IRISH PEOPLE MAY BALLOT ON QUESTION OF PROHIBITION

Dublin. — A clash between the Dail Eirann and the Irish Free State Senate over a special provision of the government's liquor traffic control law, is leading various temperance organizations to consider insisting upon a referendum to the people. Such a step is possible because the Free State constitution gives the people the right of referendum in initiating and recalling legislation.

The trouble arose over a clause providing that shops which sell liquor shall sell nothing else on the same premises. The Dail defeated the clause by a substantial majority thus permitting continuance of the practice, more or less general in Ireland, of having liquor sold at general stores which also sell food, clothing, agricultural implements and sometimes emigration tickets.

Shopkeeper, declared the cost of alterations all over the country would be about $25,000,000, but the "dread" declared that the "wets" controlled the Dail. Later, however, the Senate reinstated the clause and, although this body has no real powers, its action in opposing the Dail is serving to hold up the bill for a legal period of 270 days.

LAWYERS ASK PRESS TO REPORT DETAILS WITH DUE SOLEMNITY

Chicago, Jan. —As a means of eliminating the formulation of public opinion upon matters to be judged by jury alone, under co-ordination of press and bar, committees of the Chicago Bar Association are planning to recommend two new steps with relation to publicity for courtroom trials. These are the prohibition of the taking of photographs of court room scenes and measures to ensure reporting of judicial proceedings as solemn trials rather than theatricals.

The Chicago Bar Association Record in its last issue says:

"The present day practice in reporting sensational law-suits in the public press is typified by the publication of photographs of court-room scenes. The attendant stories stress in like fashion those features which excite popular attention. This sating of the public appetite for the unusual not only brings the undesirable results incident to all scandal, but is peculiarly harmful in effect upon the administration of justice.

"Thus we find the presentation of a trial in the light of a theatrical performance rather than a dispassionate inquiry into the merits of the case. This is bound to lessen respect for the law and its instrumentalities.

"Akin to this is the creation of an erroneous conception of the true working of the judicial machinery. Frequently there results the 'formulation of a public opinion upon a matter to be judged by the jury alone. And of course there is the catering to the public appetite for scandal, with the consequent detriment to the public welfare."

"It is believed that a co-ordinated effort on the part of the press and the bar will in time bring about the desired development in this important field of reporting, and that a uniform rule which will place all newspapers upon the same basis in this respect will be welcomed by them as well as by the bar.

The Chicago Bar Association, through its committee on Relations of the Press to Judicial Proceedings and its Committee on the Judiciary, now has this work in hand, and, as a first concrete measure, will direct its effort against the publication of photographs of court-room scenes. It is planned to recommend to the courts the adoption of a rule prohibiting absolutely the taking of any photographs in court. Such a rule would eliminate at once one of the most potent means of engaging the attention of the public. Next will come the proposal of measures to ensure the reporting of court proceedings, not as dramatic or bizarre incidents but as solemn trials.

Below: NICHOLAS LONGWORTH & MARTIN MADDEN.

Julia Morosini, who inherited $9,000,000 from her father, a partner of the late Jay Gould, is under heavy guard at her mansion at Riverdale, N. Y., for reasons no one will divulge. Miss Morosini created a sensation several years ago when she eloped with and married Arthur Werner, New York City mounted policeman, who saved her life in a runaway. Later the marriage was annulled. Werner is dead. Backers of Representative Martin Madden, of Illinois, candidate for Speaker of the next House of Representatives against Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, declare delegations of four more States have enlisted under his banner. Miss Mary MacSwiney, sister of the famous hunger-striking Lord Mayor of Cork, has arrived in New York without a Free State passport, to "reveal the terrible conditions in Ireland." She has been on two hunger strikes herself.

morning. W. H. Wannamaker, of Duke University, is president of this branch of the association. Miss E. V. Lucas, of Wilson, is vice president and Miss Jessie C. Laird, of the North Carolina College for Women, is secretary.

According to the program for this meeting the Spanish, German and French sections of this group will meet in the class rooms of the Edenton church at 9:30. The rooms for the various sections will be designated at the church buildings.

A general business session of the department will be held at 12:30 in the Normal Class Room for the purpose of electing officers and transacting other business for the year.

The program of the Spanish Section will be in charge of Sturges E. Levitt, of the University of North Carolina.

CIRCUMSTANCES MAY UPSET SWEDEN'S ARMAMENT PLAN

Stockholm.—Plans of deputies to the Swedish Parliament to bring forward measures to reduce armaments and to cut expenses for national defense, may not be carried out, according to political observers, because of the renewed anxiety felt here in regard to the intentions of Soviet Russia.

The recent uprising in Estonia is one of the circumstances which is causing concern to the proponents of disarmament. Another is the of certainty as to what disposition the Russian government will make of the so-called Wrangel fleet confiscated by the French government in French colonial waters, which, it is stated, will be turned over to the Soviet government.

If these ships are kept in the Baltic, it is understood that Sweden will maintain a force of four large war vessels in Baltic waters.

FIVE ACTS OF MUSCLE SHOALS

If an American Gilbert and an American Sullivan were hunting for a light-opera theme in Washington they could not improve on the five-act comedy of Congress debating Muscle Shoals.

In Act I., played about a year ago, the stage-struck House of Representatives, victim of a "mash" on Henry Ford as persistent and as heady as any shop-girl's dreams of Rudolph Valentino, voted to sell the Shoals to Mr. Ford at the bargain price of 4 cents on the dollar.

In Act II. the Senate, headed off only by heroic measures from doing exactly what the House had done, decided to equip itself with facts concerning Muscle Shoals devoted months to committee hearings for the sole purpose of producing a committee bill, and once that bill was forthcoming scrapped it and began all over again with an impromptu measure written out of committee and based on a totally different set of facts.

In Act III. the Senate accepted and rejected three completely different plans for disposing of the Shoals in as many hours, and finally adopted, by a vote of 43 to 38, a plan which it had just rejected 46 to 33.

In Act IV. (just staged Tuesday) House voted to send this Senate bill to conference; that is, it voted to let three Representatives and three Senators, chosen arbitrarily because they happen to be members of the right committees, take the old House bill, which favored Henry Ford, and the new Senate bill, which ignores Mr. Ford's existence, and try to telescope those bills so that they will fit. They do not fit, of course; so while the Senate is busily debating Mr. Stone and the House is quarreling over its own rules of order, the six gentlemen who happen to be members of the conference committee will function as a little Congress writing a new bill all their own.

So in the end we have Congress abdicating not to a commission of engineers who could have furnished it with several alternative plans, all sound in their mechanics, but to a committee of conferees who will report a new bill promptly at the end of the session, when the whole program of Congress is in a jam.

Act V. remains to be written. But the circle of ironic comedy will be complete if Congress, having wasted two years trying to prove itself an expert on hydraulics, now snatches at a poorly written compromise of two wholly unlike bills and settles the fate of Muscle Shoals for fifty or a hundred years in one of those all-night coffee-and-ham-sandwich spurts which come at the end of every session.

Muscle Shoals deserves a better fate than that. There is no need for panic, and a longer session lies ahead.—N. Y. World.

Our biennial deficit controversy has again made its appearance in the columns of the state press according to regular schedule.

The action of the legislative committee in tabling the bill which would reduce the time limit of separation necessary to procure a divorce to two years instead of five should receive the hearty approval and endorsement of the people of this state. Already too much advantage is taken of the leniency of divorce laws and any change in them should be toward making them more stringent.

ROTORSHIP INVENTOR PROMISES LAND APPLICATION OF HIS THEORY

Kil—The Flettner Rotorship and the statement of its inventor that the principle of cylindrical towers to secure power from the air will also be used in harnessing the wind on land, continue to be discussed here.

Herr Flettner is reticent about his plans to utilize wind power on land, saying only that within a year he hopes to exhibit models which will enable irrigation plants, factories, and municipalities to take power directly from the wind through the use of the discoveries he has worked out in his study of air currents and their effect upon revolving towers. Towers for use on land will be high, as the constant winds are far above the earth's surface. Herr Flettner is confident that eventually there will be a great saving of fuel through the use of air current.

The inventor declares also that small airplanes of all kinds, including pleasure craft, can be fitted with one rotating tower that will propel them successfully on rivers, bay, and lakes.

TRADE BETWEEN BULGARIA AND GREECE GROWS RAPIDLY

Athens.—Greece is fast becoming Bulgaria's chief medium of communication with most of her foreign markets for grain, tobacco, hides and farm products, and as a result the trade between the two countries is steadily increasing.

In 1919, the first year of record, the Bulgarian exports amounted to 7,392,736 drachmae, while her imports were valued at 3,313,490 drachmae. Last year Greece's exports amounted to 40,000.00 drachmae, while Bulgaria's shipments to Greece amounted to 107,000,000 drachmae. The principal item of Greek export is olive oil, for which Bulgaria is almost wholly dependent upon Greece. Italy is making some inroads into the Bulgarian market.

Brewers are up in arms, as they see a prohibition movement behind this beverage with the small alcoholic content. It has, however, the endorsement of many doctors and physical educators.
