SIXTY THREE LIVES LOST IN PENNSYLVANIA FLOOD DISASTER

Southwestern Part of the State Victimized by Cloudburst and Raging Streams--Total of Fatalities Not Completed--Sufferers Mostly Mine Workers

RAILROAD TRACKS TORN UP BY WATERS AND SWEEP AWAY

- The places and the number reported to have been drowned at each are as follows: Uniontown, Pa., 16 drowned. Smock, Pa., located in Redstone Valley, 14 reported drowned. Grindstone, Pa., 12 miners missing and reported drowned. Linn, Pa., two miners reported drowned. Wheeling, W. Va., three drowned. Lemont, Pa., mine, 4 miners reported drowned. Ellenwood, Pa., H. L. King, his wife, and child drowned. New Martinsville, six reported drowned. Monongah, W. Va., one drowned. Fairmont, W. Va., two drowned.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 25.—At day-break shivering women and children gazed over a scene of desolation in the upper Youghiogheny Valley and as the waters receded, upturned dwellings, shattered buildings and crumbled piles of mortar were held in a conglomerate mass by a railroad trestle or bridge, or the progress of the debris had been impeded by some larger and stancher building.

It was long after midnight before the waters began to recede. Rain had ceased to fall some hours earlier, but the heavy precipitation soon made the usually dry beds of mountain streams verticulate cataracts.

Floods in these regions are of an annual occurrence for which preparation is made and comparatively little damage is done; freshets caused by heavy summer rains occur several times a season, but the heavy waterfalls are carried away with but little damage.

The cloudburst of yesterday, however, came before the district had recovered from more than twenty-four hours of torrential rains on Sunday and with every stream bank full, soon all were out of their banks.

Today as the waters clear away the stricken community gazes at the power of the elements. Heavy rocks have been split, heavy railroad iron has been drifted into rivers, while on all sides deep scars mark the surface of the earth where the crowding waters have made new courses for them selves.

Dunbar, near Connellsville, was inundated. The waters raged through the main streets, upsetting massive structures and endangering the lives or hundreds. A cloudburst was the cause, although it is thought a dam broke.

The Turtle Creek Valley was visited by a disastrous flood and the damage is enormous. Crops were blotted from the earth. Railroad traffic through a great territory is demoralized. With four connections into Uniontown, the Pennsylvania was unable to get passengers into the city today.

Several railroad bridges of that system and the Baltimore and Ohio, were torn from foundations thought impregnable and hurled into the maddened waters.

Faith "Gets His" Right in the House

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Representative Norris of Nebraska, progress ive Republican resumed his speech in the House today attacking the nomination of President Taft by the Chicago convention. He renewed his charge of yesterday that delegations from certain Southern states were virtually all office holders sent to the convention to insure the nomination of the president.

Mr. Norris cited a list of new office holders who had been rewarded for voting for Mr. Taft in the convention.

He said: I hope the time will come and God grant that it come soon, that a man who gains or holds office by the bribery of patronage will be held in the estimation of the American people as guilty as he who buys of God with cold cash.

Morgan Back From Europe, Peevish

NEW YORK, July 25.—J. Pierpont Morgan returned to these shores on the White Star liner Olympic after an absence in Europe which has covered almost exactly the time of the sitting of the Stanley committee investigating the United States Steel corporation.

Mr. Morgan's fixed disinclination to talk to any person not included among his confidants and intimates was exemplified as soon as the passengers on the revenue cutter went up the side with J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., who had gone down the bay on the yacht Corsair to meet his father at quarantine.

The younger Morgan joined his father, who was at breakfast with his niece, Miss Annie Tracy, and her friend, Miss Berwind, a sister of E. J. Berwind, an associate of Mr. Morgan in many million dollar size enterprises.

When Mr. Morgan went on deck he was met by a platoon of reporters. He saw the scare in their eyes, born of many previous experiences in the hopeless task of getting a homecoming interview with him. Like the great general that he is, he gave them time to brace up. With a voice like the grumble of an irritated bull, he said:

Go 'way! Get out! Nothing to say! Couldn't say it here if I had! Go 'way! Leave me alone!

The reporters melted away, hopeless—all but one.

A timid looking young man of slender build, whose drooping whiskers hid unsuspected determination, trailed along and addressed the great financier again. He said: Mr. Morgan, will you? No, replied Mr. Morgan before the deferential one got any further. "You know I won't! Why do you bother me this way?" he whiffed about and glared in the soft eye of the youth.

"I think, Mr. Morgan," said the young man without flinching, "my employers would raise my salary if I got an interview with you."

All right! How much will they raise it? I'll pay the difference. Give you a check right now. But tell me how much and then get out. I've got nothing to say."

He walked to the companionway, but the young man with the pencil and the wad of paper in one hand, apparently hypnotized by fear, trailed right along.

"Mr. Morgan," he said "you were pretty close to the Kaiser Wilhelm on the other side, weren't you?"

Scenes In a Fearful Railway Wreck Near Corning, N. Y.

Photos copyright, 1912, by American Association.

WHAT is said to have been the worst wreck in the history of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad occurred recently near Corning, N. Y., when an express train running at a speed of sixty-five miles an hour telescoped three coaches of a limited train. Forty-one persons were killed and as many more seriously injured in the crash, which came early in the morning while a dense fog prevailed. The greatest loss of life was in the rear day coach (wooden) of the limited, in which the locomotive of the express buried itself. The upper photograph shows the wreck of the express locomotive with fragments of the coach, the aisle matting of which is draped like a scarf over the tangled mass of steel and wood. The lower picture is of a steel car which sustained comparatively little damage. On the next day on the Ligonier Valley railroad, in Pennsylvania, another collision occurred in which twenty-one lives were lost.

PULLING WOOL OVER SENATORS EYES AT LEAST, BILL COMES BEFORE THEM

Senate Agrees to Vote Upon Wool Bill Reducing Duties on all Woolens About 59 per cent

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The Democratic wool tariff bill reducing duties on all woolen products about 50 per cent was taken up today by the Senate under an agreement to vote upon it.

When the Senate met Republican leaders were still undecided as to the course they would pursue. Republican members of the Finance Committee had a conference before the session opened to decide whether Senator Smoot's bill should be offered to represent the views of the regular Republican majority. No agreement was reached.

Senator Simmons declared he did not bill said the Democrats would undoubtedly accept a less reduction in the woolen tariff if it were found impossible to pass the Democratic House bill.

Is there any understanding with Senators on this side of the chamber? asked Senator Smith of Michigan, Republican, for the passage of a compromise bill?

There is no understanding, replied Senator Simmons; but if we cannot get our bill and we can get another that offers substantial relief to the people we will undoubtedly take the other bill, no matter whether it comes from the so called stand pat Republicans, or where it comes from.

Senator Smith demanded of Senator Simmons whether the latter favored free wool.

No, I do not, replied Simmons. If the country is again to be led into taking all protection from raw wool, the country ought to know it, shouted Senator Smith.

He asked for some money, Mr. Bliss said he had no money, but would see what he could do. He went to Mr. Harriman and Mr. Harriman together some $250,000 and that money was handed to the state committee and

VIRGINIA COURT RECEIVES THREAT

Trial of Mountainers Checked by Letter

DEATH AND HELL, BEFORE JAIL

Lee County Court Officials Receive Threatening Letter From Friends of Mountaineers Being Tried For Selling Their Votes

JONESVILLE, Va., July 25.—Lee county fears a tragedy comparable with that which occurred in Carroll county when the Allen gang wiped out the District Court.

The killing of Dr. James V. Walden, Democrat, by Perry Wallin, Republican, yesterday afternoon, Dr. Walden having had Wallin indicted, charged with intimidating election officers in Blackwater precinct, has fanned the flames of a fierce political feud brought to white heat recently by the indictment of over 200 men who are to be tried next month for alleged selling of votes.

Mutterings of trouble are being heard all through the mountains in this vicinity.

Judge Skeen has received numerous threatening notices and letters, the following a significant specimen: "There are 38 in our party. Before we will submit to going to jail we will die and go to hell."

Naval Bill May Cause a Caucus

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Representative Sulzer of New York, started the circulation of a petition today calling for another Democratic caucus on the battleship question.

Mr. Sulzer thinks that when absentee Democrats return a caucus will authorize the construction of one battleship for which the senate is standing.

The House today receded from its stipulation that all navy coal shall be mined under eight hour conditions, and agreed to a round the world wireless system with stations in Panama, California, Hawaii, Samoa, Gaum and the Philippines. The House opposed the establishment of a station on the Washington or Alaska coast.

ALLEN TRIAL

One More Defense Witness to be Examined

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 25.—Witnesses in rebuttal were called by the commonwealth in the Claude Allen trial today. Allen's attorneys announced that they had one other witness to examine before closing its case.

Arguments to the jury will begin tonight. Six hours have been allotted to each side.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 26.—Everything is in readiness for the start of the national elimination balloon races here tomorrow. The aviation field is in perfect condition, the gas mains working, the ballast laid and the balloons ready to be inflated. At least fifteen balloons are expected to make the start.

never went into the national committee.

Did Mr. Harriman see anyone else before he contributed? My memory of events is a little hazy, said Senator Paynter.

I assume that he did not, replied Mr. Sheldon.

Wasn't it a subject of correspondence between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Roosevelt?

No sir. Mr. Roosevelt never knew anything about it until long after the election.

What was there out a letter which disappeared from Mr. Harriman's files I know nothing about the letter.

Wasn't the public first apprised of this contribution through a letter the president had written to Mr. Harriman? I cannot tell you, replied Mr. Sheldon.

MURDERERS LEAVE FINGER PRINTS

Investigation Continues Incessantly

ARE OFFERED "HUSH" MONEY

Police Continue to Fail in Identifying Plotters of Rosenthal's Death — Money Seems to be Flowing Freely in Tenderloin.

NEW YORK, July 25.—One line of investigation of the Rosenthal murder it developed today, is through finger prints taken several days ago from the doors of Louis Libby's gray automobile used by the gambler's slayers.

These have been compared with the finger prints of Frank Muller, alias Whitney Lewis, Frank Murate, alias Dago Frank, Louis Marks, alias Gyp the Blood, and Samuel Schepps, all of which are part of the records of the detective bureau.

The result of the comparison has not been made public.

Ten dollar bank notes are declared never to have been so plentiful among certain habitues of the section near Broadway and 42nd street as within the past few days; since investigators public and private, have been trying to round up witnesses of the killing.

The plethora of cash seems to have induced a state of suspended memory on the part of the chauffeurs, newsboys, hangeron of various resorts and others who might be supposed to have knowledge of the incident of crime or events in connection with it that preceded or followed.

The report was current today that persons who are interested in seeing that a minimum of evidence is offered has been around with a dough bag and has provided for all who even assert they knew anything about the tragedy.

Efforts to discover the identity of the men who plotted the death of Rosenthal have been balked for the time by the failure of the police to round up the gang that murdered Rosenthal.

Nine days have now elapsed since the gambler was slain and with the exception of Harry Vallon, who surrendered himself, not one of the passengers in the gray automobile has been brought to headquarters by the police though several of the supposed assassins have been seen in the city during the past week.

Bald Jack Rose, whom District Attorney Whitman and Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty believe to have been the managing mind behind the murder plot, is still of the belief that the police system will protect him and halts at turning informer, though the public prosecutor has let it become known that Rose will be treated with leniency if he discloses the names of the real conspirators.

Father Punished by an Angry Mob

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 25.—A mob of masked men attacked Deputy Sheriff N. L. Parker and J. M. Smith son late yesterday a few miles south of Dolomite, a mining camp near here, overpowered the deputies and beat the deputies' prisoner, Jim Wesson, in to insensibility while they held the deputies at bay with the officer's own weapons.

The nine year old daughter of Wesson, a miner, had literally dragged herself into Dolomite yesterday afternoon, clad only in torn and bloody undergarments and told the crowd who gathered about her that her father had come home enraged and for some trival offense had beaten her.

The members of the mob escaped. Wesson was placed in jail on the charge of assault with a weapon.

urably. "Yes, yes; the emeralds; I had not forgotten them. One hundred lovely green stones, worth not a penny under thirty thousand. A fine collection. But another idea has taken possession of this teeming brain of mine.
Have you noticed how this fellow Jones hovers about Fortune? He's worth a million, if he's worth a cent.
I am sure, in pure gratitude, she would see to it that her loved ones were well taken care of in their old age."

"I am going to marry Fortune myself," said Ryanne blandly.

"You?" The major was nonplussed.
Wallace shuffled his feet uneasily.
This blond companion of his was always showing kinks in his nature, kinks that rarely ever straightened out.

"Yes. And why not? What is she to either you or her mother? Nothing. Affection you have never given her, being unable. It surprises you; but, nevertheless, I love her, and I am going to marry her."

"Really?" said Mrs. Chedsoye.

"Even so."

"You are a fool, Horace!" with rising fury. So then, the child had not jibed her in a moment of pique?

"Men in love generally are fools.

I've never spoken before, because you never absolutely needed me till now.
There's my cards, pat."

Mrs. Chedsoye's fury deepened, but not visibly. "You are welcome to her, if she will have you."

"Yes," supplemented the major; "if she will have you, my friend, take her,
and our benedictions."

Ryanne's shoulders stirred sugges-tively.

"Of course, I expect to have the final word to say on the subject. She is my daughter," said Mrs. Chedsoye.

"A trifling accident, my dear Gioconda," smiled Ryanne! "merely that."

"Just a little oil, just a little oil," the major pleaded anxiously. "Dash it all, this is no time for a row of this silly order. But it's always the way," irritably. "A big enterprise, demanding a single purpose, and a trifle like this to upset it all!"

"I am ready for business at any moment."

"And you, Kate?"

"We'll say no more about it till the affair is over. After that . . ."

"Those who live will see, eh?"

Ryanne rolled a cigarette.

"To business, then. In the first place, Mr. Jones must not reach the Ludwig."

"He will not," Ryanne spoke with quiet assurance.

"He will not even see that boat," added Wallace, glad to hear the sound of his voice again.

"Good. But, mind, no rough work."

"Leave it all to me," said Ryanne.

"The United Romance and Adventure Company will give him an adventure on approval, as it were."

"To you, then. The report from New York reads encouragingly. Our friends there are busy. They are merely waiting for us. From now on Percival Algernon must receive no more mail, telegrams or cables."

"I'll take care of that also," Ryanne looked at Mrs. Chedsoye musingly.

"His real estate agent will wire him, possibly tomorrow."

"In that event, he will receive a cable signifying that the transaction is perfectly correct."

"He may also inquire as to what to do with the valuables in the wall-safe."

"He will be instructed to touch nothing, as the people who will occupy the house are old friends," Ryanne smoked calmly.

"Wallace, you will return to New York at once."

"I thought I was wanted here?"

"No longer."

"All right; I'm off. I'll sail on the Prince Ludwig, stateroom 118. I'll have my joke by the way."

"You will do nothing of the kind.
You will have a stateroom by yourself," said Mrs. Chedsoye crisply.

"And no wine, nor cards. If you fail, I'll break you . . ."

"As we would a churchwarden's pipe, Wallace, my lad," Ryanne gripped his companion by the shoulder, and there was enough pressure in the grip to cause the recipient to wince.

"Well, well; I'll lay a straight course," Wallace slid his shoulder from under Ryanne's hand.

"To you, then, Hoddy, the business of quarantining our friend Percival.
Don't hurt him; simply detain him.
You must realize the importance of this. Have you your plans?"

"I'll perfect them tomorrow. I shall find a way, never fear."

"Does the rug come in anywhere?"

The major was curious. It sometimes seemed to him that Ryanne did not always lay his cards face up upon the table.

"It will play its part. Besides, I am rather inclined to the idea of taking it back. It may be the old wishing-carpet. In that case, it will come in handy. Who knows?"

"How much is it worth?"

"Ah, major; Percival himself could not say exactly. He gave me a thousand pounds for it."

"A thousand pounds!" murmured
Wallace.

The major struck his hands lightly together. Whether in applause or wonder he alone knew.

"And it was worth every shilling of it, too. I'll tell you the story some day. There are a dozen ways of suppressing Percival, but I must have something appealing to my artistic side."

"You have never told us your real name, Horace," Mrs. Chedsoye bent toward him.

He laughed. "I must have something to confess to you in the future,
dear Gioconda."

"Well, the meeting adjourns, sine die."

"What are you going to do with Fortune?" demanded Ryanne.

"Send her back to Mentone."

"What the deuce did you bring her here for, knowing what was in the wind?"

"She expressed a desire to see Cairo again," answered Mrs. Chedsoye.

"We never deny her anything." The major rose and yawned suggestively.

In the corridor, Ryanne whispered softly: "Why not, Gioconda?"

"She shall never marry a man of your stamp," coldly.

"Charming mother! How tenderly you have cherished her!"

"Horace," calmly enough, "is it wise to anger me?"

"It may not be wise, but I have never seen you in a rage. You would be magnificent."

"Cease this foolery," patiently. "I am in no mood for it tonight. As an associate in this equivocal business, you do very well; you are necessary.
But do not presume too much upon that. For all that I may not have been what a mother should be, I still have some self-respect. So long as I have any power over her, Fortune shall never marry a man so far down the social scale as yourself."

"Social scale? Gioconda, how you hurt me!" mockingly. "I should really like to know what your idea of that invincible barrier is. Is it because my face is in the rogues' gallery? Surely, you would not be cruel!"

"She is far above us all, my friend," continuing unflinched. "Sometimes I stand in absolute awe of her."

"A marvel! If my recollection is not at fault, many a man has entered the Villa Fanny, with a view to courtship, men beside whom I am as Roland to, the lowest Saracen. You never objected to them."

"They had money and position."

"Magic talisman! And if I had money and position?"

"My objections would be no less strong."

"Your code puzzles me. You would welcome as a son-in-law a man who stole openly the widow's mite, while I, who harass none, but the predatory rich, must dwell in the outland? Rank injustice!"

"You couldn't take care of her."

"Yes, I could. With but little effort
I could make these two hands as honest as the day is long."

"I have my doubts," smiling a little.

"Suppose, for the sake of an argument, suppose Fortune accepted me?"

Mrs. Chedsoye's good humor returned. She knew her daughter tolerably well; the child had a horror of men. "Poor Horace! Do you build upon that?"

"Less, perhaps, than upon my own bright invention. My suit, then to be brief, is rejected?"

"Emphatically. I have spoken."

"Oh, well; the feminine prerogative shall be mine, the last word. Good night; dormi bene!" He bowed grandly and turned toward his own room.

He possessed that kind of mockery which was the despair of those at whom it was directed. They never knew whether his mood was one of harmless fun or of deadly intent. And rather than mistake the one quality for the other, they generally pretended to ignore. Mrs. Chedsoye, who had a similar talent, was one of the few who felt along the wall as one does in the dark, instinctively. Tonight she recognized that there was no harmless fun but a real desperate-ness behind the mask; and she had held in her temper with a firm hand.
This was not the hour for a clash.
She shivered a little; and for the first time in the six or seven years she had known him, she faced a fear of him.
His great strength, his reckless courage, his subtle way of mastering men by appearing to be mastered by them, held her in the thrall of a peculiar fascination, which, in quiet periods,

NOTES FROM THE LABOR WORLD

Notes From the Labor World San Francisco's labor temple will cost $100,000. It is said that each year 3,000 foreign waiters find employment in England. Coal miners in New Zealand have produced an increase in pay and a six-hour day. British labor statistics show that in fifteen years the cost of living increased 25 per cent. One of the seven of all the children in the United States between ten and fourteen are working for wages. The A. F. of L. building trades is now recruited to its full strength of eligible organizations. The Illinois Supreme Courts has held that labor unions have the right to strike if non-union employes are retained by employers. Instead of wearing Labor Day suits this year, the carpenters of Cleveland voted that each member buy a share of Labor Lyceum stock. E. J. Baris, general secretary of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, has been nominated for Congress from the seventeenth Illinois district on the Socialist ticket. Legislation passed at the recent convention of the International Association of Granite Cutters makes it obligatory for all members to receive 50 cents an hour before June 1, 1917. The average wage received by bricklayers in England is $9.72 per week for fifty-two and one-half hours. The lowest paid railway employe in the United States, the ordinary trackman, receives a greater compensation than many of the railway employes of France, even those of higher grades and with responsible duties. All crafts employed in local theatres are now affiliated with the San Francisco Theatrical Federation, which will conduct its business on the policy that what concerns one of the branches concerns all of them. Yielding to the demands of fifty "hello girls" of Springfield, Mo., the Missouri and Kansas Telephone Company recently granted an increase of pay and a monthly holiday. Better working conditions were also assured to the operators. Representatives of the State and national organizations of the molders' trade have petitioned the New York factory investigating commission to be recommended legislation prohibiting the employment of women in molding shops of that State. The return gathered by the New York State bureau of labor for the first three months of the current year

Wilson Marshall

BARNUM WAS RIGHT

Dispatches to the state department from various places in Spain, particularly from Valencia, indicate a renewal of one of the oldest and best known swindles ever put over on unsuspecting Americans—"The Confidence Game of the Cuban Prisoner".

The truth of the old Barnum adage about the desire of Americans to be humbugged, was perhaps never so well illustrated as in that numerous complaints which American diplomatic officials relative to this swindle. Every year it is estimated that fifty or more persons fall for the snare despite the publicity which has been given the scheme in the past. In fact Consul Robert Frazer, Jr., at Valencia, reports that he has received complaints from at least a dozen fleeced Americans within the past fortnight—and indication that the workers of the Cuban Prisoner Game are still in the ring.

The swindle is usually conducted as follows:

The affair opens with a touching letter to the proposed American dupe from a dying prisoner, ex-secretary of the last Marshall Martinez Campos, cruelly persecuted by powerful political enemies and immured in a military fortress in Spain from which he is able to communicate with the outside world only through the friendly intervention of a kind-hearted military chaplain. The dying man claims relationship, through his deceased wife, with the American to whom the letter is addressed and an added interest is imparted to the situation by the introduction of a young, beautiful only daughter, soon to become an unprotected orphan if the American fails to come to the rescue.

The father's effects have been seized by the Spanish military court to pay the expense of the prosecution. Among them is a cunningly devised valise in which the prisoner has secreted Bank of England notes for 36,000 pounds (or some like sum) accumulated in Cuba and deposited for safety in London on his way home. This sum, the existence of which is for many years unknown to his enemies, intends settling on his daughter and the American relative.

If the dupe replies encouragingly, the father conveniently dies and the bogus chaplain takes up the correspondence, conveying the sad news and enclosing a legalized copy of the deceased last will and testament, drawn up on official paper in the archaic language peculiar to such documents and attested by the notarial signatures and seals, all perfectly counterfeited. The American is hereby appointed sole executor and guardian of the orphan, who encloses her photograph with a few lines of ungrammatical English invoking tender memories of her dead American mother.

The climax is now reached by the chaplain forwarding a forged certificate of the military tribunal specifying the exact sum (always from $800 to $1200) required immediately to liberate the dead man's effects with the hidden vouchers and send the ward to her expectant relatives in America.

While to most experienced people the probability of the foregoing being a swindle would be evident, it must be said, in justice to the perpetrators of the confidence game, that the letters are so convincingly written and the legal documents and seals so impressive and cleverly counterfeited that their deception is perfectly comprehensible. In most cases an American accomplice of the gang looks up family histories and obtains the name of some relative probably of an older generation, which the prisoner in Valencia states was related to his beloved wife, thus adding new interest to the deception.

During the past month what is apparently much the same scheme in two new disguises, has been broken up. The two imitations are very much like the original in principle, though different in detail. The first of these, the weakest, concerns a Russian banker who absconded with 5,000,000 roubles and afterwards shot a compatriot while in hiding in New York. His letter from a Spanish prison, encloses a newspaper clipping in English giving his history and the story of his arrest and his letter tells about the portmanteau with the secret pocket containing the voucher for $480,000 of which he offers a third as a reward to his American rescuer. He also, as in other schemes, instructs his victim not to write, but to cable in case he is interested and is willing to assist the prisoner. From here on the swindle is the same as in the case of the Cuban prisoner.

The third scheme, that of the Jarvis banker, by far the most clever and at the same time the most dangerous. This opens like the incident of the Russian absconder, but more guardedly and without the mention of a murder. The victim is requested to cable. Upon receipt of his reply he is asked to bring $400 in gold with him in order to pay the costs and free the prisoner's effects, being assured that he will have nothing to pay until through the agency of a friendly prison guard, he has actually seen the hidden draft and telegraphed to New York to inquire if it is good and would be paid to the bearer. This, apart from the convincing tone of the whole letter and the perfectly counterfeited documents, seals, newspaper clippings, etc., accompanying it, is a most plausible factor connected with the scheme.

The element of danger lies in the arrangement with the prison guard to meet the American at Zara goza on his way to Valencia. The excuse for this meeting is that he and the guard should bring the banker's daughter (young, beautiful and of a loving disposition from the asylum in that city where the authorities have placed her. The American is to wear a handkerchief around his wrist on descending from the train at Zaragoza and is told to go to a certain hotel there.

Consul Frazer, in speaking of the scheme, says:

"No swindle of this sort has as yet to my knowledge, been carried out. But it seems not unlikely that apart from the pecuniary loss, this dupe would suffer foul play. In the old scheme the rescuer was never asked to come in person but merely to send the money and only about $1000 was asked for.

"In the year 1907 alone, to my knowledge, credulous Americans were swindled out of about $30,000 without counting the large number who must have preferred taking their loss in silence rather than allow their gullibility to become known. The swindlers were so well organized, had so many years of experience in working their game and had it so well arranged through the chain of different people that it was and is a matter of extreme difficulty to bring any of the ringleaders to justice.

Letters to The Editor

Farmville, N. C., July 24.
Mr. Editor:
We hear much about the high cost of living and shall probably hear much more in the next month or two, but I wish to remind the people that it is an ill wind that blows no one any good. The people in this neck of the woods surely are profiting by their high cost of living or they are profiting in spite of it. When doctors can sport fifteen hundred dollar automobiles whereas Dr. O'Hagan had to be content with a hundred dollar horse and fifty dollar buggy; to term a small merchant as Capt. White, would say is able to own a touring car where as Mr. T. R. and J. B. Cherry never had a phaeton; to term Mr. Proctor can afford a cardiac whereas Mr. Jule Perkins nearly lost his whole fortune, surely the people have no cause to complain.

This is by far the most prosperous time this country has ever seen and surely we have no desire to change the present status of things.

No one is out of employment and laborers are getting at least fifty per cent more than they ever obtained. Why even jack leg carpenters are getting from one dollar and a half to two dollars per day and only ordinary carpenters get thirty cents per hour for ten hours per day.

Young men used to be satisfied with a twelve dollar ready made suit of Sunday clothes, now he must have a twenty-five dollar tailor made suit. I hear that one merchant sent off an order in one week for one hundred and fifty suits to cost not less than twenty-five dollars each and in ten days he had another measurer who spent with him two whole days. Our country young ladies were want to have one two dollar and a half hat per year now they buy them at least twice and nothing less than a five dollar hat will do at all. Some even pay as high as twenty-five dollars for a hat. Everybody wears nice clothes and nice hats and fine shoes. Who cares for the high cost of living. It is true, it is right hard on we daddies but then the children feel we daddies, but then the children would feel disgraced with a cheap article of wearing apparel. More merchants have automobiles than used to keep drive horses and the other day a farmer from Greene county passed my house with his mother and sister in his thousand dollar automobile. Shades of old man Eli Williams or Nathan Carr how you do wonder how farmers can spend so much money. Where does so much money come from. Why last year Mr. Thomas Lewis rented out four acres of land and received five hundred dollars for its use. Ten years ago Mr. Thomas Lewis was worth about one thousand dollars, last year his net income from farming was something like five thousand dollars. By the way he must be the crack farmer of the county and I am sorry to say that he does not live in Grimesburg, but way off in Scrabbletown.

More anon,
A. J. MOYE.

Press Comment

The Hon. William Kent, of California, is now featured as one of the high minded and disinterested converts to the Bull Moose ticket. Let us see; just which toe of Mr. Kent did the Taft administration stomp on? Was it a question of fencing in public lands, or what?—New York Tribune, (Rep.)

In his last speech, before he was expelled from the United States Senate, William J. Lorimer, defending himself, said: "I have tried to make a reputation for never having gone back on or turned down a friend." The expression seems familiar. We have heard it somewhere before. Perhaps it was borrowed.—Columbia State.

At the request of a Norfolk reader The Sun gave definitions of "progressive" and "reactionary." Looked at in another way, these terms are descriptive of the two kinds of temperament—the optimistic and the cynical, the imaginative and the unimaginative. It is possible that, speaking of the rank and file, Tories and Radicals are born, not made. Sometimes circumstances will push a man across the line of his temperament, but it is true, as some writer has expressed it, that temperament to the individual is like climate to race; it is fate. Glodstone began a Tory but became a Liberal. Disraeli reserved the process. In both cases temperament worked in a state of poise. A Reactionary is a petrified Conservator.—Baltimore Sun.

Editorial of Human Interest

By Arthur Brisbane

THE SPAN OF LIFE.
Part I.

Life is a short walk along a narrow thread of destiny, beginning and ending in the mysterious unknown.

Hope keeps us balanced as we walk the narrow line. Life is short as we see it, but in reality it is without beginning and never ends—and long or short, it is all that we have.

You, reader, are the figure walking on the slender thread. Everyone of the hundreds of millions of human beings on this planet is represented in this picture.

Each of us walks alone and must balance himself through life. Many millions walk but a few steps and fall back into the infinite whence they came. Other millions walk half or three-quarters of the way—a small percentage nish the full natural span of a normal life.

If you are old enough to have finished half the journey you know that this is a good picture of life as it is. Hesitating, balancing, learning to this side and to that side, you go along the span that leads from birth to death.

This is a picture about which all the writers have written, all the poets sung, all the philosophers have speculated, and all the lawmakers have legislated.

We have all got to take the journey, walk the span, whether we like it or not.

We are not asked when we come here whether we want to come. And it is not left to us to say when we will go. We come without knowing why, we go without knowing why, and we travel our journey balanced on a thread stretched between the finger and the thumb of destiny.

We are not, however, mere machines wound up and set into motion. Something is left to our own decision. We get an inheritance from fathers and mothers through thousands of generations, and it true that we can have only what they give us.

But we have above everything, and in addition to everything, WILL POWER, the power of thought based on observation and guided by conscience.

We can use our inheritance of character uses the block of marble and we can carve that inheritance as we will and at least make of it the best that it can produce.

This you see illustrated in the portraits of humans being taken in childhood and in old age. You may find two pictures of children much alike—the faces filled with goodness, cheerfulness, kindness and hope.

And the same two faces in old age will be as far apart as vice and kindness. One will have grown stronger and better, and the other will show the stamp of the evil thought and the uncontrolled passions and wasted will power.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howara L. Rann.

THE TOASTMASTER

The toastmaster is the owner of a full dress suit who is used at a lodge banquet as a substitute for humor. If he is unable to provide the kind of humor which harmonizes with the scenery at 3 a. m., he is allowed to resign in favor of some brother with a more pungent form of speech.

The toastmaster is generally chosen because he can talk on his feet as fluently as upon any other topic and is bubbling over with bunk which was published in book form several years prior to the battle of Bunker Hill. It is the business of the toastmaster to introduce the next speaker in such a way as to cause him to perspire freely in the region of the neckband. In order to accomplish this feat some rugged native wit is used, embellished by a glowing word picture which shows the speaker in his true light before the community. Some toastmasters are so full of humor that their introductions sound like the reading matter in a sarsaparilla almanac. Others have to borrow their witicism from people who are not in a position to resist, on account of being dead, and are liable to run out of rented repartee without being able to substitute anything but original piffle. The toastmaster is supposed to inform himself thoroughly regarding the family history, mode of life and physical defects of every speaker whom he has to introduce and then paint bright embarrassing rings around him. A toast is a condensed form of impromptu eloquence which sometimes becomes so condensed that it tapers off into space after a frantic effort to locate the right word. Some people are ready speakers and are able to get up and talk everybody in sight of the festive board into a paralytic state, without getting close enough to their subject to start a train of thought, while others rely upon profuse notes and have to sit down abruptly in the middle of the perforation. It is a painful sight to see the confidence ooze out of a florid citizen as he struggles with his mother tongue and finally wanders off into a pink vacuum, but this is the common fate of man.

This is My Birthday

James K. Vardaman, who has been selected to succeed United States senator Le Roy Percy, of Mississippi when the latter's term expires next March, was born in Jackson county, Texas, July 26, 1861. At an early age he removed with his parents to Mississippi and his education was received in the public schools of that state. He was admitted to the bar in 1882 and began the practice of law in the town of Winona, where he subsequently engaged in the publication of a newspaper. Later he established newspapers in Greenwood and Jackson. From 1890 to 1896 Mr. Vardaman was a member of the lower branch of the Mississippi legislature and during a part of that time he served as speaker. In 1904 he was elected governor after having twice been an unsuccessful candidate for the nomination. After having been an unsuccessful candidate for the United States senate in 1907 he was elected last year for the term beginning next March.

National Convention of Gideons

ATLANTA, Ga., July 26.—If you belong to Gideon's band, your proper place is in Atlanta today. Nearly 1,000, only a fraction of the total number of Gideons are here. The major portion are busy selling goods over the north east, south and west, and wishing they were in Atlanta.

The Gideons are members of the Christian Travelling Men's Association of America, and this is their annual international convention. The opening session, which was held this morning in the assembly room of the Piedmont hotel, was devoted to reports from National Secretary Nicholson of Jacksonville, Fla., and other officers and state superintendents of the association. These reports showed gratifying progress during the past year, especially in the great mission undertaken by the Gideons of placing a Bible in every guest room of every hotel throughout the United States and Canada. At the present time, according to the reports, the work is being outlined at the rate of about 5,000 Bibles a month.

Every girl has the right to be happy, she declared.

Wilson for President

Woodrow Wilson Ways.

The report comes that Governor Wilson will not neglect his duties to New Jersey during the presidential campaign. This is just as his friends believed. Mr. Wilson will follow the system of President Cleveland and make a few speeches in new places, but his attention will be given to the people who have chosen him as their Chief Executive.

Governor Wilson is growing stronger as the days pass, and while his campaign will be quiet it will be none the less forceful or lacking in progressiveness. The few speeches he will make will be telling speeches and the people who have the privilege of hearing him will be attached to him.

Several days ago Mr. Wilson delivered an address at Atlantic City and The Baltimore Sun says the address ought to be helpful in bringing municipal standards and practices there to a higher level as the prosecutions in the courts. In reference to the address The Sun said: "Atlantic City became corrupt because it tolerated moral corruption in others. What it needs most, says the Governor, is moral pride. A man is ashamed to be caught in a dirty stick, and a community ought to be ashamed to be caught in a dirty practice."

"This is strong straight, to the heart of things. It is Woodrow Wilson's way. It is the way of all great men. It is the genius of common sense which strikes a 'keynote' that finds a response in every human breast.

"Many the time soon come when the aggregate conscience of communities will be as greatly ashamed of dirty community 'tricks' as the professedly reputable individual is who is caught in one."—Charlotte Chronicle.

she looked upon as something deeper. Marriage was not to her an ideal state, nor was there any man, living or dead, who had appealed to the physical side of her. But he was in the one sex what she was in the other; and while she herself would never have married him, she raged inwardly at the possibility of his wanting another woman.

To her the social fabric which holds humanity together was merely a convenience; the moral significance touched neither her heart nor her mind. In her the primordial craving for ease, for material comforts, pretty trinkets and gowns was strongest developed. It was as if this sense had been handed down to her, untouched by contact with progression, from the remote ages, that time between the fall of Roman civilization and where modern civilization began. In short a beautiful barbarian, whose intellect alone had advanced.

Fortune was asleep. The mother went over to the bed and gently shook the slim, round arm which lay upon the coverlet. The child's nature lay revealed as she opened her eyes and smiled. It did not matter that the smile instantly changed to a frowning inquiry. The mother spoke truly when she said that there were times when she stood in awe of this, her flesh and blood.

"My child, I wish to ask you a question, and for your own good answer truthfully. Do you love Horace?"

Fortune sat up and rubbed her eyes. "No." Had her wits been less scattered she might have paltered.

The syllable had a finality to it that reassured the mother more than a thousand protestations would have done.

"Good night," she said. Fortune lay down again and drew the coverlet up to her chin. With her eyes shut she waited, but in vain. Her mother disrobed and sought her own bed.

Ryanne was intensely dissatisfied with himself. For once his desperate mood had carried him too far. He had made too many confessions, had antagonized a woman who was every bit as clever and ingenious as himself.

The enterprise toward which they were moving held him simply because it was an exploit that enticed wholly his twisted outlook upon life. There was a forbidding humor in the whole affair, too, which he alone saw. The possible rewards were to him of secondary consideration. It was the fun of the thing. It was the fun of the thing that had put him squarely upon the wide, short road to perdition, which had made him first a spendthrift, then a thief. The fun of the thing; sinister phrase! A thousand times had he longed to go back, for he wasn't all bad; but door after door had shut behind him; and now the single purpose was to get to the end of the road by the shortest route.

He did not deceive himself. His desperate mood was the result of an infernal rage against himself, a rage against the weakness of his heart. Fortune Chedsoye. Why had she not crossed his path at that time when he might have been saved? And yet, would she have saved him? God alone knew.

He heard Jones stirring in his room next door. Presently all became still. To sleep like that! He shrugged, threw off his coat, swept the cover from the stand, found a pack of cards, and played solitaire till the first pallor of dawn announced the new day.

Reclining snugly against the parapet, wrapped in his tattered arbyeth, or cloak, his head pillowed upon his lean arm, motionless with that pretended sleep of the watcher, Mahomed-El-Gebel kept his vigil. Miles upon miles he had come, across three bleak, cold, blinding deserts, on camels, in trains, on camels again, night and day, day and night, across the soundless, yellow plains. Allah was good to the true believer. The night was chill, but certain fires warmed his blood. All day long he had followed the accursed, lying glaur, but never once had he wandered into the native quarters of the city. Patience! What was a dev.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Purloined Cable.

George, having made his bargain with conscience relative to the Yhordes rug, slept the sleep of the untroubled, of the just, of the man who had nothing in particular to get up for. In fact, after having drunk his breakfast cocoa and eaten his buttered toast, he evinced his satisfaction by turning his face away from the attracting morning light and passing off into sleep again. And thereby hangs this tale.

So much depended upon his getting his mail as it came in that morning, that Fate herself must have resisted sturdily the desire to shake him by the shoulder. Perhaps she would have done so but for the serenity of his pose and the infantile smile that lingered for a while round his lips. Fate, as with most of us, has her sentimental lapses.

The man next door, having no conscience to speak of (indeed, he had defrauded her while passing his twentieth meridian!) was up betimes. He had turned in at four; at six he was strolling about the deserted lounging-room, watching the entrances. It is inconceivable how easily mail may be purloined in a large hotel. There are as many ways as points to the wind.

NITA'S NEW YORK FASHIONS

Dainty Accessories of Dress—Relieve the New Worn Appearance—Bags Give Finishing Touches.

Midsummer means gowns somewhat worn, or at least no longer possessing the first crisp freshness of the early season.

Then it is that the resourceful woman makes up for the wear of time by special attention to dress accessories.

As very few women or girls wear hats, unless they are really necessary, the dressing of the hair must be thought out to a nicety. This does not mean alone the arrangement of tresses, but is more largely concerned with the many dainty head dresses affected by the summer girl.

A good style, not too youthful, is especially adapted to the coiffure now so prevalent.

It is a semi wide band of satin in any becoming color, ending in a moderately wide bow above a single curl that falls on the nape of the neck. In the center of the bow a rose can be arranged effectively.

A simple and becoming band novelty, is a twist of gauze, held at the back by a rinestone barrette. If gauze seems too perishable, the silver gauze ribbon which metallic substance can be used.

Many summer frocks are brightened up by a plaited white tulle ruffle. This does not interfere with the prevailing fondness for the low cut neck, as the frill lies flat. An eighteen inch length of tulle cut half, seamed and folded will make the width, which when laid in close plaits is neatly tacked. A satin ribbon band is fitted close to the base of the neck with a lengthwise bow of the ribbon on the left side, giving a jaunty finish. Instead of the fan chain which can even be purchased at the five and ten cent stores, a resourceful young woman designed a long chain effect of narrow black velvet ribbon, from which the fan was suspended. At the left side, forming a corsage trimming, was a cluster of loops held by a pink ribbon rose with green leaves. Worn on a filmy white gown which had been tubed several times, the smart little touch made one lose sight of the fact that the frock was not worn on that occasion only.

Of course bags in all sorts help out in giving finishing touches to toilettes, whether they are at the tailor made variety or of a dressier style.

One of the smartest seen this summer was of white chiffon lined with white satin. It has a chiffon flap on each side outlined with tiny pink roses and green leaves. Two tabs of satin faced velvet ribbon fell from under the flaps on each side of the bag. A silver cord was used to sling over the shoulder or with which to carry the bag in the pocketless one's hand.

Such a bag can be made from odd pieces of silk to match any gown. While not strictly unitarian, a handkerchief and a pair of gloves with which a small vanity box can be easily in this was while the bag certainly adds distinction to the costume.

You will note the prevalence of the ribbon rose in all these midsummer "dainties", and any needlewoman of the slightest pretension to skill can devise these pretty acculates in that box of myself.

"Millinery Odds and Edns." Nitt.

Fads Of Fashions.

Pleatings of tulle, lace or net are used in every possible manner.

Paradise and fancy feathers, pheasants' tails, ostrich brand and French plumes are all seen on the new hats. "Nineteen" is a new material bound to be popular. It resembles voile and rignon, and is very soft and noncrushable.

Artie Hofman, Former Cub, With the Pirates.

Artie Hofman, once the idol of Chicago Cub fans and considered by many as the best all-round player in the major leagues, is expected to strengthen the Pittsburg Pirates materially by the enthusiastic fans of that city. Manager Fred Clark, also is optimistic, and expects his team to climb rapidly toward the head.

Hofman was the property of the Pittsburg club once before. Fred Clarke tells how in 1904 he couldn't use Hofman, and placed him with the Des Moines club. The understanding was that Hofman was to come back to Pittsburg, but the Des Moines club sold him during the season and the owners didn't abide by the verbal agreement. While with the Chicago Cubs Hofman filled almost every position on the diamond, being available anywhere.
