Home rule might work out better in Ireland if they'd give it a tryout.

The tick bill has made its bow before the House, which is equivalent to the tick's eventual exit.

The Bethlehem Steel company raised a slight bow over an audit by Admiral Benson, but as it manufactures rough stuff it ought to be able to stand the strain.

The chairman of the trade commission asserts that court stopped the investigation into costs of production. That being the case, it looks as if the courts might stand a little investigating too.

Republicans in the senate are trying to block Democrats from getting their share of the pie in post office appointments recently turned over for consideration by President Wilson. However, they need not worry for a man generally fills such office in the way people want him to anyway. So why worry over the matter?

The senate committee fails to please in all things, but if it continues investigating the coal situation in this country people will think lots more of it. The situation has been serious for such a long time that people have almost forgotten how really bad it was, but since the senate has revived it everyone hopes something may be accomplished.

The tick eradication bill before the State senate may be treated decidedly rough before getting by, but when it does people will be glad for it. Doing away with cattle pests is one of the most progressive steps in a number of years for it means healthy stock, which in turn, provides better dairying and cattle raising. There have been better bills up for consideration, but this time handling ticks is not such a bad proposition after all.

Tobacco averages are reported slightly higher on some markets, but they can't be expected to remain so. Such reports are sent out from many parts of the state and farmers begin rushing their product of the market only to find that improved prices are more talk than truth. It is true better grade of tobacco command fairly good prices all floors, but there is practically no demand for common qualities and the farmers need not expect to see any market change until foreign demand becomes better. This is as true in one section as another, and reported high prices are merely the outcome of exaggerated reports.

Guy Kyle, former rector of the Free Will Methodist church, of Mount Vernon, Illinois, was recently arrested in connection with robbery of mail pouches containing about $185,000. The incident is one of the most surprising that has occurred in this country in a number of years and shows to what extent people may be led in believing that times are going to be hard. It is inconceivable why a minister should stoop to such an act, but it shows conclusively that even the best of us go wrong some time. The act, however, is not directed of its seriousness by compromise and the minister must pay the penalty even as the worst of criminals. His profession is not dragged to the depths with him and fortunately the country can continue along its usual course without being any worse off by the occurrence.

REDUCED ACREAGE NECESSARY

The meeting of cotton and tobacco planters in Greenville Saturday evinced the fact that there is much concern regarding the course to be pursued during the coming planting season. Realizing this fact promoters of reduction in acreage are giving out all information available and in other ways leading the tobacco grower from one of the most gloomy periods in the history of the industry back to normal conditions.

The situation truly has been deplorable when considering the great expense which farmers went to in producing this year's crop, and while thousands have lost considerably, many from low prices, the situation is not so bad as it might have been if the country really were not in a prosperous, thriving shape. It is the purpose of promoters to make this week a decisive one in the interest of reduced acreage. Canvassing committees will visit the home of every grower and impress him with the necessity of curtailing acreage until demand becomes better. They will take names of those falling to sign, and in that way be able to place a finger on them the minute this becomes necessary.

It is realized by everyone that prices will never undergo a decided change for the better until the world market is relieved of its present congested state, and to do this it becomes the duty of every farmer to do his part by cutting crops. It is useless to argue against actualities. There is no demand from foreign countries. They are overloaded with bright and burley tobaccos and selling what they have at less than America can sell it to them. Competition is a thing of the past, and only by carefully following the trail blazed by leading tobaccoists will America be able to recover from its present situation.

Cutting down tobacco acreage to one-half is going to improve things considerably. Surplus acreage created by curtailments will open up room for planting food crops demanded in every town and city of the nation. The farmer will profit because he will be raising something daily demanded and which heretofore has been purchased even by his own family from other sections of the country. This should put money in his pocket, fill his smokehouse and give him more time for producing better grades of tobacco such as the market invariably demands. There is no argument against the proposition presented by leading tobacco organizations, and the sooner the planter realizes the fact and throws his heart into proposed work, the sooner he will recover from what now seems to be the most gloomy period of his existence.

HELPING CIVILIZATION

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of New York, has donated $100,000 to relief of the starving children in Europe. The act is one of the most generous and magnanimous in the interest of foreign people ever occurring in this country, and shows to what extent a man may go in expressing a desire to do his part by civilization. There are others who could give the same amount without suffering in the slightest sense of the word, and if they would do so America would soon pay its debt to suffering humanity.

Mr. Rockefeller has established a record for his country, and although it is hardly probable anyone will attempt to go beyond the amount, it is the plain duty of everyone to give what they can and help even in a small way to relieve the most pitiful situation in history. Reports from national subscription committees show that subscriptions are far behind and it is necessary that something be done immediately to stimulate more active interest in the work. Approximately $33,000,000 are needed to carry the starving children over to another harvest season when they will be able to care for themselves. There is some over 3,500,000 children actually starving to death and facing imminent danger of dying from privation in Europe. America is about the only country capable of providing funds for their relief, so it is incumbent upon every American citizen to give until it hurts, or at least until they feel it.

North Carolina is far behind in its subscriptions, but it is believed before the month is over that the situation will be improved considerably with the goal near at hand. The State has never been in a campaign of more direct concern to civilization, and if it succeeds in raising the desired apportionments the glory will be sufficient to satisfy everyone. Conditions in the United States may be decidedly serious, as some claim, but they cannot be compared with those holding away in Europe. America is one of the most resourceful nations in the world. It has an abundance of food, clothing and shelter, and can do by the millions without even realizing what has been done. Time for action is at hand, and it is to be hoped that every person will give, and give freely, until the deplorable state of affairs has been relieved and Europe on the way to prosperity.

Charles M. Schwab made an emphatic denial of charges that he appropriated $200,000 for personal expenses while at the head of the Emergency Fleet corporation. The fact is only natural. Who in the world wouldn't when faced by accusations that would make the strongest or most efficient executive tremble to be in his position. The incident is similar to others which have arisen from war activities, and if Mr. Schwab proves himself not guilty, as it is quite probable he will, it is hoped the government will cut out investigations and direct its efforts to safeguarding public rights. There are other matters requiring greater attention than that now in the limelight. They simply need investigations to bring them before the public.

Governor Harding of the Federal Reserve Board spoke optimistically of future trade relations in an address at Winston-Salem. He has done the same thing many times since the country was gripped by financial depression and inspired people to believe that the future is much brighter than some would have them believe. Mr. Harding is well acquainted with the financial condition of the nation, and whatever he says carries with it a certain amount of authority gained from experience with one of the greatest organizations of its kind in the country. He has preached better times persistently, and if people will listen to his advice the entire country should be better off in every way.

North Carolina is to get a good slice out of the annual rivers and harbors bill recently presented to the House for consideration. The measure provides $185,000 for the entire State to be used in generally improving navigable streams. Four dredges were also recommended for use in various parts of the State, which will mean much in development in the future. The appropriation will mean much and assist in many ways in improving commerce.

The senate trade commission may be criticised for trying to prevent sharks from sapping life out of trade, but as long as it continues to work in interest of the public criticism will come solely from those who have been altogether too active at the game. The commission aims to establish better economic conditions, and evidently is going to regardless of what people higher up have to say.

MR. AND MRS. HERMAN ALLEN ENTERTAIN

Friday night at their home near Greenville Mr. and Mrs. Herman Allen delightfully entertained a number of their friends.

The guests arrived at eight o'clock and were met at the front door and shown to the cloak room by Mrs. Allen and from there they gathered in the living room. There several "old-time games" such as Tracing the Key, Walking the Streets of Paradise, Number, Public Courtship, Guinea Chicken, and others, were enjoyed.

They were then invited into the dining room where they were served ambrosia and cake by Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Tyson.

Those enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Allen were Misses Clara Waters, Nella Mabe, Ruth and Fannie Het Brown, Pattle Jenkins, Mary Ruth Allbrook, Nina Ruth Spivey, Bessie Lee Stokes, Allie Baruhll, Ethel Timberlake, Gladys Hicks, Charlotte and Dorothy Ray Tyson, Messrs. WATTS-BROWN

Miss Lallah McCoy Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Brown, of this city, was quietly married to Mr. Lawrence Watts, of Lynchburg, Va., yesterday afternoon. The wedding came as quite a surprise as Miss Brown was in school at Randolph-Macon college prior to the marriage. She is a popular member of Greenville's younger set.

MRS. STEIDLEY CONDUCTS SCHOOL PRAYER SERVICE

On Friday evening Mrs. Steidley conducted the Friday night prayer meeting. Her subject, "If ye love Me, keep My commandments," was beautifully illustrated by the story of a shepherd's exile and a brief history of the life of Christ.

She brought out the idea that if we really love Him we will serve Him by being kind to our fellowmen.

She also stressed the fact that we must guard our tongues and not let our pride keep us from apologizing when we owe one to a friend.

TOBACCO STORAGE HOUSE DESTROYED SUNDAY MORNING

A tobacco storage warehouse near the ice factory belonging to R. E. Curran, was completely destroyed by fire at four o'clock Sunday morning entailing a loss estimated in the neighborhood of $50,000, which was partially covered by insurance.

The local fire company responded promptly to the alarm turned in from box 71, but the roof of the building was falling in when the hose truck arrived and efforts to save the large stock of tobacco proved futile. Several pistols were fired when the fire was first discovered in advance of the regular alarm, and as a result hundreds of automobiles were at the scene of the conflagration regardless of the early hour.

Origin of the fire so far has not been determined, but it seems generally believed it started from a carelessly lighted match or cigarette.

LETTER BOX PROPOSED FOR POST OFFICE CORNER

Postmaster D. J. Whichard states that since the order has been in effect closing the post office building at night when no employee is on duty—between 11 p. m. and 6 a. m.—request has been made for authority to place a drop letter box on the post office corner in which business people near the office may put letters when they desire to mail them late at night.

There are already six street letter boxes in the business district of the town from which mail is collected a little before 6 o'clock a. m. for dispatch by the two early morning trains. These boxes are located as follows: on Dickinson avenue at corner of Center Brick Warehouse; corner of Dickinson avenue and Green street; corner of Greene and Fifth streets; in lobby, near elevator, of National Bank Building; Moseley corner on Five Points, and corner Cotanch and Fifth streets. With an additional box near the post office practically all business houses of the town will be within two blocks of a drop box. Letters intended for dispatch by the night trains, however, should be mailed in the post office lobby not later than 10:30 o'clock, and not in street boxes, as no collections from boxes are made at night. The night mails leave the office at 11 o'clock and then the building is closed until 6 o'clock the next morning.

There are several reasons for this coffee habit. One is that the Viennese goes there to rest, and most of them appear to have been born tired. He also grudges himself the price of a newspaper but in the coffee house he obtains free the privilege of reading nearly every Austrian newspaper and many from foreign countries, besides the illustrated weeklies and monthlies.
