STATE NEWS.

Happenings in North Carolina

The bell of the Fayetteville graded school fell from its socket on a little boy and came near killing him.

We learn that the house of Mr. Joseph Smith, near Shine, Greene county, was burned Sunday. The furniture was nearly all saved. We did not hear how the fire started.—Kinston Free Press.

Essential to Success.

No judicious and persistent advertiser in the newspapers who has offered for sale articles of any merit has failed to score a business success. Hundreds of large advertisers have given testimony that their success would have been impossible without newspaper advertising. In floating 60,000 shares of copper company stock Mr. T. W. Lawson expended $30,000 for newspaper space and received subscriptions for 160,000 shares at $25 each. Mr. Post has been offered a million and a half for his cereal business, which he says he built up "by newspaper advertising exclusively."—Philadelphia Record.

The improvement of our roads is proper and necessary, but the road bill, introduced by Senator Alexander, is too elaborate for North Carolina in its present state of development. The people must work out their own salvation in the matter of roads, as in most things. Some communities do not want good roads, and you cannot force good roads on them. The bill provides elaborate machinery for carrying out its purposes, the principal features being the creation of Highway Commission, with sub-commissions in each county. These commissions are given practically unlimited power in regard to the public roads. All county jail prisoners are put at the disposal of commission. We all want good roads, and that they pay is shown by the experience of Mecklenburg. Wake and other counties that have tried them. But the powers conferred upon the Highway Commissioners and the machinery of the act will arouse considerable opposition in some quarters.—Raleigh Times Visitor.

Government Boat Wrecked in Philippines.

Manila, Feb'y 26.—The steamship Newark, a small vessel of the quartermaster's department, was wrecked off Catanduanze island.

Home Merchant and Manufacturer.

A merchant thinks hard of a man who goes out of town to buy goods and they should remember that a manufacturer has the same right to think hard of the merchant who goes north to buy goods in wholesale lots that could be purchased cheaper at home. It is all right to talk of patronizing home industries—it sounds patriotic and gives us a better opinion of ourselves—but most of us forget it when we have money to spend.—Durham Herald.

Remedy for Bad Boys.

Folks who have bad boys that they can't control and don't know what to do with, can ponder these instructions found in the 21st chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy:

18. If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them.

19. Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gates of his place.

20. And they shall say unto the elders of his city: This our son is stubborn and rebellious; he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton and a drunkard.

21. And all men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die. So shalt thou put evil away from among you, and all Israel shall hear and fear.

If these regulations are followed there will be no demand for a reformatory for youthful criminals.—Statesville Landmark.

The seeds of discontent may cause mental appendicitis.

The bill poster may not be superstitious, but he believes in signs.

It is better for the prima donna to lose her diamonds than her voice.

When a man indulges in a war of words he shoots off his mouth.

Any pawnbroker will tell you that you can't raise money on a coat-of-arms.

WINTERVILLE DEPARTMENT.

NEWSY HAPPENINGS AND BUSINESS NOTES.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Feb. 27. When the snow passes away what a picnic for the farmers. The fields will be merry and the whistle of the plow boy will be heard all over the land.

1000 good lightwood cart hubs wanted by the A. G. Cox Mfg Co.

The old academy since it has been converted into a residence presents a comfortable appearance.

Miss Mand Sutton, of Greenville who has been on a visit for a few days to the Misses Keel, returned home Monday.

Misses Lucy Haddock and Mattie Buck, of Black Jack, were visiting Mrs. Abram Cox Saturday and Sunday.

Misses Bessie Garris, of Ayden, and Bernice Wooten, of Kinston, spent Tuesday with the Misses Wesson.

10,000 good second growth white oak spokes wanted by the A. G. Cox Mfg Co.

Rev. Mr. Green, a Missionary to China, preached in the Baptist church here Monday night and left for Ayden Tuesday.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Nelson died Sunday night.

Miss Lula Patrick, Ayden, was here several days last week with Misses Bessie and Hattie Nichols.

C. A. Fair, who was in attendance upon the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Jr. O. U. A. M., at Winston-Salem last week, reports a very pleasant time and says there was a full attendance from all over the State.

A. G. Cox has a large supply of cotton seed meal on hand which he will exchange either for cotton seed or cash.

Everything here is Winter-ville now.

Will any one estimate the value of the recent snow to the farmers of Pitt?

Daney Cooper is right sick and has been for more than a week. We hope soon to see him well.

Don't forget when in need of good substantial fencing to call on the Winterville Wire Fence Co.

Is there any difference between the lengths of miles in this and other countries?

Hunsucker has a daisy cut for his letter heads, bill heads, etc., with buggies growing on honeysuckle vines.

For wagons, carts and everything necessary for the cultivation of a farm the A. G. Cox Mfg Co. cannot be surpassed, either in price or quality.

Miss Anna Speight, of Rountree, is visiting Miss Mollie Bryan.

Misses Daisy and Eva Cox are on a visit at the Boarding House.

A. G. Cox still pays the highest cash prices for cotton seed.

As a result of the anti-saloon agitation in Kansas a "jointkeeper" at Wetmore was notified on a Saturday that he would be given until the following Tuesday morning to close his place. He at once got out a thousand handbills announcing a "grand closing" on Monday evening, to which "one and all" were invited. A local paper describes the "grand closing" as "the biggest drunk the town ever had."

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1901.

In an article copied elsewhere from the Statesville Landmark, that paper writes very forcibly about the sympathy that is expressed at murder trials. The picture the Landmark paints is exactly what has been seen in the courts of Pitt county time and time again. It is to be wondered at that when a horrible crime is committed sentiment so soon changes to the side of the man whose hands are stained with blood, while the victim seems to be forgotten. In fact, a murderer is almost or quite made a hero. Such sentiment is more or less responsible for many of the miscarriages of justice witnessed in the courts of the State.

Sympathy in Murder Trials.

Up in Madison county a few weeks ago there was a big murder trial (which is nothing new in Madison, for they have one to a dozen murder trials at every court in that county and nobody is ever hung). This trial lasted for a week or more and resulted, if we remember aright, in a disagreement of the jury. There were three defendants in the trial—J. W. Floyd, Guy Turner and Duke Lamb—who were charged with killing a police officer at Hot Springs. A newspaper report of the trial, sent out during its progress, presented this picture, which is referred to as "a sad, pathetic scene."

Floyd is surrounded by his family—his two little girls, his 12 year old boy, and his devoted young wife whose eyes are heavy with unshed tears which now and again, during the most pathetic periods of some advocate for the defense or while the able young solicitors utter some specially powerful denunciatory comment, escape all control and steal down her cheeks.

And by the side of Guy Turner and Duke Lamb sits the mother of each—poor, old broken-hearted women, clinging to their unfortunate and wayward boys, as they sit before the tribunal which is passing on their life or their death.

Of course this was pathetic. It always is at a murder trial. Did you ever know of a murder trial in which the defendant, if he had any female relatives or little children, didn't bring them into the court room to create "a sad, pathetic scene" for the benefit of the spectators and the jury? If the defendant hasn't sense enough to devise the "sad, pathetic scenes" his counsel will do that for him.

Of course every individual who went into the court house at Marshall during this trial was, if he had a heart in him, more or less moved by the sight of the young wife, whose eyes were heavy with "unshed tears," and the innocent little children whose father's life is in jeopardy; and the sight of the poor, broken hearted mothers, whose wayward sons had brought their gray hairs in sorrow to the grave, was pitiful in the extreme. All this doubtless had its proper effect on the jury—it often does.

But there is another side. What about the victim of these murderers? Where was his wife and innocent children, who had been deprived of a protector and a support? Where was his aged mother, broken down by a weight of sorrow by the death of a son whose life was ruthlessly taken by these desperadoes? What had they suffered and endured? Was there no sympathy for them? Alas! the man had been buried. Whether he had wife, children or mother we know not, but if he had he and they were forgotten. The tears were for the brutes who had deprived him of a life as sweet to him as theirs was to them. But a living dog is better than a dead lion and the populace nearly always forgets, when murder has been done, the victim and those near and dear to him. They commence at once to expend sympathy and aid on the perpetrators of the deed. Strange world!

A friend of ours, commenting on these things once, suggested that if the female relatives and the children of criminals were allowed to sit by them during their trials and weep in order to create sympathy, then the murdered man should be brought in in his coffin and placed before the jury, and all his female relatives and his children should be there, dressed in black, to weep over his dead body during the trial. If it is fair for one side it is for the other, and we suggest that at the next murder trial in which the sympathy game is played that the prosecution adopt our friend's suggestion.—Statesville Landmark.

The Peanut Crop.

"The peanut is an important factor in the trade of Eastern North Carolina," said Representative Smith, of Gates. "The crop last year was not so large as usual, and the peanuts were not of very good quality. The price is very satisfactory, however, and the farmers are generally pleased with the results. The standard weight of peanuts is 38-pounds to the bag. Our best North Carolina peanuts weigh 100 pounds to the bag, and are about the best grown anywhere. This year the price is three cents a pound, and at that price peanut raising is quite profitable. Most of the peanut factories are located just across the line in Virginia. In these the small and undeveloped nuts are thrashed out, and the black ones picked out so, that the prime peanuts as they come from the factory are large and white. Most of the best grade are shipped to Chicago."

The farms connected with the State penitentiary have been raising great quantities of peanuts the past few years, and the farmers do not like to be brought into competition with prison labor. There is a bill now in the Legislature to prohibit the raising of Spanish peanuts on the State farms. The only peanut factory in the State is located near one of these farms, and depends for support mainly on the State's crop. It is claimed that the large crop raised by the State tends to keep down the price. Two years ago the crop of peanuts was the largest ever known in this country, and the price dropped in consequence.—Raleigh Times Visitors.

The Louisville Post is publishing the New Testament as a serial. The book is probably entirely new to Kentuckians.—Raleigh Times Visitors.

Why Do We Import Sugar?

Sugar is one of the few great commodities in the production of which the United States is weak and dependent. In almost all of the great necessities of life—food, clothing, fuel, and shelter—the country is more than self-supporting, but in the matter of sugar we are largely dependent on foreign supplies. And our sugar bill is the largest by far of any of our foreign accounts—twice that of coffee, which stands next in prominence, and much greater than that for india rubber, tea, silk, or hemp. Every year we pay about $100,000,000, or $1.35 for every man, woman and child in the country, to foreign countries for sugar. Indeed, out of more than 2,000,000 tons of sugar which the United States consumes annually we produce a paltry 270,000 tons, mostly from the cane-fields of Louisiana. This does not include the production of the new island possessions, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines; but these would add only 460,000 tons to our production, still leaving us to obtain much more than half of our sugar from the foreigner. And all this in the face of the fact that so good an authority as Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture says:

"We have no more need to import sugar than to import wheat." —From "How the Beet-Sugar Industry is Growing," by Ray Standard Baker, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for March.

A new company has been organized for the purpose of cultivating tea in South Carolina, and has just purchased 6,000 acres of land in Colleton county. But 100 acres will be planted this season, as it is now rather late to begin the preparation of the ground. Next year over 5,000 acres will be planted, and the output is expected to exceed 300,000 pounds.
