PASSED AWAY 11:15 THIS MORNING

Former President Succumbs After Four Years Suffering

Former President Woodrow Wilson died this morning at 11:15 o'clock

Fatigued and worn by a battle with death which began before he left the White House in 1921, the "Wartime President" of two terms—the eight most momentous years that the world has ever known—closed his eyes and slipped peacefully away.

The end came when vitality could no longer retard the steady dissolution which set in with the stroke of paralysis that had laid Mr. Wilson low as he returned from his western speaking tour in 1919 at which time he declared that he would gladly give his life if that would make the League of Nations a success.

Mrs. Wilson, his constant companion during his protracted illness, was at his side when the end came.

Woodrow Wilson lived his last years and died in "the glory of the promise of the future" confident that right as he saw it would ultimately prevail. He never lost faith in the League of Nations, but he lost faith in some of the human beings who were its inevitable elements.

He closed his eyes confident that as a man of letters and a president he had done his best for humanity but that his best was not all that he might have wished.

Time alone can write his epitaph.

One of the "war presidents" of the United States, burdened by problems and tasks as great if not greater than those borne by Washington and Lincoln, the words and works of Woodrow Wilson are still too vivid in the public mind to assure them of a complete appraisal. A decade or two, hence, perhaps, the world will fix upon this great American its estimate of his eight years' service as the chief magistrate of the republic that furnished $18,000,000,000, nearly five millions of men and almost inexhaustible war material to end the deadlock between the Allies and the Central Powers and bring Germany to defeat in the historic struggle of 1914-1918.

U. S. Participates in World Affairs.
It was under Woodrow Wilson's administration that the United States abandoned its policy of isolation and became an active participant in world affairs. The republic underwent a national metamorphosis. Mr. Wilson, nicknamed "the schoolmaster in politics," formerly head of Princeton University, was the first Democrat since Andrew Jackson to serve two terms as president.

He began smashing precedents almost immediately after his induction into office by delivering his addresses in person before congress and finished by going to Europe to attend the Peace Conference. He went abroad twice, first in December, 1918, and again in March, 1919. At times he was the most idolized and the most bitterly assailed president since Abraham Lincoln. Friends extolled him as "the peace-maker of the world," enemies declared he had thrown to the winds Washington's warnings to beware of "entangling alliances" with foreign powers.

Tours United States.
The war over and the Treaty of Versailles, which he personally had helped to draft in Paris, signed by "the Big Four"—Clemenceau, Lloyd George, Orlando and Wilson—the President returned from France to begin a few months later on September 3, 1919, a 10,000-mile speaking tour of the United States in behalf of the League of Nations covenant, which was part of the treaty. The Senate threatened and did block its ratification. During 26 days of almost constant travel he delivered speeches aggregating 150,000 words.

Working his way east from the Pacific coast, he had planned to make many more addresses in behalf of the League but reaching Wichita, Kans., suffered a physical collapse which caused him regretfully to abandon his tour.

At times during the following 18 months, he was desperately ill and recovered only sufficiently as late as March 4, 1921 to accompany Warren G. Harding, his successor, to the capital for participation in part of the inauguration ceremony. Previous to this he had made only one public appearance in all that time, on June 16, 1920, and there were many alarming rumors regarding the state of his health.

Entrance Public Life.

Three interesting periods characterized Woodrow Wilson's entrance into public life. Elected president of Princeton University in 1902, the country at that time obtained its first glimpse of him as a national figure. This was accentuated by what has been called his fight for the "democratization" of the University in which student cliques were abolished and the sons of rich and poor men were encouraged to fraternize. Eight years later, in 1910, he was elected Governor of New Jersey.

Governor Wilson's administration was notable chiefly for his advocacy of progressive legislation. Political opponents charged him with radicalism. "The Seven Sisters" laws, a series of seven bills drafted at his recommendation, were passed after a legislative contest. They forbade the incorporation of predatory trusts within the commonwealth, New Jersey previously having been used as a rendezvous for monopolists.

The nomination of Governor Wilson to the Presidency by the National Democratic Convention in June 1912 at Baltimore, after a long deadlock, was one of the most dramatic episodes in American political history. Then followed his election the following November when he received 435 votes in the Electoral College to 88 for Colonel Roosevelt and 8 for Mr. Taft who had been renominated by the republican party to succeed himself.

Mexican Trouble.

Hardly had Mr. Wilson gotten him self turned around when he had his first foreign situation to deal with. It was with Mexico and was a legacy from the preceding republican administration. The republican chieftains said they left it for Mr. Wilson because they didn't want to embarrass him in dealing with it. The democrats declared the republicans had "passed the buck." It came to a crisis when Huerta, the dictator, seized the reins of government, and President Madero and Vice-President Suarez were murdered. Mr. Wilson had very fixed ideas of his own on succession to the presidency by assassination. He thought it pretty general in Central America and he told confidantes it was going to stop. He withheld recognition from Huerta and the situation boiled until Huerta troops attacked some American blue jackets at Tampico and Mr. Wilson ordered the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American army. The official reason given for the occupation was that the German ship Ypiranga was about to land arms and ammunition for Huerta and the occupation was to prevent it. The United States demanded a salute to the flag, which, critics of the Wilson administration took delight in pointing out, never was given.

Events in Mexico solved their own problem in a few months when Carranza, another newly risen leader, ejected Huerta who fled. American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz. Later President Wilson extended formal recognition to the Carranza government but in 1920 Carranza in turn flayed in his face an armed revolution and the Mexican problem came back to a Republican administration for settlement.

During President Wilson's two terms there occurred a world upheaval such as had never before been witnessed since the dawn of time. Empires crumbled and thrones collapsed. The map of Europe was torn to shreds. China, that aeon-old monarchy, had already become a republic and with the ending of the world war Russian autocracy had been humbled in the dust. German militarism was crushed, Austria-Hungary dismembered and Turkey driven out of the Holy Land.

Goes to Europe.

Two days after announcing in Congress his decision to go to Europe to attend the peace conference on December 4, 1918, he sailed for France with Mrs. Wilson aboard the steamship George Washington leaving New York amid one of the greatest demonstrations ever accorded an American citizen. He arrived at Brest on December 13 and upon reaching Paris took up his residence in the mansion of the Prince Murat as a guest of the nation. Following the big public reception upon his arrival in the French capital which lasted four days, the President conferred with Premier Clemenceau, Colonel House and Herbert Hoover, who was later designated as director general of allied relief in Europe and who expended $2,800,000,000 in all in his mission of mercy abroad. The people of Paris presented Mr. Wilson with the city's "great gold medal" and gave Mrs. Wilson a diamond and enamel brooch. Later the President and his wife visited the Kings and Queens of England, Italy and Belgium.

Friend of Humanity.

Upon his first trip to Paris, Mr. Wilson was everywhere acclaimed as "the friend of humanity" and the man who had come to put "an end to all wars." No monarch of ancient times was ever accorded greater laudation or listened to with greater admiration. It seemed as if all Europe hung upon the words that fell from his lips. He was acclaimed as a practical idealist, the representative of a mighty new land, whose people were altruistic and unselfish and who desired to see the devastated world restored to amity and happiness.

Before his departure, in an address to Congress, he repeated his famous "14 points" which, he said, constituted America's interest in the forthcoming Council at Versailles. Presentation of these "points," one of which provided for the League of Nations covenant, precipitated the bitter controversy in Congress which lasted for many months. It engendered such opposition to the President's plans that upon his return to Europe on the second stage of his mission he was less cordially received. Especially was this the case in certain parts of Italy where, because of his attitude on Fiume, his name was hissed. French newspapers also execrated him and he was denounced by a London newspaper as an "autocrat."

At home he was criticized for assenting to the Shantung decision and for alleged failure to maintain "open covenants of peace" instead of secret diplomacy. Senator Poindestex, Republican, in a speech accused him of being "the worst menace" in America because of his friendship for organized labor and his leniency toward radical doctrinaires. Other critics accused him of gross extravagance abroad and said he had accepted almost priceless gifts.

President Wilson's participation in the Peace Conference was placid, it is said, except for occasional ripples that disturbed his usual calm. Tension at times was reported between him and Clemenceau and Lloyd George, Premier Hughes of Australia and Premier Orlando of Italy, the latter, at one stage of the negotiations quitting the conference and returning to Rome with his colleagues because of Mr. Wilson's attitude on the Adriatic question.

In answer to Italy's claim for Fiume he was quoted as having ironically told Orlando. "I am sorry we cannot give you New York." The President's stand on "self-determination for small nations" encouraged national aspirations in Ireland, Korea, Egypt and other countries allegiant to certain of the Allied powers. The Russian catastrophe and affairs on the Mexican border also added to the President's grave problems.

The treaty with Germany was signed on June 28, 1919, by the President and other representatives of "the Big Four" and shortly after Mr. Wilson sailed for New York. Before his departure from Brest he expressed his satisfaction with the settlements arrived at in Paris. Then followed his nationwide tour and its abrupt termination.

Born in Staunton, Va.

Born in Staunton, Va., Dec. 28, 1856, of Scotch-Irish parentage and christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson, the future President was known as "Tommy" until he graduated from Princeton in 1879 and was thereafter known only as Woodrow Wilson. His father, the Rev. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, a prominent Presbyterian minister, moved to Augusta, Ga., when Woodrow was two years old. Later the family went to Columbia, S. C., and there young Wilson, at the age of 17 entered Davidson College, leaving soon to go to Princeton. Upon graduating he studied law in the University of Virginia and in 1882 began the practice of law in Atlanta, Ga.

While in Atlanta and at Augusta, he became engaged to marry Miss Ellen Louise Axsen, daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman of Savannah, Ga. The young lawyer's clients were few and he soon abandoned a legal career. For two years thereafter he was a student at Johns Hopkins University and while there published his first book, "Congressional Government," a study of American politics. It won recognition both in the United States and abroad and is believed to have been influential in evoking offers of professorships from Bryn Mawr College and Wesleyan University. He married Miss Axsen on June 27, 1885.

Teaching Career.

He became successively, professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr and at Wesleyan University and later professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton where, subsequently, he was made head of that institution. Meanwhile, Professor Wilson had gained high reputation as a writer. Some of his works, with the date of their production, were as follows: "The State Elements of Historical and Practical Politics," (1889); "Division and Reunion," (1893); "George Washington," (1896); "A History of the American People," (1902); "Constitutional Government in the United States," (1908); "Free Life," (1913); "When a Man Comes to Himself," (1915); "On Being Human," (1916); "An Old Master and Other Political Essays," and "Mere Literature and Other Essays," were among his earlier writings. His state papers, notes to belligerent governments and addresses to Congress, would fill many volumes.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was bestowed upon him by Wake Forest College (1887); Tulane University (1893); Johns Hopkins (1902); Brown University (1903); Harvard University (1907); Williams College (1908); and Dartmouth College (1909). Yale made him a Doctor of Literature in 1901.

Wanted Peace—Not War

When the European conflict burst upon the world in all its fury, President Wilson in an address to his fellow countrymen counseled them to be strictly neutral. Exerting every effort to avert the dawning of the United States into the maelstrom, for nearly three years he drew upon himself the bitterest criticism of some of his staunchest friends. About this time, speaking of the example of America in regard to peace, he said: "There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

Popular resentment against peace at any price was rising in America. Fighting Europe ridiculed Mr. Wilson's policy but later accepted the explanation of his friends that he was maneuvering for delay, that the United States was not prepared to take a big part in the struggle, that the nation was not united for war by reasons of its diverse population and divided sentiment.

Mrs. Wilson Dies

A tragic moment in the President's life came, when, sitting at the bed side of his dying wife, he penned a message to the European powers suggesting a peaceful settlement. Mrs. Wilson died on Aug. 6, 1914, and the President took her body to her girlhood home in Rome, Ga., for burial. The family circle had been broken only a short time previously by the marriage of two of the President's daughters, Jessie and Eleanor, to Francis Bowes Sayre and the other to William G. McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury. Mrs. Wilson's death left the President alone except for his eldest daughter, Margaret, who was absent much of the time in her war work.

Lusitania Torpedoed

On May 7, 1915, the great steamship Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk off the coast of Ireland with the loss of 1,500 lives, more than 114 of them American and many women and children. There was a wide spread clamor in the United States for war.

Ship after ship had been sent to the bottom without warning and this climax came with the sinking on March 24, 1916 of the English Channel steamer Sussex. The President in a final note, served notice on the German Emperor that he might expect war with the United States if the "inhuman and illegal" practice continued. His warning to Germany that she would be held to a "strict accountability" and his later declaration that America would use "force without limit," stirred responsive chords in the hearts of most Americans.

Severs Relations With Berlin

President Wilson accordingly broke off diplomatic relations with the Berlin government and gave Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, his passports. Everybody knew that it meant war, that the conflict was close at hand.

Meanwhile, a happy domestic event in the life of the President served to lighten the burden of his official cares. He was married to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, the widow of a Washington merchant, who immediately became his constant companion and confidante.

Internal affairs in the United States early in 1917 were in a state of restlessness verging on turmoil. Enemy propagandists were busy night and day. The increasing cost of living was of grave concern to wage earners. Scores of strikes in industrial plants and on railroads were fomented by Austro-German plotters financed by Count von Bernstorff and aids of Dr. Constantin Theodor Dummba, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, who has been sent back to Vienna.

The United States never had been a military nation. Her regular army establishment of 75,000 men seemed pitifully weak when England and France were sending millions of fighters to the battle line. President Wilson at once urged the passage of a Conscription Bill by Congress by which men from 21 to 31 were to be drawn by lot. It was called the "Selective Service Act" and based upon the experience of the other Allied nations, was intended to raise an Army without demoralizing essential trade and industry. The law was enacted after an exciting but short debate in both Houses on April 28, 1917, just three weeks after the United States declared herself to be in "a state of war with Germany." Subsequently a similar declaration was issued against Austria.

Draft machinery was put in motion and, despite the derision of the German General Staff, "the most remarkable achievement in the history of all warfare," according to General Peyton C. March, the American chief of staff, was accomplished. Training camps were located throughout the country and within a year nearly 2,000,000 armed and equipped soldiers were landed in England and France. A second draft, registering men from 18 to 21 and from 31 to 45 was ordered to bring America's fighting force in Europe up to 4,850,000 men, but few of these were called as the Central Powers shortly collapsed.

Meanwhile the United States Navy had been greatly augmented and on Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice was signed she had 338 war-ships and 70,000 enlisted men in service abroad.

The President was largely instrumental in organizing during this period the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the War Industries Board, and the Food and Fuel Administrations and other war bodies all of which came in for a great deal of criticism. One of these, the Aircraft Production Division was accused of gross irregularities, extravagance and delay. It was charged that more than $650,000,000 which had been appropriated by congress for this department had been practically wasted. The President designated former Justice Hughes to investigate the allegations, some of which were sustained and others of which were dismissed with the observation that "there is no law to punish men for inefficiency." It was found however that no one was criminally culpable.

Not the least important of other war measures adopted at the behest of Mr. Wilson during his second administration were the Federalization of the railroads, cables, telephones and telegraph systems and the plan for the upbuilding by the government itself of a great American merchant marine. For the last named purpose alone Congress appropriated the sum of $2,850,000,000. Later these public utilities were returned to private control.

BUYING AT HOME.

We are constantly calling to the attention of our people the advantages derived by trading with the home merchants, and now we want to tell them of the advantages offered by investments in home securities, and urge the importance of giving them first consideration. We have reference to the Paid-Up Shares issued by The Home Building and Loan Association of this City.

Here's what happens when a citizen invests in these home securities. First of all you are helping some one to own a home, as the money invested is immediately loaned by the Association. The man who is to build usually employs a Contractor who in turn gives employment to brick masons, carpenters, day laborers, painters, and draymen. He buys lumber, brick, hardware, paint, and other building materials. All these things go to make better business in the community. The citizen that receives the employment and sells the materials deposit their funds in our financial institution.

tutions, and trade with our other citizens, and it thus becomes an endless chain of mutual helpfulness. The investor profits thereby in addition to the interest he receives on his investment.

These securities are not subject to market fluctuations, and are redeemable at any time by giving a few days notice. They are exempt from normal Federal Income Tax, and from State, county and municipal taxation. They yield 55 per cent interest annually, payable semi-annually. They are on sale every business day of the year. What other form of safe investment offers such multiple advantages?

When our people invest their surplus funds in outside securities the money immediately leaves the community and only the interest comes back into it, on the other hand when they invest in home securities both the principal and interest remain in the community.

Lets buy home securities, patronize home merchants and home institutions of every kind and discription to the limit of our ability, and thereby build for the future a bigger and greater Greenville.

The Highway Commission has already contracted for about $50,000,000 worth of work it was stated, and after the bids that were opened for the above 19 projects have been let there will remain only about $11,000,000 of the original amount of $50,000,000 appropriated by the 1921 legislature and the additional amount of $15,000,000 appropriated by the 1923 legislature for the construction of highways. The State Highway Commission expects to finish its road building program within the next six months, it was stated. Announcement of the successful bidders will be made later.

Princeton Star To Conduct Six Weeks Schools for Coaches

WAKE FOREST, Feb. 1. — Head Coach Henry Garrity will conduct a six weeks school for coaches in connection with the first half of the Wake Forest Summer School, Dr. D. B. Bryan, director of the summer school, announced today. While the Fetters have offered a 10 day course for coaches at Carolina, Garrity's six weeks course outstrips any previous effort of its kind in North Carolina. The former Princeton star will offer instruction in the theory and practice of coaching football, basketball, baseball, and track. The course is offered primarily for high school teachers and principals who coach teams for their schools. Garrity's department will be run as a school for coaches and will be separate from the regular summer school. Addition of the department under Garrity gives Wake Forest three distinct schools for the regular session. They are: the summer school proper, which will offer normal and college training, the Law school, and the school for coaches. Garrity's school will run in connection with the first term of the first term of the summer school, June 16 through July 25.

In order that those who attend the regular summer school may enroll in the school for coaches, the work of the latter will be carried on in the afternoons. Classes in the regular summer school will meet in the mornings. In a few days Garrity will name a corps of assistants who will aid with the courses.

Aside from the ability which Garrity has displayed in coaching the football and basketball teams at Wake Forest, he has had considerable experience as an instructor in coaching. Last summer he was connected with a school for coaches at Rutgers College, New Jersey. At Missouri he had a similar course, and this year at Wake Forest he has been instructing 35 members of the Education club in the theory and practice of high school coaching.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS IS STAR OF POWERFUL PRODUCTION

"Slander the Woman," Allen Holubar's First National release, starring Dorothy Phillips, which will be shown at the Strand theatre Monday and Tuesday, is one of the strongest indictments of gossips and gossiping that has ever been produced.

When it was first selected as Miss Phillips' starring vehicle, it was not picked because it portrayed one of the principal evils which confronts society today. Rather, it was selected because it permitted an excellent opportunity for Miss Phillips to display her rare emotional qualities. However, the indictment of gossiping was already in the script when it reached Director Holubar's hands, and he has taken advantage of every opportunity to show what idle tongues can do to a woman's reputation.

Miss Phillips is supported by an admirable cast. The picture was produced in Los Angeles and the California mountains, and contains some of the most superb outdoor snow scenes that have ever been photographed.

All-Star Cast In Palace of the King

There have been many pictures heralded as possessing "all-star casts" but "In The Palace of the King," the period spectacle which comes to White's theatre next Monday, boasts as near an "all star" list of players as any, according to Emmett Flynn, who directed the picture.

Blanche Sweet, one of the most popular and best-known actresses on the screen, is seen in the leading role, that of Dolores Mendoza. The part is the best since her recent return to the screen, according to critics.

Edmund Lowe, noted on both stage and screen, plays opposite Miss Sweet in the role of Don John, brother of the king, and idol of Spain.

Robert Bosworth a pioneer of the screen, and regarded by many critics as its most gifted actor, will be seen as Mendoza, father of Dolores.

One of the most emotional and sympathetic roles of her brilliant screen career is accorded Pauline Starke, who plays Inez, beautiful blind sister of Dolores.

Sam de Grasse, whose work as Judge Stillman in "The Spoilers," and whose marvelous interpretation of Prince John in "Robin Hood," have won him national acclaim, play the ruthless, tyrannical King Philip II.

Aileen Pringle, beautiful Goldwyn player whose rise to popularity has been so rapid, appears as the Princess of Ebboli, a plotting member of the royal Spanish court.

Lucien Littlefield, character actor and make-up wizard, plays an eccentric role as Adonis, court jester. William V. Mong, another prominent player whose work as Merlin in "A Connecticut Yankee" is remembered by thousands, will be seen as the crafty Perez, secretary to the king.

Regulations Regarding Tenth Annual State Wide Basketball Trial

CHAPEL HILL, Feb. 1.—Regulation governing the tenth annual state-wide basketball contest, among the high schools, were announced tonight by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the recently organized High School Athletic Association of North Carolina, under whose auspices this contest will be held.

Any North Carolina public high school, city or rural, may take part in this contest, provided the school has first become a member of the High School Athletic Association, membership in which is open to all accredited high schools in the state. Schools desiring to enter the contest should file with Secretary Rankin, of Chapel Hill, their applications on or before February 8. These applications should be accompanied by individual entry date certifying to the eligibility of each player, it was said.

Regulations may be had free by writing to Mr. Rankin. Changes in the rules for 1924 make ineligible any student who has received money for participating in any athletic game it was declared. This rule, however, it was pointed out, should not be construed to mean expenses for board, lodging and transportation, when these items are paid for direct by the manager of the team on which the student plays, and when no money is handled by the student.

Members of the enlarged committee on high school athletics, which is the acting executive committee of the High School Athletic Association of North Carolina are: N. W. Walker, chairman, Chapel Hill; E. R. Rankin, secretary, Chapel Hill; T. W. Andrews, Salisbury; G. B. Phillips, Greensboro; C. C. Haworth, Burlington; M. R. Mitchell, Ellerbe;

C. W. Davis, Roanoke Rapids; J. W. Moore, Winston-Salem; C. E. Teague Sanford; C. E. Phillips, Durham; C. G. Credle, Oxford; W. M. Marr, High Point; O. A. Hamilton, Goldsboro; W. Hobbs, Chapel Hill; R. A. Fetzer, Chapel Hill; C. D. Snell, Chapel Hill; C. T. Woolen, Chapel Hill; W. McK. Fetzer, Chapel Hill; and H. D. Meyer, Chapel Hill.

The special committee which has general charge of the basketball contest is composed of the following members; in addition to the chairman and the secretary; G. B. Phillips, C. C. Haworth, C. W. Davis, R. A. Fetzer, A. J. Hobbs, C. C. Credle, W. M. Marr, and C. T. Woolen. With a view to save guarding the health of those taking part in the contest, the association strongly urges that authorities of each school give contestants a thorough-going medical examination before their name is sent to the committee.

Conferences of faculty managers in the east and west will be held immediately after February 9, following which the championship series will get under way at once.

Nine contests have been held since the state-wide series were inaugurated in 1915. A great interest has been developed and friendly rivalry has characterized the series.

The champions of the past have been: Winton, 1915; Durham, 1916; Winston-Salem, 1917; Durham, 1918; Winston-Salem, 1919; Wilmington, 1920; Chapel Hill, 1921; Greensboro, 1922; and Asheville, 1923.

1000 Miles Highway Completed By The State Department

RALEIGH, Feb. 1.—More than one thousand miles of highway were completed by the North Carolina State Highway Department during year 1923, according to the monthly bulletin issued by that department. This was greater than the number of miles of roads built in the state during 1922. The cost of the 1053 miles of roads completed in 1923 was estimated at $22,700,000. The mileage represents over 17 per cent of the total mileage of the State Highway System. This was pointed out enabling travel to be done more easily and extensively and at less expense than ever before. It was said that if the plans of the State Highway Department are carried out for the year 1924, that there will be even a larger amount of roads completed during the 1924 than in any previous year.

Large Attendance
On Last Sunday
The Jarvis Memorial Methodist Sunday School had an unusually large attendance last Sunday morning. There were 538 present when to attend this service. Parents are the count was made. The spirit of requested to cooperate in making this the school was remarkable. There were 20 new members. The Sunday before there were 15 new members.

This evidence of growth is the finest thing about the school at the present time. The Young Men's class taught by Mr. Bert James, is staging a wonderful come back, and at the present rate of increase they will soon pass their record mark and will have new quarters. The Philathea class taught by Mrs. Herring had an excellent attendance last Sunday also. There were an even fifty present in this very effective class. This class is now racing the Baraca class for attendance honors and at the rate they are going will soon pass the Baracas.
The Philathea Class No. 2 taught by Mr. Fitzgerald had all of its members present but 7. There were four classes in the school that had every member present and on time. The boys classes are rapidly climbing and threaten to pass the girls.
The Primary Department under the direction of Miss Coates had its separate assemblies last Sunday for the first time. All the teachers and pupils were pleased at the results.
This department will soon be one of the most effective in the whole school due to the fact that all the teachers and pupils have entered into the new idea with great enthusiasm.
The music was excellent. The orchestra was augmented by a new cornet player and a new trombone player. In addition to accompanying all the hymns, the orchestra gave two delightful numbers under the direction of Mr. Robeson, the director. Miss Muir of the college rendered a very effective solo accompanied by Mrs. Blount at the piano.
Mr. Thomas on the flute and Mr.
Robeson on the violin. There will be special music tomorrow also. The music will begin at 9:30 while the regular school work will begin at 9:45.

Airplane Tests Save One Day in the Trans-Atlantic Mails

LONDON, Feb.—Recent experiments in carrying dummy mails by airplane between Plymouth, Manchester and Belfast, to test the practicability of saving time in transit to and from America, show that the average acceleration was 20 hours from Plymouth to Belfast and 13 1/2 hours to Manchester. The route used is subject to bad weather conditions in varying parts of the year, but in the first fortnight 14 flights scheduled for Manchester were all completed, and of the 13 to Belfast ten were completed.

In the second fortnight fog considerably interfered with the experiments and of seven flights scheduled to Manchester only three were effective, while only two of the seven to Belfast were completed. Even under the test conditions the flying time table was strictly adhered to, and the saving of a full business day effected.
As a result of the service, the Belfast corporation has under consideration the establishment and maintenance of airmail facilities within its own boundaries. Parachutes were used in the Belfast trials, and various fragile articles came down unhurt in the carriers attached to the para-chutes, which were released from a height of 200 to 300 feet.
