GREENVILLE WATER AND LIGHT COMMISSION.

Rules and Regulations for the Supply of Electric Current for Lights and Power.

Section 1. All matters pertaining to the use, rentals and placing of electric current shall be under the direction of the water and light commission, of the town of Greenville, or their authorized representative, the superintendent of the water and light plant.

Section 2. The water and light commission will make all necessary connections from its main line to all buildings free of charge, but all other wiring and appliances for the purpose of utilizing the current from that point shall be at the cost of the consumer, and all such work shall be done according to the rules and regulations of the Underwriters' Associations, and shall always be subject to the approval of the inspector of the town.

Section 3. All repairs and renewals of incandescent lamps shall be paid for by the consumer. Town will furnish supplies, labor, fixtures, and lamps at cost—use of meters free.

Section 4. The subscriber shall use due care to prevent any waste of the electric current, so that the town may properly guard its interest, it shall at all reasonable times, by its authorized agent have free access to the premises in which light or power is used, to examine wires and fixtures, or to remove wires and lamps.

Section 5. The Commission reserves the right to shut off the supply for any of the following reasons: 1st, for repairs; 2nd, for want of supply; 3rd, for non payment of bills when due; 4th, for fraudulent representation in relation to consumption of light or power.

Section 6. The subscribers are not permitted to use the current for any purpose, or any place other than provided for in contract without having first obtained the written consent of the commission, or Superintendent, and arrange to pay an additional compensation therefor.

Section 7. In case of deficiency of light or power, or defective lamps, notice of the fact should be given forthwith at the office of the commission.

Section 8. All lights furnished for the public use, including street lamps, public buildings and the like shall be assessed at such rates as the commission may establish, and the service shall be in the same manner as private service, limited to the uses for which it is assessed. It is intended by this section to set a just value on all public service rendered as a base on which to account for the revenues and expenditures of the electric light plant in all details.

Section 9. Bills are due on the 1st day of each month for the previous month service, and must be paid at Commission office, or ten per cent additional will be added after ten days.

Section 10. Contracts are not transferable. New occupants are required to make application in person at the office of the Commission, at the time they commence to use the current, to avoid being liable for back dues for light or power used until such notice was given.

Section 11. Any failure on the part of the subscriber to comply with these rules and regulations shall amount to this contract, and the Commission therefor, without further notice, may shut off the current and remove its property from the premises.

END OF CENTURY BOOK CLUB.

Reported for Reflector.

One of the most delightful meetings of the End of the Century Book Club was held at the hospitable home of Mrs. M. H. Quinerly on Tuesday afternoon, May 2nd, 1905.

The president being absent the vice president Mrs. L. C. Arthur, presided.

The literary program was unusually interesting and was as follows: "Sketch of Kate Douglas Wiggin," Mrs. Fodie Harding. "How the women of Posttown Corner formed their Club," Mrs. E. B. Ficklen. "Woman's Mission and Woman's Clubs," Mrs. J. L. Wooten. "Susan B. Anthony's criticism on Cleveland's Article," Mrs. J. L. Little. "What is a Woman's Club," Mrs. E. A. Moye, Jr.

Delicious refreshments were served after which the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Richard Williams on May 16th, 1905.

The visitors present were Mesdames Munford, L. Carr, S. T. White, E. G. Flanagan, Moseley, Dail and Galloway, Misses Pat Skinner, Glenn Forbes, Eula Cox, Conner, Moore, Cowling, Sattle, Taylor and Brown.

A Beautiful Silk Banner.

A reporter called at the office of Manager E. H. Wilson, of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., yesterday and was shown the beautiful silk banner which is to be presented to the county that shows the largest proportionate gain at the next state election.

The banner is about four feet long by two and three-quarter feet wide, and is made entirely of the purest white silk. It is mounted on a polished oak staff, six feet long, and is trimmed in gold. The inscription on the banner is: "White Supremacy and Democratic Rule in Forsyth county," in three-inch letters of red and gold.

The banner will be the personal gift of Mr. Wilson to the county which shows the greatest proportionate Democratic gain, based upon the last election for governor. Forsyth will not be eligible. One county will be permitted to keep the banner of "White Supremacy and Democratic Rule" only so long as it shows the greatest proportionate gain over other counties governed by the vote polled at the preceding election.—Winston Journal.

The Revival Meetings

The threatening weather Wednesday night did not deter a large audience from assembling at the Christian church to hear Dr. Martin preach an eloquent sermon on "Similarities of Soldiers and Saints."

The evangelist outlined the career of a soldier from the moment of decision to enlist until the end of the war, and then demonstrated how the position of the Christian is analogous to it.

The family held the enraptured attention of the audience with their selections of beautiful music.

The subject for tonight will be "The Soul Cry of the 20th Century." Special musical features will be presented at each service. Service tonight 8 o'clock, tomorrow 3:30 and 8 p.m.

Rules for Lights and Water.

As many people are not familiar with the rules and regulations adopted by the Water and Light commission of Greenville, they are being published in THE REFLECTOR. The regulations for lights is given today and the regulations for water will appear tomorrow.

THE WEATHER

Fair tonight, Friday showers warmer in northeast portion.

THURSDAY, MAY. 11, 1905.

A boy who starts out to see the world and its "soft" spots, sometimes finds all the tough ones first.

The tornado season has opened. The town of Marquette, Wis., was wrecked Tuesday and twenty-six lives lost.

Gen. James D. Glenn, brother and private secretary to Governor Glenn, has suffered a second stroke of paralysis. He was stricken Tuesday while on a train between Greensboro and Raleigh.

The $150,000 of North Carolina bonds sold Wednesday brought a premium of $15,440. An Asheville man was a partner in the purchase. The bonds brought a good price and shows that the credit of the state is all right.

The charter of the Observer Publishing Company, at Charlotte, has been succeeded increasing the capital stock from $50,000 to $500,000. That looks like progress and means that the Observer, if anything will be made better than ever.

We notice in the statement of the United States for May 2nd that there is a balance of $133,415,799.73 on hand, or about $1 for every man, woman and child in the United States. We don't want to seem hoggyish, but if the treasure don't mind, he can forward our share.

A law was passed by the last legislature requiring that all sales of land under mortgage must be advertised once a week for four weeks preceding the sale in a newspaper published in the county in which the sale takes place. Notices of such sale merely posted on bulletin boards at the court house door or elsewhere are not legal.

A man is contemplating starting a "corkage" business in Greensboro, that is if people there do not "cork" him before he gets it under way. The plan is to have a room fitted with lockers and rent the lockers to people for keeping their bottles of whiskey in. Then when the renter wants a drink he opens the locker and the keeper of the place for a small consideration uncorks the bottle and furnishes ice. That is a slick effort to dodge the law, but we do not believe it will work.

Bryan Grimes Camp of Confederate Veterans of Pitt county adopted a resolution unanimously endorsing Gen. W. P. Roberts, of Gates, for the vacancy on the Gettysburg Battlefield Commission caused by the death of Major W. M. Robbins. There are three members at this commission, and as North Carolina held one of them it seems only right that his successor should come from this state. General Roberts is well qualified for the position and his friends throughout North Carolina would be glad to see him receive the appointment.

Co-Operative Efforts.

Editor REFLECTOR:

In my regular work of editing news every day on almost all subjects, an opportunity is afforded me of taking a birds eye view of important events, vouchsafed to but few. Concentrated information gained in this way, has a working value that may be styled strictly commercial, or professional, since out of a full storehouse of garnered threads of thought and accomplished deeds, there is left residuum or afterglow, which makes the web and woof of other things, even local, common passing events. If it were not for a Providential ordering that the mind could throw off the mass of details of work-a-day matters, retaining this residuum for growth and ripened wisdom, there be but few editors, reporters, teachers, or lawyers, who would not be insane from insomnia in six months of regular, conscientious devotion to their duties. It occurs to me to write for the benefit of my State, a series of letters, giving in concrete shape some off hand epitome of deeds done and doing towards North Carolina uplift. That wonders are being worked in many fields of endeavor, everybody realizes. The particular things being done, few can recount. In this initial letter, it strikes me that some facts about education, would be most appropriate. In subsequent letters, I shall relate facts about manufacturers, facts about general industrial progress; facts about moral progress, facts about increase of electrical appliances expert workmen, etc.

EDUCATION BY CO OPERATION.

The educational campaign that has been carried on constantly and aggressively for the past few years has resulted in much educational progress. Friends of the movement for more liberal school taxes have every reason to rejoice at the result of the recent elections held in various sections of the state. So far as I have seen in the newspaper reports, Mooresville is the only place where the special school tax was defeated. During the past few weeks the following nineteen towns, villages, and communities have voted for local taxation:

Louisburg, Franklinton, and Youngsville, in Franklin county; Siler City in Chatham county; Smithfield in Johnston county; Kernersville in Forsyth county; Pinnacle in Stokes county; and Churchhill in Warren county; District No. 2 of Lilesville Township in Anson county; Monticello in Guilford county; Lake Landing in Hyde county; Webster in Jackson county; Fremont in Wayne county; Nebo in McDowell county; Terrell in Catawba county; Abbottsburg in Bladen county; Hertford in Perquimans county; and Kings Mountain in Cleveland county.

In addition to the local tax establishing better public schools in the above localities the following communities have during the same period of time, voted bonds for school buildings:

Durham, $50,000 for a high school; Morganton, $20,000; Randleman, $20,000; Sanford, $20,000; Washington, $20,000; Hertford, $15,000; Kernersville, $10,000; Kings Mountain, $10,000; Franklinton, $10,000; Louisburg, $10,000.

Many other local tax elections have been ordered. Most communities will undoubtedly vote in favor of the tax. Within the next few weeks fourteen school districts in Guilford county will vote, and if the vote in all of them should be favorable to the tax the county superintendent informs me that over half of Guilford county would then enjoy the advantages of a special local school tax. Already twenty-six districts have voted a special tax. An election has been ordered in Greensboro in June at which $50,000 of bonds will probably be voted for a high school building.

Mr. Platt's Tormentor.

The public has doubtless missed a literary sensation in the suppression of Miss Mae Woods' book on "The Love Letters of a Boss." Miss Woods is the woman who gave Senator Platt so much trouble several years ago and the letters referred to are those he wrote to her—or that she says he wrote. She had gone so far as to get the book in the hands of a publisher, when Senator Platt's friends secured its suppression and at the same time captured the letters. Senator Platt may give a sigh of relief, but if we are any judge of feminine nature, his peace of mind will not be secure until the woman herself, instead of her book, is suppressed.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Strictly Genuine.

Most of the patent medicine testimonials are probably genuine. The following notice recently appeared in the Atchison, Kan., Globe: "Joe Tac't, a well known engineer, running on the Pacific between Wichita and Klowa, lately appeared in a big one, with a picture, and when he was in the office today, we asked him about it. He says terrible pains in his stomach, and thought he had cancer. His druggist recommended Kodol and he says it cured him. He recommended it to others, who were also cured." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures all stomach troubles. Just as surely as the sun shines your stomach can be brought back to its originally pure condition and life sweetened by this lasting and truly the greatest digestant known. Sold by Jno L. Wooten.

Bilious Bill was getting bloated, and his tongue was much coated. Patent "tonics" wouldn't cure him. Companies would not insure him. All his friends were badly frightened, but their spirits soon were lightened. For Bill said—and they believed him, EARLY RISER pill relieved him. The famous little pills "Early Risers" cure Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, etc., by their tonic effect on the liver. They never gripe or sicken but impart early rising energy. Good for children or adults. Sold by Jno L. Wooten.

JAMES H. PAYNE.

The Wooing Of Margery

By NORAH ALEXANDER

"Miss Adair!"

The girl started, and her eyes went instinctively to the great stretch of common on her right, for it was late and dark, and London just then was ringing with a series of ghastly murders. But, being a young person of much coolness, she smiled the next moment as she took a quietly scrutinizing glance at the man who had now overtaken her. He was a stranger, but not of the genus murderer. He was also a little puffed.

"May I—er—see you home?"

"Certainly not!" she said severely.

"Oh!" he expostulated. "No, upon my honor, it isn't my fault I wasn't introduced to you tonight. Digby swore solemnly he would, and then he was so wrapped up in getting ready the slides of his stupid old lecture that nobody wanted to listen to."

"May I inquire who you are?" she began.

"My name is Beresford. I have no need to ask you who you are," he added. "I have known for a long time. But tonight I heard them calling you always 'darling Miss Adair.' I've wanted to know you for two years. I've watched you pass my gate every day for the last two years. I always go to the window as soon as I've finished my breakfast and wait for you, and then again in the evening. I am sure," he added diplomatically, "that you will understand. You see at my age it isn't as if I were a boy."

"No, of course not," she agreed, with a cheerful alacrity that somehow damped his rising spirits. "I remember now. I've heard my landlady speak of you. You live in that big red house facing the common, don't you?"

"You'll let me see you home, won't you? You're not going to quarrel with me again?"

"Do go," she pleaded. "I'm all right, and I'm so used to going about alone."

"I hope you will allow me to see you safely back tonight at all events," he said stiffly.

"Oh, if you insist," she rejoined lightly. "I was only thinking of you, you know."

"I'm not sugar," he suggested irritably.

At the gate she turned and put out a small, friendly hand.

"Good night, Mr. Beresford, and thanks very much. Oh-h-h! How dare you?"

Frank Beresford stood transfixed. He had done nothing more alarming than raise his hat, and there she stood, with flaming cheeks and angry eyes, glowering at him like a youthful Fury.

"What's the matter?" he inquired helplessly.

But she only repeated in a fresh burst of wrath:

"How dare you? How dare you speak to me and walk home with me?"

"Whatever do you mean?" he demanded. "Upon my word I don't understand you. You were friendly enough just now."

"Of course I was," he choked. "I—I thought you were your father!"

"Good Lord!" he ejaculated feebly, and began to see daylight.

Of course she had been frank and charming if she thought—but it was hardly a flattering thought.

And the reflection that his figure had not quite so slim as it once had been gave him a momentary twinge. But his sense of humor prevailed.

"Well," he said cheerfully, "that being so, don't you think you owe me an apology?"

"Apology?" she burst out. "And what did you mean by saying—How old are you?"

"Thirty-five," he said penitently. "But my father's sixty-five."

"Thirty-five," she repeated scornfully. "And how in the world—there were angry tears in her voice—how in the world was I to know, with your collar all up like that—"

"He turned it meekly down.

"And your hat all over your eyes?"

"He took it off.

"And you look—"

"Yes," he assented ruefully, "I suppose I do. Still, couldn't you forget that rather immaterial fact and just remember that—that I'm very much in love with you?"

"Never!" she flashed out. "Why," turning on him in a fury of contempt, "I never even knew there was such a person as yourself!"

And she shoved the latchkey into the door with a vicious jab.

Miss Margery Adair was paddling lazily up the river.

And Fred Beresford, watching her from his coign of vantage beneath the willows—he was ostensibly fishing—used language, directed apparently at no one in particular, that was not exactly parliamentary. Meantime the occupant of the canoe, quite unconscious of the proximity of her would be lover, dawdled slowly on.

However, on this particular day as she alternately paddled and drifted in a wholly spasmodic and irresponsible style, her thoughts were not with him, but very far afield indeed. A randan had gone in before her, and the lockman 'was already swinging the gates to, but, seeing her quicken her stroke, paused a moment, leaving space for her canoe to enter. Then he waddled placidly to the upper gate and began to work his sluices, while Margery held absently on to the chain that hung down the slimy, weed covered wall. At the first swirl of the incoming water she lifted her eyes, and a very material fact obtruded itself on her dreams. He was there, in straw hat and flannels, standing on the opposite side and beaming at her with the utmost affability. She bowed coldly. Somehow she vaguely resented his being so high above her head.

All the sluices were open now, the water from above pouring with a thunderous sound into the hollow space and making a turmoil in the lock like the fizzing of an extremely muddy brand of soda water. For a moment Margery's canoe danced like a straw, then—what was she shouting at her for like that? She glanced at him, half offended, half puzzled, saw his face turn frightened, his hand point wildly, then turned to swiftly realize her danger, for the prow of her canoe was jammed beneath a projecting beam halfway up the lock side. Already the stern was tilting up at a dangerous angle, and, even as, with a little gasp, she thrust her paddle against the wall, she knew it was too late. She heard the lock keeper shouting as he ran down from the gate, then another heave of the water took the canoe and whirled it over like a feather.

Margery felt herself swept helplessly down by the rush of it, and then followed what seemed an interminable time, in which the water swayed and buffeted and tossed her as it would, till suddenly there was a strong arm around her, and her head rose above the waters again without effort of her own. He was there holding her up and swimming with the other hand. Certainly he was puffing a little. He was feeling for something, the chain she had let go of, and in another moment he had grasped it. The lock keeper was there by now, and the water being up to the top, they stood a moment afterward dripping on the bank.

"Feel all right?" he inquired laconically.

"Oh, quite, thank you," she admitted, with unaccustomed meekness.

"Umph! You're a nice young woman to go about 'protecting yourself.' His tone was distinctly malicious. "What do you think now?"

"I think," she said, and the demureness of her voice was belied by the mischievous sparkle in her eyes, "I think it's just as well this time that you didn't happen to be your father—and sixty-five."

Even to the dullest and most unversed in the feminine mind kind of man intuitions occasionally come. And one came to Frank Beresford then, with the result that he bent and kissed her with a calm grip of proprietorship that took her breath away quite as effectively as the water had done a minute before.

The lockman stared, then grinned sympathetically.

"It's all right," Beresford assured him cheerfully. "The lady is—my wife."

"Oh, how dare you?" she gasped, endeavoring to move away and failing ignominiously. "How dare you tell such a lie?"

"It's not a lie," he rejoined coolly; "it's merely an anticipation."

"But," she protested, "I never said—"

"I haven't made up my mind."

"No, my dear child!"—he was still imperturbable—"but you've made a long time about it that I've made it up for you. I shall always be glad to save you trouble. Now, come along and see about getting dry."

Queen Quality

It Sets the Style.

What do we mean when we say that the styles of most of the shoes for women originate with the "Queen Quality" Shoe?

Simply this. The "Queen Quality" is, and always has been a leader. It gets up its own original patterns at great expense, and has established a reputation for the style and beauty of its creations.

OTHER MAKERS ARE CONTENT TO AWAIT THEIR APPEARANCE, and then copy them as closely as possible.

But "Queen Quality" "sets the style"—don't forget that!

And one other point—"Queen Quality" offers twice as many styles for your consideration as any other shoe.

You cannot suggest a need which is not fitted with a "Queen Quality" shoe specially designed for it.

Does not this realize the ideal of a strictly custom shoe? And such a shoe for $3.00. Think of it! Oxfords $2.50.

Tans in all shape are here.
