has been employed, he says by the shipping interests to lobby for the bill. Mr. Edmunds has made elaborate arguments before the committees of the House and Senate in favor of the bill, but those arguments were not intended for the committees, a majority of both having been persuaded to support the bill long ago by Boss Hanna and his assistant pushers. Mr. Edmunds is not a cheap man, and he would not have been employed if his services had not been considered necessary. His arguments are expected to brace up the weak-kneed republicans who have candidly acknowledged themselves to be afraid of the ship-subsidy bill, as well as to furnish texts for the republican editors to preach from.

It begins to look as though the opposition to the reciprocity treaties negotiated under the Dingley tariff act might be strong enough to defeat them all. Mr. Kasson, who represented the U. S. in negotiating them, and who has been active in trying to get favorable action on them, has gone to Florida for his health, and they are now at a standstill. It is said that he will return later in the session and resume his efforts in behalf of the treaties, but their opponents claim to be gaining strength all the time.

Senator-elect Blackburn spent Sunday in Washington, receiving the congratulations of his friends, but returned to Kentucky today so as to be present at his second re-election, tomorrow, which will begone through so as to leave no room for casting doubt on the legality of his election. When he comes back to Washington, to resume his duties as Senator, he will be given a complimentary dinner which promises to be an old-fashioned democratic love-feast, participated in by all the democrats in Congress and by many others.

The friction between General Miles and Adjutant General Corbin has reached an acute stage, and Miles has filed a vigorous protest with Secretary Root, in which he asked whether he or Corbin was in command of the Army, and cited instances where Corbin had pigeon holed orders which did not suit him instead of issuing them.

It seems that one of Boss Hanna's chief literary agents, First Assistant Postmaster General Perry Heath, has also been sharing in the administration's financial favor. Last June, Perry Heath became the largest stock-holder in the Seventh National Bank of New York City, of which his brother became Vice President, and that immediately that bank was made the depository for post office funds in New York. Of course, neither politics nor Heath's official position had anything to do with it. Whoever heard of one of the Hanna school of politicians working his official position for his personal profit?

Nothing in this world is so good as usefulness. It binds your fellow creatures to you and you to them; it tends to the improvement of your own character; and gives you a real importance in society much beyond what any artificial station can bestow.

Unintentional Wife-Killing.

The case of Alfred Morrison, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., the uxoricide who says that he killed his wife in mistake for a burglar, bids fair to become as noteworthy as the Molineux affair. Morrison has been charged with premeditated murder, although his wife before she died declared him innocent of deliberate intent to kill her.

The District Attorney of Westchester county has acted wisely in this matter; for mistaken-for-a-burglar homicides have become quite as numerous as didn't-know-it-was-loaded killings—with the difference, however, that it is nearly always a wife who is removed when a husband dreams of burglars or imagines he sees them in the house. Usually, also, when this so-called mistake is made the wife is in a position and attitude favorable for deliberate aim and mortal wounding—which is seldom the case when a real burglar is unexpectedly flushed in a darkened bedroom at midnight.—Philadelphia Record.

Of course we are in favor of the amendment, but if we were not one of its most earnest champions, we would be disgusted at the action of those negro Republican clubs up North, who are organizing to send speakers and money to North Carolina to work for the defeat of the amendment. Congressman Linney and Senator Pritchard met with these clubs in Washington City and encouraged the negroes in their plan. We are sure that this exodus of negro politicians to this State will receive the condemnation of every peace-loving citizen of our State, and we deeply regret this intended invasion.—Milton Herald.

When I Was a Boy.

It is sometimes good to remember the days that are past—to review and collect from former experiences the crumbs that are left that nothing be lost.

I shall at present speak of farming. My father was a farmer, and I began to plow at the age of seven years.

His primal object of farming was to raise his own supplies. I never knew him to buy a grain of corn, nor a pound of meat, a chicken, horse, cow, mule, nor anything of that sort. He usually had such things to sell. It was common for men to drive their wagons to his crib and load them with corn, and buy bacon from him. Now and then he would sell a horse. Always he had something to sell, and the buyers would come to him to purchase.

He did not plant much cotton, no tobacco.

He always had money in his pocket, and bought a tract of land almost every year.

If in those days a farmer bought corn it shook his credit, for he was considered a poor farmer.

My observation is that the farmers now that raise their own bread and meat at home are successful, but those that buy their corn, meat, flour and all such things as they must have are failures.

Now who are the wiser, the farmers of the olden time that made their provisions at home, and kept out of debt, or those of these days that grow so much cotton and tobacco and buy what they eat, and are so enslaved with debt?

Return to the good old way. Plant corn enough to fatten your hogs. Raise your supplies at home. Have your smoke house at home and your corn crib at the same place, well filled. Raise chickens: Have your own milk and butter and such things at home.

Then what cotton or tobacco you make will be your own.—P. D. Gold, in Wilson Times.

"Col." Glenn is early in the field, as a candidate to succeed Senator Pritchard whose term does not expire till 1905. But sometimes the early bird catches the worm and sometimes he doesn't.

THE DREADFUL CIGARETTE AGAIN.

The Analytical Sanitary Commission of the London Lancet drawn to the American cigarette by the extravagant and sensational reports of some of our trashy medical journals, and in consequence have undertaken a careful analysis of numerous samples of cigarettes.

This very careful analysis confirms the belief that has been held generally by most reasonable persons, that cigarettes are not more harmful than tobacco in any other form; in fact the small amount of tobacco contained in them make them less harmful unless large numbers of them are smoked.

The allegation in regard to the presence of foreign poisonous material in cigarettes is shown to be unfounded. The one poisonous material found was copper in the paper, and it was present in such minute amounts as to be harmless.

The percentage of nicotine seldom exceeds one per cent while in other kinds of tobacco it may reach four times that amount. Another very interesting fact brought out is that the popular idea that nicotine is the chief toxic body in tobacco is erroneous; the chief poisonous bodies in tobacco smoke are related to the group of organic bases known to chemists as pyridins. However, as long as the poison is present it matters but little what its name is.

The Lancet commission suggests, that if those who are so emphatically solicitous about the health of the young community, would turn their attention to the prevention of smoking among boys, much good would be done. It is doubtful, however, if the use of tobacco by the young will ever be stopped entirely by legal measures. No doubt the desire to smoke arises from the natural craving of the half starved physical system for stimulation, for the use of tobacco as well as other stimulants is far more prevalent among those classes, who are illy nourished because of insufficient and improper food, and who are living under unhygienic conditions. To get at the root of the evil it will be necessary to elevate the condition of the lower class by teaching them good cookery, by the provision of proper hygienic conditions on the part of municipalities and by forcing landlords to provide suitable tenements and see that they are kept in a decent and healthful condition. In addition to this parents should know the injurious effects of narcotics of all kinds on the growing child, and use their influence to prevent their use before much good will be accomplished. M.
