Postage Stamps in Books.

Mr. Madden third assistant postmaster general has introduced an innovation in his department which promises to be the most popular thing of his administration. It is the issuance of stamps in book form at so small an advance in cost that the public will gladly pay the difference in exchange for the great convenience it obtains.

For a long time the office of the assistant postmaster-general, which has charge of the postage stamps has been considering a means whereby the great annoyance of stamps stuck together could be overcome. Shortly after General Madden came into office this subject was called to his attention and realizing its importance to the people, he proceeded to perfect his plans. He thought a modest cover of thick paper, with alternating leaves of stamps and paraffine paper would answer all requirements. Since that time the details have been slightly changed so as to permit printing on the cover of the book a succinct statement of the postal rates in the United States and foreign countries.

The book will be of a convenient size to carry in the pocket, and will contain stamps to the amount of 24 cents, 48 cents and 96 cents. An advance of one cent on each book is all that is to be charged the general public and if one-tenth of the stamps now sold in loose packages are distributed in books the government will realize a handsome profit from the investment. The government will pay but $2 a thousand for these books, and they will be sold for $10 a thousand in advance of course, of the face value of the stamps they contain. It is believed that the book containing 24 cents in stamps and costing 25 cents will be the most popular.

It is the intention of the department to add to the details of the book as the necessity arises. The postoffice officials are confident that the stamp books will become popular, and they believe much time will be saved in the handling of stamps at different postoffices.

The post office department has been receiving complaints and inquiries for years concerning stamps rendered useless by sticking together, and in the summer time the complaints run up into many hundreds a day. With the use of these stamp books it is believed much of this annoyance will be overcome, for with paraffine sheets between the stamps sticking is impossible. The addition of the information on the cover of the book promises to be a desirable feature, for there are few people who are fully acquainted with the postal rates of the United States.

When the matter was presented to Postmaster-General Smith he took a keen interest in the subject and promptly approved it.

The books will be ready in two or three months.

The Extortion of the Fertilizer Trust

The Fertilizer Trust, having acquired either by purchase or absorption the leading factories in the south thus having a practical monopoly of the output of commercial fertilizers, has this year largely increased the price. The increase of price has been much greater than the increase costs of material or production, and it is just that much taken from the pockets of the farmers to add to the profits of the Fertilizer Trust. The trust was already making a large profit on the capital actually invested, and had it not been for the monopoly, the price could not have been raised to such a high figure.

The farmers of South Carolina have recently held a number of mass meetings and resolved not to buy a pound of commercial fertilizer from the trust this year; and in this issue of the News is published an account of the meeting of the farmers of one section of Huntersville township, at which it was resolved that no fertilizers be purchased at a greater advance than ten per cent over last year's prices. Prompt action by the farmers all over the South is all that can defeat the grasping monopoly.—Charlotte News.

Catching It Hard

THE REFLECTOR is realizing the old saying that troubles do not come singly. Monday one of the force had to go home to entertain a pair of swelled jaws that the mumps left with him, and today another of the boys had to retire from the field with a blooming case of measles. Another of the staff has been hardly able to keep at his post. We are making the best possible out of the adverse situation, and in the meantime will take occasion to say that now is the time to subscribe, and this office for fine job printing.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1900

Congress has added another sorry and disgraceful page to its record. The House elections committee which had charge of the contest of Pearson against Crawford, from the ninth North Carolina district, has decided in favor of Pearson. This is a case of a Republican Congress, because it has a majority, deliberately unseating a Democratic member who was honestly elected.

Has Congress no business to transact for the country? If not, it had better adjourn than to remain in session and listen to the villifying harangues of Pritchard, White, Linney & Co., who talk about things with which Congress has nothing to do—matters which are subjects for Court decisions and not Congressional action. If Pritchard and his crowd could, by traducing the white people of the State, persuade Congress to pass resolutions against the proposed amendment and the election law, such resolutions would not settle anything, because the power to settle is lacking. They would simply be expressions of opinion. Nothing more, nothing less. Then why waste time and money with the clap-trap of those who misrepresent the people of their own State?—Winston Sentinel.

An Indispensable Power.

Advertising makes the wheels of business go round. It helps to supply the motive force of commercial activity, and keeps the machinery of barter and trade moving. It has become indispensable in industrial affairs, and is a boon to the purchasing public.—Philadelphia Record.

A Boom in Unions.

It has been suggested that onions are a good thing to prevent the taking of smallpox, with the result that about every man or two one meets he is "loaded" with them. Sometimes a fellow adds a little corn liquor to his bait of onions and then it is a fine odor.

Yes, this mixture ought to prevent any disease from taking hold of a man. It ought to have more self-respect than to be caught in such company.—Greensboro Record.

The average man is content with a day on his birthday, but most women like to take a year off.

It doesn't follow that an unsuccessful author should be poor. He ought to have plenty in his own write.

A SONG OF LIFE.

What shall I make of my life, love? What shall I bring to you.
Flower of fair color, song of tremulous sweep?
Bird that o'er waters floats on a faithful wing to you
Finds her way with a leaf for you to keep?
Shell in whose chamber remembered waves shall ring to you
Chimes of sleep?

Bird that homes to you? Song that will sigh and sing to you?
Flower that knoweth not passion or faith or doubt?
Shell that whispers a musical memory out?
Nay, I will make of my life two hands to cling to you—
Passionate hands, my heart, that shall clasp you and cling to you,
Living and dying, daylight and dreaming throughout.

—Black and White.

STOOD FOR STONEWALL.

When Jackson Gave an Order, It Was Obeyed to the Letter.

The following dialogue, current at the time, between one of Stonewall Jackson's soldiers and the provost guard illustrates Jackson's tact at eluding his enemy and also the obedience rendered and the confidence reposed in him by his troops.

The orders read on dress parade the evening before Jackson left the valley to take part in the seven days' fight around Richmond were that in case the army moved before further orders the answer from every soldier to any and all questions except those connected with the army shall be, "I don't know." On the march the provost guard found a soldier in a cherry tree helping himself, when the following took place:

"Who are you?" demanded the guard.
"I don't know," replied the soldier.
"Where is your command?"

"I don't know."
"To what command do you belong?"
"I don't know."

"What are you doing in that cherry tree?"
"I don't know."

"Are those good cherries you are eating?"
"I don't know."

"Is there anything you do know?"
"Yes."

"What is it?"
"Well, the last order I had from old Stonewall was that I was not to know anything until further orders, and, gentlemen, I will see you all hanged before I will know anything until old Stonewall takes that order off."—Waco Times-Herald.

The Bell Mare.

All tempered old horses delight to attack very young foals and will kill them if permitted. Mules have the same cheerful habit, unless they are under the influence of "the bell mare." She is the queen of the herd—a kindly creature who has grazed and fed with them, wearing a tinkling bell about her neck. If she snorts defiance of anything, all her followers rush to the attack. If she sniffs tolerance, they pass it by. In all things they obey her affectly.

Back in the old days, when horses and mules throughout the southwest went to market in droves, the rough riding highwayman of that epoch always tried to capture "the bell" and make off with it, knowing that nothing could keep the drove from following. Similarly, drovers tried always to save "the bell." She was led, never ridden, so that in event of attack she might be fresh for a game run. A light lad led her—the owner or chief drover brought up the rear. The lad had strict orders at the first sign of trouble to go his very best, caring for nothing but "the bell."

Boston's Best Sayings.

A good deal is to be forgiven Colonel Higginson in view of his witty and most admirable thrust at Henry James. There are four mots upon which Boston particularly prides herself. Motley made one of them. "Give me the luxuries of life, and I will dispense with its necessities." Tom Appleton made another. "Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris." A lady, name withheld, but quoted by Emerson, made the third. "The consciousness of being perfectly well dressed gives a feeling of inward tranquillity which religion is powerless to bestow." These three have long been famous, but Higginson matched the best of them when he remarked, "Henry James has been called a cosmopolitan, but he isn't, since a cosmopolitan is a man who is at home, even in his own country."—New York Mail and Express.

A Man's Calls.

A man must think when making a call to leave his umbrella, overcoat and overshoes in the hall, though he may carry his hat and stick to the drawing room. He must arise whenever a lady enters the room, and, whether caller or host, he must never look at his watch. Except in his own house, he should never find a seat for another. He must not offer his own chair to any one and should remove his glove before shaking hands.—Leah Lancelord in Woman's Home Companion.

Misfortune of a Poet.

"James has been quite unfortunate of late," said the poet's wife gloomily.
"Had another poem declined?"

"No; worse than that. You know; he has a habit of looking at the ceiling for inspiration, and last night, just as the inspiration came, a yard of plastering fell square on his head, knocking all the inspiration out of it!"—Atlanta Constitution.

What Tesla Selected.

Thomas Edison used to have Nikola Tesla working for him in his studio near Paris. Tesla came to him one day asking for work, and Edison, who needed help, referred him to the foreman, named Fulton. The latter took the young foreigner on condition that he would work. This Tesla did. For three days and nights he never closed his eyes. At the end of the first fortnight he had not had 48 hours' sleep all together, and Fulton, the foreman, made him take a rest. He also said to the young man that on account of the strain they had both been under they had better have a good meal.

Accordingly the foreman and the student went to a well known cafe on one of the boulevards and got one of the biggest and thickest steaks possible. It was a whopper and seemed to be overwhelming for two. Besides, the garnishings were liberal, and there was enough good wine. Between them, however, they managed to make everything disappear, and then Fulton, turning to Tesla, asked him if there was anything else he would like.

"You're out with me, you know, and whatever you want just order it." Tesla looked vaguely around for a minute, as if making up his mind, and then hesitatingly said, "Mr. Fulton, if you don't mind I would like another steak."—San Francisco Argonaut.

His Mistake as to American Girls.

A Louisville girl who was recently in Germany met a young English officer who was in the same city, and, in fact, in the same house with her for two months, studying German for his promotion. Like most Europeans, he had the usual absurd ideas about the girls of this country, who, in the minds of the untraveled foreigner, are rather hoyden creatures, who smoke and have other masculine traits.

After dinner one day in the early acquaintance of the couple the officer offered the Louisville girl a cigarette, and upon her refusing it he said: "Why, I thought all the girls in the United States smoked."

"So we do," replied the girl, "but never cigarettes, only pipes. If you will get that pipe off the mantelpiece in the next room I shall be charmed to smoke with you."

Not suspecting the joke she was playing on him, the officer brought the pipe and filled it, and it was not until he saw the wry faces his friend made in attempting to carry out the joke that he appreciated the situation. He was continually telling the American in a tone of surprise that she was just like the girls at home in England, and her rejoinder was:

"Lieutenant, don't you think a lady is a lady the world over?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Consumption.

Pulmonary tuberculosis is not a contagious, but only a communicable disease. The contact per se of the consumptive individual does not convey the disease. It is now well known that it is mainly the tuberculosis expectoration, which, when dried and pulverized to dust, constitutes the main danger of infection. The means to prevent infection from tuberculosis expectoration or saliva—expectorating only in proper vessels, spittoons and pocket flasks, proper use of handkerchiefs during coughing, etc.—are now also universally taught.

It is absolutely demonstrated that a tuberculosis patient, if he takes proper care of his expectoration, does not constitute any danger to his fellow men. In sanatoria and hospitals exclusively devoted to the care of consumptives it is of the rarest occurrence for an attendant to contract the disease, the hygienic precautions being so thorough. It may indeed be said that in these houses for consumptives one is less liable to contract consumption than outside of them.—Dr. S. A. Knopf in Forum.

WINE OF CARDUI

HEALTHY OLD AGE.

LARUE, BENTON CO. ARK., Aug. 4.
I am 49 years old and have been suffering with Change of Life. I had flooding spells so bad that none thought I could live. My husband got me Wine of Cardui and it saved my life. I am like another person since taking it.

MRS. E. B. TOWNSEND.

McEster's
Wine of Cardui

It is the devout wish of nearly all people to live to a ripe old age. None of us want to die young. This universal desire can be realized if care be taken of the health in early and middle life. A little precaution then will add many years to our existence. Death can be kept away a long time. Happy, healthy old age will be the lot of the woman who promptly corrects the ailments which afflict her sex. In youth, Wine of Cardui will take the female child safely over the dividing line between girlhood and womanhood. As a wife she needs it to help her through the trials of pregnancy and childbirth with as little discomfort as possible. At the Change of Life it will help her over the dangerous place that appears in her pathway between 40 and 50. Then will come many years of truly blissful existence. She will grow old slowly and gracefully. To the last she will preserve that charm and beauty which are always characteristic of perfectly healthy grandmothers. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. The remedy for their sickness is close at hand.

Made the Run.

A figure that attracted unusual attention about the depot, Tuesday morning, was Postmaster G. B. King running with a bag of mail to catch the train. The mail carrier between the postoffice and depot left one of the bags lying in the lobby. Sometime after he had gone the Postmaster discovered this and calling to Dr. W. H. Bagwell, who happened to be passing in a buggy, Mr. King jumped up with him and they drove off hurriedly for the depot. Just as they got in sight of the train it started off, and it not being safe to drive the horse up to the moving train the Postmaster jumped out with the bag and continued the journey on foot. He made the best run of his life and landed the bag safe in the mail car, and was cheered by the crowd as he stopped to recover his breath.

NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND BUSINESS NOTES.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Feb. 6, 1900

The railroad company has put up a nice signal lamp here.

Don't forget that A. G. Cox wants 500 cords of wood cut at once.

The town has purchased a lot and will move the market house on it to use for Mayor's office and calaboose.

The Cigar Company is making a new brand of cheroots for the exclusive control of a large jobbing house.

More dwelling houses are needed here to accommodate the working men coming in. A. D. Cox is thinking to build several at once.

J. B. Brooks, of Grifton, was in town yesterday, and purchased a house and lot. He expects to move his family here very soon.

On last Saturday a fine young horse belonging to C. C. Kirkman, while running jumped over a pile of wood. A piece of wood flew up and entered the bowels, passing through and came out at the back. The horse died in about twenty minutes.

BUSY BODIES.—It is nothing strange lately for A. G. Cox Mfg. Co. to get an order for one gross of back bands from one man, and the pretty part about it is that these orders are coming from old customers. They are also delivering several carts and wagons every week. You'll find them busy bodies, but not in other men's matters.

J. B. Speight, of near Renston, was here yesterday and said that he came very near having a serious accident at his house the other day. His little girl, finding a match in an off room, struck it and threw it in the dirty clothes box. Mrs. Speight smelled the clothes burning, and upon investigation found the fire just taking hold of the ceiling. It was put out without any further damage than burning up a lot of clothes.

DEPOT ENTERED.

Small Quantity of Goods Stolen

When Agent J. R. Moore, of the Atlantic Coast Line, went over to begin his duties this morning he found that somebody had been in the freight warehouse and office during the night. The upper section of a window just over the agent's desk was broken out. A drawer to one desk that was used for a cash drawer during the day been broken open but there was nothing in it. A large piece of iron known as a fish plate was lying beside the safe and sears on the lock and door of the safe showed that an effort had been made to break it open with the iron. One door in the freight room was also cracked open. The robber was evidently looking for money but did not succeed in getting any.

Agent Moore has carefully checked over the freight in the warehouse and found five caddies of tobacco and one bucket of butter missing. Failing to get any money the thief perhaps concluded to take along something that he could convert into cash. There is a right strong clue to the thief and he will probably be landed.
