SIMMONS FOR SENATOR.

STOKES, N. C. Oct. 25th.

MR. EDITOR:

With your permission we would like to use a short portion of your space today to say a few words upon a question which is now of interest in the State and which is of vital importance to North Carolina. I need not say that I refer to the question as to who shall represent us in the United States Senate in place of that arch traitor, Marion Butler. My purpose is not to dictate to the citizens of Pitt county for whom they shall vote. Unless we mistake the people they are competent to judge for themselves and have already, yes long ago, decided this question. There come times, however, when it seems but just that a man's friends should speak in his behalf. Everybody hereabout will know the reason for and assent to the truth that such an occasion now presents itself. Strange changes are now going on. Wonderful discoveries are now being made, and ludicrous reasons being given for the same.

During the last two campaigns great victories have been achieved in this State by the Democratic party. An incubus of thirty years standing has been gotten rid of. New conditions have been created. Men are demanded to meet them. We must at least have one such man elected on the first Tuesday in November to represent us in the United States Senate. Who shall it be? Some qualifications are necessary. What are they?

First in order should be mentioned competency. What would constitute this in a man? From reading many of the communications of the present day one would say it is all embraced in the word generosity. If a man is generous, kindly disposed, liberal and benevolent he is first class material out of which to make a United States Senator. From others you would judge that large contributions to campaign funds includes the whole thing. This you know is Republican idea and some of our friends judging from their writings must be new converts and haven't forgotten their old way of thinking. Another asserts that his choice has said he wants to be Senator and he has said it in a manner that is open, frank and manly and that he (the candidate) thinks he can do more for the good of North Carolina as a member of the United States Senate than he can as a private citizen. Therefore he is qualified and ought to be Senator. Parenthetically we would say that this last argument is so convincing that it might be well enough to stop just here and say it would probably be better for the people to say these things and not the candidates. With others competency seems included in the fact that he is a Democrat. The Democratic party, however, has never had any of these standards for its officers. For United States Senate it will require that a man shall have ability. That he shall know something of the science of Government and its relation to the people and the relation of the people to it. That he shall know something of politics and its relation to Government and Government to it. That he shall know something of the needs of his people and the bravery to demand these and the ability to force their recognition and thereby accomplish the greatest good for the number.

The second requisite in the man who fills this place is that he shall in some degree at least merit the honor bestowed. He must have done some signal service for the party.

The third quality necessary is that he shall be an honest patriot and the embodiment of the great principles for which his party is contending.

We might add a fourth qualification in the present crisis, namely that he should be an able exponent of the principles upon which the government is founded, able to contend in debate with his associates.

Have we such a man before us today as a candidate for this exalted position? We answer emphatically yes! We need hardly say it is the Hon. F. M. Simmons, than whom there is scarcely a better known North Carolinian living today. Is he competent? His recognized ability as a lawyer, his services as a member of congress, and last but not least the wonderful wisdom and skill which he has exhibited in the management of the last two campaigns as chairman of the State Democratic Committee mark him as a man of no ordinary ability. He has been equal to every occasion on which his services have been demanded and it is but right and just to say that the same would be true of him as Senator.

Does he merit the position? Here I believe every Democrat in North Carolina will unite with the hearty answer yes. If Simmons hasn't done something for the State politically who has? When other men have been timid he has been bold, when others have faltered he has been brave and aggressive. When others have been despondent he was buoyant. He knows no such word as fail. Under his leadership we have never been beaten. To him belongs at least a part of the fruits of victory and unless we mistake the signs of the times his fellow Democrats in the last two campaigns will so decree on the 1th of November next. Does he stand for everything for which his party is contending? Let his life and his act speak. Let his devotion to our course ring in the ears of his country men that what his party demands is his pleasure to do, wherever they desire to go he will lead.

Is he able in debate? Would he be able to hold his own with his associates? We might let some of the Republicans and Populists who met him on the hustings answer this. No Democrat surely will deny that he has few superiors in debate.

Simmons is competent, he merits the place, he is patriotic and stands for everything for which his party contends, he is able in debate and he should receive the support of his party for United States Senator. No other candidate before the people today possesses these qualifications and unless he does he should not be elected.

Democrats of Pitt county lets rally together and make the county unanimous for that matchless leader of North Carolina's, dauntless host that stood together last August.

Lets show our appreciation for worth by honoring the man who has ever been in the thickest of the fight.

One more thought, shall we elect the Senator or let the Republicans and Populists select him for us? Every one of these in the State is opposed to Mr. Simmons. Thousands of them will vote for Mr. Bryan for no higher reason than to qualify themselves to vote against Mr. Simmons. We have always stood with him when they opposed him. Shall we desert him now? Has he changed front? Have they changed purposes? Shall they carry the first election after the adoption of the Amendment? We know not what course others may take but as for us we will never aid Marion Butler, Jeter Pritchard and their crowd to accomplish any thing politically in this day and time or at any other date.

BLACKJACK ITEMS.

BLACK JACK, N. C., Oct. 25th. Right much sickness around here now.

Large crowd out here to preaching Sunday. Services conducted by Rev. Burroughs was enjoyed very much.

Mrs. W. J. White, of Ayden, accompanied by her children little Wesley and Ethel, is visiting at L. H. Whites Joe and Miss Rebecca Hardee, of near Greenville, were the guests of Miss Maggie Smith Sunday.

There was a baptism near here on last Sunday, quite a large crowd attended.

We were pleased to have Turfey Proctor, of Grimesland, in our midst last Sunday.

Glad to have Miss Annie White back in Black Jack again after spending a long visit with her brother W. J. White in Ayden.

Mrs. L. H. White is on the sick list.

Glad to see Jesse Smith out again after having the mumps.

Miss Lucy Linton, of the F. W. B. T. Seminary, Ayden, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting her many friends in Black Jack.

We had the pleasure of having W. H. Wynn, of Bethel, in our midst last Sunday.

We surrender most of our space to a discussion of the Senatorial question. As that is uppermost in the minds of the people now perhaps they had rather read that than anything else.

Who is your choice for Senator? is the question asked. The President and Congressman, to whom most importance should be attached, are but little thought of in this campaign.

The worst thing about the Senatorial contest is the bitterness it has engendered. It is all wrong, too, that there should be falling out in our own ranks. Everybody will be glad when the controversy has ended.

Oddities of the Census.

A New York enumerator, who was perhaps something of a sleuth entered several men in his district variously as "crooks," "pick-pockets," and "gamblers." For some reason these were entered under the head of "not gainful" pursuits. A Georgian, who eke out an existence by doing chores about the neighborhood in which he resides, will appear in the census as "odd-jobs." His occupation will be found very properly under the head of "other-things." One of the southern enumerators came across an invalid, who has spent several years in the South for his health, and promptly entered the sick man's occupation as "traveling for his health." This of course was punched under the head of "not gainful."—Baltimore American.

A Veteran's Tribute To General Carr.

If there ever was a time when the Democratic party could afford to be generous it is now. By the return of the Populists two years ago, and by the aid of the Republicans at the late August election, Democratic victories were achieved. Under promise of peace and good will to all, which, if carried out, will bring prosperity and a long lease of power to the Democratic party, the two leading religious Journals of the State, The Biblical Recorder and The Christian Advocate, have come forward in the most patriotic and Christian spirit counseling peace and reconciliation instead of the bitter feeling of intolerance that has so long prevailed. We have elected a Governor who will carry out a liberal, statesmanlike policy. Next in importance is a United States Senator in whom all the people can trust and honor though they differ in political policies. With such men at helm the old ship of State will rise up the highest wave of moral and material progress. Without detracting anything from the claims of any of the aspirants, it is my purpose to advocate the special claims of a man who will best fill all the requirements of the broadest patriotism and statesmanship; a man who stands closest and who has done most for the unfortunate Confederate soldiers; who has virtually founded and sustained the Soldiers Home at Raleigh, besides keeping them out of the poor houses all over the State; a man who has done most for the religious moral and educational interest; a man who stands highest in the general business interest of the State; a man who best understands and appreciates the agricultural, manufacturing with all the moral and material interests of the State; a man who has always stood by the Democratic party and for more than thirty years has given it more financial aid than any man in the State; a man who is not nor ever has been in politics for the money that is in it; a man who learned true patriotism by carrying a musket in the Confederate States' army without reward or the hope of reward. That most distinguished philanthropist and patriotic Christian gentleman is General Julian S. Carr.

General Carr represents the veteran soldier standing on his last legs, making the last appeal that will ever be made to honor one so highly from the old Confederate rank and file.

If Mr. Bryan is elected none of General Carr's opponents would have as great influence with that administration as he. And if President McKinley is re-elected none can dispute but what General Carr would command more respect and influence with the administration than Mr. Simmons. We appeal to our old comrades who learned to be patriotic without pay, to stand by our true and tried comrade, Julian S. Carr, and we will confer the highest honor on our class, our party and our State.

Respectfully submitted,
 J. C. ELLIOTT,
 Priv. Co. F. 56 Regt. N. C. G.,
 C. S. A. Polkville, Cleveland county, Oct. 3, 1900.

A New York correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, says that most of the reports about big betting there are simply bluff, and that there are not in all bets up amounting to $100,000. Betting, for effect, is part of the machinery of practical politicians. Odd as it seems, there are voters who vote for the side that offers the largest odds.—Wilmington Star.

A Great Army of Advertisers.

An advertising periodical estimates that there are in the United States about 170,000 regular advertisers who spend at least $400,000,000 annually for newspaper space. Whether these figures be accurate or exaggerated, it is obvious that tens of thousands of successful men consider newspaper "ads" as essential to their business and their faith in the virtue of advertising is the result of experience.—Philadelphia Record.

A New York clothing merchant advertised extensively and regularly in the newspapers during the first year of his business career; and then having succeeded in winning a satisfactory trade, adopted the plan of advertising only occasionally. Business did not continue to satisfy the merchant, and after eighteen months he found it was necessary to do all his first work over again. "It cost more to re-establish myself," he said to an advertising agent, "than it would if I had continued to take a reasonable amount of space in the newspapers every day the year 'round; but the lesson has been worth its cost."

The Richmond Dispatch recalls that in 1884 the betting in New York was three to one on James G. Blaine. There was one pool of $100,000 to $300,000 on him. It was a "put up job." Hanna knows that folks can be fooled by betting and he uses that as he does other methods of deception.—Raleigh News and Observer.
