DR. O'HAGAN AND THE GOOSE.

The late Dr. O'Hagan, of Greenville, Pitt county, was a very eccentric man. In addition to being a very able physician, a learned scholar and an astute politician, he had peculiarities that made him very interesting. The following ludicrous story is told to show how far he could be carried by his dislike for anything. He had a natural antipathy for geese. The sight of them or their fierce cackling would stir his anger and make him swear.

One day while the doctor was driving along the big road, far in the country, he came up with a drove of geese. They were out of sight of any house and for once he felt that he could even up with Mr. Goose. He pulled his horse down to a rock and called "Goosy!" "Goosy!" "Goosy!" to the geese, as they waddled along the side path, close by the road. Now was Dr. O'Hagan's chance, the one he had longed for. His buggy whip, a bran new raw-hide that cost him two dollars the day before, was long and keen and with but little effort he could wrap it around the lead gander's saucy neck. He was equal to the occasion, and rising upon his feet, hit the fire of a man seeking revenge. The lash cracked like a pistol shot, the geese yelled, rose and flew away. The doctor not looking for such a sudden start did not hold a tight grip on the handle of the whip after he had encircled the end of it around the gander's neck-piece, and this mighty bird, snow white, and beautiful, rose in his might and sailed off, bearing the costly whip that had tied itself close to his head.

It was up to Dr. O'Hagan. There he sat, in his buggy, watching the flight of the heavy gander.

The whip did not let loose. It clung to the goose's neck and dangled in the air like a long black snake. Far ahead of him he could see the first geese lighting in a mill pond not far from a neighboring farm house. He pulled up his reins and drove on, believing that he could regain his whip when the gander lit. A few minutes later the dignified old gentleman had hitched his horse and was down on the bank of the pond throwing rocks at the gander who floated happily around on the bosom of the water, with the whip still fastened to his neck. Thinking of nothing but his property the doctor did not hear a voice that hailed at him from a near-by hill-top. It came from a large and hefty woman, the owner of the geese. She was accompanied by her faithful bull dog. They were approaching the pond from the opposite side, and before Dr. O'Hagan was aware they came close to the water's edge. The woman cried at him in a scolding voice and said: "What are you chunking my geese for, you old scamp?" Sick him Bull! Catch him!"

The doctor barely had time to scurry up the hill and get in his buggy before the vicious dogswam across and came bounding after him.

Dr. O'Hagan never told of his experience. It was his joke, for the woman did not recognize him. —H. E. C. Bryant, in the Charlotte Observer.

Memorial Exercises.

The memorial exercises in honor of President McKinley were held in the Court House, beginning at 2 o'clock, and the program as published yesterday was carried out.

The exercises were at too late an hour for report to be made in today's paper.

Died From Drinking Water.

A South Carolina negro named Charles McMillan, who was serving out a term on the Rowan county chain gang, died, suddenly after only a week's work on the roads.

He was very hot and when the water carrier came on his rounds McMillan drank six cups of water.

A short time afterward he was taken violently ill, and soon died.

Readers and Advertisements.

Advertising has come to be so important a part of the daily newspaper in the eyes of the reading public that (as The Chicago Times-Herald justly observes) it is doubtful if an American daily newspaper which should refuse to carry advertising could secure any hold on the people.

The great majority of readers find the advertising columns interesting and profitable.—Philadelphia Record.

Our Ready Made Garments.

They are a great convenience—so easy to come in and buy a skirt ready to put right on. Then they have such a nice set too, provided you buy the right make, and this is the kind we claim to have.

Rainy Day and Dress Skirts

We are showing have that correct stylish hang, peculiar to high class tailored garments. The many expressions of satisfaction with the beauty and comparative cheapness of our skirts is very gratifying and more than repays us for the labor and thought expended in our efforts to bring together a comprehensive showing of ready-to-wear apparel in up-to-date effects. Come to see them.

Small Beginnings.

The statement that a man who has a good business idea needs a fortune with which to advertise it is not true. Some of the most successful of business men are those who began in a small way, gradually increasing their advertising as they could. One man who now employs 1000 hands first transported his materials in a wheelbarrow, and advertised his business only in a few lines in a single newspaper.—Philadelphia Record.
