OPTIMISM REGARDING PROSPECTS SECURITY PACT DIMMED TODAY

Prospects Don't Appear So
Bright Due to Reports of Unfavorable Reactions in London and Paris

Paris, June 10.—The prevailing optimism regarding the prospects for a Western European Security Pact based upon the Chamberlain-Briand agreement reached at Geneva regarding Germany's proposal, was somewhat dimmed today. This was due to reports of unfavorable reactions in London and Paris. It was remarked by some Paris newspaper editors that the forces of the Painleve Government may have been a trifle premature in their enthusiasm for Germany, after all, will have something to say about signing the proposed pact.

London, June 10.—While the proposed security pact negotiated by France at Geneva by Foreign Secretary Chamberlain, is certain to meet strong criticism in the House of Commons, the Laborites alone of the political parties have thus far openly expressed their attitude.

They are uncompromisingly hostile to the agreement on the ground that it involves Great Britain too deeply in possible European embroilments. Former Premier Ramsey MacDonald, the Laborite leader, quoted by the party's organ, the Daily Herald, says:

"The agreement is the signing not of a general understanding to maintain peace, but of a series of alliances as guarantees. It is not in the end promote peace, but increase the organization for war and this is true whether it provides only for a security for France, or security for Germany also."

The Anglo-French agreement grew out of Germany's proposal for a security pact. If accepted by Germany, the pact will provide a guarantee of frontiers of France, Belgium, and Germany as established under the Versailles Treaty. Great Britain would be pledged to use all her forces against any nation making an unprovoked attack on the frontier.

PORTUGAL RESTLESS UNDER MEASURES OF REPRESSION

Lisbon.—The much talked of military revolution having collapsed, the government has established martial law. Portugal is now under strict military rule, and all newspapers that do not applaud and bow down to the government have been suspended. These include the Seculo and the Epoca.

Several regiments have been dissolved, and dozens of officers are imprisoned in various fortresses in different parts of the country. There are evidences that the authorities are not reassured on the question of the maintenance of public order. There is much political intrigue going on, and military unrest.

The foreign correspondents in Portugal have had their full share of trouble. The local newspapers have abused them, and the censor has nullified their best efforts. They have been compelled to show copies of all their messages to the police, and warned not to send out any news harmful to the country. One is in jail, and probably will be escorted to the frontier. News messages consisting of faithful translations of official notes are passed for transmission, and then after two or three days returned to the sender.

DR. GLENN FRANK DELIVERS ADDRESS UNIVERSITY OF N. C.

Declares Whole World Today
Is in a Mood of Transit
Hysteria; 130th Commencement Address

Chapel Hill, June 10.—To the oldest state university in America there came today one of the youngest college presidents of the country to deliver the 130th commencement address. Speaking to a graduating class of 330 students at the University of North Carolina, Glenn Frank, editor of the Century Magazine and newly elected President of the University of Wisconsin, declared that "the whole world today is in a mood of transit hysteria, which is but another way of saying the world is wool gathering."

"We are at the end of a long destructive process," he said, "in which the war was only an incident, the result of which has been a shattering of many of the ancient authorities and traditional methods of control. All the while this destructive process has been going on we have been gathering together the raw material for a new social order. But as before in history we are standing paralyzed before the old world that is dead, and the new that its yet to be born. Such an interim is always dangerous."

"Two dangers beset such a period," Dr. Frank added "asserting that humanity may scurry back to the old shelters instead of building new ones. This is happening all about us in government, the quest at the moment is for equilibrium. Mr. Harding's normalcy and Bonar Laws tranquility were followed by Mr. Coolidge's stability. The goal of the contemporary politics seems to be restoration rather than reconstruction."

"The second danger, Mr. Frank said, was that 'humanity may simply give up and go fortune hunting. Unless the race is challenged by something more creative than a quest for equilibrium, it will inevitably grow bored and drift into an era of frivolity.' Dr. Frank urged the students to go out into the world and exercise constructive leadership. Diplomas were granted to the graduates by Governor McLean.

rect, Experts State

Brussels, June 10.—The American Balloon Goodyear 3, Wade T. Vann Orman piloting, may yet be declared the winner of the Gordon Bennett Cup Balloon race which started here Sunday. It was believed here today. The previous assumption that he had been disqualified way be incorrect, experts state.

Vann Orman drifted a distance of 441 miles, but landed at sea on the deck of a steamer. The question was raised whether landing on the deck of a ship complies with the regulations for the race if made with outside help in salvaging the balloon.

Demuyter, of Belgium, is credited with having covered the greatest distance on land. He having gone 422 miles. The question probably will be decided later on today, by those in charge of the race.

Another officer accompanied them and stood by the window when Claywell went to the front door, and Reeves to the back door. Several shots were fired, stated the officer at the window, John C. Hoover, who said he heard Reeves exclaim that he had been shot. Hoover said he ran into the house and found the two officers on the floor wounded, and the dead negro Jarrell. According to the police the other men escaped immediately after the shooting, but were arrested in another section of the city early today and placed in jail. Six negroes are being held in the city jail today pending a further investigation, and officers are hunting for two others believed to have been implicated in the shooting.

CHAUTAUQUA TENT TO SEAT THOUSAND FOR BIG FUN WEEK

Local Committee is Assured of Exceptional Program; Ticket
Campaign Starts

One thousand people in the Big Brown Chautauqua Tent to see the best musical and character program ever offered to Greenville, was the objective aimed at by the committee last evening. With only six days to go, before the big show starts. A great impetus was given to the ticket selling campaign last night.

Arrangements have been made for snappy talks to be given by Supt. Matthew Wayman Ph.D.

The Kiwanis Club will hear him on Friday evening. He will preach in at least two Greenville Churches on Sunday. The Eastern Carolina Teacher's College is to be visited next Monday. The Rotary Club will entertain him on Monday evening and plans are being promulgated to interest the Greenville Woman's Clubs. It was pointed out at the guarantor's meeting last night that individual visits to the big tent would cost more than ten dollars, and the ten dollars would go to the Swarthmore association, but by purchasing a season ticket the cost for the whole thirteen entertainments is only two dollars and fifty cents which goes to the local committee.

Citizens will serve themselves and their own committees if they will buy now.

The director of advertising Mr. C. B. Rowlett, was complimented upon his efficient work in displaying Chautauqua literature. Added to this today nearly one hundred automobiles were decorated with plate signs. Each day new posters are being shown. The Juniors are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Miss Marie Shaw who will be play leader and Junior director this year. Swarthmore directors wired Greenville superintendent today saying: "Never before in our history have we offered better plays, better musical companies or descriptive lectures. Assure Greenville of a real big week of pleasure and inspiration."

FLAG DAY

The approaching observance of Flag Day, June 14, nation-wide in scope and world-wide in sentiment, tends to bring us into a closer realization of the significance attached to our National Colors.

The stripes of red, symbolic of the baptism in the noble blood of American manhood, alternating with the pure white stripes, that should never bear the stains of national dishonor; together with the clear-cut stars amid the field of blue, all forming the component parts of the banner representing these

United States of America; is a beautiful and impressive sight to behold as it floats in an azure sky, with the bright sunlight playing upon its glorious and protecting folds.

Our Flag should have the loyal support of all true Americans. Government officials, the men in whose hands the welfare of this country rests, should ever remember—and practice—the sacred trust practice, or malfeasance of public office, can be tolerated, supported or condoned by our people.

National and state legislatures should forget, momentarily at least, on this day of reverence, all party differences, and unite in rendering due homage.

For our Flag to continue to wave over the republic as the symbol of Liberty, in its truest sense, and rational patriotism in its noblest form, thus justifying that proud boast of unsullied reputation so well known to every school student, is our prayer. However, our country should be free from sectarianism; free from corrupt political influences and practices; eternally grateful to the brave men who have, by sacrificing their lives, insured Democracy; and solicitous of the comfort and welfare of its maimed veterans.

In this way Old Glory will continue to merit its praise, justify its glorious traditions, prove symbolic of unadulterated patriotism and unselfish devotion, and indeed measure up to the beloved Lincoln's terse words "... that these dead shall not have died in vain..."

NOTES ON TARHEELIA

In March 1888, the State Library was moved from the Capitol to the old Supreme Court building at Raleigh. Later, in 1912, it was moved to the new Supreme Court building where it is at present.

The Audubon Society of North Carolina was created a body politic and corporate in 1902, with eight directors or trustees, the officers consisting of a president, a vice-president, and a secretary and treasurer. The treasurer is designated by the Society and commissioned by the Governor.

North Carolina is well equipped with a variety of building stones particularly those of the granite type. The granites of North Carolina are distributed over about one-half of the total area of the state.

The new fiscal year for North Carolina begins on July 1. On that date changes in the State's fiscal policy are to become effective. These changes include the executive budget law, which makes the Governor the financial head of the State, as director of the budget.

The State Board of Accountancy is composed of three public accountants and one attorney. They are appointed by the Governor for terms of three years, overlapping. They examine accountants desiring to become certified public accountants.

The State Board of Osteopathic Examination and Registration, composed of five members, was created by an act of the General Assembly in 1907.

The Constitution of the State provides that "every act of the General Assembly levying a tax shall state the special object to which it is to be applied, and it shall be applied to no other purpose."

SYNOPSIS

Malone, a London newspaper reporter, rejected by the girl he loves because he has no heroic deeds to his credit, appeals to his editor for a dangerous assignment, and is sent to interview Professor Challenger, who has recently returned from South America with a story, which no one believes, of the existence there of prehistoric animals. By way of proof he shows Malone a sketch of a stegosaurus, which he had found among the possessions of a dead explorer, Maple White; some photographs, and a piece of the wing of a pterodactyl. At a scientific lecture that night Challenger calls for volunteers for an expedition to test the truth of his assertions. ... Thus one foggy morning young Malone finds himself a member of a party of three setting out for South America. The other two are Professor Summerlee, a scientist, and Lord John Roxton, well known explorer. Challenger has given them sealed instructions, and at the time and place specified the envelope is opened. It contains a blank sheet of paper!

CHAPTER VII (Continued)

The shadow of a squat figure had stolen across the patch of sunlight. That voice! That monstrous breadth of shoulder! We sprang to our feet with a gasp of astonishment as Challenger, in a round, boyish straw hat with a colored ribbon—Challenger, with his hands in his jacket pockets and his canvas shoes daintily pointing as he walked—appeared in the open space before us. He threw back his head, and there he stood in the golden glow with all his old Assyrian luxuriance of beard, all his native insolence of drooping eyelids and intolerant eyes.

"I fear," he said, taking out his watch, "that I am a few minutes too late. When I gave you this envelope I must confess that I had never intended that you should open it, for it had been my fixed intention to be with you before the hour. The unfortunate delay can be apportioned between a blundering pilot, and an intrusive sandbank. I fear that it has given my colleague, Professor Summerlee, occasion to blaspheme."

"I am bound to say, sir," said Lord John, with some sternness of voice, "that your turning up is a considerable relief to us, for our mission seemed to have come to a premature end. Even now I can't for the life of me understand why you should have worked it in so extraordinary a manner."

Instead of answering, Professor Challenger entered, shook hands with myself and Lord John, bowed with ponderous insolence to Professor Summerlee, and sank back into a basket-chair, which creaked and swayed beneath his weight.

"Is all ready for your journey?" he asked.

"We can start tomorrow." "Then so you shall. You need no chart of directions now, since you will have the inestimable advantage of my own guidance. From the first I had determined that I would myself preside over your investigation. The most elaborate charts would, as you will readily admit, be a poor substitute for my own intelligence and advice. As to the small ruse which I played upon you in the matter of the en-may be able to make an early start in the morning. My time is of value, and the same thing may be said, no doubt, in a lesser degree of your own. I propose, therefore, that we push on as rapidly as possible, until I have demonstrated what you have come to see."

Lord John Roxton has chartered a large steam launch, the Esmeralda, which was to carry us up the river. So far as climate goes, it was immaterial what time we chose for our expedition, as the temperature ranges from seventy-five to ninety degrees both summer and winter, with no appreciable difference in heat. In moisture, however, it is otherwise; from December to May is the period of the rains, and during this time the river slowly rises until it attains a height of nearly forty feet above its low-water mark. It floods the banks, extends in great lagoons over a monstrous waste of country, and forms a huge district, called locally the Gape, which is for the most part too marshy for foot travel and too shallow for boating. About June the waters begin to fall, and are at their lowest at October or November. Thus our expedition was at the time of the dry season, when the great river and its tributaries were more or less in a normal condition.

The current of the river is a slight one, the drop being not greater than eight inches in a mile. No stream could be more convenient for navigation, since the prevailing wind is, southeast, and sailing boats may make a continuous progress to the Peruvian frontier, dropping down again with the current. In our own case the excellent engines of the Esmeralda could disregard the sluggish flow of the stream, and we made as rapid progress as if we were navigating a stagnant lake.

For three days we steamed north-westwards up a stream which even here, a thousand miles from its mouth, was still so enormous that from its center the two banks were mere shadows upon the distant sky-line. On the fourth day after leaving Manaos we turned into a tributary which at its mouth was little smaller than the main stream. It narrowed rapidly, however, and after two more days' steaming we reached an Indian village, where the Professor insisted that we should land, and that the Esmeralda should be sent back to Manaos. We should soon come upon rapids, he explained, which would make its further use impossible. He added privately that we were now approaching the door of the unknown country, and that the fewer we took into our confidence the better it would be.

To this end also he made each of us give our word of honor that we should publish or say nothing which would give any exact clue as to the whereabouts of our travels, while the servants were all solemnly sworn to the same effect. It is for this reason that I am compelled to be vague in my narrative, and I would warn my readers that in any map or diagram which I may give the relation of places to each other may be correct, but the points of the compass are carefully confused, so that in no way can it be taken as an actual guide to the country. Professor Challenger's reasons for secrecy may be valid or not, but we had no choice but to adopt them, for he was prepared to abandon the whole expedition rather than modify the conditions upon which he would guide us.

It was August 2nd when we snapped our last link with the outer world by bidding farewell to the Esmeralda. Since then four days have passed, during which we have engaged two large canoes from the Indians, made of so light a material (skins over a bamboo framework) that we should be able to carry them round any obstacle. These we have loaded with all our effects, and have engaged two additional Indians to help us in the navigation. I understand that they are the very two—Ataca and Ipetu by name—who accompanied Professor Challenger upon his previous journey. They appeared to be terrified at the prospect of repeating it over, but the chief has patriarchal powers in these countries, and if the bargain is good in his eyes the clansman has little choice in the matter.

So tomorrow we disappear into the unknown. This account I am transmitting down the river by canoe, and it may be our last word to those who are interested in our fate. I have, according to our arrangement, addressed it to you, my dear Mr. McArdle, and I leave it to your discretion to delete, alter, or do what you like with it. From the assurance of Professor Challenger's manner—and in spite of the continued scepticism of Professor Summerlee—I have no doubt that our leader will make good his statement, and that we are really on the eve of some most remarkable experiences.

'Miss Morehead' Given Welcome on Maiden Trip From Goldsboro

Morehead City, June 10.—Morehead City gave a rousing welcome to "Miss Morehead" when she glided into town at 2 o'clock today on her maiden trip from Goldsboro to inaugurate the Seashore Transportation Company's regular bus service schedule between Morehead City, New Bern, Goldsboro, Durham and Greensboro.

Flying banners, playing bands, some speech-making and an enthusiastic crowd of business men greeted the handsome vehicle as her pilot brought her down the smooth asphalt to anchor in front of the Woodland Hotel, where the reception ceremonies were staged. Mayor Luther Hamilton headed the reception committee and delivered a short address of welcome to James M. West, president of the company and of several of the associated companies. Mr. West responded, outlining his hopes for the future of bus transportation in Eastern Carolina.

Miss Morehead's sister bus—Miss New Bern—left Morehead City this morning on the outward trip for Goldsboro. She will return this afternoon. For the present the company will operate only these two busses, but will increase the equipment as demand warrants. Miss Morehead left Goldsboro 9:30 this morning, just after the 7:30 bus from Raleigh arrived. She returned there this afternoon.

Permanent schedules have not been worked out yet. Tentatively they call for two trips beginning at each end of the run at 9:30 in the morning and at 2:30 in the afternoon.

IRELAND GIVES FINANCIAL AID TO THEATRICAL PRODUCTIONS

Dublin.—The Abbey Theatre, founded by William Butler Yeats, which has done more to make the name of Ireland known abroad, and gory, plays an important parts in the intellectual life of Ireland. It has produced for the first time 170 plays, many of them successful, but the theatre has been for the past 12 years run at a loss, and no director or shareholder has ever drawn a dividend.

To enable the institution to carry on, the finance ministry has included in the budget a grant of $4,250. In his opinion there is no agency providing an incentive to dramatic and literary work should be closed down.

Markets

Cotton Summary.
Of 14 cottons 7 are bullish, 1 bearish and 6 non-committal.
The weekly cotton crop report of a well known local house said past week generally favorable for cotton except portions of Texas, where at least one third of cotton area is badly in need of good soaking rains.
Many in local cotton trade expect weekly weather to be slightly bullish. Private cable says cotton crop lower Egypt less favorable. Bombay west coast and extended to United provinces.
New York an outside banking institution will again finance marketing of large part of cotton crop in ten southern states, credit of about $40,000,000 being expected.
Local cloth markets quiet and unchanged, yarns more active, 15 percent curtailment during July and August.
Shanghai cables: Thousands of striking Chinese mill workers resumed employment yesterday and the general strike is expected to terminate today.
Local showers fell yesterday in the Atlantic and Gulf states. Highest temperatures reported Tuesday East of Mississippi river was 94 degrees at Memphis, Tenn. Local thunder-showers are probable today in the middle Atlantic and North Atlantic states and Tenn. today and probably Thursday in South Atlantic and East Gulf States. Unsettled showery weather with rain in Southern portion of East Texas, indicated for Southwest today and tomorrow.

Tribune on Grain.
The government report on winter wheat was more bullish than any of the trade expected, it being six million bushels less than the lowest of the private reports. Spring wheat was slightly above the estimates. The market is in a position now to follow the trend of the orders and the trade in general is looking for higher prices.
There was heavy selling of wheat during the morning attributed to eastern interests and traders who got short on the break in most instances came in at the last. It was said after the close that with exception of the large holdings by a few local professionals the majority of traders held little long wheat overnight.

Liverpool Grain
Opened wheat 13-4 to 2 up at 10:35 a. m.; wheat up 21-4; corn unquoted. B'aires close wheat down 3-4; corn up 1-4 to down 3-4; oats down 7-8.

Liverpool Cotton
Sales 5,000 bales; receipts 3,000 including 800 American. Good middling 1390, middling 1335. July 1261, Oct. 1212, Dec. 1203, Jan. 1200. Due July 1263, Oct. 1214, Dec. 1204, Jan. 1202.

Sugar
Satterthwaite and Higgins say: The July liquidation this week enabled operators to offer actuals fractionally lower than first hand holders causing refiners to hold off temporarily. Actual market may, under continued July liquidation, ease to 25-8 cents basis and cause futures to react a few points further. Expect, however, strong resistance and on further decline would purchase distant months.

Coffee
Yesterday's decline in futures market tends to slacken up trade in actuals to a large extent thereby impairing confidence locally. Believe decline past two days not yet over, still feel market work lower.

Cotton Letter
There was considerable short covering yesterday on the theory that rains in Texas failed to break the drought in the sections where needed and that they proved inadequate over the Eastern belt. Today's market however will turn largely on the character of the weekly review. This is apt to be quite favorable as a whole and may revive bearish aggressiveness.

Scarcity of contracts yesterday was one of the notable features due probably to an over-sold condition and the curb market was strong after the close.
New Orleans has 16,140 bales on shipboard vs. 38,765 and Galveston 21,400 vs. 13,653.

POOLE TO TALK ON "YELLOW MILLIONS" Feature of Chautauqua Program

Illustrating his remarks with gorgeous native costumes, worth many thousands of dollars, Dr. Frederic Poole will give a brilliant discussion on China and Chinese customs and people at the Chautauqua to be held here beginning next Tuesday, June 16th.

All Dr. Poole's illustrated lectures bear the stamp of authority. They are the result of years of arduous travel and life among the people whom he represents and his views are the product of his personal camera operations.

Hence that ever present human touch and intimate familiarity with his subject, while his pleasing personality and racy conversational descriptions illumined with flashes of wholesome humor make his illustrated stories of foreign travel a visual charm and intellectual delight.

His four lectures on China are individual and separate, or one intensely interesting and wonderfully comprehensive lecture.

The crenelated walls of the forbidden city, Pekin, massive bulwarks and ponderous watch towers all suggest antiquity.

The mysteries of the Temple of Heaven and the Temple of Hell and the beauties of the Temple of Confucius are revealed in exquisite picture and description.

Curious customs of Chinese weddings and funerals. The thrilling legend of the Bell Tower, Ancient Observatory, "Boxer" relics, the "Ship of the desert," gorgeous funeral of the late Chinese Emperor, the beauties of the Nankow Valley, "the Eighth Wonder of the World," the great Wall, and many others.

Canton is the largest city in all China and a fertile field for the artist-lecturer-explorer. Through his association with the highest Chinese officials—he was the guest of the Viceroy during this journey through China—Mr. Poole was unusually fortunate in securing a vast quantity of entertaining material. The pirates' retreat, Canton's enormous boat population, crowded street scenes, street barbers, gambling dens and opium smoking, beautiful Macao, ancestral temples, the Flower Pagoda, the Water Clock, Military Academy, Temple of 500 Gods, Marco Polo discovered, execution grounds, the "Head" operator and Venice in Celestia will be described by Dr. Poole.

SIBERIA—NO PLACE TODAY FOR SEEKERS OF GOLD

Seattle. — The present policy of the Russian government has ended foreign gold exploration work and prospecting in Kamchatka, and in the district of the Amur River of Siberia. Carl A. Anderson, old Alaska gold hunter, said on returning to Seattle after a five year stay in that region. "I do not believe there are more than six foreign prospectors in the entire Kamchatka and Amur regions," Mr. Anderson declared. "It is a good place for foreign gold hunters to keep away from."
