CARR'S QUALIFICATION.

Communication.

MR. EDITOR: Some of those who are opposing Gen. Carr for the United States Senate say he is not a man of ability. It has been stated in the press that his followers do not lay claim to statesmanship for him, because he is not a lawyer.

Here are the facts: He began life poor and unknown. His family had no wealth and no prestige. His father lived at Chapel Hill, and he made use of the opportunities afforded at the University of our State. He entered upon the contest of life's battle with nothing but a trained mind, good health and character. He chose a business rather than a professional life. By diligence, close attention and wisdom he became a successful business man. Under his care and management, a small manufacturing plant at Durham became a mammoth concern. From a barn where tobacco was pulverized with a stick, it became a four-million dollar plant, employing hundreds of laborers. As it grew Mr. Carr became identified with other enterprises; and he has been closely connected with the successful administration of more enterprises than any other citizen of the State. This requires ability of a high order, and many men of marked ability have been unable to accomplish so much. It may be ability of a different kind from that which enables a man to preach practice law or medicine, but it is ability of just as high order. It involves the management of men and affairs. But Mr. Carr's ability does not end here. While he has been engaged in these business enterprises, he has also been conspicuous in the political, educational and religious affairs of the State. With pen and by speech he has advanced the cause of all. The Church has had no stronger friend, no more influential force. The unanimity with which the educational forces of the State are supporting him, shows that his ability is recognized in that field. On the stump he has served his party and his State and demonstrated his ability. An article from his pen on the Negro in the South was clear and strong a presentation of that subject as I have read anywhere, and I recommend it to those who speak and write about his lack of ability and statesmanship. His contribution to the campaign literature of 1898 were effective and influential in changing the tide in that great struggle.

Mr. Carr has never become so absorbed in business as to forget his books. He has now, and always has had, a good library. His interest in his own affairs has never interfered with his interest in public affairs. An atmosphere of culture refinement and learning prevades his home.

Some of the friends of other candidates began the fight upon the line of party service, and have found that Mr. Carr was superior there. If they now change the contest to one of ability, they will find upon investigation, that he has demonstrated more kinds of ability than any other man in the race.

Nor do I agree with those who say the constitutional amendment needs a lawyer to defend it in the United States Senate. A lawyer will be needed when it is tested in courts. The Senate has nothing to do with it, except to make political capital. It may attempt to reduce our presentation in Congress, or to pass another force bill. If so we will need there some man of wisdom and tact who has friends and influence in the North as well as in the South. In a trying hour like this on another occasion we were saved by Mr. Gorman, the great Senator from Maryland, and he was not a lawyer. I know of no man in North Carolina capable of doing more for us in such an hour than Gen. Carr.

BETHEL ITEMS

BETHEL, N. C. Oct. 25th, 1900.

W. J. Mayo left here Tuesday for Raleigh to attend the fair.

The Bethel Athenian Literary Society meets every Friday night. We are glad to say that the members are improving very much. They will have a joint debate Nov. 2nd. The question is should the white people be taxed to support the negroes.

Harry Freeman and family has returned from the north to make their home here for a while. Mr. Freeman will begin making barrels in a few more days.

Rev. J. W. Rose held service here in the Baptist church last night. He will be our pastor for the coming year.

H. J. Grimes left here Wednesday for Raleigh to attend the fair.

Wade Andrews was in town Wednesday on business.

R. D. Whitehurst returned from Tyrrel county Wednesday night.

Deputy Sheriff Mooring was in town today collecting taxes.

Miss Nina Grimes spent last night with Miss Effie Grimes.

The clerk who over sleeps himself may not be interested in politics, but he often runs for his office.

"Her eyes drank in the familiar landscape," read the novelist who was running over his latest story. "Gee! what a thirst!" remarked Guzzler, suddenly waking up.

GEN. CARR IN GREENVILLE

He is Given a Great Reception.

Gen. Julian S. Carr, candidate for the United States Senate, reached Greenville on the morning train to fill his appointment for speaking here today. He was given a most cordial welcome to our town, one of which any man might feel proud, and one he said he would always remember and appreciate.

The speaking took place in the Court House, and the building was crowded from the stand to the door, even the gallery being full. There were a number of ladies present, and Masonic Hall School and Miss Annie Perkins' school both turned out in a body to hear him. Many Confederate veterans from all portions of the county attended. It was a fine crowd.

Gen. Carr was handsomely introduced to the audience by Mr. Alex. L. Blow, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of the county, and was given quite an ovation when he arose. He made a magnificent speech that was responded to with frequent bursts of applause. He paid a glowing tribute to William J. Bryan as the great and safe leader of the people, and his reference to the patriotism and valor of the North Carolina Confederate soldier was superb.

Gen. Carr said he had sworn eternal enmity to the trusts and with him it would be a labor of love to help free North Carolina from the shackles of monopoly.

His reference to his candidacy for the Senate was very modestly made at the close of his speech, when he first urged every Democrat and every lover of North Carolina to vote for Bryan and to do his utmost to send a solid Democratic delegation to Congress, and said he would be glad if at the same time they would honor him with their votes in expressing their choice for the United States Senator.

At the conclusion of his speech, Mr. B. C. Pearce, in behalf of the teachers and pupils of Masonic Hall School, presented a beautiful bouquet to Gen. Carr. The reference of Mr. Pearce to what Gen. Carr had done for the orphans in North Carolina was most touching. Gen. Carr responded felicitously in accepting the bouquet.

The Osceola band was present and delighted large the audience with several of its best airs.

Smile in Each

No man is so absent-minded that he wants to pay a bill twice.

Like lightning, the successful borrower never strikes twice in the same place.

"Do you believe in heredity?" asked the Serious man. "Well, I've known old clothes to descend from father to son, replied the Cheerful Idiot.

The nervous man threw down his paper irritably. "There's that girl next door practicing on the piano again," he exclaimed. "You must remember that practice makes perfect," remarked his wife. "Yes; a perfect nuisance," growled the nervous man.

"Now," said the kindergarten teacher, wishing to illustrate the five senses, "what are our noses for." "Please, Ba'ab, dey bust be to catch cold id," sniffled the small boy at the foot of the class.

Who you will vote for for President and for Congress in the coming election is of more importance than who you will vote for in the Senatorial primary. That the next Legislature will elect a Democratic Senator is an absolute certainty, but that we will have a Democratic President or a Democratic Congressman to represent this district is not so certain. Therefore you better think a little about something else besides who will be Senator.

One of the foolish things Democrats do is to have wrangles among themselves and such are always hurtful to the party. This cutting and slashing at each other within the party ranks over the Senatorial question is as disgusting as it is hurtful. THE REFLECTOR regards the approaching primary in about the same light as it does a nominating convention. One man has just as much right as another to want to be Senator and to be a candidate for it, and the voters have just as much right to vote for whom they please in this primary as do the delegates in a convention. No one man has any more claim upon the individual voter in the primary than another, no more so than one candidate before a convention could claim that he should have all the votes. The primary is only to make a nomination for Senator, not to elect one, and no man is the party candidate until that nomination is made. Every man is his own candidate, and he has the right to ask the support of his friends, and his friends have a right to vote for him, without anybody having anything to do with it.

Therefore, let us not lose sight of the main question.—Macon, Ga., Telegraph.

From the Scotland Times a paper published at Laurinburg by negroes, the following timely and sensible suggestion to the colored race is taken:
 "It is a settled fact that for some time at least the negro is no longer a political factor in North Carolina as well as in other Southern States. It is also true that the race enjoys the right of suffrage in the North, but a chance to vote and not a chance to make an honest living is more detrimental to the welfare of the laboring class of colored people than a chance to make an honest living and not a chance to vote. We hope our people will consider these things in their mad flight to what they think is a more congenial climate."
 Experience is the best teacher, and the most expensive.

terness, this abusing people and calling them Populists and Republicans, and that they are run by the machine, and what not, just because some don't happen to think like another in this matter is simply disgusting. One candidate is just as good a Democrat as another, and the men who will vote for one are just as good Democrats as will vote for another. If either was the candidate of the party the situation would be different, but as it is the individual voter has a right to express his preference just as he pleases and it is nobody else's business. Let the dissension stop.

Come Back to the Main Question.

Let us come back to the main question.

Cotton is a deceiver. Politics are as uncertain as the wind. Trade and traffic ebbs and flows. But wheat at the mill is a consolation and a joy so long as it lasts.

Late rains have moistened the earth. The soil is ripe for seed. The sowing is a short, quick job; and then the reaping. The best crop is the cheapest crop.

You plant, you wait, you reap. No chopping time; no thinning out; no first, second, third and fourth plowing. No army worm; no boll worm; no hand picking and ginning.

Plow in with labor saving plow. Reap with labor-saving reaper. No anxiety about "hands," and disgust and worry when you get them, at harvest season.

The farmers of Georgia must learn as the years go by to minimize their dependence on negro labor. It gets scarcer every year. The better class of negroes, and the vagabond class also are coming in town; the one to work at trades in the shade and the other to steal. There are others of them drifting northward. (God grant that their little tribe may increase!) The negro farmer if the future will be those few who own their own farms. The negro farm hand is rapidly disappearing. The next generation will scarcely (if at all) know him.

The white farmer, therefore, who thinks of his own future, and of the future of his children, should not shut his eyes to the plain and inevitable drift of things. He should put his house and his farm in order. Grain growing and stock raising (they go inevitably together) is the white farmer's advocacy. Cotton is his natural surplus crop.

Therefore, let us not lose sight of the main question.—Macon, Ga., Telegraph.

There is a gentleman of means, one whom our people hold in high esteem, in Lexington who has a remarkably odd record, part of which any one could be justly proud. It is this: At no time in his life did he ever own a pocket book, a pocket knife, a watch or a pistol. He never smoked or chewed tobacco, never drank a drop of whiskey nor swore an oath. Truly he is an exception to the general run of men.—Lexington Dispatch.

This is Grover Cleveland's tribute to the memory of late William L. Wilson: "Few men had a nature more completely rounded out. In his public life he was patriotic and absolutely devoted to the best interests of his countrymen. I have seldom or never met a man who was in his private relations so well constituted to inspire regard and affection. His intellectual traits were of high order, and it may be said without any extravagance of expression that his death is a great loss to his country and a positive bereavement to all who were privileged to enjoy his personal acquaintance and friendship."

A Republican paper rises to remark that: "Another evidence of prosperity is the large amount of money spent in the campaign." As the larger part of it is contributed by the trusts, it may be an evidence of their prosperity.

A White Man's Contest.

There seems to be a strange forgetfulness on the part of a few Democratic voters as, to fully appreciate the fact that the Senatorial primary next month, is strictly a white man's contest.

The talk of losing a few ballots in this precinct or that, or forgetting to count ballots for the opposing candidate of "seeing" that all the ballots are read "right," when the count is made, and other little tricks which the man at the box may institute, this kind of talk is going to prove very dangerous if the talk is followed up by the perpetration of such acts as shall rule out legitimate white votes.

The rules governing this Senatorial primary are laid down by the Executive Committee of the Democratic party, and while the primary is not legalized, so that offenses committed may be punished under the law, yet there will be punishment by public exposure if the primary election is not conducted fairly.

The rules governing the Senatorial primary ought to be known to every poll holder.

Who can vote and who cannot, is easily settled. As to the class, "White men and Croats," which makes it exclusively a white man's contest.

Those who voted the State Democratic ticket in August, and those who will vote the National Democratic ticket in November, covers the two classes of voters.

This Senatorial primary may appear to many a trifling affair, a matter to be joked about as to how the ballots may be cast and counted.

But let no one make such mistake, for some thoughtless action some preconceived scheme, may lead to some after developments that will prove anything but a joke to the perpetrators.

The candidates and the party's reputation are equally at stake in this Senatorial primary election.—New Bern Journal.

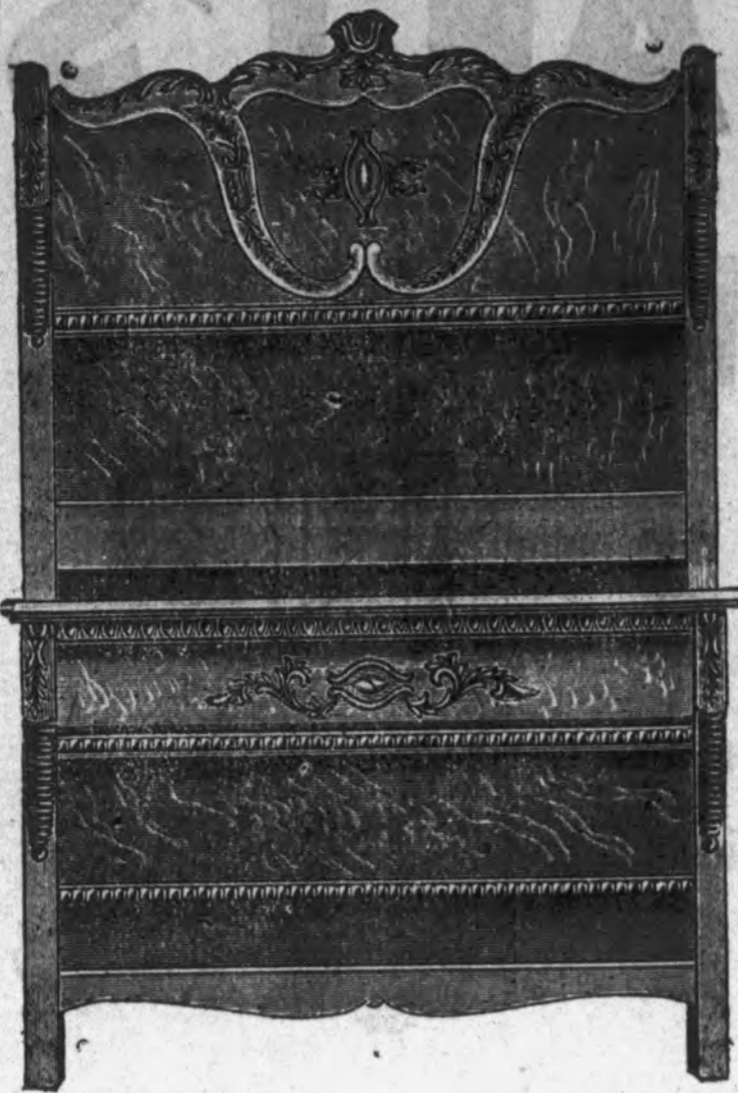

No Power Can Beat Bryan this Time, Says Croker and Murphy.

New York, October 23.—Senator Murphy, speaking of Hanna's speeches in the West, said today: "Hanna, Roosevelt and other Republican leaders now on the stump are getting mad, and saying intemperate things. That shows they realize that we have them beaten and they know it."

"Bryan will be the next President of the United States."

Richard Croker, who was standing by, said: "The Senator is right. No power can beat him this time."
