

THE SAGE OF GREENVILLE.

A Tribute To The Late Dr. Chas. J. O'Hagan.

When a man like Dr. C. J. O'Hagan dies the loss to a community is instantly realized but not so easily estimated. The value of such a life is indelibly fixed in memory, for it is seldom indeed that one so great in mind and heart is found dwelling among us. It is not the purpose of this writer to attempt a sketch or review of the notable career of this uncommon man, but only to mention in brief and simple words of appreciation some of the qualities and virtues that made him for so long a time a valued and distinguished citizen in our midst.

Dr. O'Hagan was endowed by nature with rare talents and superb gifts of mind. His luminous intellect, his fertile brain, his superior knowledge, his learning in books and intelligent observation of human affairs, his inflexible honesty and unswerving rectitude in aim and purpose, his laudable and enduring traits of character,—all these gave him a high place in the esteem and affections of men, and they bestowed on him their homage and admiration without stint or reservation. As a physician of long experience and busy and lucrative practice, he stood in the forefront of his profession. His superior merits and abilities were widely recognized, and doctors far and near bowed to his mature wisdom and sought him for advice and consultation. He was devoted to his great work, he loved his profession, and mastered it and practiced it as a science and a blessing to mankind. From the beginning of his professional career his aptitude and talents made his progress and success certain. He didn't falter, nor "lag superfluous on the stage," but advanced steadily forward and upward to an eminence and distinction that but few ever reach. He diligently toiled "up the steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar," and became the pride and ornament of his profession. Never arrogating to himself superior excellence, he seemed to care nothing for the airy honors of a name, nor sought any of the crafty arts to elevate himself above his fellows, and yet by his higher wisdom and knowledge, greater learning and experience, he could but fill his natural place and stand in the first rank as a physician with few equals and no superior in our State. There are numerous families today who feel that there is none other who can take his place as doctor in their homes. In him they had implicit faith and adoring confidence; their hearts, like muffled drums, are beating mournfully over the departure of him who can visit them no more. Besides his great medical skill, his very presence, his attractiveness, his hopeful, assuring words, served as a benediction in the sick room, giving cheer and strength in the battle with stubborn disease and wasting illness. For the past several years of his aged career he had a valuable and needful assistant in his busy, arduous professional duties in the person of his talented grandson and namesake, Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse, and the partnership thus formed gave him some relief from his incessant labors, and these occasional hours of leisure could but be welcome to a nature so ripe in years though still strong in physical and mental force and apparently unwearied by the four-score years that whitened his head. We may believe that the grandfather felt a just pride in the signal success and growing reputation of the grandson, seeing him so well equipped in brain and talents, already established in a lucrative practice and secure in the public confidence, and destined to wear high honors in the profession which he himself adorned for so long a period and gave the best years of his life.

It can be said with truth that Dr. O'Hagan possessed qualifications that would have brought him lofty distinction outside of his profession if his genius had inclined him to such ventures. His intellectual powers, his resolute will, his chivalrous nature and commanding presence, would have served him well in any political ambition he might have cherished. But in our recollection he had no such aspirations, and at the slightest intimation of such preferment by his friends he rebelled against the very thought and tossed back the proffered plume, unwilling to woo the fickle fortune of politics, and immovable in his high purpose to pursue with whole mind and heart the one noble calling he loved and honored so well. He was a fluent, earnest and forcible speaker though the occasions were infrequent when he appeared upon the public rostrum. In response to calls in a political assemblage his addresses were brim-full of reason and logic, delivered in terse and cogent English, evoking most hearty applause. He was well informed on political questions, and while a vigorous partisan he believed the contests between parties should be conducted on a high plane of thought and action. The Louisville Courier Journal was one of his favorites in newspaper reading, being specially fond of the racy and brilliant editorials of Henry Watterson, so compact in potent thought and political philosophy, and written in a style so relucious and vivid. Dr. O'Hagan kept himself in touch with the brightest and best thought of the times. He was a ripe scholar, his acquaintance with both ancient and modern literature was extensive, and his memory retentive and un-failing. In classical lore none other among us knew near so much as he. To have his critical opinion and comments on any literary question or production was always a delight, for in his discourse the erudition of his own brilliant and cultivated mind shone forth in full splendor. By his courtliness of manner and matchless graces of speech he would become the cynosure of all eyes in any circle or company. He could command attention at will by the charms of his conversation. Such the versatility of his genius and scope of requirements, he could instruct and enlighten by his learning or delightfully entertain and amuse by his wit and pleasantry. The richness of his vocabulary and apt and witty illustrations made him a favorite, and if circumstances justified his use of the weapons of sarcasm and ridicule was unsurpassed and most effective.

Dr. O'Hagan seemed to live in an atmosphere of dignity and stately independence. He stood as a chief among men, not because of self assertion or that he claimed greater excellence, but by right of his honor, his courage, his magnanimity and his well known virtues. There was within a proud consciousness that he wore no hypocrisy's mask, and that none of the arts of dissimulation he practiced. Mens conscia recti was his guide. He carried no false banners, but followed the straight and open path. He was candid and sincere in all things, and believed in straightforward honest dealing in square and manly fashion. He was bold and outspoken in his opinions, and never spoke in low whispers to escape "the oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely." He hated all sharp practices, all shams and petty policies, and fearlessly denounced wrong or injustice wherever he saw it, uncaring the consequences. His moral nature was never stained by selfish greed and unholy avarice. In this Mammon-worshipping age he never became soul-scarred in the mercenary scramble for wealth. To amass great riches was not the object that spurred his genius and industry. He was satisfied with a sufficient competence to meet all reasonable wants and conveniences and for himself and family to live in comfortable and independent fashion, and this was the extent of his estate. There were other rewards in life besides money which he prized and gained. The good accomplished by his faithful work and the appreciation and gratitude of the many he served and helped, were compensations that counted much with him and added to his sum of human enjoyment.

Notwithstanding his preeminent powers and the exalted station he filled, he was accessible alike to all—the lowly as well as the high born, the poor as well as the rich. He tendered his outstretched hand as graciously and spoke greeting words as warmly to the toil-worn man, no matter how sorely tried by poverty's peltings, as he did to the opulent and mighty. He believed with Robert Burns:

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gold for a' that."
The honest man, tho' e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that."

His heart was full of generous and sympathetic impulses. A most considerate, kind and indulgent father, tender and devoted in his attachment to each and every member of his family. In his nature there was a wealth of tenderness and affection that disclosed itself all through his long life. The deeds of kindness, the acts of charity, the numberless little benefactions dispensed so freely and unostentatiously by him, form a bright jewel in the crowning honors of his extraordinary life and bespeak the innate humanity and immense generosity of his nature. We will not say such a man was faultless, for there is none perfect among us. Whatever his few frailties they are reckoned as but slight and fade away as we contemplate his shining virtues and noble and manly deeds, which are written on the iron leaf of eternity to give him a post of honor in the higher world to which he has gone. His deeds is the epitome of the man. It was his to know his work and do it, and in the eyes of the Great Taskmaster such faithful labors was worship in a noble sense and the essence of a religion divinely sanctioned

Dr. O'Hagan's death came not as an unseasonable blow, yet all wished that in his venerable age many years still might be spared him. So grand and useful were the threads that he wove in the web of a life so long associated with the history of our town and so intimately blended with its society, a figure so majestic and popular wherever known, his death produces more than ordinary regrets, and they reach the furthest limit of his acquaintance.

The Old And New.

There was a merry ringing of bells Monday night when the old year and old century passed away and the new were ushered in. Nearly every bell in town joined in the chime, and one could not suppress a feeling of both joy and sadness as the peals rang out upon the stillness of the night.

And what a moment of heart-searching was this. First a reflection of the past and then a hopeful looking to the future. A grateful thankfulness to Almighty God for the blessings of the past, followed by a prayer for His continued blessings upon the future.

He Counted All Right.

"You've been in a fight," said his mother reprovingly. "Oh, not much of a one," answered the boy. "Did you count 100, as I told you, when you felt your angry passions rising?" "Oh, sure," returned the boy. "I counted 100 all right, but I knocked the other boy down first. It's the only safe way." —Chicago Post.

W. T. Lee & Co. have received the first embroideries and white goods of the season. The stock is much admired by the ladies.

The Masons had one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings last night of any in several months. Two members took the third degree.

Ormond & Carr have moved their hardware store to the Alfred Forbes store, lately occupied by J. C. Cobb & Son and next to Bank of Greenville.

We are now in the Alfred Forbes store, lately occupied by J. C. Cobb & Son, where you can find a full line of hardware.

ORMOND & CARR.

The past year was a prosperous one for Greenville in the of buildings. The town made good progress as the many new buildings bear record.

Stationery, Pencils, Pens, Paper, Ledgers, Memos and Scratch Pads, everything in that line for man, woman or child. Do you like to save money in prices. Then see ZENO MOORE & BRO.

PAY YOUR TAXES—LAST CALL. All who are due for taxes had better see me at once and pay, otherwise I shall be compelled to collect by distress. My office is now at the Court House, 3rd door on right. C. D. ROUNTREE, Town Tax Collector.

Employment for Families.

Wanted—Families to work in a cotton mill and learn the business. Good wages paid after learning. Write to editor of this paper—if you have a family wishing such employment. 12-22-1m.

MUNFORD'S BIG NEW STORE.

Well may the good people of Greenville and surrounding country be thankful and proud of their Big Store and the wonderful bargains that come from that great institution. For the third time this season has the buyer been north, picking and scouring the New York, Boston and Philadelphia markets and quickly snapped up all the "Juicy Plums." This was securing a leading manufacturer's fall shipment of fine clothing for men and boys intended for a clothier in Galveston, Tex., but which was countermanded on account of the flood. The result is, we can offer mens and boys highest grade clothing at just one-half the old time clothier's price. They will be ready and placed on the tables on

OUR STORE GROWING.
 What has made our store such a busy place? What we advertise we do. The throngs that daily fill the store is the very best evidence that we rather understate than otherwise the remarkable value we have to sell.

Our Popular Store.

We leave it to you if there is not a snap, vim or go, about this business not perceptible in any other business in Greenville. It is no secret. The "old foggy" dry goods and clothiers are sleeping, waiting for you to come in and pay them their 50 per cent. profit. Will you do it? Or will you trade with a live, hustling, progressive concern that is working like a Trojan and making your dollar buy two dollars worth. We have doubled the business since we are in our new building already, and now want to tripple it.

Holiday Goods.

Over 2 car loads of fancy goods suitable for Christmas presents. The entire store presents a big Bazaar. Everything you can think of is right here. And the Price is One-Half.

WEATHER BULLETIN

Cold wave coming, temperature will fall to minimum of about twenty degrees by Wednesday morning.

SEEN AND HEARD IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, N. C. Dec. 31 1900
Farren's oyster canning establishment is being rebuilt.

Mrs. Robt Manning (nee Gordon) died on the 28th of December after a long illness.

Christmas was very quiet here.

Dr. J. C. Rodman's building, corner Main and Market streets, will soon be completed, and the second story will be occupied by B. B. Nicholson, Dempsy Grimes, Pendleton, W. B. Rodman and Dr. A. S. Wells.

E. Peterson Co's. building is completed, and occupied by A. M. Latham down stairs for a store and up stairs for sleeping apartments.

Mrs. W. C. Allen, of Waynesville, is visiting relatives at Pantego and Belhaven.

The building is being prepared for use as a knitting mill and the machinery is ordered. We hope to see it in operation soon.

Mr. Ernest Ray and Miss Mattie Woolard were married at the bride's home on the evening of the 25th, Rev. J. D. Waters performing the ceremony.

Spencer Bro's. Co. will occupy their new store early in January.

I think it is 15 stores that will be soon ready for occupancy in the burnt district, all brick, commodious and apparently solidly built.

A Hoo Hoo lodge was organized here on the evening of the 28th by Mr. Denny Vice Snash.

E. M. Short Lumber Co. will overhaul their mill early in the New Year and put in another 80 horse power boiler.

Rumor has it that the Freeman and Hodges Lumber Co. has purchased the Washington Planing Mill and will operate a saw mill at that place. They have purchased a small steamer to use in connection with their business.

Dr. Kelly, of Jno. Hopkins, of Baltimore has spent some days here hunting.

Mrs. J. F. Tayloe, we are sorry to say, has been quite ill for several days.

The market house is near ready for use.

A. B. Whitley has sold his stock, corner Harvey and Third streets, to Mr. Sterling, Mr. Whitney has been for some months business manager of the Watch Tower Publishing Co. and we trust he may not find it necessary to sever his connection with the company.

N. S. Fulford has moved to his residence on Main street.

A man and lady were baptised at the Christian church on Wednesday evening by Rev. A. Latham, ex-pastor. JIM NASTIC Masonic Growth.

A year ago there were 315 Masonic lodges in this State. Since then five new lodges have been instituted. The membership a year ago was 11,360; now it is 12,000. The next convention will be the largest ever held. It will be centennial of Hiram Lodge, No. 40, of Raleigh. It will be the second centennial celebration of the kind. The first was of St. John's Lodge, No. 1, of Wilmington. The latter and Royal White Hart Lodge, No. 2, of Halifax, are the oldest lodges. Most of the old lodges are now extinct. St. John's and Royal White Hart had charters from the grand lodge of England. The Royal White Hart claims to be older than St. John's, but cannot prove its claim.
