MORNING SESSION EVOLUTION TRIAL PROVES UNEVENTFUL

Custom of Opening Rhea County Court With Prayer May Become Issue in Scopes Case

Dayton, Tenn., July 13.—Discussion of a motion by the defense to quash the indictment against John T. Scopes, charged with violating the Tennessee law against the teaching of evolution theories in the public schools, occupied the morning session of court today.

Presenting the motion, John R. Neal, spoke first for the defense and was followed by Arthur G. Hays, also of defense counsel. Former Attorney General Butler G. McKenzie spoke in opposition to the motion with Sue K. Hicks, also of the State Counsel, making the last argument, before the noon recess.

Judge Raulston just before ordering a recess until one o'clock, said to the lawyers, "Gentlemen the issues in this case are profound and the court does not wish to guess," adding that he would expect briefs to be filed on the motion to quash.

Other than reading the indictment and questioning of the juror as to whether he had expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant, the first hours of the day's session were uneventful.

A mild clash between attorneys developed during the session, but this did not seriously ruffle the calm of the court.

Dayton, July 13.—The custom of opening Rhea County court with prayer may become an issue in the Scopes case here.

Clarence Darrow, of counsel for the defense, while he had made no formal statement on the issue of the court, is known to have protested informally to Judge John R. Raulston presiding at the trial.

Judge Daulston today said that he would not depart from his custom of having prayer daily at the opening of court and if Mr. Darrow persisted in his protest to the extent of entering it in the records, the court would rule that the question was one to be determined by the conscious of the Judge and the resulting responsibility would be the Judge's alone.

Fed. Agents Conduct Refrigeration Tests on Green Corn Shipments

Wilmington, July 13.—Delbert German service agent of the Interstate Commerce Commission's Bureau of Service, and W. S. Graham and C. S. Kukul, agents of the United States Department of Agriculture, are in Wilmington to conduct refrigeration tests on green corn shipments. These tests will be made with a view to settling controversies, it is said.

The federal agents expect to accompany two carloads of corn to be loaded and moved next Tuesday, from eastern North Carolina to New York. One car will be given what is termed standard refrigeration and the other will be "top-iced" also. There will be frequent temperature readings during the trip and detailed reports of results will be. Comparisons will be noted and taken into account.

200 ARRESTED RUM RAIDS CONDUCTED IN PEORIA, ILLINOIS

Prohibition Agents Purchase Saloon and Erect Sign, "Uncle Sam's Place;" The Rum Dealers Fall for It

Peoria, Ill., July 13.—Under the ambiguous banner "Uncle Sam's Place," the government went into the saloon business in Peoria two months ago, obtained the confidence of the city's illicit rum dealers, and gathered evidence leading to wholesale arrests and raids in which 200 persons were caught. Edward C. Asher and Max Hartzig, Washington prohibition agents came to Peoria in May, purchased a saloon and erected the sign "Uncle Sam's Place." Established bootleggers viewed the legion with considerable amusement, and soon established connections with the new comers, who began making purchases from dealer and rum runners, obtaining evidence against virtually every saloon in town.

The rum dealers found the laugh was on them when Uncle Sam's proprietor evidently closed shop on Friday, went to the Federal building to get 40 agents from Chicago and Washington, and began a systematic clean-up of the city, which extended until late Sunday night.

Finance Minister Caillaux remained until the bitter end, and thus was prevented from going to the bedside of his wife, who was injured in an automobile accident yesterday.

As finally voted, the budget shows estimated receipts of 33,450,000,000 francs, and expenditures of 33,137,000,000 francs, giving a surplus of 13,000,000 francs. The Senate's vote of adoption was 278 to 6, while in the Chamber there was nearly a show of hands without debate.

THE PRESBYTERIAN MISSION WUKINGFU INVADDED TODAY

Three Missionaries Assaulted; U. S. Will Insist on Protection of Foreigners in China

New York, July 13.—Secretary of State Kellogg's announcement that the United States will insist upon the protection of foreigners in China, came to the front today with dispatches telling of a new outrage in the Province of Kwang Tung.

Cantonese soldiers invaded the English Presbyterian Mission at Wukingfu and assaulted three missionaries, two of them women, beating them and cutting them with knives. The Chinese also ordered all foreigners to leave the town.

The injured missionaries were among those who arrived at Swatow and they were in an exhausted condition.

The British Consul, upon hearing the story, demanded an official apology from the Chinese authorities, punishment of the guilty persons, and compensation for the injured missionaries.

ARMY AIRPLANE IS SEARCHING FOR PHILIP K. KNAPP

Charged With the Murder of a Taxi Cab Driver in Effort to Get Super - Thrill

New York, July 13.—An army air plane has flown 300 miles in order to search the foot hills and woods of northern New York for Phillip Knox Knapp, deserter from the army Air corps, who is regarded as a killer for a superthrill.

The air hunt for Knapp, who apparently slew Louis Penella, a taxi cab driver after he had exhausted all other means to get a kick out of life, centers in Plattsburg. The plane was dispatched from Michael Field yesterday. It carried photographs of Knapp and other material intended to assist ground forces of state troopers and army police in search for the man.

The plane will go from its headquarters to points along the Canadian Borders, and to Thousand Islands, where it is believed Knapp may seek refuge among rum runners. William W. Knapp, of Syracuse, father of the accused man, has come to New York to engage lawyers to defend his son in the event he is captured.

ANGUS W. McLEAN FOR PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The Democrats are casting about for a presidential candidate for 1928 and word comes from Washington that the eyes of the leaders are being turned upon a North Carolinian—Angus W. McLean, at present the governor of this, the greatest of all states in the Union.

Angus W. McLean has been well known to thousands of North Carolinians for many years. Not only is he an able and conscientious citizen in every sense of the word but he is a born leader, a business man of the first water and capable of greater achievements than those already accomplished.

Therefore, if the leaders of the Democratic party see fit to select Governor McLean as their presidential candidate for 1928 we believe that they will have selected well and wisely and that he can lead the party out of the chaos of the recent past.

Certainly Governor McLean has turned things upside down at the state capital since taking over the reins of state government. He told the people of this state during his pre-election campaign, that, if elected, he would install a business regime at the state capital and he has done this. He is following along an economic line and has already saved the state thousands of dollars.

What McLean has done already in North Carolina he could duplicate on a greater scale as president of the United States and that is what this government needs—a business administration.

North Carolina would be pleased to give Governor McLean their support for the presidency. The Democrats can find no more stable or suitable man for their standard bearers.—Durham County Progress.

Asks Tolerance

The "fundamental bedrock of liberty is tolerance," said Clarence Darrow, counsel for the defense in the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn. He declared it is a trial for the preservation of tolerance rather than the theory of evolution. "Nothing," he stated, "exemplifies intolerance more concisely and clearly than the law under which Scopes is to be tried."

It was midday before we had made ourselves secure, but the heat was not oppressive, and the general character of the plateau, both in its temperature and in its vegetation, was almost temperate. The beech, the oak, and even the birch were to be found among the tangle of trees which girt us in. One huge gingko tree, topping all the others, shot its great limbs and maidenhair foliage over the fort which we had constructed. In its shade we continued our discussion, while Lord John, who had quickly taken command in the hour of action, gave us his views.

"So long as neither man or beast has seen or heard us, we are safe," said he. "From the time they know we are here our troubles begin. There are no signs that they have found us out as yet. So our game surely is to lie low for a time and spy out the land. We want to have a good look at our neighbors before we get on visitin' terms."

"But we must advance," I ventured to remark.

"By all means, sonny my boy! We will advance, but with common sense. We must never go so far that we can't get back to our base. Above all, we must never, unless it is life or death, fire off our guns."

"But you fired yesterday," said Summerlee.

"Well, it couldn't be helped. However, the wind was strong and blew outwards. It is not likely that the sound could have traveled far into the plateau. By the way, what shall we call this place? I suppose it is up to us to give it a name."

There were several suggestions, more or less happy, but Challenger's was final.

"It can only have one name," said he. "It is called after the pioneer who discovered it. It is Maple White Land."

Maple White Land it became, and so it is named in that chart which has become my special task. So it will, I trust, appear in the atlas of the future.

The peaceful penetration of Maple White Land was the pressing subject before us. We had the evidence of our own eyes that who was walking first, halted with uplifted hand.

"Look at this!" said he. "By George, this must be the trail of the father of all birds!"

An enormous three-toed track was imprinted in the soft mud before us. The creature, whatever it was, had crossed the swamp and had passed on into the forest. We all stopped to examine that monstrous spoor. If it were indeed a bird—and what animal could leave such a mark?—its foot was so much larger than an ostrich's that its height upon the same scale must be enormous. Lord John looked eagerly round him and slipped two cartridges into his elephant-gun.

"I'll stake my good name as a shikarree," said he, "that the track is a fresh one. The creature has not passed ten minutes. Look how the water is still oozing into that deeper print! By Jove! See, here is the mark of a little one!"

Sure enough, smaller tracks of the same general form were running parallel to the large ones.

"But what do you make of this?" cried Professor Summerlee, triumphantly, pointing to what looked like the huge print of a five-fingered human hand appearing among the three-toed marks.

"Wealden!" cried Challenger, in an ecstasy. "I've seen them in the Wealden clay. It is a creature walking erect upon three-toed feet, and occasionally putting one of its five-fingered fore-paws upon the ground. Not a bird, my dear Rotton—not a bird."

"A beast?"

"No; a reptile—a dinosaur. Nothing else could have left such a track. They puzzled a worthy Sussex doctor some ninety years ago; but who in the world could have hoped—to have seen a sight like that?"

His words died away into a whisper, and we all stood in motionless amazement. Following the tracks, we had left the morass and passed through a screen of brushwood and trees. Beyond was an open glade, and in this were five of the most extraordinary creatures that I have ever seen. Crouching down among the bushes, we observed them at our leisure.

There were, as I say, five of them, two being adults and three young ones. In size they were enormous. Even the babies were as big as elephants, while the two the place was inhabited by some unknown creatures, and there was that of Maple White's sketch-book to show that more dreadful and more dangerous monsters might still appear. That there might also prove to be human occupants and that they were of a malevolent character was suggested by the skeleton impaled upon the bamboos, which could not have got there had it not been dropped from above. Our situation, stranded without possibility of escape in such a land, was clearly full of danger, and our reasons endorsed every measure of caution which Lord John's experience could suggest. Yet it was surely impossible that we should halt on the edge of this world of mystery when our very souls were tingling with impatience to push forward and to pluck the heart from it.

We therefore blocked the entrance to our zebra by filling it up with several thorny bushes, and left our camp with the stores entirely surrounded by this protecting hedge. We then slowly and cautiously set forth into the unknown, following the course of the little stream which flowed from our spring, as it should always serve us as a guide on our return.

Hardly had we started when we came across signs that there were indeed wonders awaiting us. After a few hundred yards of this forest, containing many trees which were quite unknown to me, but which Summerlee, who was the botanist of the party, recognized as forms of conifers and of cycadaceous plants which have long passed away in the world below, we entered a region where the stream widened out and formed a considerable bog. High reeds of a peculiar type grew thickly before us, which were pronounced to be equisetaceae, or mare's-tails, with tree-ferns scattered amongst them, all of them swaying in a brisk wind. Suddenly Lord John,

Public Requested to Demand Best Grade of Milk

The Standard Milk Ordinance, which is under the supervision of the State Board of Health, is a system by which milk is graded, the grades being: A, B, C and D. Naturally people who use milk are interested in using the best, which is grade A, and should insist on getting same.

To produce grade A milk requires strict rules of sanitation. Milk must be produced from healthy cows, tested for tuberculosis every year, the udders and flanks being washed in an antiseptic solution before each milking, in a barn with solid concrete floors, walls whitewashed and kept clean at all times, and a sufficient amount of light being provided.

When a vessel is filled with milk it is immediately removed to the milk room, a separate department with concrete floor, painted walls, screened and in no way connected with a dwelling house.

Milk is strained and cooled to a temperature of 50 degrees F or less, bottled and delivered at the same temperature. All the utensils must be washed and sterilized with steam before using and the milk itself must show not over an average of 50,000 bacterial count within a grading period, which is usually 23 three months, inspections and laboratory tests being made at regular intervals. All persons handling milk must have a health certificate, showing freedom from infectious diseases. And not a carrier of typhoid or other diseases.

The Health Department expects to announce grades August 1, when all dairymen will be given a grade, and all places retelling milk will be required to post a notice, showing grade of milk sold, and the public is asked to cooperate by demanding the best, which of course, will be grade A. White's Theatre Today, Tuesday

As radically as a covered wagon differs from an automobile, so a mid-western town of 1876 differs from one of the present day.

No section of the entire world has changed so much in the past fifty years as have the towns of Kansas, Missouri, Colorado, Montana and Wyoming, as motion picture directors have discovered to their cost when endeavoring to recreate for the films some vanished center. The sleepy freighting posts of the old west are today bustling cities.

For the production of Zane Grey's "The Thundering Herd," which William K. Howard directed for Paramount, an exact replica of an old-time trading post was built. Pioneers declared it was correct in every detail, according to their memories of old towns such as Fort Worth, Village, Dodge City and Salt Lake City.

The post constructed for the picture was of the stockade type with logs ten feet in height, stuck in the ground and bound together to form a square enclosure. One side of this square, fronting the roadway, was formed by the post building, a log structure like the stockade. This had a sort of platform outside with steps leading down to the street and a door and windows into the store.

NOTES ON TARHEELIA

The first modern building for housing State departments other than those located in the capitol was authorized in 1911 and ready for occupancy in 1913.

Associate Justice George Whitfield Connor of the North Carolina Supreme Court was born in Wilson, October 24, 1872. He was a son of the late Judge Henry Groves Connor, who was a member of the Supreme Court of North Carolina and was appointed Federal Court judge by President Taft. He was prepared for College by the Rev. B. S. Bronson and graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1892. He was a member of the house of representatives in 1900, 1911 and 1913 and was speaker in 1913. He served on the superior court bench from 1913 to 1924, when he was appointed on the Supreme Court bench by former Governor Morrison. The State Printing Commission,

FICTION OF NOTE

The Sunday World next Sunday will publish in the Magazine Section the story selected by Arthur Sullivan Hoffman, editor of Adventure, as the best story appearing in that magazine during the year. The story, "The Primitive Method," by F. R. Buckley is an excellent example of the dramatic values of repression and suppression. This story will hold your interest to the last word. Many features of interest and exclusive articles appear every Sunday in The New York World.

Rebukes America's Policy of Isolation

Lake Junaluska, July 12.—America's "policy of isolation" was sternly rebuked by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, addressing the social service conference in session here. His subject was "The Obligation of America to the Rest of the World."

Bishop Cannon spoke in detail of America's attitude in regard to the League of Nations, the World Court the Protocol, and said that, in his opinion, the treaty of Lausanne "is the blackest spot in 20th century history when America failed to back statesmen of Christian nations and they refused to intervene with Turkey on behalf of the Armenians."

"The whole word is wondering," said Bishop Cannon, "what they can count on from America in the future, because America is a nation which appears to have been endowed with greatest power and strength and wealth of any nation in the world. Christians should consider what is God's plan for such a country."

In this connection he presented the following questions:

"Are we going to shirk our duty, or are we going to claim our leadership, in view of the fact that America was founded on Christian principles with a historic background?"

"How can a world order be built in which all nations and races may find it easy to live together as brothers and children of God? What is the future of the nations; are the present national groups to be maintained or shall they be merged into a wider system?"

"Does patriotism mean repugnance to other nations or can it be combined with a desire to serve? Is it not a Christian duty for a nation to consider the effect of its legislation on other nations?"

"How far can a country with a monopoly or certain products exact exorbitant prices from other countries?"

"How far is a nation responsible to alleviate the misery of other nations? "Has a highly developed country the right to govern a less highly developed government? What is the duty and obligation of the church as a body in international affairs. How can the church build up a conception of international patriotism?"

Roscoe Canaday, 5 years old, was seized by a woman and two men as he played in front of his grandmother's home at Forest Hills, New York, and speeded away in an automobile.
