Hon. D. F. Giles, State Grand Chancellor, Delivers Address on "Preparation for Service;" Other Features Greatly Enjoyed

The members of the local lodge Knights of Pythias were hosts on Thursday evening at their annual banquet, having as honor guests their wives, sweet hearts, Hon. D. F. Giles, of Marion, Grand Chancellor of Knights of Pythias, of North Carolina, and other visiting friends.

Hon. F. C. Harding, in his usual attractive manner acted as toast master and after the singing of America and the invocation by the Rev. Leland W. Smith, Mr. S. O. Worthington was called upon to deliver the address of welcome.

Miss Ernestine Forbes in a few appropriate words responded to the address of welcome. Friendship, Charity and Benevolence, the three things for which the order stands being the keynote of the response.

The Pythian quartette composed of Messrs. W. W. Lee, Ed. Williams, Manly Sellars and Penn Watson, delighted the guests with several selections and encores.

Mr. Clark reviewed the past endeavors of Mr. Giles in serving the great state of North Carolina. The fact that Pythianism has recognized his merits to the extent that they have placed him in the high office of Grand Chancellor shows the esteem in which Mr. Giles is held in the state, declared Mr. Clark.

Grand Chancellor Giles spoke on the subject, "Preparation for Service." He expressed his pleasure at being present on this occasion and thanked Mr. Clark for his splendid introduction.

FATHER AND SON PAY FOR MURDER IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Charles and Elmer Stewart Electrocuted This Morning for Double Murder in Brunswick County

Raleigh, April 17.—Charles W. Stewart, 51, and Elmer Stewart, 23, his son, paid with their lives in the electric chair today for a double murder perpetrated in Brunswick county last year. The father calm to the last, was led to the chair first, and was pronounced dead after three shocks. Two shocks were required to execute the son.

C. W. Stewart was pronounced dead at 10:36 o'clock, and Elmer at 10:57.

The elderly Stewart entered the death chamber at 10:28 o'clock. He displayed no sign of nervousness, and gazed into the faces of the newspaper men and other witnesses, and said: "Men be Christians, don't do anything else, because it does not pay. Take care of your souls. God bless you all."

Joe Stone, a guard at the prison farm near Raleigh, who was assistant deputy executor in accordance with a provision of an act of the General Assembly of 1925, threw on the switch, which sent the death dealing current hurling through the body of the elderly Stewart.

At 10:38 he was pronounced dead, and prison attendants loosened the straps that bound the dead man to the chair, and the body was removed to an awaiting hearse that stood on a driveway near the death chamber.

Elmer Stewart followed his father to the chair. He leaned heavily on the arms of the two prison guards escorting him, and smiled bravely as he entered the death chamber, which he was never to emerge alive. As the prison attendants hurried to bind him to the chair he smiled again and said, "take your time boys, I am in no hurry." While being bound, in the chair he began to pray; "Dear Jesus, I am going now. I have forgiven them all. I hope to soon be in heaven with my dear old father, who has just gone before me. Dear Jesus have mercy on me."

Two shocks were necessary before Dr. Norman, pronounced the boy dead. Again prison attendants unstrapped the body, and four men waiting at the door carried it to the waiting hearse and placed it along side of that of the father, and the grey car of death moved silently away.

The execution of the two men was witnessed by Edward H. George, a brother of Leon George, the Wilmington prohibition officer, who was slain by Elmer Stewart, and Lewis W. Lilly, the 19 year old son of Samuel Lilly, the United States Deputy Marshal, who was killed by C. W. Stewart. Neither of the two men displayed any sign of emotion as they witnessed the electrocution of the slayers of a brother and a father.

The two men paid the death penalty for the murder on July 31, 1924, of Deputy United States Marshal Samuel Lilly and Wilmington Detective Leon George. Pleas for executive clemency have been refused.

The Stewarts bade farewell to their relatives yesterday afternoon on death row. Mrs. Stewart and her sons and daughters came to pay their condemned father and husband and brother good-bye. Their weeping pierced the dead quiet of the bleak row of cells when they left at minutes after three after seeing the men for the last time in this life. Mrs. Stewart was still sobbing and screaming as she was driven across the railroad tracks and away from the prison.

Elmer Stewart yesterday afternoon wrote a long letter telling of his life before the murder of the officers. He declared that he and his father have put their faith in Jesus as their savior. He prayed for Governor McLean and his children and "his poor sick wife." He also prayed for "our enemy," Judge Grady. The letter was given to prison officials and was addressed to "Dear Friends and Enemies."

NEW DESIGN FOR STONE MOUNTAIN IS BEING CREATED

Augustus Lukeman Announces That Work Already Done By Borglum Will Be "Eliminated"

New York, April 17.—An entirely new design for the Stone Mountain Memorial near Atlanta, Ga., is being created here in the studio of Augustus Lukeman, whom has succeeded Gutzon Borglum as sculptor in charge of the work, which will transform the granite mountain into a monument to the heroes of the South.

Mr. Lukeman announced last night on being informed of his appointment, that the work already done by his predecessor would be "eliminated."

Ms. Borglum dreamed of a host of confederate soldiers streaming across the face of the cliff and focusing on a gigantic figure of Lee. It is understood that he is completing his models anyway, and intends to make a final appeal to the committee on the Daughters of the Confederacy.

The new design will be Mr. Lukeman's own, and will not only include the figures of Confederate Generals on the Mountain side, but also a hall of fame below. "My first purpose," Mr. Lukeman said, "will be to make preliminary sketches, and after they have been approved, will be to go on with working models, which will be one half of the full size of the figures in the group. By autumn I hope to have from 20 to 30 carvers on the Mountain working on the group of the long pageant."

INSANITY MIGHT BE DEFENSE PLEA FOR MRS. CUNNINGHAM

Trial Depends on Condition of Mother Who is Ill Following Confession That She Poisoned Children

Crown City, Ind., April 17.—Arraignment of Mrs. Anna Cunningham, 49 years old Gary, Ind., widow, on a murder charge in connection with the confessed killing with poison of three out of five members of her family who died in six years, depends on her condition. Her hearing to answer a charge of poisoning her son, Walter, was postponed yesterday. She collapsed in her cell after confessing. She survived last night, and after eating dropped into a sound sleep.

While prosecutor, August Brewer, assisted by the Chicago prosecutor, had not determined definitely whether to test her sanity, attorney hired by Mae Cunningham her daughter, indicated insanity might be a defense plea. Whether the three other bodies of her children would be exhumed, since chemical analysis of two disinterred indicated the presence of poison, also was undetermined. Authorities believed that it was unnecessary, but were informed that a sister of the deceased husband would insist that all of the bodies be examined.

In her confession, Mrs. Cunningham said she had given victims poison in bread and butter, and each time taken similar doses herself, because of her desire to join her husband, who had died first.

"JUDGED ACCORDING TO THEIR WORKS"

"And they were judged, every man according to their works," said St. John in relating his vision, and if he had been speaking of the presidents of the United States he might have added that memorials were raised to them, according to their works.

For in subtle ways, the mark that a man has left upon his times, the stamp that he has put upon the minds of his fellowmen and the warmth that he has kindled in their hearts, is reflected in the monuments that they build to him after his death. And this is particularly true in regard to the presidents of the United States.

From the stark and mighty shaft of stone that has been erected as an everlasting monument to Washington, to the beautiful and thoroughly planned college to be established in Georgia in the name of Woodrow Wilson, whatever material form a presidential monument has taken, it has unerringly shown something of the heart and mind of the man who inspired it.

Washington rose boldly above the men of his time, a tower of strength, courageous and far-seeing; a leader in a new world guiding a new nation along unknown paths. His loneliness and faith and strength are all embodied in the Washington Monument that rises with abrupt magnificence over the city that he founded.

Facing it across pleasant green lawns are the graceful stately pillars of the Lincoln Memorial. In the classical simplicity of the white marble building there is a tender note—the record of a man of the people who touched their hearts and knew their griefs.

President Harding's death occurred before the people of America had time to really know him and so as a memorial to him they are preserving his pleasant wide-verandahed house at Marion, Ohio, and gathering in it all of the belongings associated with his life. There are also plans to endow in his name a department in some great university for the instruction of men and women in government service, both in its business departments and its diplomatic and consular branches.

Roosevelt's great energy and countless interests are reflected in the number and variety of memorials that have been made to him—the park within sight of his home at Oyster Bay established in accordance with his wish that it might be a breathing space for the people of the neighborhood; the Roosevelt medals awarded annually for citizenship; the house where he was born in New York City which has been preserved and turned into a center for patriotic education, and the bird sanctuary; an eleven acre tract at Oyster Bay.

Grant's Tomb, overlooking the Hudson River at New York, is a compact, adequate building that recalls the sturdy figure of the man whose dust it shelters. It misses beauty by a wide mark and, like the man, lacks the grace, though not the dignity, of its position.

Grover Cleveland's memorial is the tower at Princeton University, a Gothic structure of great beauty. Into the building have been gathered a library and museum containing the personal and official relics of the man and of his time.

The Woodrow Wilson College to be established at Valdosta, Ga., will differ fundamentally from the memorials to other presidents. It will be a monument to the ideals of Wilson rather than to the man himself. It will not be merely an expression of his character and qualities, but a center of influence from which his ideals and aspirations will be passed on to generations of young men and so with them, into the world of affairs.

Along with the group of Valdosta citizens, headed by Mr. Allen Strickland, who are acting trustees of the college, a group of friends and admirers of Wilson have been working shoulder to shoulder for more than a year, planning the details of the college. They include such men as Col. Edward M. House, Mr. David F. Houston, secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson cabinet, and Dr. Sidney E. Menzes, president of the College of the City of New York.

They point out that since Wilson was a scholar and served the long apprenticeship to his public career in a great university, that it is fitting that the monument to him should be a college where his policies of education can be put into practice and be made a vehicle for his ideals. They believe that since he was from the South, Georgia bred, it is appropriate that the college bearing his name should be placed in the environment that helped to mould his life.

The preceptorial method of teaching by which the professors and instructors come into close personal contact with students outside of the classrooms and which Wilson hotly championed at Princeton, is to be a feature of Woodrow Wilson College at Valdosta according to plans. Three hundred students will be the maximum enrollment and they will be drawn from throughout the country as well as Georgia.

The subjects in which Wilson found most interest—International Relations, History, Political Science, Economics, Literature and Sociology—the studies that are most important to the welfare and happiness of mankind, will receive particular attention at Woodrow Wilson College. Students attending the institution will be chosen from those whose bent is along these lines.

From these thoughtfully evolved plans is to rise up at Valdosta, a memorial that will not only enshrine the memory of a great man, but may serve to kindle a beacon light for posterity.

BERLIN'S NEW POLICE CHIEF STARTS IN TO CLEAN UP CITY

Berlin.—Berlin has a new chief of police, and everybody knows it. His name is Dr. Friedensburg, and he succeeds Herr Richter who was swept out of office because of his friendship with the Barnat brothers, involved in one of the largest of post-war financial scandals.

Dr. Friedensburg has a far wider view than one usually associates with a Prussian official. He has spent six years in foreign countries, chiefly in the United States and Great Britain, and is keenly appreciative of the horror that the foreigner has of official red tape and bureaucracy. He therefore seems bent upon sweeping these bureaucratic cobwebs away as fast as possible.

One task confronting him is that of fighting corruption and loose morals in the German capital. During the inflation period all sorts of vices, such as gambling, thieving, and even murder spread in Berlin to an alarming degree.

The new chief of police seems determined to clean up the city. He conducts most raids personally, and already his name is feared among the element that shuns the light of day.

The new chief of police is much interested in the international aspects of the control of crime. He is of the opinion that the modern criminal has so many technical devices at his disposal, such as the airplane, the radio, the fast automobile, etc., that an ever closer co-operation between the police forces of the different countries is essential.

Berkeley, Cal.—Some white rats, under observation for the effects of a newly discovered vitamin, recently tipped over their cages in search of food and, seeing nothing else

When the class conducting the experiments gathered next day, the record book was found in bad shape. Several valuable pages had been chewed out. The rats were still milling around looking for something more edible.

When Better Automobiles Are Built, Buick Will Build Them

No. 1

Question: Why are more women driving Buicks than any other make of six-cylinder car?

Answer: One reason is the striking appearance of this famous motor car. Then comes Buick dependability. A woman knows when she starts out with her Buick that she will "get there and back." Other reasons are—the comfort in driving a Buick—the velvet clutch action, easy steering; then the power and quietness of Buick's Valve-in-Head engine and the safety of Buick mechanical four-wheel brakes.

Progress

In day gone by, vessels went forth over the bounding main with no surety of ever returning. And if they came back, an empty hold, instead of a profitable cargo, might greet the owner.

Today, great ships go to the utmost ends of the earth—speedily, directly, safely, profitably.
Progress in finance is fully as great.

Where, formerly the saving and investment of money was an extreme gamble, today, under the building and loan plan, your thrift ship steams straight toward the port of success—speedily because our earnings are so generous, and safely because ours is the soundest financial plan in all the world.

Dresser Drawer In Her Little

A dozen little fashions sway the smart fancy by their freshness plus uniqueness. Thus it is that when little dresser drawers are opened, flowers of two or three varieties, creamy hose, gloves long and short, and pastel jewels peep forth. And farther back, Peter Pan neckwear lies close to an envelope purse with snug buckled belt. The lay of fashion is preparing for Summer, carefully choosing tremendous trifles to complement her costume. Wisely, she shops here!
