ABOUT INDEXES.

We were amongst the lucky listeners to Prof. H. E. Austin at the Carolina Club. We were glad to hear him because his address was of the utmost interest to us, who are so interested in this corner of the world called Greenville. In this part of the Old North State that some of us call "home". And we were very glad to hear him say what he did about Greenville's "carriage" because this is one subject upon which we have been "hammering" some few times and to which we always return whenever the irons get hot again. It seems a pity to hammer on cold metal. That's why we sometimes give the matter of "civic beauty" a rest.

Not that we forget about it. Far from it. As it behooves every man that makes his living by telling of things that happen and how they happen to be, we, allowing for modesty, are also students of those signs which were so fitly called "Indexes" by Prof. Austin, the other night.

If thus far we had only spoken about the beautifying of Greenville, was simply because the business side of it had not suggested itself to us. Although having things shipshape in a community is after all a pure matter of business when coming down to the real character of the undertaking.

This task of calling the attention of the people of Greenville to the ugly spots existing in this community is far from being in any way attractive. In fact, no more attractive than it is to go up to the dentist and having a few teeth filled. Just because they are "beyond the pale," (that is perhaps out of sight) there is no reason on earth why we should not hurry to the dear dentist. Along the same lines we can not formulate a single reason why some of the things mentioned in Prof. Austin's address should not be tackled and tackled energetically. Even if some of them happen to be in back alleys. And there is really more than what exposures in back alleys. Some things are exposed to the eye along the streets.

According to Owen Dunn, of the New Bern Sun the story of a beautiful lawn, pretty flowers and well kept grounds, is the story of TRUE LOVE, A HAPPY HOME—etc., and as becomes every editor of a town paper, he urges the New Bern citizens to GET BUSY!

Editor Dunn is right. A beautiful lawn, with pretty flowers, says something for the occupants of the house they surround that no amount of talking would do.

We wandered once through the South. That is anywhere along the Southern R. R. system from Alexandria to New Orleans and although not everything went as if we had been touring the country in a high powered touring car, we have many recollections of that "tour of inspection". And of the things we can remember, and there are many, uppermost amongst our recollections are the beautiful laws and gardens and pretty houses of a Virginia town called Charlottesville. We were badly treated in that particular town, but we had to hand it to them for having a pretty city and under ordinary circumstances would have been delighted to make our visit a stay. A lengthy one, too.

We are sure that the people of Greenville have traveled. And we are also sure that when traveling they have always looked out for such pretty and attractive towns as above mentioned. And that on their return home they have remarked, "My! what a pretty place Swellville is! I surely would like to have a home there!" But that's just it, their home is right here. And a home is like a mother, like a country. The older and the poorer, the dearer she is to us and the closer we snuggle up to the embrace of that country and that mother.

Was it in our power to come to the rescue of that poor mother or that poor country, where is the bad son and unpatriotic citizen that would not come to the rescue?

But Greenville is not poor, neither is Greenville our mother, or our country. Just a piece of it. Yet it certainly is our home and besides Greenville CAN stand a little rescuing and if the ladies of the Civic League and those citizens that do really take an interest in Greenville are only able to enlist the help of those that are a little backward in the movement for better surroundings we are sure Greenville can be as pretty as any Charlottesville that ever happened on the map.

So, we will again quote Owen Dunn: TRUE LOVE—HAPPY HOME—That is the story of a beautiful lawn, pretty flowers and well kept grounds—GET BUSY.

KILLED AND WOUNDED.

This might do very well in red letters about three inches deep in a special issue of some metropolitan daily. And we know how eagerly such news would be read. Paper would be sold out and a second edition as quickly printed and exhausted.

Yet when it comes at the head of the statistics relating to railroad accidents, the space given it is small, the reading of such statistics ridiculously small, and the interest taken in such figures mighty small. In the present Turco-Italian war the casualties to both armies hardly equal the massacre performed by our railroads during July, August and September of the Year of our Lord 1911.

2,7589 people lost their lives during that quarter and 19,107 were wounded or injured to the necessity of a physician or a surgeon. When these figures are read in such centers of population as New York, Chicago or Frisco, the number does not seem so "awful". But let us consider it from our point of view. Say in relation to the population of our own Greenville. Suppose that some morning we were to wake up and find out that two-thirds of our community had been destroyed and destruction had been extended to the population living in those two-thirds of our community. Would that not be a horrible thing?

Yet we go about, that is those that can afford it, condemning war and its causes and wasting vast quantities of wealth in "keeping up appearances" and so busy are we, or again those that can afford it, in keeping up that foolish game, that they forget to direct their spare time and cash to such things as proper railroad legislation and railroad running. It certainly can not be admitted that our roads can not be operated as successfully and to the same general advantage, with a little or a whole lot more safety thrown in just for luck.

The time will come to be when putting your foot on the board of a train about to start will be unwise without having settled all your arguments in this world, as the chances will be that you will not have them to come back and finish some of your standing business.

And the sad part of it is that although you have to pay in advance when boarding a train, if through no fault of your own you reach the end of your journey minus an arm, it may be several years before you can get enough damages to buy a substitute for the one lost. And

The Lawyer, the Law and the Public.

Every lawyer in North Carolina has taken an oath to uphold the law, yet is it not a well-known fact that there are lawyers who act as if they owed no obligation to the law but only to their client?

A leading lawyer once said to us: "If I take advantage of a technicality or through appeals to the prejudices of the jury seek to free my client and defeat the obvious intent of the law, I expect the counsel opposed to me to notice the fact and uphold his side of the case." But the oath was not to any such effect. It was to uphold the law not to attempt to destroy it, laying this flattering erection to your heart, that your opponent had the privilege of defeating your purpose.

"The majesty of the law!" Surely no man who has the slightest conception of the meaning of this phrase, can in his anxiety for his client, forget that his first obligation is not to his client, but to the law he has solemnly sworn to uphold. When a lawyer goes beyond the law and seeks to save his client, whether by appeals to prejudice or to a loose moral sentiment, whenever he attempts to defeat the real meaning of the law by the use of technicalities he is false to his oath. As a lawyer, his first duty is to the law.

And a lawyer is more than most men a servant of the public. The public's welfare is largely in his hands. He creates the moulds in which opinions are shaped. A new ethical awakening in America demands that lawyers in seeking to do their utmost for their clients should not forget that the public has a right to demand that while they give their clients all which the law guarantees them, do not attempt to defeat the ends of justice by giving them more than the law guarantees.

We have heard speeches in defence of criminals that were an apology for vice; we have heard eloquent lawyers plead for mercy for their clients in such a way that immorality was condoned and sin made only a pardonable weakness; men who had been base enough to forget all the obligations entailed by the most sacred relationship of human life were described as the victims of circumstance or of the animosity of their neighbors. In plain English they prostituted the law they had sworn to defend in endeavoring to win their case.

We know that there are hundreds of lawyers into this state who have and who would scorn for the sake of the noblest ideas of their profession a fee on the pride of victory to betray the law and defeat justice by chicanery or degrade their honorable calling by "tickling the ears of the groundlings." All honor to these. They owe it to themselves and the cause of justice and the people by all honorable means to put down the others who have done so much to cause the people to lose confidence in legal procedure.—Rocky Mount Telegram.

Mayor Gaynor and the Brandt Case.

The Brandt case is in the hands of the Grand Jury District Attorney Whitman and the courts. Mayor Gaynor would do well to leave it there. If he must air his views in public, he should at least adhere to the facts and respect their records.

Gov. Dix does not need Mayor Gaynor's help in the matter, and evidently has not asked for it. He has shown himself able to look after his part of the case.

The affairs of the city of New York furnish plenty of work for an industrious Mayor. If Judge Gaynor will attend to them he will find enough to occupy him without meddling in the Brandt case.—N. Y. World.

In some cases, you will do better by not tackling the R. R. Cos. as this is a particular game that may cause your undoing.

Edward Benton, an aged Confederate soldier recently committed suicide at the Soldiers' Home in Raleigh, having previously willed his body to the State University to be dissected. The body was shipped to Chapel Hill and when the boys of the medical class opened the casket and looked on the face of the old soldier, they refused to dissect his body and gave it a Christian burial. This was a noble act in the boys.

The Reflector man has already been promised much support in his candidacy to win one of the Raleigh News and Observer's automobiles. Some have already said they were coming around to take a ride with us.

Figuring out this far ahead what vote a candidate for the presidential nomination will get on the first ballot in the convention is guessing some.

You can sometimes kick a dog with safety, but the Greensboro News admonishes care when it comes to putting a goat. Bob is wise.

If the business men in Greenville advertised like they do in other towns they would also do business like the other fellow.

if you can't do anything but cuss your town, get out in the woods where you can find more room to cuss in.

The right kind of pull together is going to get that new hotel. About two-thirds of the necessary stock is raised and more a-coming.

The farmers need good roads bad enough, yet many of them do not want them.

Babies must be over plentiful in Durham from the way they are left around on people's front steps.

Just when we thought the weather was going to get good it got bad again.

The weather is like some folks. It breaks out when you least expect it.

And there is still further delay for the farmers in their work.

May be it is trying to snow under some of the numerous candidates.

Obedience to law is one of the best characteristics of a good citizen.

We wish the houn' dawg could catch the ground hog.

Who's Responsible? Is this town what it ought to be? Is it what it could be and should be? Yes or no? Can I answer "yes" to these questions or can I not? If not, why not? Who's keeping it back? Who's responsible? Isn't this town equal to the sum of all the part? "I will make my own back-yard set an example of cleanliness for my neighbors front yard." SLEPT SIX WEEKS When the strange case of the Iowa woman who had slept constantly for 43 days was reported, many people who could not sleep at all wished that they might have a similar experience. You would be surprised to know how many people there are right around here who hardly ever get more than two or three hours sleep at night, owing to bad health, general weakness and worn-out condition. Miss Louisa Ludwig, Newark, N. J., who went through all this has written a letter saying: "Having felt weak, tired and badly rundown, with little appetite, and inability to sleep well, I began to take Vinol which I had heard was the best remedy for that condition. It has done me great good by building up my strength, improving my appetite and enabling me to sleep soundly."

BETHEL, N. C., March 5, 1912.—A beautiful marriage was quietly solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 p. m., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rufus Carson, near Bethel, when their daughter, Miss Ora Carson, became the wife of Mr. Sidney Lanier Carr, of Farmville, N. C.

The ceremony, which was witnessed by the many friends and relatives of the popular young couple, was performed by the Rev. D. A. Futrell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The drawing room where the ceremony took place was beautifully decorated with evergreens, ferns and bride roses and the bride, entering with her maid of honor, Miss Blanche Carr, of Farmville, a sister of the groom, proceeded to the altar which was surmounted by an arch of evergreens, where the solemn rites were performed. The bride wore a stylish tan going away gown, with hat and gloves to harmonize, and carried a bouquet of brides roses.

Miss Blanche Carr, maid of honor, was handsomely gowned in white meteor, trimmed with pearls and crystals. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

MERCHANTS, TAKE NOTICE.

That the last legislature passed an act forbidding the sale of 22-caliber rifles that are commonly used in 22-caliber, and can be used in 22-pistols, without paying a license tax. I have been informed that several merchants throughout the county are selling such cartridges and it is unlawful to do so. All who continue to sell them after this date will have to pay the required tax for selling pistols and cartridges. This February 17, 1912. S. I. DUDLEY, Sheriff.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE AND PROGRESS.

Washington, D. C., March 5.—Several hundred delegates, appointed by the governors of forty states, all men of earnest thought, devoted to the best interests of their country, met in the assembly hall of the Bureau of American Republics this morning to discuss the subject of industrial peace and progress. The National Civic Federation, as a feature of its twelfth annual meeting, brought them together to exchange ideas and to recommend informally some solution of the serious problems pertaining to the relations between employers and employees.

Three notable participants of the initial session were Seth Low, the president of the National Civic Federation, who called the gathering to order, Cardinal Gibbons, who acted as presiding officer, and President Taft, who delivered the opening address. In addition, the seats on the platform were occupied by members of the cabinet, senators and representatives, heads of departments, noted financiers, merchants and manufacturers, educators, ministers of the gospel and heads of great labor organizations.

The day was devoted almost wholly to the discussion of the relation of the employer to the employee from the following standpoints: "The Private Employer to his Employees," the Public Utility Company to its Employees," "The Government—Federal, State or Municipal—to its Employees."

The discussion of the first topic included consideration of such trade agreements as those between the Publishers' Association and its 100,000 employees who are members of the typographical, pressman's and Stereotypers' Unions, and the contracts between building trade employers and the half million members of the thirty-five national building trade unions.

Under the division applying to public utility companies special consideration was given to the successful operation of the Erdman Conciliation act, and to the methods of negotiations between employers and employees. Judge Martin A. Knapp, of the commerce court, led the discussion and among the other participants were managers of several of the large railroad systems and the heads of Railroad Brotherhoods.

Under the relation of the government to its employees was considered the question, "How can public employees secure redress of grievances without striking?" The discussion of this subject was led by second assistant Postmaster General Stewart, and addresses were made by William H. Edwards, commissioner of the New York street cleaning department; Representative Lloyd of Missouri; S. Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Dr. Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor.

The general topics selected for consideration at tomorrow's sessions are "Workmen's Compensation and the Prevention of Industrial Accidents" and "Pensions for Public and Private Employees." Charles Nagle, secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, will preside at the morning session, and Franklin McVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, will officiate at the afternoon session. Senator Sutherland of Utah, chairman of the congressional commission on workmen's pay, will open the discussion on "Compensation for Injured Railroad Employees" and Representative Frederick H. Gillett that on "Pensions for Federal Employees."

Thursday the Federation's department on regulation of industrial corporations will consider an analysis of the 16,000 replies to its "questionnaire on trusts" and its proposed "Act of supplement to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law," based thereon. The Woman's Welfare Department also will meet Thursday. Its programme will consist of a business meeting in the morning and addresses from representative women in the afternoon.

Means of preventing the "laws delay" will be the topic of the department on reform in legal procedure, which consists of representative lawyers from every state. The department is urging the passage of the bill drafted by a committee of the American Bar Association designed to prevent delay and unnecessary cost in litigation through reversals by higher courts on technicalities.

The annual dinner will be given at the New Willard Hotel tomorrow evening and will have a number of men of national prominence as speakers. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond will give a reception at their home to the delegates and members of the National Civic Federation.

REFLECTIONS OF A VISITOR

After He Had Spent a Day in the City of Greenville.

Editor Reflector:

A day spent in your city after the lapse of eighteen years reveals many changes in your development, and suggests many associations and recollections after so long an absence. The old roads about the Coast Line depot to the city, then sand beds, are now paved streets with concrete sidewalks, built up along either side with handsome, cozy, cottages. About five points, then dull and forsaken, it is now active and business like. Substantial brick buildings have replaced the old fire-trap wooden structures once presented itself from a material all about over the city. Progress at point of view.

My friends in the city were Col. Isaac Sugg, who has since gone to his last reward; B. F. Tyson, known among the boys at the university as "Old Pitt," now in Washington city, R. W. King, Jesse Sugg, who have passed over the river, and many others I could mention.

G. B. King delivered an address at the close of our school on one occasion and it was most masterly effort and was much praised and appreciated. His tribute to the bravery of North Carolinians in time of war, and their conservatism in time of peace was beautiful in its diction and literary effect and filled with the spirit and inspiration of eloquence.

On another occasion Ex-Gov. Jarvis the grand old man of Pitt for whom I have the highest esteem, favored us with a most excellent address at the close of our school. He had just returned from Brazil as Minister, and gave in his address a very beautiful educational instruction with the experience one has in scaling one of the Andean heights. Only the courageous and advantageous would attempt to pass up the narrow, beclouded, dangerous pathway along the precipitous mountain side, but once passed the glory and beauty of the clear mountain landscape, brilliant with the effulgence of tropical sunshine, with its broad expanse and variety, would loom up in the fullness of its true magnificence and grandeur—never seen by those too timid or indifferent to pass the danger point and reach the top above the mist. So in education only the aggressive and ambitious willing to dare and do ever reach the heights from which all the landscape of life and duty can be viewed in all its beauty and usefulness.

One is reminded here of Pope's lines. "A little learning is a dangerous thing—drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring. For shallow draughts intoxicate the brain, but drinking largely sobers us up again."

Among other associations I recall that the last ball I ever attended was here. "Light-fantastic Toe," "Wee Soa' Hours," "Big Time," all applied to this occasion, but the realization came that correctly formed ideals and thought demanded a higher plain for those imbued with ambitions and aspirations of the noblest and highest type.

The writer once had the impulse to aspire for the position of Superintendent of Public Instruction of Pitt, but finding that his friends were fast friends of Mr. King the matter was dropped. Mr. King succeeded Mr. Harding.

Your securing that excellent institution, The Teachers Training School, a great mark of progress in your city, from Kinston. I attribute most largely to the influence of Ex-Gov. Jarvis. It is an institution of which an eastern North Carolina feels proud and is a special adornment to Greenville.

Your magnificent court-house—masterly and symmetrical in its proportions, complete in all its appointments and finish, convenient in its arrangements—and equipment reminds me that it must be the realization of the ideal of a court house projected by one of the greatest and most esteemed men in North Carolina.

The Court House and Training Schools are grand memorials of his wisdom and influence.

President Taft is expected to pay an early visit to New Hampshire, which, next to Massachusetts, is expected to be the most interesting of the New England states from the Republican viewpoint this year. Already the State is attracting much attention, chiefly because of the prominence of Governor Bass and his activity in behalf of Col. Roosevelt.
