Mr. Percy's statements are not drawn merely from a scratching of the political surface in the cities and states through which he passed. He talked with laboring men and, by the way, it was from them that he heard the first favorable mention of Underwood; he talked with business men who control thousands of dollars, and it might be added that he took lunch with an active candidate for the presidency, not Mr. Underwood, which, however, did not blind him to the fitness of the southern man.

of him and his chances for the presidency was a conversation which I butted into at Buffalo. I had just returned from Niagara Falls and was waiting for my train. We read in part: dacy for the presidential nomination at Baltimore. Mr. Underwood, as is well known, was for a long time averse to the idea of being taken up for discussion as a presidential possibility, and even after his indorsement by the Alabama Democracy he deprecated the efforts of his friends to give wider prominence to his eligibility. That he now -consents to stand for the honor implies that developments have dispelled the doubts that first assailed him.

The call upon Mr. Underwood issues from influential quarters in all sections, a signal fact that permits it to be recorded that for the first time in fifty years the availability of a southern man prompts no mental reservation on the score of section.
