OUR SATURDAY NIGHT MEDITATION

"But Where are the Nine?"

St. Luke 17:17:—"Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine?"

The ingratitude of the nine lepers is quite easily explained on several grounds. A little thought will reveal much in ourselves and in our neighbors to make their action credible; and, if we are honest in condemning them, we must also condemn ourselves.

1. They may have thought that they had done nothing to deserve their horrible fate, or nothing more than others who yet passed them by as men accused of God; and that, therefore, it was only JUST that they should be restored to health.

It is more than likely that they had done nothing, or nothing special, to provoke their dreadful doom. They may have been suffering for the sins of their fathers, through an hereditary taint of blood, or from unwise virtue and breeding; or even from the ignorance of physicians or the bad sanitary and social conditions of the time.

Lepers were not necessarily sinners above all other men; they were often more sinned against than sinning.

And until Christ had taught us that in calling us to suffer for the sins of others, God is doing us the honor of associating us with Himself, and permitting us to take up the Cross of Him who bore the sin of the world, how can we wonder if men often thought themselves unjustly used, and felt that it was only right and fair that they should be delivered from forms of suffering which they had not provoked?

There are still many men fairly good men—who in their hearts regard every loss or trouble which befalls them as a wrong, and who take every success and blessing as their due. While WE ignore the over-ruling Providence, and even resent its decrees, we need not be overmuch surprised if the nine lepers did assume that they had been unjustly handled, and that it was but fair that they should be delivered from their doom so soon as God, or the Prophet of God, could look into their case.

2. They may have thought that they would at least MAKE SURE of their restoration to health before they gave thanks. True, there was a new vigor and sweetness in their blood; the distorted and defaced features had regained their former comeliness; and the clear rosy hues of health were coming back to their dead white flesh. But would it last? Was the cure complete? Would the priests pass them? Would their friends welcome them back into their home and social circles?

I am not trying to justify these ungrateful men; but was it not natural—was it not, that is, what you and I might do—that they should ask such questions, and conclude that, since they could thank the Master at any time, it would be well to wait until they were sure they had had an enduring blessing to thank Him for?

There are men around us who put off giving thanks to God even for "the blessings of this life," until they have none to give.

3. They may have put OBEDIENCE BEFORE LOVE. They may have said, "The Master bade us go and show ourselves unto the priests. Let us go on, then, although we feel we are already healed. To do as He commanded us will be the best way of thanking Him."

Even if THEY did not, there are many who argue this today, and whose faith expresses itself in formal obedience and formal worship, rather than in love and the courtesies of love.

Yet, when the Samaritan turned back and with a loud voice, glorified God, how sorrowfully Christ asked, "Were there not ten cleansed? Where are the nine?" To Him, even duty is of little worth until it is inspired of love. A loving disobedience to the letter of His command is better than an unloving obedience to it; for a loving disobedience to the letter is often a loving obedience to the spirit of His command.

4. The nine were Jews; the tenth a Samaritan; and it may be that THEY would not go back JUST BECAUSE HE DID. Misery had broken down the hereditary and cherished enmity of their hearts, as it often will. But no sooner is the pressure removed than the old hate flames out again; and the Jews take one road, and the Samaritan another. History is full of similar examples.

5. The nine ungrateful, and unloving lepers may have said within themselves, "We can be just as thankful to the Master IN OUR HEARTS without saying so to Him; and we can thank God as well, on our way to the priests, or out here on the open road, or in the fields, as if we turned back."

Surely we do not have far to go to find a modern parallel. There are some today who do not care to worship Him—at least with their brethren. They plead that they can find God in the fair temple of nature, and can worship Him more truly in the woods alone than in the sanctuary. MAYBE. But we should remember that no man can truly love God unless he love his brother also; and the true lover of God will find in the worship of the brethren whom he loves his best aid and keenest incentive to the worship of their common Father.

If, from this old story, you have learned to care more for the health of the soul than for health of the body; that losses are not to be resented as wrongs nor successes considered only as due; that if obedience is more than sacrifice, love is more than obedience; that man should be more to us than the whole round of nature: you will never be numbered among the NINE.

 pairs of rubber overshoes, the famous Russian galoshes, which had been shipped three months ago to Vienna, by the Soviet manufac-

The galoshes were exported in the first place just as the domestic market faced a veritable famine of rubber goods. While the 130,000
 pair were on their way to Vienna, crowds stood in line before Moscow galoshes shops, waiting hours in order to get the ration of one pair of rubbers per person.

goal to which we have aspired and in many cases this is done through sacrifice, except in rare instances, unless we are willing to sacrifice, we come to the end of our career empty handed.

Tonight, you should feel proud of this occasion, and those who learn of it later will honor you. Because to start a race and win is indeed an honor. It may be, you consider yourselves as having reached your goal, but be careful that you are not content with what has already been accomplished. Instead, consider it only as the beginning. Obstacles will confront you, as they do every ambitious person, but determination to win will always bring success in the end.

Diplomas were then presented by Mrs. Rowlett to the following: Misses Almada and Emma Mallison, Miss Maria Johnson and Mrs. J. E. Spilman.

After presentation of the diplomas, Mrs. Tolar, the beloved, and inspiring teacher, made a short talk to the graduates, and then presented each with a beautiful gift.

A delicious ice course was then served by Mrs. Tolar, assisted by Mesdames Spain and Rowlett after which the class reluctantly bade its member adieu, with best wishes and success to the Business graduate, of 1926.

She was buried Saturday in the Weldon Cemetery.

Mrs. Elks was formerly from Pitt County and lived in Greenville a few years ago, her husband being connected with the Pitt Lumber Co. The deceased is survived by her husband and seven children. She was held in high esteem and will be greatly missed by a host of friends. The floral offering was beautiful, and the funeral services were largely attended by friends and relatives.

WHITE'S TO SHOW SOCIETY COMEDY STARRING GLORIA
 In "The Untamed Lady," which is scheduled for a two days' run at White's Theatre, beginning Monday, Gloria Swanson returns in the type of picture that first brought her into screen recognition. The story, an exciting comedy romance, with a de luxe society background, was written especially for the Paramount star by that widely read fiction writer Fannie Hurst.

Under Frank Tuttle's direction the picture has been very briskly and smoothly produced, so that the interest and suspense are maintained right up to the final fade-out. Much of the action is laid amidst settings of lavish picture-ness. There are some extraordinary shots of the Yale-Princeton football game, dramatic scenes aboard a yacht during a raging storm, an exciting horse-back race and other dynamic scenes that keep the plot boiling at a high-pressure tempo.

The Sunday School rooms have been completed and we expect to use them Sunday morning. They improve the look of the church, both outside and in. We extend to all a cordial invitation to visit this wide-awake little church and Sunday School and see what we are doing.

The Sunshine class of Red Oak church had their class meeting on Monday, the 17th day of May, 1926, before the court house door.

The home was profusely decorated with dogwood and crab-apple blossoms, jasmine and wild cherry blossoms. To get the crowd livened up, we played "Musical Chairs" and then "Whistling Keys."

We then gathered around the piano and sang songs and some rounds. Then we elected officers.

for our class. Miss Willard Allen was elected president, with Miss Charlotte Tyson as vice-president; Miss Irma Pollard was elected secretary, with Miss Louise Allen as treasurer. The class has a membership of sixty young boys and girls. There were forty at the class meeting, with five visitors. After the business session was over, they were invited to the back yard, where they enjoyed an old-fashioned candy pulling. We are looking forward to our next meeting.

Miss Ruby Evans is visiting Mrs. F. L. Allen this week.

Mrs. John Aman of Dunn, Mrs. Jesse Brown and Mrs. J. J. Jenkins, visited at the home of Mrs. James Allen recently.

Announcing WILDACRES

Offering No. 2 Auditorium Section

Section 2 of Wildacres surrounds the Auditorium and links up with the Hotel section (sold out). It consists of 223 homesites, all right in the center of things, between Hotel, Auditorium and Casino, and just a few steps from each. Topography is picturesque, views charming and all will have streets, water supply, lights and sewer.

Wildacres has received enthusiastic approval. With 400 homesites sold, its future is secure. Building operations will soon begin. Only these 223 plots can be offered now. They should be taken within the next thirty days. When the Southern Vacationists pour into the mountains in June and July, their desire for Wildacres sites in the center of activities can be satisfied only through buying out some earlier investor.

Come now. See Wildacres. Take up one or more of these choice locations. In but a short time these best sites will be out of the hands of the company, it is believed.

Prices Still Moderate

Plots averaging 8,000 square feet are priced in this offering at $1,250 to $2,500, with improvements and membership in the ten clubs mentioned above.

Motorbus Round Trip

Call at District Office below and arrange for a round-trip to Asheville and Wildacres by Wildacres Motorbus. The fee is nominal, just to cover cost. Wildacres has adopted this system, instead of "free" trips, so that the investor who comes and buys need never feel that he is paying in the price of his lots for the trips of those who might come only out of curiosity or for pleasure.

Daily News Letter
Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population.
By H. K. REYNOLDS, INS Staff Correspondent.
London, April 24.—With sparkling sunshine and budding trees and flowers, the weather so warm that Londoners have begun to talk about a "heat wave," England is welcoming the first rush of American summer tourists, pouring in by hundreds and by thousands at all ports. Advance bookings of the trans-Atlantic steamship companies indicate that the tourist invasion this year is to be the most extensive in history. Thirty thousand Americans are due to arrive in England during April, and it is expected that this number will be more than trebled during the succeeding warm months.

Among the Americans arriving this month, it is estimated that at least 15,000 are wealthy persons who come to England each summer for the opera season and the various international sporting events, while the others are vacationists and students bent on sight-seeing. London is filled with hundreds of historical and literary associations, but the provinces, from Scotland to Land's End, will receive their share of visitors.

Stratford-on-Avon will be an important gathering place for American and other foreign visitors during the coming months. The celebrations in commemoration of the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth started early this month, despite the destruction by fire of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre. The Stratford-on-Avon players will have a leading part in the celebration, producing a number of Shakespeare's plays in the Stratford moving picture theatre, the only building available for this purpose since the fire. The scenery, costumes and properties for the memorial productions were destroyed at the same time the theatre was burned, but these have been replaced so there will be no hitch in the Shakespearean festivals during the spring and summer.

Queen Mary has established one of the spring fashions—the wearing of veils. Appearing in a light-colored, patterned veil, which matched her silver-grey hair, the Queen managed to revive a fashion which has been abandoned in England for many years. Fine transparent veils will be worn, according to the fashion experts, but there will be no return to the heavy black net veils of the Victorian era.

English medical men are giving some attention to the suggestions of American doctors that chewing-gum is an excellent healing agent for the after-effects of tonillitis. The Lancet, Britain's leading medical journal, expresses interest in the suggestion, but is not sure that English doctors can get their patients to acquire the chewing-gum habit, which has never become a widespread here as in the United States.

"Nevertheless," says the Lancet, "persons here who are not satisfied with their patient's convalescence under the usual methods of treatment may like to try this form of after-treatment, which is, at any rate, simple and harmless."

Princess Astrid, of Sweden, is mentioned as the future bride of the Prince of Wales in continental court gossip. Daniel Willard, president of the B. and O. This western Pacific Coast land is the land of opportunity. There is success, interest in life, happiness for anybody willing to work and bring enough money to start. But you must come provided with enough to start. "Honest hearts and willing hands" will not start a citrus grove, or an alfalfa ranch without capital. GET IT, AND BRING IT HERE.

Imagine, you that have never seen this enchanted Yuma Mesa, a tableland where orange growers have no smudge pots, because they have never had a frost, where they never spray or fumigate, because they have no scale or other insect pest to worry them, and where the state government watches every plant, fruit or seed that enters its territory, to keep out danger.

As a sample of what desert land can do when water is pumped up from below, consider the little forty acre ranch that Henry A. Bradley bought from O. T. McCoon. Bradley, the first year, planted forty acres of peach nuts, with cotton between the rows of young trees. His cotton paid for the land, the pumping plant and the young trees, the first year. Last year he took seventy bales of cotton from thirty-seven acres, more than two bales to the acre. And here the soil weevil is unknown, and the state intends that it shall remain unknown.

No one knows what the wealth of this country is to be. Hear Los Angeles the Standard Oil drills deeper, through an exhausted "oil sand," and from the deepest well known get a "gusher," spouting six thousand barrels a day, and that's nothing. A thousand such gushers would be insignificant, compared with the wealth hidden in this statement.
The Boulder Dam project will lock up in the canyon above the dam enough water to provide twenty six million acre feet, which means enough water to cover 26,000,000 acres, one foot deep.
That will be eighteen times as much water as the Roosevelt Dam supplies, and the new big dam should be named "Calvin Coolidge." His administration will put it through with perfect fairness to Arizona and California, and the people of the coast know it and appreciate it.
