Officer Shoots a Fleeing Negro.

Last Monday policeman Joe Cress went to serve a warrant on Charles Willeford, colored, for a Sunday disturbance. When the negro saw the officer coming he took to his heels. Mr. Cress gave chase, of course. In the chase his pistol, which he had in his left let hit Willeford in the back, making a dangerous wound. Mr. Cres did not intend to hit the negro, and was surprised to find that he had done so. Dr. Lillyiprobed for the ball, but could not find it. The New Bern Journal thinks "an intelligent white opposition to the democratic party would prove of immense benefit to democracy, in arousing it to greater and better efforts in sustaining its position by force of its issues, fully and ably discussed, on the stump and in the press." Gently, brother. Roose velt might get hold of this.

Someone credits Dr. Parkhurst with the statement that "half of the country is going to the dogs and the other half to the devil." The doctor must have been indulging in some of the "higher criticisms." If both the doctor and the old idea about the sheep and the goats be correct, the inference is that the dogs will get the sheep. That puts the matter in a new light. As a shepherd the doctor is feeding his lambs on strange medicine.

"They consider that the humiliation of Senator Pritchard and the ousting of J. H. Bingham from the collectorship in Alabama was done to placate the negro voters of the North. A great many of them would like to speak out their minds, but are fearful that they might get the same sort of treatment accorded Pritchard and Bingham. This is why they long to see Senator Hanna come to the front as a rival candidate. If the Ohio man has no such notion, then they would gladly rally around Senator Spooner or Senator Fairbanksanybody, in fact, rather than the present occupant of the White

When they want a new railroad or a factory built, they expect the local paper to work for it with all its might.

When a death occurs in the home they expect the local paper to report it in tender, sympathetic strain and to extol the virtues of the deceased.

When a birth or wedding occurs in the family, they expect the local paper to give a glowing descripton of the event.

When they are trying to build up churches or schools, the local paper is asked to give them good, strong puffs.

If there is a battle for right in the county precinct, the editor is expected to bear the brunt of it.

Thus people are constantly receiving favors from the local paper but many fail to show their appreciation by subscribing for it.

Yet they cheerfully pay their subscriptions annually in advance for the New York Bazoo or the Philadelphia Barnstormer which never did anything for them or their community.

This practice of bestowing one's patronage upon the far off journal while receiving all newspaper favors from the home publications is a monumental injustice of which no decent person should be guilty.

Reader, don't come into our office and ask us to publish in your interest a personal puff or a long winded obituary, claiming that you are too poor to take this paper and asking for a dozen free copies while your pockets are stuffed full of story papers and magazines, paid for in advance.—Carrollton (Tex.)

Now, it is impossible to exclude perfectly either light or heat from any apartment. One might as well attempt to form a perfect vacuum. Scientifically speaking there is no such thing as a perfect absence of everything from any given space. The treatment of the physicians had enabled me to take advantage of what light there was in the room, nearly all of which came through an imperfectly fitted door, under which there was a strip unprotected. Be this as it may, I could distinguish the principal objects in the room, including my enemy. I could not make out his expression, but his figure was quite perceptible, especially his face and hands, which were lighter than the rest. He remained perfectly quiet for awhile, when I moved, and, hearing the creaking of my boots, he came toward me. I glided away, this time without making any sound, and in another moment gave him a cut on the hand which forced him to drop his sword. Before he could recover it I pricked him from the other side, which drew him from where the sword had fallen, and then I took it up myself.

"Baron," I said, "you are at my mercy. I have your sword." "Finish the murder. That's what is

AMERICAN AUDIENCES.

Upon Public Meetings. American audiences are strangely alike in some things and strangely dissimilar in others. A good committee will take as much pains in the arrangement of its audience as of its

speakers. An audience seated without growding is seldom enthusiastic. Neither is an audience whose hands are occupied with bundles or umbrellas, an audience largely composed of women or an audience in a cold room. The easiest audiences to address, the most responsive and inspiring, are those composed of men crowded and packed together and warm. Women naturally do not applaud or cheer. They are by instinct more self restrained in the public expression of their emotions than men. Every public speaker is complimented by their presence, knowing that their quiet word at home is oftentimes more effective in results than the most enthusiastic shouting on the street corners by the other sex. In a public meeting, however, the audience gets its cue from those nearest the speaker. I remember well two audiences, both from the same social class, both crowded, both in large theaters and both largely attended by women. One happened to be one meeting the orchestra was reserved for women. In the other meeting the men had the orchestra and the women had the lower gallery and all the boxes. In both cases the audiences were entirely friendly to the speakers. The second meeting was marked by wild enthusiasm, the first one by respectful attention. In the second case the mass of men in the orchestra urged on the speakers by continued applause. In the first case the men in the gallerles who started to applaud were checked because between them and the speakers was a mass of absolutely silent femininity in the orchestra. I do not say that one meeting was less effective than the other, but the difference in the strain on the speaker was marked.-From "The Spellbinder," by Colonel Curtis Guild, Jr., in Scrib-

A Supreme Court Coincidence.

While in session the associate justices of the United States supreme court are seated on either side of the chief jow tice, in the order of their commission the oldest in commission on his right, the next oldest on his left; the third is second on the right and the fourth second on the left, and so on alternately, the youngest in commission occupying the seat on the extreme left.

When Justice Field was the senior associate, this arrangement produced this curious result: The names of the justices on the right had but a single syllable-Field, Gray, Brown and White -while the names of those on the left had two syllables-Harlan, Brewer, Shiras and Peckham. All were married, but no one of the justices on the right had ever had any children, while each of those on the left had both children and grandchildren. The colors were all on the right—Gray, Brown and White-while the left was colorless .-Youth's Companion.

No Influence Above,

In Dr. John Hall's time it was the fashioned, simple hymns, and the singing was congregational.

On one occasion William M. Evarts discovered E. Delafield Smith, then corporation counsel of New York city, singing with all his heart and whispered to his friend: "Why, there is Smith singing "I

As a medicine for all women

A couple of winters ago I slipped on a frozen sidewalk and fell flat on my back. On being examined I found that I had sustained internal injuries which laid me up for more than two months. After that I noticed that I had pains in the back and groin which I never had before. I doctored and doctored for several months but as the pains increased instead of growing better I decided that I was not having the right treatment. Reading in the papers of the wonderful cures performed by Wine of Cardui I wrote to one of the parties and received a very satisfactory reply and I immediately sent for some. In a very short time I felt generally better and after seven weeks faithful use I was once more well and strong. I have never had a sick hour since and I daily bless

The article is called "digestine." It is learned that cided as a last resort to try breaking the neck off the bottle. With a "stove lid lifter" she administered several cautious taps in the region of the jugular of the obstinate neck. "Nothin' doin'." Then she tapped harder still, and the blacking came. All over her fingers it came, all over her light woolen skirt and over much of the floor and window sill.

She decided to have the skirt cleaned off to an establishment where she found embarrassment because she could not understand questions. Finally she got the drift of the conversation. The cleaners wanted to know what had caused the spot. Fortunately a bottle of shoe blacking was standing near by, and she pointed at this and "ould" and "ould" until she left in heightened spirits, feeling that she was not helpless and that she had made the cleaners understand. When the skirt was duly returned the following week, it was dyed black.-New York Tribune.
