THE FIRST BALLOT.

What It Means to the Leading Candidate in National Conventions.

We are told that Secretary Taft will lead on the first ballot in the Republican national convention of 1908. There is a chance that he will lead. But the man who is ahead on the first line-up, unless in the case of a renomination of a President, does not always carry off the prize.

Seward led at the outset in the Republican convention of 1860, but Lincoln got the nomination. Blaine was far ahead of any of his rivals on several ballots in 1876, yet it was Hayes who won the candidacy. Grant led for a long time in the convention of 1880, but it was Garfield who was nominated. Sherman was so far ahead of all the other aspirants in 1888 for several ballots that it looked as if he would get the candidacy, but Harrison was the lucky man, and not Sherman.

It has been the rule among the Republicans to renominate their elected Presidents, the only exception being in the case of Hayes, who said at the outset that he would accept only one term. But a new man has to fight for the candidacy. If the new man does not carry off the prize on the first ballot, the chances will be against him. This was shown in the case of Seward, of Blaine in his first convention, of Sherman, and of former President Grant, when he sought a third term.

The only Republican aspirant who led on the first ballot, and who, failing to win on that ballot, was successful on a subsequent division, was Blaine, in 1848, who was ahead from the beginning, and who received the nomination on the fourth ballot.

In Democratic conventions, also luck usually turns against the leader on the first ballot who fails to get the candidacy on that or in the second ballot. At the outset Van Buren led in 1844, Cass in 1852, Douglas in 1860, Pendleton in 1868, and Bland in 1896, but in each case the nomination went to somebody else—to Polk in 1844, to Pierce in 1852, to Seymour in 1868 and to Bryan in 1896—except that in Douglas case of 1860 the party split eventually, and Douglas, in another convention, received the nomination of one section of his party.

Tilden in 1876, Hancock in 1880, and Cleveland in 1884, who led on the first ballot, were nominated on the second. The cases of Cass in 1848 who carried off the prize on the fourth ballot, and Buchanan in 1856, who won on the seventeenth, both of whom led from the beginning, are exceptional in Democratic annals.—Leslie's Weekly.

Anniversary Service.

Next Sunday is the day for the anniversary service of Greenville Memorial Baptist church, and the denomination is looking forward to a very interesting day. It is also to be a notable day for the Sunday school, as the portion of the building recently remodeled and arranged into class rooms for the school will be used for the first time. Every class in the school will have a handsome room and will make the opening of the new quarters a rally day.

Seat sale for the old fiddlers' convention in the opera house Thursday night, will begin Wednesday at Reflector Book Store. The first to come will get best seats.

AYDEN ITEMS.

News Notes From a Hustling Town, Briefly Told.

Ayden, N. C., Mar. 17, 1908

For some time it has been rumored that a certain crowd of negroes had a kind of rendezvous in the woods near town where they met at night for the purpose of gambling. Saturday night officers Hemby and Moore, having been put on the racket, went out to investigate. Shortly after entering the woods they discovered a light around which some 12 or 15 negroes were sitting and actively engaged in the sport. Waiting a few moments to identify the parties the crowd soon became engaged in a row over the money, the officers at once sprang upon the scene when the crowd rapidly dispersed in various directions. The officers began shooting and Bob Ellis was shot in the back, at first it was thought seriously, but later it developed into only a flesh wound. Dick King was caught on the ground and placed in the lockup Monday. Justices Barwick and Blow issued warrants for 12 and secured evidence to bind the crowd over to court. Four up to this time have had a hearing, the others are yet to be caught. We are requested to state strenuous efforts will be made to break up the wholesale gambling, which seems to be prevalent in and around Ayden. The officers deserve much credit for their work.

The infant child of Elder McCasky died Saturday and was buried in the cemetery Sunday afternoon.

Misses Mary Whitehead, Lillie Savage and Hennie Brown spent from Friday until Sunday evening with friends in Greenville.

Mrs. Jesse Croom and Miss Stella Croom, of Winterville, have been visiting Mrs. Frank White here.

Miss Ethel Bowling, of Greenville, was the guest of Miss Risha Dixon from Saturday until Monday.

Jesse Cannon came home from Morehead yesterday.

Miss Mamie Dawson, of Grifton, spent Thursday afternoon in Ayden.

Nat Whitfield and Ola Forbes, of Greenville, have been recent visitors in our town.

Guy Stokes, an employe at the Ayden Milling and Mfg. Co., had the misfortune to have his left hand badly cut by the saws yesterday.

How to Build a Town.

The fact that Charlotte won the Democratic State convention here this week calls attention to the good things in the progressive city. Chief among them has been its successful building and loan associations. The monthly receipts of the three associations exceed fifty thousand dollars. One of the companies last week opened its fifty-first series with over 1,600 shares sold. One association has paid out in twenty-five years to shareholders $2,500,000 and made net profits of over $500,000. Its last year's business was over $1,100,000. Justice Walker, of the Supreme Court, recently said that he attributed much of Charlotte's development to the impetus given to saving and home building that has come out of the building and loan movement.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Pitt county's greatest orator will address the old fiddlers' convention in the opera house Thursday night.

BEWARE THE DANGERS.

Everything Possible Will be Done to Continue the Copartnership Between Law and Hell.

(Rev. N. H. D. Wilson in Laurinburg Exchange.)

What is the great danger to the success of the prohibition cause in the election on the 26th of May? Clearly, over confidence. On every hand you hear, "There is no doubt of the result!" The writer agrees with this prophecy. The forces of righteousness and temperance have been laboring too long and too hard for them to throw away victory when it is in their hands; but there is the gravest danger to our success in this very point. We are saying, and our enemies are saying, "There is doubt!" But there will be a doubt unless we bestir ourselves.

The brewers have held a meeting recently where they took all needed action to regain their hold on the South. Those who are wise in the way of the liquor politicians know what that means. A number of "prominent Democrats" have been called to Salisbury (poor Salisbury!—self-debauched that she may grow rich by debauching others) to consult how to "save the State from this terrible wave of fanaticism!" The men who have corrupted the State in other days by every means, that they might grow rich on the bodies and souls of men and women, are yet alive, and their greed for gain is as conscienceless as ever. Rest assured that everything possible will be done to continue this copartnership between law and hell. "But the whiskey forces have given up the fight!" Not on your life. They are studiously proclaiming that in the strongholds of prohibition sentiment, and they are moving earth and hell where they have any chance of gain. They hope to woo you to sleep with honeyed words. Awake, Sampson!—the Philistines are upon you!

What can we do? For the present, agitate! Let every preacher, preach! Let every prayer, pray! Let every talker, talk! Let women, who have most to lose and all to gain, use their constitutional right! Let each bring such moral force to bear upon the man or men she can influence that for her sake, if not for his own and his children, he will join to destroy the Destroyer.

COLORED TEACHER INSULTED.

Negroes Were Driven From Car by Ohio Black Man After Calling Her Sweetheart.

An unusual accident in the shape of a fight took place on the train between Greenville and Washington on the N. & S. train Saturday night.

At Grimesland, two local colored men boarded the train and as is the custom among local roughs proceeded to look over the occupants of the car. One of these happened to be a colored teacher returning from her school closing. She was lying down upon the seat, claiming to have a headache. Behind her was a neatly dressed colored man whom, it was afterwards ascertained was from Ohio.

Upon entering the car the two roughs approached this woman, and one of them tickled her under the chin while she was sleeping, and said, "Sweetheart, don't you get off here?" The woman awoke, and requested the roughs to leave her alone. They refused to do so, at which the man behind her arose and went after them, and proceeded to drive them from the car with a few good solid punches. Several white gentlemen entered the car and the trouble was smoothed over.

However, before the car left the station, the roughs reentered, and one of them carried an enormous rock, which he proceeded to hurl at the negro who had driven him from the car. While the negro at whom this was aimed escaped, the rock struck a white gentleman on the foot.

On being questioned the negro who had played the gallant, stated, "I am from Ohio, where women all races demand respect. The reason women in the South are not respected in the South is because they have no protection. I have been taught to respect and protect women of all races at all times."

We think that that with a few more men among the negroes of the South of this calibre, the race problem would soon be settled.—Washington Messenger.

Cemeteries Should Not be Desecrated.

Requests are coming to The Reflector to call attention to the depredations of children in the cemetery and church yards. These places seem to be more or less a play ground for children and they do not hesitate to pull flowers from the burial plots. Of course this should not be so, and we mention the matter so proper steps may be taken to correct it.

Finds Friends Here.

Mr. Ashley Horne, of Clayton, one of the candidates for Governor, who spent yesterday and today in Greenville, finds that he has friends here and will get some delegates from Pitt to the State convention. Mr. Horne is the kind of man who takes with people when he goes among them.

Mr. Parham's Mother Dead.

A postal card received by friends here today announces the death of the mother of Mr. B. E. Parham, which occurred at her home near Oxford Sunday night. Mr. Parham left here a week ago to be at her bedside. His friends sympathize with him in his bereavement.

Those contemplating gardening are wondering when the neighbors are going to take up their chickens.

S. J. Parham went to Kinston today.

The Lyman Twins Coming.

The famous young stars "The Lyman Twin Brothers" who have jumped with wonderful strides to the front rank as comedians, and who we will have the pleasure of seeing here soon in their latest musical hit, "The Yankee Drummers" which is said to be one of the finest and most complete musical comedy productions of the day, are comedians in a class by themselves, and entertainers who deal out comedy lines and situations in a way seldom seen.

"The Yankee Drummers" is the most elaborate production in which they have yet appeared. Carrying a large company, a dainty chorus of pretty girls, a host of funny comedians, singers and dancers, together with a beautiful array of scenic and electrical effects complete. The flirtation song, the poppy girls, and the country maidens are novelties which are original and seen only with this attraction.

They Tell Any Old Thing Sometimes.

It is being told around the county among the uninformed that if the prohibition bill is defeated that the way is open for the promiscuous manufacture of liquor. This is doing a wrong to the uninformed. If the prohibition bill should be defeated, the present laws are still effective, and that means almost prohibition in 90 per cent. of the territory of the State as at present. The prohibition bill applies to the entire State without any exemptions, while a few places like Wilmington enjoy "special liquor privileges" at present. Killing the prohibition bill will not give Wilkes' liquor advocates anything except what they now have. Let's keep the matter straight so everybody can vote intelligently, if he wants to do so.—Wilkesboro Chronicle.

A Servian Custom.

A traveler through Servia will often notice dolls hung up inside the cottage windows. His first idea is one of surprise that the children should so often choose this particular spot to store their toys, but presently he learns that the dolls are put up as a sign to announce to wayfarers that a marriageable daughter dwells in the house. The idea is to remind acquaintances from other villages who may have forgotten her existence. This custom is naturally confined to peasants, but nearly every house has a wreath of corn ears hung up on the outer wall. This wreath is brought back from the harvest festival, and there is a superstition that if it be stolen a daughter of the house will shortly be married. Where this is particularly desired care is taken to suspend the wreath well within reach of possible marauders.

The red-headed editor of the Greenville Reflector is not so handsome for nothing. Hear him: "Fayetteville, New Bern and Greenville need not make ado about being frozen out of the eastern ball league. While the other towns are tearing their shirts over 'three strikes and out,' Fayetteville can be busy with her street railway building, New Bern with her sidewalk paving, and Greenville with her training school construction and other improvements, and at the end of the season will be ahead of the game." Whichard, old boy, that hit the sphere over the center field fence and cleaned the bases. Still, honest Injun, wouldn't you like to see 'em go down, red hot, by short, and see the runners slide?—New Bern Sun.

Yes, indeed, and also see 'em strike at a curve with a bat that's "got a hole in it". But all the same we are not going to cry because they voted us out of the league when there are so many other good things to "root" for.

The Greenville Reflector says: "To Bob Phillips, New Bern: Let's get us up a team of our own and make street paving hump." Agreed, right now. That proposition is entirely satisfactory. Let's have it in the rules that every hit must be a home run.—New Bern Sun.

THE TIME TABLE.

Its Part in the Daily Life of the Locomotive Engineer.

The principal anxieties of an express driver have to do with keeping time. His employment depends upon his doing so. He is there in the cab of an express engine just, in fact, because he knows better than other men how to get the best results from a splendid piece of machinery. And they are demanded of him. No railway company in competition with another can afford to be lax about the running of its trains, and an express driver who means to keep his place has to remember this.

If the train is late from any fault of his he must expect to be reprimanded. If it is late at all frequently he may be either fined or in the end reduced. The checks upon him are strict. In every signal box he passes the time of his passing is recorded. He checks the record with his own time sheet, which is checked by the guard of his train in turn. He need not fear injustice, true. So many independent records establish the facts beyond mistake or cavil and enable his superintendent to say at once whether the fault lies between him and the engine or elsewhere. But time is one of his constant preoccupations.

He cannot forget it, as he may forget his perils. It is evidently not a matter to which a driver can become indifferent in the least, and there are times when it is oppressive. Engines differ, like pianos from the same famous workshop or watches made by machinery. They differ so notoriously that there is a railway saying, "A good engine makes a good driver."

Among modern express engines there is probably not a disappointing one in twenty. But every engine has her idiosyncrasies. She may respond to firing less readily than another or need more oiling or be oftener docked for small repairs. For better or worse the driver is married to her until he can show sufficient cause for a divorce. The time table is their moral law, enforced daily under the penalties aforesaid.—Keighley Snowden in Fortnightly Review.

Trifles That Cause Bravery.

On one of the streams in Yorkshire a man and a boy were seated in a boat fishing when suddenly the boy lost his balance and fell overboard.

The man gallantly jumped into the water and rescued the little fellow.

"Bravo!" remarked a farmer standing near. "They ought to give you the Humane society's medal."

"An' what for becos?" asked the old chap.

"For so nobly saving that poor lad's life at the risk of your own," replied the man.

"Now, look here, mister," he rejoined, "I don't want no praise w'ere no praise ain't doo. If you'd been me you'd 'a' done just the same."

"Why?" said the farmer.

"Why? Why, 'cos the young imp had all the bait in his pockets, that's why—an' a good why, too, mister."

Immaterial.

The janitor of a small church on the south side raises a few chickens in a small inclosure in his back yard. The eggs of these he sells to some members of the church in which he works.

Last Saturday one of his customers asked him if he could spare a dozen eggs within the next two or three days.

"Oh, yes, ma'am," replied the janitor. "I'll bring you a dozen fresh ones tomorrow morning."

"Oh, no," protested the housewife. "I shouldn't want you to bring them on Sunday—not on Sunday, John."

"Well," replied John, "all right, ma'am, if you say so. But it don't make no difference to the hens."—Harper's Weekly.

A Hopeless Lunatic.

"Yes, sir," said the strange looking individual, "we are entirely satisfied with the flat we have now. There is plenty of room, the neighbors never bother us, no one within hearing plays the piano, there are no children in the block, my wife has no trouble in keeping help and the janitor is so kind and obliging that the heat is always exactly right and—"

But they didn't wait to hear any more. They simply held him gently, but firmly, while some one went and phoned for a padded ambulance from the insane asylum.

Are You a Trust Buster?

Hey—You!
Yes, YOU'RE the man we mean.
You're always talking about the harm the trusts are doing. The country's going to the demnition bowwows, you say, because of the uncurbed trusts. Rich growing richer, poor getting poorer. Used to be that a poor man could go into business for himself in a modest way and make a good living. Now he must become a clerk or a roustabout or a headcarrier for some corporation—some combination that has grown to be a Goliath of bigness, that has devoured the fat of the land and is still gourmandizing upon it, till there's not a scrap of bone left for the under dog.

That's your line of talk. You're still handing it out; and you're proud of it.
Well, now, let's see: Are YOU a trust buster YOURSELF?
Didn't we see you stalk up to the postoffice just now and mail a letter with the address of a city Mail Order Store on the envelope? Hey? Didn't we?
Don't you know that the Mail Order Store is a trust—one of the most dangerous in the crowd? Don't you know that it is secretly and silently and slyly closing the doors of opportunity to the young men in country towns and small cities like ours? Don't you know that the Mail Order Trust is collecting the patronage of town and country people by the mail route, thereby cutting down the patronage of the smaller merchant, the local man who is trying to build up a modest, independent, antitrust business?
Hey?
Didn't that ever occur to you?
N. B. (which means note well): Why don't you trade at home instead of helping to build up a trust that hurts your home place?

ANCIENT SWORDS.

The Famous Old "Two Hander" Was a Terrible Weapon.

In the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries the development of the sword was carried forward rapidly. Hitherto the military organization of Europe had been of the most irregular character, but in the fourteenth century the German troops and the men from the Swiss mountains became known far and wide for their thorough discipline and their excellent organization. They approached more nearly to the modern notion of a soldier than any troops that had yet been put in the field, and they were employed as hired troops by the various European sovereigns. They were armed with a pistol and a huge two handed sword, which, through their marvelously skillful handling, became one of the most famous weapons of the army. This "two hander," as the Germans called it, often reached a length of seven feet, and one still preserved in Westminster abbey weighs quite eighteen pounds.

The wavy outline of the blade, a style of decoration that was much in favor in the arts about this time and from which came our word "flamboyant," or "flaming," gave greater efficacy to the blow. The prongs below the crosspieces protected the guard. Wielded by trained men, this weapon was capable of doing terrific execution. The brawny man-at-arms grasped the sword firmly in both hands. Balanced on one foot, he swung the blade in a circle above his head and fetched a crashing blow that mowed down everything before it. It was a favorite weapon with the English soldiery, to whose strongly built frames its huge proportions were well adapted. Richard the Lion Hearted, who from his great size alone would have been the foremost man on any field, handled this heavy weapon with such strength and skill that his name became a terror to the foe.

According to an old romance, an expert swordsman might hope to leave sixty of the enemy disabled on the field. But these mighty brands had all the faults of their virtues. Like the cumbersome armor of the Gothic period, they were a sore tax on the spent energies of the weary soldier, and owing to their awkward size extreme care was required in handling them lest an unexpected blow might be bestowed upon some fellow soldier in the furious assault. Besides, it took a lifetime of training to produce men of sufficient strength and dexterity to render effective service.—Chicago News.

A Deadly Insult.

A west side youngster was caught literally wiping up the street with another boy with whom he was supposed to be on especially friendly terms. The detector of his pugilistic encounter was his mother, who after she had yanked him into the house proceeded to deliver a lecture on the sin of fighting. The boy listened for awhile in silence.

"That's all right," he broke out at last in uncontrollable indignation. "It's all right for you to talk, but if you just knew what he said about you!"

The pause was significant. The mother took alarm.

"About me?" she said. "Why, what on earth did he say about me?"

"He said," blubbered the small boy in impotent wrath, "that you—wear—petticoats."—New York Times.

Still a Puppy.

The youth had only just left college, and his ambition, like his collar, was high.

At home the all engrossing subject was the young man's future career, and he was discussing with his parents which of the professions stood most in need of his genius.

The father's idea of his son's ability was disgustingly low.

"I think," said the old man, "that you had better adorn one of the stools in my office."

The young man drew himself up, and the high collar grew tight as he strove to swallow his righteous anger. Folding his arms, he asked:

"Am I a dog?"

"No, not yet, but you'll grow," came the crushing response.

The Safety Pin.

"The originator of the safety pin," said a historian of inventions, "was a little boy, an English blacksmith's son. The little boy, Harrison by name, had to look after his baby brother. The baby often cried, and its tears were usually to be traced to pin punctures. The boy nurse tried a long time to bend pins into such a form that they could be used with safety to his brother's flesh.

"In this he failed, but his father, the blacksmith, perceiving the utility of the idea the lad had been at work on, took it up on his own account and eventually turned out the safety pin that is in use today all over the world."

A SHREWD LITTLE GIRL.

Prompted a Question Which Saved an Old Woman's Life.

Elizabeth Janfield, afterward Lady Falkland, was called an "odd child." Sometimes her father, who was a judge, took her with him to court. On one of these occasions a woman was brought before him on a charge of witchcraft. It was said that she had bewitched two or three persons to death. The frightened creature when asked if this were so fell on her knees and, weeping, confessed that the accusations against her were true.

"Did you bewitch — to death?" asked the judge.

"Yes," was her reply.

"Did you come in the form of a black cat and breathe on him so that he languished away?"

"I did."

And then the judge heard a whisper at his ear, and his little daughter—she was only ten years old—begged him to ask the woman if she had bewitched John Symondes to death.

The question was put and immediately answered in the affirmative. How had she done it? Then she told one of her former stories, at which all the company laughed. The reason of the merriment was that John Symondes was the judge's brother-in-law and at that moment was standing near him in court. The judge then asked why she had made such a statement.

"Alas, sir, I knew him not," replied the woman. "I said so because you asked me."

"Are you no witch?"

"No. God knows I'm not."

"Nor did you ever see the devil?"

"No; never in all my life."

On further examination she said she had been told that if she did not confess she would be tortured until she did, but that if she admitted all the accusations mercy would be shown her. She was thereupon acquitted, and she owed her release and probably her life to the shrewdness of a little girl.

KING OF THE BUZZARDS.

The California Condor Is Rapidly Following the Great Auk.

One night in the eighties a heifer from the Murieta ranch, in southern California, was killed by a mountain lion that lived in the fastness back in the San Bernardino range. From our camp the next day we noticed several buzzards on a dead pine up the hillside. One of the rancheros pointed out a large speck floating in the summer sky. "King of the buzzards," he said. An hour later the speck had increased in size, and he pointed to another speck just within the scope of vision. The next day the old Mexican took me up the arroyo, and I counted seventeen buzzards and two other big birds that seemed twice the size of a buzzard feasting on the carcass of the heifer. I was interested in the big birds, but the only information I received was a gesture back toward the highest peak of the range.

Years later, as my interest in birds grew, I could get comparatively little information about this "king of the buzzards," or California condor (Cathartes californianus), for not many people had ever seen the bird, and very few had first hand information as to its nesting habits.

The report that it was rapidly following the great auk and that the species would soon become extinct was not without some foundation, for the California condor has a range more restricted than any other bird of prey. In the early part of the last century it was reported fairly common as far north as the Columbia river region. But now it seems to have entirely disappeared from that locality. Once it was reported in Utah, and Dr. Elliott Coues saw it in Arizona in 1865. With the exception of a record in southern Oregon, the habitat of the California condor now seems to be the region from Monterey county, Cal., south through the mountains of the coast range and the extension of the San Bernardino range in Lower California. There is no record of the bird in Mexico.

It is not surprising that collectors have searched the mountains and that museums are willing to pay big prices for the eggs, for after a correspondence of several years Mr. W. Lee Chambers has found that there are now only forty-one California condor eggs (twenty-six first class and fifteen second class) in the various museums and private collections of the world, while there are about seventy eggs of the great auk, which is now extinct. There are only half a dozen of the birds in captivity, and that number is not likely to be increased to any extent at present.—Century Magazine.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily; when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. T. S. Norman, 911 Evans St., Greenville, N. C., says: "I gladly give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement as they have proven greater benefit to me than any remedy I ever used. Prior to using them I suffered severely from a dull aching through the small of my back. There was also a soreness about my kidney regions and I was hardly able to get around on account of the sharp darting pains through my loins. When arising in the morning, I felt tired and languid and during the day had but little ambition or energy. Since using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wooten's drug store, the backache and pains have entirely disappeared. I do not suffer from headaches and that tired languid feeling has disappeared. My experience with Doan's Kidney Pills has been so satisfactory that I do not hesitate to give them my endorsement."
