PERSECUTING VIGOROUSLY

Murdered Gambler's Threat to Police System Responsible for His Death Beyond Doubt. Police Protection Very Dear There

GAMBLERS' SCALE OF PRICES FOR POLICE PROTECTION

New York, July 18.—Here is the scale of prices for gambling protection by the police as given to District Attorney Whitman by Herman Rosenthal, the gambler who was killed early today:

- Initial fee for being allowed to open a gambling house for roulette, faro, etc., $500.
- Monthly gambling house payment, $300.
- Initial fee for opening an afternoon pool room, $500.
- Monthly payment to police for pool room, $300.
- Dice rooms, small, per month, $50.
- Dice rooms, large, per month, $250.
- Poker clubs, small, per month, $50.
- Poker rooms, large, per month, $100.
- The total protection revenue per year turned over to the authorities, according to Rosenthal's computation is $4,000,000 per annum for Greater New York.

New York, July 18.—Jack Rose, wanted by the police in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal the gambler and informer against police, went to police headquarters this morning and was questioned for two hours by Deputy Commissioner Dougherty. Rose admitted, Dougherty said, that he was a passenger in the automobile in which Rosenthal's murderers drove to the Hotel Metropole, but said that he left before the shooting took place.

The deputy commissioner could not say whether Rose told who else was in the car when he left it.

After the examination Rose, who is the man who figured in the charges of gambling graft made by Rosenthal against Police Lieutenant Becker, was placed under arrest and taken to District Attorney Whitman's office where it was expected he would be given another examination in connection with the grand jury investigation into the gambling situation.

Police Commissioner Waldo today announced the suspension of Patrolman William J. File, who was in the Hotel Metropole off duty at the time of the murder and unsuccessfully pursued in a taxicab the automobile in which the murderers escaped.

Rose gave himself up after the latter had told Bridgie Webb, arrested yesterday in the case to find Rose and tell him to come immediately to headquarters.

Dougherty said, I am positive that I shall have the murderers of Rosenthal in custody before long and I believe I know who did the shooting. Rose's statement does not implicate Becker. I believe Becker was entirely ignorant that the murder was going to take place and all I ask is that I have fair play in this case until the facts are made known.

ATTEMPT ON TAFT UNTRUE

No Infernal Machine Placed On His Table

WAS CIRCUMSTANTIAL STORY

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A circumstantial story of an attempt on the life of President Taft is being vigorously denied today by White House officials and Chief Wilkie, of the secret service.

It was said that a bomb wrapped in a package was received late yesterday at the executive offices and placed upon the desk of Sherman Allen, one of the White House assistant secretaries, who has just been appointed assistant secretary of the treasury. The package was, of course, intended for the president, but packages and letters never reach him without first passing through the hands of a secretary and Mr. Allen opened it.

The report was that as Mr. Allen unwrapped the package he discovered an infernal machine said to have been charged with dynamite and with a fuse a-sputtering which he quickly extinguished with his hands.

Mr. Allen emphatically denies the story as do all other White House officials. Chief Wilkie, of the secret service, which is charged with guarding the life of the president, also denies it. It has always been the policy of the secret service and White House officials to deny publicity to any incident which savors of an attempt at violence upon the president. Though the story as published is very circumstantial, it is pronounced wholly unfounded.

When Secretary Allen reached his desk at the White House this morning he denounced as absolutely untrue the published story of his having opened an infernal machine intended for the president.

The thing is a complete hoax, he said. There is not a word of truth in it. I haven't a burn on my hand from extinguishing the fuse. Mr. Allen held two perfectly undamaged members to prove his statement. The published story declared he had been burned, putting out the fire.

Moreover, continued Secretary Allen, I do not open the mail. The whole thing is such an absurd hoax that I do not even intend to issue a statement denying it. I am disgusted. That's all I can say.

King George and Queen Mary At Windsor Garter Ceremony

A NOTABLE ceremony took place recently at Windsor, when the chapter of the Most Noble Order of the Garter was assembled to do homage to the king, who is the head of the order, and to Queen Mary, who bears the title of Lady of the Order. This most ancient and honorable of the English orders has twenty-six knights, the twenty-five besides the king being known as knights-companions. Princes of the blood are admitted as supernumerary members. The religious ceremonies pertaining to the occasion to which reference has been made take place, appropriately enough, in St. George's chapel, for St. George is the patron saint of the order, and the badge, which is pendant from the gold collar of the insignia, is called "the George." The photograph here reproduced shows the king and queen in their robes of office entering the chapel.

DEMOCRATS HAD $1,000,000 TO ELECT PARKER

NEW YORKER TESTIFIES BEFORE SENATE

Mr. Sheehan Was at the Time Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The Democratic campaign fund contained about $1,000,000 when Alton B. Parker ran for president in 1904, according to W. F. Sheehan of New York, who testified today before the senate committee investigating campaign funds.

Mr. Sheehan was then chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, he testified, to Maine, Colorado and Nebraska, particularly.

To Maine, did you say? asked a Senator.

Yes, with very gratifying results to the Democrats, replied Mr. Sheehan. Mr. Sheehan assured the committee that sums sent to Maine, Colorado and Nebraska were not large.

How much sent to Nebraska? inquired Senator Oliver.

I think about $15,000.

Mr. Bryan was candidate for the Senatorship that year, wasn't he? I don't remember, exactly; candidates for senatorship were not—

Well, I think he was, interrupted the Pennsylvania senator.

Mr. Sheehan wanted the committee to understand when he estimated the Democratic funds of 1904 at $1,000,000 he was not contradicting August Belmont, who suggested on the stand that the amount was $600,000 or $700,000.

It's all a matter of memory, insisted Mr. Sheehan. I think the national committee used directly about $800,000. I think there came through the committee contribution for specific use in New York state. I have an impression that it amounted to about $200,000.

Who was the most active in securing money? Why Senator, various people were

WAS INTOXICATED IN HOTEL ROOM

Dictograph Recorded Not the Truth But the Incoherent Ramblings of a Man Under the Influence of Drink.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 18.—The committee of the South Carolina legislature, which is investigating charges of political corruption and which recently at Augusta, Ga., heard sensational testimony as to the Governor's pardon record, met here today. Samuel J. Nichols was the principal witness.

Nichols is the Spartanburg attorney who accorded to Detective E. S. Reed, was governor Bleese's agent in the purchase of a pardon for a prisoner.

Mr. Nichols, the first witness, corroborated certain testimony that had been taken by a telephonic apparatus in the Spartanburg Hotel.

He denied that he had said the Governor had received anything for the signing of the interurban bill, but had represented to the Governor that if he did not sign it it would hurt the Piedmont section of the state. He said that when he went into Reed's room there were two quarts of Scotch whiskey on the dresser and that he became intoxicated and now cannot say what took place.

He declared the whiskey had a peculiar effect on him and that the testimony recorded by a telephonic device did not represent his sane moments of the facts in the case.

Mr. Nichols said that if he had made the statement that he would accept money to be used in connection with Governor Bleese's campaign that he was under the influence of whiskey at the time.

He denied that he had done much pardon business as alleged by Detective Reed. He stated that in general cases he had been offered large fees to secure pardons, but had refused to consider them.

Did you solicit? Not much. I devoted my energy to other work.

FIEND LEAVES A CONFESSION

Murderer of Julia Connors Takes Own Life

FELT SORRY FOR BRUTAL CRIME

Swartz Took Gas and Did Not Drown as was First Given Out. "Guilty and Insane" Wrote Desperate Youth Before Dying

NEW YORK, July 18.—The body of Nathan Swartz, whose father informed the police that his son was the slayer of 14 year old Julia Connors, was found early today on the fourth floor of a tenement house on Chrystie st.

Swartz had committed suicide by inhaling gas. The body was identified by Detective Joseph Brennan.

Swartz had hired the room eight days ago under the name of Max Hirszkowitz from Max Kaylan. Early today Kalan smelled gas. On investigation he found Swartz in bed with the end of a gas tube that ran from the ceiling tied to his mouth. Examination by a hospital physician showed the man dead.

Written in lead pencil on his collar were the words: Guilty and Insane. Caused by the beautiful make-up of woman, which has made me passionate.

There were several pieces of newspaper lying around, on one of these was written the sentence: I was sorry the minute after I did it. So don't cry for me.

A letter was found addressed to Swartz's mother in which he confessed his guilt and telling her not to cry her eyes out. Later Philip Swartz a brother of the slayer of the Connors girl, identified the dead man as his brother.

Only a few days ago Swartz's father informed the police that his son had told him that he had killed the Connors girl, to which the father responded that there was nothing left but for the son to commit suicide.

On Monday the body of a man believed to be that of Swartz was found bating in the morgue in Hoboken. A distant relative of Swartz identified the body as that of the girl's slayer, but subsequent inspection showed that it was not his. There was a close resemblance, but there were differences chiefly in the teeth.

Wall of Water Descends Upon Nine People

Jacob's Creek, Pa., July 18.—

It became known here today that nine persons had been drowned in Barren Run on the farm of Jon Raymond near here during last night.

The dead: Mrs. John Raymond, Mike Rovinsky, a brother of Mrs. Raymond, Six children of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond.

Durink a heavy storm which swept this section, Raymond went from his house to the barn located in a ravine near Barren Run.

He did not return and after waiting two hours, the wife and other members of the family became frightened and went in search of him. As they reached the ravine a wall of water swept down and carried them away.

Raymond was safe in the barn and escaped. The body of the brother was recovered this morning and search is being made for the others.

Mr. Nichols said that if he had made the statement that he would accept money to be used in connection with Governor Bleese's campaign that he was under the influence of whiskey at the time.

He denied that he had done much pardon business as alleged by Detective Reed. He stated that in general cases he had been offered large fees to secure pardons, but had refused to consider them.

WILSON NAMES THE COMMITTEE

Chairman McCombs Has 14 Associates

DANIELS IS A COMMITTEEMAN

Headquarters of the National Democratic Committee Will Open in New York Within a Week—Vice-Chairman Not Yet Appointed by Wilson.

SEA GIRT, N. C., July 18.—The Democratic campaign committee, that will have supreme charge of the Presidential campaign was named tonight by Governor Wilson. It consists of 14 members, with Wm. F. McCombs the chairman of the Democratic national committee, as chairman.

The other members are: Robert S. Hudspeh of New Jersey, Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, Willard Saulsbury of Delaware, Robert L. Ewing of Louisiana, A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, Joseph E. Davis of Wisconsin, Will R. King of Oregon, all of whom are members of the national committee and Sen. Thos. P. Gore of Oklahoma, Jas. A. O'Gorman of New York, and James Reed of Missouri, Representative Daniel J. McGillicuddy, of Maine, Albert S. Burleson, of Texas, and Wm. G. McAdoo, of New York City.

The appointment of the vice chairman was postponed.

No action was taken on the appointment of a treasurer or finance committee.

Headquarters will be opened within a week in Chicago and New York, and at a later date in some western city as yet undecided upon.

After the meeting Chm. McCombs announced that the campaign committee would hold its first meeting at an early date to appoint various sub-committees, press committee and finance committee. As to the latter he thought it would consist of 35 or 40 men, representing of course, every section of the United States. Names had hardly been reached in considering this committee, he added. In addition he added, there would be appointed a finance committee representing every state in the union. The national committeeman from each state he declared, would be asked to suggest the names of the man best qualified in his state and their names would receive first consideration.

Chairman McCombs said headquarters would be opened in New York in the Theatre district within a week.

While the owner of appointment of the campaign committee rested nominally with Mr. McCombs, there are indications that he followed every suggestion of Gov. Wilson and that the appointments were actually made by the nominee. The committee was announced by the governor, who added:

"It is a matter of gratification to me that it all worked out so admirably." The appointment of the campaign committee is but the first act, the governor said of the real organization of the campaign. It will be thorough and carried out to the smallest detail no section being neglected or overlooked.

In taking from direct charge of the national committee the management of the campaign, Chairman McCombs said that there has been no intent to supersede the body. Every national committee the chairman stated would have all he could do during the campaign independently of the campaign committee and the nominee and the chairman will use the services of every one.

The committee is largely composed of men who stayed by the governor in his fight for the nomination. A notable exception is Senator Reed, of Missouri, who was one of Champ Calrk's warmest supporters. Another man whose name has not been mentioned in connection with the campaign committee is former Judge King of Oregon, who from the bench sustained the validity of the initiative and referendum in Oregon, and, after retiring, recently won his contention in the Supreme court of the United States in that state.

Governor Wilson said he did not know when the campaign committee would meet again but indicated that it would hold frequent sessions, beginning at an early date.

was nothing to indicate that George Percival Algernon Jones was in any way handicapped by his Aithuresque middle names.

"No fool, as Gloconda in her infinite wisdom hath said; but romantic, terribly romantic, yet, like the timid bathers who puts a foot into the water, finds it cold, and withdraws it. It will all depend upon whether he is a real collector or merely a buyer of rugs. Forward, then, Horace; a sovereign has already dashed headlong down the far horizon." The curse of speaking his thoughts aloud did not lie heavily upon him tonight, for these cogitations were made in silence, unmarked by any facial expression. He proceeded across the room and sat down beside George. "I beg your pardon," he began, "but are you not Mr. Jones?"

Mildly astonished, George signified that he was.

"George P. A. Jones?"
George nodded again, but with some heat in his cheeks. "Yes. What is it?" The girl had just finished her coffee and was going away. Hang this fellow! What did he want at this moment?

If Ryanne saw that he was too much, as the French say, he also perceived the cause. The desire to shake George till his teeth rattled was instantly overcome. She hadn't seen him, and for this he was grateful. "You are interested in rugs? I mean old ones, rare ones, rugs that are bought once and seldom if ever sold again."

"Why, yes. That's my business." George had no silly ideas about trade. He had never posed as a gentleman's son in the sense that it meant idleness.

Ryanne presented his card.
"How do you pronounce it?" asked George naively.

"As they do in Cork."
"I never saw it spelled that way before."

"Nothing surprising in that," replied Ryanne. "No one else has, either."
George laughed and waited for the explanation.

"You see, Ryan is as good a name as they make them; but it classes with prize-fighters, politicians and bar chemists. The two extra letters put the finishing touch to the name. A jewel is all right, but what tells is the way you hang it round your neck. To me, those additional letters represent the jewel Ryan in the hands of a Lallique."

"You talk like an American."
"I am; three generations. What's the matter?" with sudden concern.

George was frowning. "Haven't I met you somewhere before?"

"Not to my recollection." A speculative frown now marred Ryanne's forehead. It did not illustrate a search in his memory for such a casualty as the meeting of George. He never forgot a face and certainly did not remember George's. Rather, the frown had its source in the mild dread that Percival Algernon had seen him somewhere during one of those indispositions of the morning after. "No; I think you have made a mistake."

"Likely enough. It just struck me that you looked something like a chap named Wadsworth, who was half-back on the varsity, when I entered my freshman year."

"A university man? Lord, no! I was turned loose at ten; been hustling ever since." Ryanne spoke easily, not a tremor in his voice, although he had received a slight mental jolt. "No; no college record here. But I want to chat with you about rugs. I've heard of you, indirectly."

"From the carpet fellows? We do a big business over here. What have you got?"
"Well, I've a rug up in my room I'd like to show you. I want your judgment for one thing. Will you do me the favor?"

Since the girl had disappeared and with her those imaginary appurtenances that had for a space transformed the lounging-room into a stage, George saw again with normal vision

"Well, I've Got a Rug Up in My Room I'd Like to Show You."

that the room was simply a common meeting-ground for well-dressed persons and ill-dressed persons, of the unimpeachable, the impeccable, the doubtful and the peccant; for in Cairo, as in ancient Egypt, there is every class and kind of humans, for whom the Decalogue was written, transcribed, and shattered by the turbulent Moses, an incident more or less forgotten these days. From the tail of his eye he gave swift scrutiny to his chance acquaintance, and he found nothing to warrant suspicion. It was not an unusual procedure for men to hunt him up in Cairo, in Constantinople, in Smyrna, or in any of the Oriental cities where his business itinerary led him. The house of Mortimer & Jones was widely-known. This man Ryanne might have been anywhere between thirty and forty. He was tall, well set up, blond and smooth-skinned. True, he appeared to have been ill-fed recently. A little more flesh under the cheek-bones, a touch of color, and the Irishman would have been a handsome man. George could read a rug a league off, as they say, but he was a child in the matter of physiognomy, whereas Ryanne was a past-master in this regard; it was necessary both for his business and safety.

"Certainly, I'll take a look at it. But I tell you frankly," went on George, "that to interest me it's got to be a very old one. You see, it's a little fad of mine, outside the business end of it. I'm crazy over real rugs, and I know something about every rare one in existence, or known to exist. Is it a copy?"

"No. I'll tell you more about it when we get to my room."

"Come on, then." George was now quite willing to discuss rugs and carpets.

Having gained the room, Ryanne threw off his coat and relighted his cigar, which, in a saving mood, he had allowed to go out. He motioned George to be seated.

"Just a little yarn before I show you the rug. See these cuffs?"

"Yes."
"You will observe that I have had to reverse them. Note this collar? Same thing. Trousers-hems a bit frayed, coat shiny at the elbows." Ryanne exhibited his sole fortune. "Four sovereigns between me and a jail."

George became thoughtful. He was generous and kind-hearted among those he knew intimately or slightly, but he had the instinctive reserve of the seasoned traveler in cases like this. He waited.

"The truth is, I'm all but done for. And if I fall to strike a bargain here with you. . . . Well, I should hate to tell you the result. Our consul would have to furnish me passage home. Were you ever up against it to the extent of reversing your cuffs and turning your collars? You don't know what life is, then."

George gravely produced two good cigars and offered one to his host. There was an absence of sound, broken presently by the cheerful crackle of matches; two billowing clouds of smoke floated outward and upward. Ryanne sighed. Here was a cigar one could not purchase in all the length and breadth of the Orient, a Pedro Murias. In one of his doubtfully prosperous epochs he had smoked them daily. How long ago had that been?

"Yonder is a rug, a prayer-rug, as holy to the Moslem as the idol's eye is to the Hindu, as the Bible is to the Christian. For hundreds of years it never saw the outside of the Sultan's palace. One day the late, the recently late, Abdul the Unspeakable Turk, gave it to the Pasha of Bagdad. Whenever this rug makes its appearance in Holy Mecca, it is worshipped, and none but a Sultan or a Sultan's

For State Senate
Having been endorsed by the anti-riding element of the Democratic party, I announce myself a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:
1. No extension of the stock law except by a vote of the people in the territory affected.
2. The repeal of the stock law legislation of the last legislature.
3. The improvement of the public roads without bond issues.
4. Against any bond issue in Pitt county for next two years except in towns—and then only by vote of the people effected.
5. Improvement of the county home.
6. A legalized primary for North Carolina.
If you desire the above principles to be upheld, I most earnestly solicit votes

NEARER TO SOUTH AMERICA

"Seing South America" may be added to the prospectuses of railroads advertising tours to the capital city as a result of the joint efforts of Secretary of State Knox and President Fletcher of the Southern Commercial Congress to install in this city a permanent exhibition of South American products.

Ever drink yerba mate? They do in South America. It is only tea—the kind they grow in Paraguay. This will probably be one of the exhibits set out for the education of Washington tourists. Peru may send up samples of her paltas and chirimoyas. These are tropical fruits. Think of the best Baldwin apple you ever tasted. Multiply its lusciousness by three, cut your apple in half and eat it with a spoon. That is an unflattering portrait of the palta.

Llama wool, uncut emeralds from Colombia diamonds from Brazil, rubber from the headlands of the Amazon, nitrate from Chile, cabinet woods from the interior jungles of the north and what not in the way of Latin-America's products which the Panama Canal promises some day to make part of our everyday consumption, will probably form part of the exhibit. Then, too, South American countries are expected to show American sight-seers astonishing facts regarding their production of staple articles, of the grade of wheat raised in Argentina, of the cattle industry of Uruguay and the Argentine, of coffee from Brazil and coca from Ecuador and Colombia.

The work of gathering this exhibition is being done directly by the Southern Commercial Congress. Secretary of State Knox has ordered the American diplomatic and consular officers in South America to lend their assistance to the work. The gathering of this exhibition is only one part of an extensive program for the expansion of Pan-American trade interests outlined by the Southern Commercial Congress. In the fall of 1913 the congress will hold a convention in Mobile, Ala. This is at the time of the opening of the Panama Canal and it is proposed to have the Latin-American Republics represented at the convention by delegations. Secretary Knox is lending the congress the entire strength of the Department of State in so far as it can be extended in behalf of a private organization. He believes that such as that which the congress has undertaken will prove a great step in bettering relations between the United States and its Latin-American neighbors and has, consequently, instructed both the diplomatic and consular officers to cooperate with the congress in every possible way.

Wilson for President

Why Wilson Will Win. If the Democrats cannot elect Woodrow Wilson they could not elect anybody. No Democratic national canvass since Jackson's has been inaugurated more auspiciously. The point of vantage may be summarized as follows: A Democratic year. The people are disgusted with the Republican party and eager for a change. Disruption of the opposition. The difference of the two wings for the first time since the Republican party was born, are irreconcilable. An open and honest convention. In marked contrast with the doings at Chicago, there was at Baltimore no arbitrary action on behalf of one candidate and no suggestion of bribery in the interest of another. The main issue. At last the line is sharply drawn between excessive protection and a revenue tariff. An unpledged candidate. Nobody pretends that Mr. Wilson is under the slightest obligation to any group of men for his nomination. Elimination of bosses. So far from catering to those accustomed to control Mr. Wilson defied them. He had not hesitated to denounce Mr. Murphy, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Taggart by name. His sole appeal was to public opinion. Removal of the taint of Bryanism. Mr. Wilson owes nothing to the marplot who schemes to obtain the nomination for himself. Nor is he bound in any way to recognize the vagaries which for so long have discredited the party in the estimation of the country. Independent support. Almost without exception the powerful public journals have already pledged the exercise of their utmost endeavor on behalf of the Democratic standard-bearer. Moral sentiment. The widespread revulsion of conscientious citizens against political depravity, which Mr. Roosevelt has tried with consummate skill to capitalize for his own advancement, now insure to the advantage of Gov. Wilson to the great relief of millions who distrusted Roosevelt but knew not where else to turn. A vivid personality. Mr. Wilson has demonstrated matchless power to effective appeal to the masses generally and to active, enthusiastic, younger men in particular. This means that his canvass will be surcharged with the same electrical, persuasive energy which achieved his nomination. Such are some of the weighty influences whose tacit recognition has already inducted a common belief that Mr. Wilson's election is a virtual certainty.—Harpers Weekly.

This is My Birthday

Roger A. Pryor Roger A. Pryor, one of the few surviving generals of the Confederate army was born in Dinwiddie county, Virginia, July 19, 1828 and received his education at Hampden-Siney College and the University of Virginia. A year after his graduation from the university he was admitted to the bar, but did not begin the practice of law. Instead he took a newspaper work and for several years he was the editor of papers in Petersburg and Richmond. In 1855 he went to Greece in a diplomatic mission for the United States government. Upon his return he was elected to 35th Congress. Two years later he was re-elected, but did not serve as he resigned with other representatives of the South on the eve of the war. He was a member of the First Confederate Congress, but soon quit the legislative halls for the battle field. He distinguished himself in the service of the Confederate states and rose to the rank of brigadier general. After the war General Pryor began the practice of law in New York city. He was eminently successful in his chosen profession and for a number of years occupied a place on the New York supreme bench.

Press Comment

Truly a Good Suggestion If you are looking for a place to rest and refreshments where the water is fine and the table loaded with the good things of life coe to King's Mountain. Nestling in the shadow of the historical mountain where the memorial attle of 1780 was fought, the city of King's Mountains makes a beautiful picture.—King's Mountain Herald.

Good For Albermarle.

The Wiscasset band last Thursday received its new set of instruments, valued at $1,335. There are twenty pieces, all of the C. G. Conn's new invention type. The young men comprising this band have spent a lot of money in equipment and training, and their ambition is to become the best band in the State.—Albermarle Inter-prise.

Make It God Roads

The good road question will be settled in York county soe time, and it will be settled right. Progress in some lines comes slowly but is comes. Education as to value of improved highway is needed by many people in this county, but they will finally be led to understand the importance of building roads, and then a arge majority will vote for good roads and for the best and quickest method of building them.—Rock Hill Herald.

Will Resume Business

What is known as the Iredell Lumber Company plant, in southwest Statesville, which has been idle for some time, will resume operations on full time within the next few days. Mr. P. R. House, who was for many years engaged in the lumber business in the county, has bought Mr. R. V. Brawley's interest in the Iredell plant and he and M. J. M. Adams, who owns an interest, will operate it under the name of the Pine Lumber Company. They will manufacture bulldig material and it is their purpose to begin regular operation within a few days.—Statesville Landmark.

Will Go To Morehead

Fifty odd members of the Iredell Blues, the local military company, expects to attend the encampment of the First Regiment of the North Carolina National Guard at Camp Glenn, Morehead City, next week, and the stay on the coast is looked forward to by most of them as a vacation period. To ward off typhoid fever while in the low country and for as long thereafter as the treatment will have effect, 42 members of the company have during the past few days been inoculated with typhoid serum. The serum was furnished by the government and was administered by Dr. R. A. Campbell.—Statesville Landmark.

Wants Further Information

The farm of Mr. F. H. Morgan of White Store township is infested with a new kind of plague—a worm that plays havoc with the corn crop. He brought a few specimens of the worms to the M. and I. office confined in a small bottle. They resembled the well known roastingear worm in color, but are not quite so large. (But probably these are just a little lean from confinement and fasting).

Mr. Morgan says these worms have completely demolished five acres of two weeks old corn for him and that they are something to be very much dreaded. What are they—and what is the remedy?—Wadesboro Messenger-Intelligencer.

Mount Baker Marathorn

BELLINGHAM, Wash., July 19.—At 11 o'clock next Wednesday night the runners in the second annual Mount Baker marathorn race will start from this city for the summit of Mount Baker, a distance of approximately forty miles. The contest will use three trials which ascend the mountain from different angles, and it is expected that the winner to whom will be awarded a cash prize of $500, will arrive in Bellingham by nine o'clock Thursday morning. Crack runners from Washington, California, Alaska, Germany and Switzerland are entered in the contest. The first race, which was held last year, was won by Joe Galbraith in 11 hours and 47 minutes.

Editorial of Human Interest

By Arthur Brisbane

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR Part III

We shall have air ships of metal, with high power engines, lasting indefinitely. No an can estimate the economies in transportation when the conquest of the air shall have become absolute. No friction, no jar, no wear and tear. Power from the waterfalls, power transmitted without wires, powers generated by the tide or directly by the sun's heat will one day carry human beings as cheaply as the Government mails now carry letters.

The human race will be free from the law of gravitation, which ties us down to one spot almost as effectually as the land turtle is tied down to his field on the farm.

With the conquest of the air complete every man that will, may know all that there is of this glorious earth. Millions and hundreds of millions of people will know the planet that we inhabit as well as they know their own front or back yard.

Children, half grown, will be familiar with the great mountains of Asia, the wonderful growths of the tropics and the perpetual snows of the North.

What will that mean to the intelligence of the future race, intimate personal acquaintance with this great earth, 25,000 miles around and with the clouds above it and the wonder and beauty of this earthly home.

The conquest of the air is near, a mighty conquest, a great empire given to man.

And each flying man who flies and tries and falls at last and dies, is one of the conquerors of the new empire, one of the benefactors of the race.

In Lighter Vein

I am willing to trust the people, said the candidate after he had hit the table a terrible blow with his fist. Gee, I wish you'd open a grocery, yelled a little an in the audience.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Servant—You want to see Herr Doktor? Could you come again tomorrow?

Patient—Why isn't he in? Servant—Oh yes, but your're our first patient and it's his birthday tomorrow. I should so like it to be a surprise for him.—Fliegende Blatter.

My daughter wants to marry a duke.

Mine wants to marry a poet. Well, I believe I'd rather support a poet than a duke. From all accounts a poet won't eat much and I don't think he'll want to play the stock market all the time.—Kansas City Journal.

Why do you spend such care on the crease of your pants, hey? It is important, dad, not to wear baggy trousers.

Important is it? Why, you young cub, look here. Did you ever see a statue to a man who didn't wear baggy pants?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

For Western Tennis Titles

CHICAGO, Ill., —Beginning tomorrow and continuing through the great er of the coming week the courts o the Onwentsia club at Lake Forest will be the scene of the most important tennis tournament of the year. The play will be for the Western championships in men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles. Maurice McLoughlin, the California player, is the holder of the singles title and the winner of the tournament will have to meet him in the challenge round. The winners of the doubles will meet the winners of the Eastern, Southern and Pacific coast competitions to decide who shall play Little and Touchard for the national title.

Possee Overtakes and Kills Bandit

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 18.—In a battle south of Alexander City today one of the robbers who blew open the postoffice safe at Auburn Monday night was killed by a posse.

The bandit hid in the woods but was discovered by the posse. He opened fire on the officers, they gave battle and within less than ten minutes the bandit was killed. None of the posse was hurt.

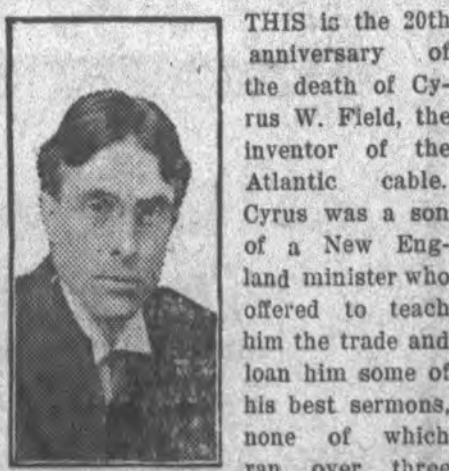

In a pocket in the robber's coat was found $335 in money, but no papers to identify him. However, before the fight he told a negro that he was fleeing from justice and that he home was in Oklahoma.

It is known that he was one of the men who escaped from a posse at Alexander City Tuesday night after shooting Sheriff Lynch of Tallapoosa county. The victim of today's battle in his flight Tuesday night left a grip containing spoils from the Auburn postoffice and a collection of safeblowing equipment.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howara L. Rann.

CYRUS W. FIELD

THIS is the 20th anniversary of the death of Cyrus W. Field, the inventor of the Atlantic cable. Cyrus was a son of a New England minister who offered to teach him the trade and loan him some of his best sermons, none of which ran over three hours and forty minutes in length except the one used on Thanksgiving Day, but Cyrus objected to collecting his own salary with oyster suppers and pound socials and went to New York, where he hired out as a clerk. A little later he made the acquaintance of the Morse telegraph code and became so expert in its use he could fall asleep at the receiver just in time to throw the fast mail into an open switch. Field's first ocean cable was thrown across to Newfoundland and proved very successful in giving the market quotations on smoked halibut, home-grown codfish and Newfoundland pups. Field then proposed to bring England closer to the center of civilization by running a copper wire into her basement, thus enabling her to get stung on American railroad securities with more frequency and he started out with considerable agility. He had hard luck at first. No sooner would he get the cable tied around some English promontory than it would break and interrupt somebody who was trying to send a $24-toll message and after this had been repeated three times people became so disgusted that they couldn't see a half-tone cut of Field in the newspaper without throwing off some very sulphurous remarks. But Cyrus was not discouraged. The war broke out just as he was trying to interest capital for a fourth attempt, but as most of the moneyed men of the north had their spare change tied up in government contracts and gun powder which couldn't be exploded with an axe, he was not able to finish his great work until they had cashed in. Cyrus W. Field's life ought to be an inspiration to every man who gives way to despondency the minute his potato patch or best girl goes back on him. He proved that the man who grits his teeth and hangs on will land up among the leaders.

THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD

favorite may kneel upon it. Bagdad, the hundred mosques, the old capital of Solomon the Great, the dreary Tigris and the singhah Euphrates, a muzzin from the turret calls to prayer, and all that; eh?"

George leaned forward from his chair, a gentle terror in his heart. "The Yhordes? By Jovel is that the Yhordes?"

Admiration kindled in Ryanne's eyes. To have hit the bull's-eye with so free and quick an aim was ample proof that Percival Algernon had not boasted when he said that he knew something about rugs.

"You've guessed it." "How did you come by it?" George demanded excitedly.

"Why do you ask that?" "Man, ten-thousand pounds could not purchase that rug, that bit of carpet. Collectors from every port have been after it in vain. And you mean to tell me that it lies there, wrapped in butcher's paper?"

"Right-O!"

Ryanne solemnly detached a cuff and rolled up his sleeve. The bare muscular arm was scarred by two long, ugly knife-wounds, scarcely healed. Next he drew up a trousers-leg, disclosing a battered shin. "And there's another on my shoulder-blade, the closest call I ever had. A man who takes his life in his hands, as I have done, merits some reward. Mr. Jones, I'll be frank with you. I am a kind of derelict. Since I was a boy, I have hated the humdrum of offices, of shops, I wanted to be my own man, to go and come as I pleased. To do this and live meant precarious exploits. This rug represents one of them. I am telling you the family secret; I am showing you the skeleton in the closet, confidentially. I stole that rug; and when I say that the seven labors of our old friend Hercules were simple diversions compared, you'll recognize the difficulties I had to overcome. You know something of the Oriental mind. I handled the job alone. I may not be out of the jungle yet."

George listened entranced. He could readily construct the scenes through which this adventurer had gone; the watchful nights, the untiring patience, the thirst, the hunger, the heat. And yet, he could hardly believe. He was a trifle skeptical. Many a rogue had made the mistake of playing George's ace against his experience. He had made some serious blunders in the early stages of the business, however; and everybody, to gain something in the end, must lose something at the start.

"If that rug is the one I have in mind, you certainly have stolen it. And if it's a copy, I'll tell you quickly enough."

"That's fair. And that's why," Ryanne declared, "I wanted you to look at it. To me, considering what I have gone through to get it, to me it is the genuine carpet. To your expert eye it may be only a fine copy. I know this much, that rare rugs and paintings have many copies, and that some one is being hooked, sold, bamboozled, sandbagged, every day in the week. If this is the real article, I want you to take it off my hands," the adventurer finished pleasantly.

"There will be a hue and cry."

"No doubt of it." "And the devil's own job to get it out of Egypt." These were set phrases of the expert, preliminaries to bargaining. "One might as well carry sound a stolen elephant."

"But a man who is as familiar with the game as you are would have little difficulty. Your integrity is an established fact, on both sides of the water. You could take it to New York as a copy, and no appraiser would know the difference. It's worth the attempt. I'd take it to New York myself, but you see, I am flat broke. Come; what do you care about a son-of-a-gun at a Turk's drolly."

"What do you want for it, supposing it's genuine?" George's throat was dry and his voice harsh. His con-would become like a miser over his gold. You would keep it with your emeralds (I have heard about them, too); draw the curtains, lock the doors, whenever you looked at it. Eh! You would love it for its own sake, and not because it is worth so many thousand pounds. You are sailing in a few days; that will help. The Pasha is in Constantinople, and it will be three or four weeks before he hears of the theft, or the cost," with a certain grimness.

"You haven't killed any one?" whispered George.

"I don't know; perhaps. Christianity against paganism; the Occidental conscience permits it." Ryanne made a gesture to indicate that he would submit to whatever moral arraignment Mr. Jones deemed advisable to make.

But George made none. He rose hastily, sought his knife and, without so much as by your leave, slashed the twine, flung aside the paper, and threw the rug across the counterpane. It was the Yhordes. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind. He had heard it described, he had seen a photograph of it, he knew its history and, most vital of all, he owned a good copy of it.

Against temptation that was robust and energetic and alluring (like the man who insists upon your having a drink when you want it and ought not to have it), what chance had conscience, grown innocuous in the long period of the young man's good behavior? Collectors are always honest before and after that moment arrives when they want something desperately; and George was no more saintly than his kind. And how deep Ryanne and his confederates had delved into human nature, how well they could read and judge it, was made manifest in this moment of George's moral response.

What Makes a Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and dired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart for making such a god medicine." Only

JOHN BARRETT, EXECUTIVE OF PAN-AMERICAN UNION.

THE director general of the Pan-American union, John Barrett, is a man of varied experience in the diplomatic service of the United States. His first appointment was that of minister to Siam. After completing his term of service there he undertook special diplomatic and commercial investigations in that country and in Japan, Korea, Siberia and India. From the far east he turned his attention to Latin-America. He was American representative at the international conference of American republics in Mexico (1901-2); successively minister to Argentina, Panama and Colombia. The Pan-American union, which is practically of his creation, dedicated a million dollar building in Washington two years ago. Mr. Barrett has been at the head of the union—formerly the bureau of American republics—since 1906.

science roused herself, feebly, for it had been a long time since occasion had necessitated her presence.

Ryanne narrowed his eyes, carefully balancing the possibilities. "Say, one thousand pounds. It is like giving it away. But when the devil drives, you know. It is beyond any set price; it is worth what any collector is willing to pay for it. I believe I know the kind of man you are, Mr. Jones, and that is why, when I learned you were in Cairo, I came directly to you. You would never sell this rug. No. You AYDEN, July 19.—Messrs. Alder Blount, S. T. Carson and S. M. Jones of Bethel and Commissioner J. J. May were all here Monday seeing demonstrated a road machine which proved to be the thing to make central high ways and with it is a lobar saver. Will handle more dirt per day than is possible for men to handle with shovels, especially this extreme warm weather.

While Mrs. Wm. Edwards was bathing her little two year old boy and left him a few minutes to get his clothes the little one climbed up, and took his nursing bottle from the table and broke it and pulled an ugly piece of sharp glass through his mouth and split his under lip open. Dr. Dixon took several stitches to sew it up. The flesh was very tender and the threads soon tear out and require resewing.
