

France Provides Tennis Mystery

New York, June 1.—(INS)—One of the thriving mysteries of the jolly old season was furnished by the character of the French team that was nominated for the recent international tennis matches with America in Paris.

A similar effect could be achieved only by supplanting Caruso in the title role of Pagliacci with Nick Altrock.

With the exception of Lacoste and Brugnon, not a French player of even the slightest of championship pretensions would appear in the series. And, yet, it was a French-concocted proposition from the outset.

One of the original boomers was Jean Borotra, who really forced the thing through during his last American visit. Then when the matches were made, Jean himself declined to be a party to the proceedings.

An early argument in favor of the idea was that Mlle. Lenglen, Mlle. Vlasto and Mlle. Contostavros comprised the greatest women's tennis team in the world, yet were denied a chance to prove it in the Wightman Cup series.

Of course, there is an Ethiopian in the national wood pile somewhere. Evidently, some of France's real stars are not playing ball with the French Tennis Federation, which was a good break for America in view of the fact that our men's team of Richards and H. Kinsey could be considered our best only by using the imagination as a rubber band.

$10,000,000 14 Story Club for Newspaper Men

Washington, June 1.—(INS)—A monument to the American press is being erected here. It will not be an empty shrine, but one that will contain the permanent home of the National Press Club and of a new room for several hundred Washington correspondents.

Prior to the purchase of the property last December, business and professional men of national prominence were consulted as to the advisability of such a venture. The newspaper men were encouraged by the counsel they received from those men and organized The National Press Building Corporation as a holding company for the club.

The corporation is headed by John Hays Hammond, who will be remembered by his work in South Africa with Cecil Rhodes, the Empire Builder; John Joy Edson, treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the American Red Cross and several other national organizations, is treasurer. James William Bryan, Washington publisher, general manager, and Henry L. Swinhart, head of the Washington Bureau of Havas news service, vice-president.

The officers of the corporation with the following, make up the board of directors: Elliot H. Goodwin, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Biographical Bank, president District National Bank, Washington; Herbert Hoover, secretary of Commerce of the United States; David Lawrence, president of Consolidated Press; Stephen T. Miller, National Park Service; Thomas R. Shipp, president of American Ship and Company; William J. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney General of the United States; Edward B. Merchant Is Financial Wreck

"I am a financial wreck because of the expense of doctors and medicine for my wife. She has been a chronic sufferer for 10 years. Some pronounced it gall stones, some gastritis and some intestinal inflammation. I happened to read an ad of MAYER'S and from the first dose my wife has steadily improved." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. FOR JUDGE OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS Fifth Judicial District

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF THE FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF NORTH CAROLINA:

Upon the resignation of Honorable Albion Dunn, of Greenville, Governor Angus W. McLean appointed the Honorable R. A. Nunn, Judge of the Superior Court, to fill the vacancy caused originally in this district by the resignation of the Honorable J. Lloyd Horton of Pitt County.

The law provides that all vacancies occurring by resignation in the office of Judge of the Superior Courts shall be filled by appointment of the Governor until the next general election, when the unexpired term is filled by election. A candidate for election to such office must be nominated in the primary on the first Saturday in June.

When the Governor offered to appoint Mr. Nunn to the honorable and responsible position of Judge, it must be assumed that Mr. Nunn considered the probable consequences of surrendering the professional connections he had formed during the years of his practice at the bar, and the uncertainty of securing the nomination for the office in the primary. It must also be assumed that he likewise considered the opportunity thus offered him of serving the people of his State in a wider field of endeavor, even though the tenure of his office was dependent upon the fickle fortunes of politics; that he duly appraised and appreciated the confidence in his integrity and capacity implied in the tender to him of the position by the Governor and by the members of the bar and the people who so cordially endorsed him for the position; and that under these circumstances he accepted the position because duty and an opportunity for service appealed to him more strongly than the profits of his assured business and professional relations.

Since Judge Nunn's appointment in January of the present year he has been constantly holding court, mostly in his own District. He has not only performed his duties with great satisfaction to the bar and the people, but it is admitted that he has made an exceptionally fine record, a record which fully justifies the confidence reposed in him by the Governor and by the bar and the people who recommended him for appointment.

Fortunately the people have had an opportunity to see and judge of him as a man and a judge, and we cannot doubt that they will confirm his appointment by giving him their suffrage in the coming primary.

The people of North Carolina have always held the office of Judge of the Superior Court in such high esteem that they have not considered it seemly in a Judge to enter the arena of politics to the extent of actively campaigning or electioneering. Indeed, such activities on his part have been generally considered highly unbecoming. Because Judge Nunn is, therefore, barred by this well established public sentiment from personally presenting his claims to the electorate, the undersigned, his personal friends and members of the bar in his home town and county, fully cognizant of his spotless character, his high sense of justice, his good judgment and splendid abilities and attainments as a lawyer, feel it our duty to him and the public to appeal in his behalf to the electorate of the Fifth Judicial District to sustain and confirm the action of the Governor by continuing this just, impartial and capable judge in the position which he has, during the brief period of his incumbency, filled with such signal acceptability to the people and honor to the State.

It must be evident to all that a lawyer in full practice, who has devoted his life to his profession, and who has no other business, could not, without great sacrifice, accept a short term upon the bench, and that nothing but a sense of public duty would, under ordinary circumstances, justify a capable lawyer in giving up an established practice and accepting the position, honorable as it is, for only a few short months. In these circumstances, we submit it would seem that good public policy, as well as party faith, would suggest the wisdom of giving a vacancy appointee of approved fitness the benefit of at least one full term. Unquestionably, if this should become the settled policy it would make these temporary appointments more attractive to men of recognized fitness and tend to the strengthening of the personnel of the judiciary.

In the contest for the appointment to the position which Judge Nunn holds, he was opposed by a number of able and highly respectable lawyers, all fine gentlemen, and strongly recommended by their friends and supporters. After due consideration the Governor decided to appoint Mr. Nunn. This was, of course, no reflection upon the other contestants for the high and honorable position. Knowing Judge Nunn as we do, we confidently believe if one of his opponents had been appointed he would not have been a candidate.

Under these circumstances, naturally Judge Nunn desires to win out in the approaching primary, not because he wants to beat any opponent, but because he feels that he has discharged the duties of his position faithfully and craves the approval of the people and a further opportunity to serve and further justify, if he can, the confidence reposed in him by the Governor, acting for the people.

Judge Nunn is a very appreciative man, and while the proprieties of the situation will not permit him to make a personal appeal, he will, we know, be grateful for your support.

Judge Nunn is a man of clean life, sound judgment, studious habits, learned in the law, a high sense of fairness and justice; and if permitted to remain upon the bench, will administer the law equally, justly, righteously, without fear or favor, and while deeply appreciative and grateful for the honor bestowed upon him, will, in the discharge of his duty, recognize no obligation except the obligation to do right and administer justice under all circumstances.

RESOLUTIONS OF JONES COUNTY BAR

WHEREAS, Hon. R. A. Nunn of New Bern, recently appointed by Governor McLean, Judge of the Fifth Judicial District to succeed Judge Albion Dunn resigned, has just finished holding the March term of the Superior Court for Jones County, having held said Court by exchange with Judge Devin; and WHEREAS, The members of the Bar and those attending Court, were profoundly impressed with the manner in which Judge Nunn presides; and it was generally predicted that his services upon the bench would reflect honor upon the Judiciary of North Carolina; and that the influence of his decisions would eventually become a constructive force for good in the administration of justice in the Courts of the State:

NOW THEREFORE, be it resolved, that in Judge Nunn the Fifth Judicial District, has for its chief judicial officer a Judge of the highest integrity, possessing to a marked degree that qualification we call judicial temperament,—so absolutely essential to the proper administration of law and equity; together with a splendid knowledge of law and court practice; into whose hands the humblest as well as the mightiest citizen of the State can with equal safety entrust the determination of their most sacred rights and obligations.

J. K. WARREN, Chairman. R. P. BENDER, Secretary.

ENDORSEMENT OF THE DEMOCRATS OF CRAVEN COUNTY

At the Craven County Democratic Convention held 24th April, 1926, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: WHEREAS the Honorable Angus Wilton McLean, Governor of North Carolina, has done the County of Craven the honor to appoint our countyman of the Craven bar, the Honorable Romulus A. Nunn, judge of the Fifth Judicial District to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Albion Dunn, and Nunn, but upon the County of Craven, does hereby most earnestly endorse the candidacy of Romulus A. Nunn for Judge of the Fifth Judicial District, not only to the voters of Craven County, but to the voters of the Fifth Judicial District, as a citizen without reproach, a painstaking, learned and conscientious lawyer without a superior in the district, and a man of integrity and the highest sense of honor; and earnestly solicit the suffrage of the democracy of the Fifth Judicial District to support the wise choice of the governor in filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of that fearless exponent of the law from our sister county of Pitt, the Hon. Albion Dunn, in the democratic primary, 5th June, 1926.

JOHNSON-AUSTIN

The following announcement has been issued: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ernest Austin announce the marriage of their daughter Priscilla to Mr. Raymond Walker Johnson on Wednesday, June the second nineteen hundred and twenty-six, Greenville, N. C. (No cards issued in town.)

Accented with charming simplicity and beauty a very impressive wedding occurred this morning at 7 o'clock in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church when Miss Priscilla Austin and Mr. Raymond W. Johnson were united in marriage, the vows spoken by Rev. Lloyd B. Jones, pastor of the chapel. The altar and chancel were most artistically decorated in ferns and Dorothy Perkins roses carrying out a pink and green color scheme.

Miss Mary Bertolo presided at the organ and rendered a beautiful musical program.

The bride party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march.

First came the ushers S. B. Gardner and Edward D. Austin, brother of the bride. Then the bride's maids, Misses Virginia

Blount and Gladys Klipatt, wearing white sport suits and carrying baskets of pink roses. Next came the maid of honor entering at the same time from separate aisles. The dame of honor, Mrs. Edward D. Austin, wore an orchid crepe dress with picture hat to match and corsage of pink sweet peas.

The bride entered on the arm of her father and was met at the altar by the groom with his best man, his brother, Benjamin Johnson, of Holden, Mass.

The bride was very attractively attired in a poudre blue georgette with silver lace trimmings and picture hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia and Bride's roses.

"Romance" by Bonnet was played sweetly while the double ring ceremony of the Methodist Church was used to unite the happy couple.

A formal breakfast was served to the bridal party, at the home of the bride's parents on Eighth street, after the ceremony.

The young couple with a few friends then left by motor, for Rocky Mount, from which place they took the train for their honeymoon will be at home to their friends in Holden, Mass.

Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., was remembered with a deck of cards. The hostess assisted by her little daughter, Elizabeth Cook Rogers, served a tempting salad course.

Mrs. E. S. Williams, Mrs. Edward Batchelor and Mrs. Julian J. White were guests of the club.

"WOMANHANDLED" LETS GET MARRIED! AND NOW SAY IT AGAIN!

The third Richard Dix success in a row is a record to be proud of. Yet, that is just what Director Gregory La Cava has achieved. Starting with "Womanhandled," his name on the billing became something to think about. "Let's Get Married!" proved the first film was not just a "flash in the pan."

Now—"Say It Again," Richard's third Paramount comedy to be directed by La Cava, which comes to the screen on Thursday, definitely proves him to be no longer a "comer" but instead, on who is very much "arrived."

GREENVILLE COMMUNITY PLAYERS PRESENT PLAY

The second appearance of the Community Players is announced for Friday night, June 4th, at White's Theatre.

The play to be presented on this occasion is one of the outstanding Broadway hits, in prologue and three acts, entitled, "Going Straight," with an ingenious plot and a wholesome, gripping story of deep heart interest, depicting a trusting mother's love and devotion for a son, once erring, but striving to go straight, while about the whole a master hand has entwined a dainty little legend of love, with a blending of humor that is irresistible. The program will be given as a benefit for the Jefferson Memorial fund.

Miss Hannah Dixon will appear in the leading juvenile role with Miss Hennie Long in the charming second lead, and Mrs. Triplett as the mother. Mr. Tige Gardner will assay the heroic lead of the male cast with Mr. Tom Foley in the character and Mr. Cleo Summerlin as the typical country boy. Mr. Triplett directing, will be witnessed in light comedy.

INDIAN OPERETTA ENJOYED BY LARGE AUDIENCE

At the East Carolina Teachers College last night the Indian Operetta "The Feast of the Red Corn" was patronized by a full house. Within ten minutes after the play began there was not a vacant seat.

Practice for this play has been going on for a number of months and has been rewarded for the efforts put forth in training the players.

Solos by Misses Florence Overton and Louise Phelps and then a dance by Miss Vinarski featured the program, while the younger characters were perfectly trained, especially the three little Indian maidens.

The play was coached by Miss Eugenia Thomas of the Music department of the Greenville High School, and due to her efforts it was a success.

STUDENTS MEET AT LAST ASSEMBLY OF YEAR

Mrs. Rose is introduced to the student body.

The students of Greenville High School met with each other for the last time this year. Honors were conferred upon those who had worked for them.

Activities for next year were discussed by Mr. Rose and Mr. Koch. The club that will receive most attention next year will be the debating club, for literally no organization can be more beneficial to students than the debating club as it requires quick thinking, a good vocabulary and the ability to speak for one's self.

A golf club will be discussed at the beginning of next term, while football, basketball and baseball managers for next year have been elected already, so that practice and arrangement of contests can start immediately next season.

Mr. Rose introduced Mrs. Rose and expressed his joy in having her and a doctor's degree. This is a lot to acquire in one year. However Greenville High School says, "Welcome, Mr. and Mrs. Rose."

Postmaster H. R. Munford then convened the Welfare Council and after important business was transacted officers for the ensuing year were elected.

A mass meeting then resulted in perfecting an organization of all postal employes in one grand body and Jesse T. Price, Postmaster of Williamson, was elected president; W. O. Ellis, assistant Postmaster, Washington, vice-president, and William P. King, Postmaster, Windsor, secretary.

Williamston was selected as the place for the next annual picnic May 30, 1927.

Thus ended an enjoyable occasion. The Rev. Mr. Turner offered prayer and all proceeded to their various places of business determined to be more efficient servants of the public.

Natives Find Excuses for Fire Goddess' Wrath

Kona, Island of Hawaii, T. H., June 2.—(AP)—Although their village was destroyed by a lava flow, the Hawaiian's who formerly lived in the ancient village of Hoopuloa still have unlimited faith in the existence and power of Pele, their goddess of fire and the volcano.

But they have been forced to produce alibis for the remissness of the goddess in destroying their homes. The havoc wrought they now blame on failure of the Hawaiians to do her bidding, and on the fact that many had turned to the religion of the haole (white man).

The story is told that a few days before the flow Pele appeared before a Hoopuloa fisherman in the guise of an old woman, and asked for a share of his catch. Thoughtlessly, he put her aside, and divided his catch with his neighbors. That night a glow was seen on the mountain, Mauna Loa. That was the first sign of Pele's coming.

PRISONER WOUNDED IN EFFORT TO ESCAPE

High Point, June 1.—A negro convict, James McDonald, was shot by a guard when he attempted to escape in this city today, about 6:30 a. m. He suffered painful wounds in the upper part of his body. Physicians believe that unless complications develop he will recover.

The shooting occurred while a gang of convicts were being conducted from their camp to the road which runs parallel to the Ashboro railroad. Upon arriving at the main street crossing of the Southern tracks, the truck which the convicts were riding in, was halted on account of a passing freight. The guard was taking to a policeman while the train was passing, and it was then that McDonald made the break.

He jumped from the truck and made a dash for the freight, while the guard's head was turned. However, the guard turned in time to see him. He fired and the negro fell.

Several buckshot are said to have passed entirely through his body. McDonald was on the road for a misdemeanor and had only a short term before him.

TERRIBLY MANGLED IN SAW MILL ACCIDENT

Bill Hope, June 2.—Reports from St. Leo's hospital in Greensboro state that the condition of Lewis Bryant, whose right arm was so badly mangled between the elbow and shoulder in a saw mill accident that amputation at the shoulder was necessary in a very serious condition due to the loss of blood and shock.

The accident occurred at the saw mill of Jess Allred which is located in this community. One of the rings that hold the teeth in place came loose and Bryant, who is about 54 years old and unmarried, had the fireman shut down so that the necessary repairs could be made. The fireman left for a few minutes and some one else came along and started up, not knowing that anyone was at work on the saw. "BLIND" JOHNSON SAYS OVERMAN WILL WIN

New Bern, June 2.—Senator Overman will be re-elected to the Senate with a big majority in the opinion of "Blind" J. C. Johnson, of this city, doorkeeper in the State House of Representatives, who probably knows more politicians than any other man in North Carolina.

"Mr. Overman has made a splendid Senator and he deserves to be re-elected, to continue his service for North Carolina, as ranking Democrat on important committees," says Mr. Johnson, who often gives his views on political subjects and who has had great luck with past predictions.

"It has been a long time since I have seen Senator Overman," the blind man continued. He always speaks of seeing people, because he sees them in his mind's eye. Repeatedly he has guessed within five pounds of people's weights. He is a good-looking man. Looks more like a Senator than any other man I've ever seen."

Vote early Saturday and avoid the rush.

Those who took part in the Eastern Carolina radio program broadcast from Richmond Monday night did a great service for the community in telling the world about the best section in the country, and if congratulations count for anything, those who took part crowned themselves with glory.

"Also Ran" will be a popular expression in the news columns next Sunday and Monday and will no doubt be read with sorrow by some of those to whom the phrase refers.

It is hoped that the efforts to make suitable arrangements for taking care of the women voters at the polls Saturday will be rewarded by separate ballot boxes and voting place.

Call the attention of those good men for whom you vote to represent us in the next General Assembly the number of serious accidents that have occurred in this and other counties as the result of unlighted animal drawn vehicles on the public highways and urge that these legislators support measures that bring an end to this ever increasing menace.

Receivership or no receivership there is little indication that the Co-ops will be swamped with deliveries of tobacco during the coming season.

ASCERTAIN THE FACTS, ELIMINATE FEAR, OUTLAW WAR.

In a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, Owen D. Young outlines the ideals and aims of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations which is being founded at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. He says in part: "Once you arm the public with facts, the area of each international dispute narrows down within limits that readily suggest peaceful means of settlement."

"A great reservoir of facts on subjects that cause irritation between nations could be assembled and placed at the disposal of the public as well as those who have to deal with those problems in the administrative field.

"I believe it is possible to establish an institution for fact finding. There are no higher credentials than the truth. Such a school should achieve three things:

"1. Develop a science of international relations.
"2. Ascertain the facts so far as they can be found in any particular problem.
"3. Produce a continually growing body of men trained in that science and available for service in the fields of education, government and business.

"Eventually there should be at least five or six such schools, preferably 10 or 12, in as many different countries.
"People inflamed by fear or injustice, no matter how groundless their information, will still fight, even though they hate war. We must have facts, localize the problems, and solve them while they yet remain in the narrow area of their origin."

MONTICELLO OUR BIRTHDAY GIFT TO THE NATION

Jefferson to a friend: "And of our own dear Monticello, where has nature spread so rich a mantle under the ye? Mountains, forests, rocks, river. With what majesty do we ride above the storm. How sublime to look down in the workshop of nature, to see her clouds' hair, snow, rain, thunder, all fabricated at our feet, and the glorious sun, rising as out of the distant sun, just gliding the tops of the mountain, and giving life to all nature."

Because on July 4, 150 years ago, Thomas Jefferson wrote the declaration of American independence, July 4 is the one hundred fiftieth birthday of the United States. July 4 is also the birthday of Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States. July 4 marks the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson. The same day John Adams, the political opponent of Jefferson, died and not knowing of Jefferson's passing, he whispered "Thank God, Jefferson still lives."

It was Jefferson's dying wish that the American people would preserve Monticello, his historic home. Thomas Jefferson received the west of Monticello (Little Mountain), at Charlottesville, Va., and reported it with his home, thus realizing the dream which he dreamed as a boy in the valley below, at Shadwell, his birthplace. As one looks down from this peaceful height in blossom time, a color in the hazy panorama of color in the hazy of trees, the lines of green fields, the almost geometrical disposition of brick-paved fields, the white wood and the view of a room which Jefferson brought from Scotland—a burst of bloom.

Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, one of the many distinguished visitors to Monticello said that no spot in America so reminded him of England. It is particularly like beautiful Devonshire. From the top of Monticello one may distinguish Shadwell, the birthplace of Jefferson, the University of Virginia, which graduated Woodrow Wilson and Edger Allan Poe. One may also see the homes of Madison and Monroe. Just 18 miles away is the home of Lady Astor.

As one turns from this eloquent panorama to the hospitable colonial entrance to the mansion, the three negro guides in purple livery lead such an air of welcome that one is started at the forceful suggestion of the imagination that they are servant and that within the host awaits, as ever his many guests.

The interior of the historic home is a revelation of the ingenuity of Jefferson. The eight day clock, which also told the days of the week, was designed by him, as was the six-foot folding ladder which was climbed to wind it. The swinging doors, now used in street cars, the catch behind each door, now used in Pullman cars, the lumb water, the beautiful decorative friezes, a different motif for every room, are, but a few examples of Jefferson's versatility and tender love for his home.

His desk was a shelf fastened to the wall by hinges. Here he wrote the immortal Declaration and "The Teachings of Jesus." Here he wrote the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, which was copied into the constitution of the United States. Here he dreamed his dream that every body and girl should have a free education—a dream that was materialized in what is now our public school system. Here he wrote the proposal for Virginia law for the freedom of the slaves. Our beloved Abraham Lincoln was the disciple of Thomas Jefferson.

When Jefferson returned from his many journeys in the service of his country, his slaves walked down the mountain and pressed so close to his carriage that ascent was difficult.

On one occasion Jefferson said: "It is written in the book of life that these people shall be free." On another occasion he reproached his grandson for ignoring the rights of a slave, with: "Never let a servant be more polite than you."

There is only the air of home about the mansion; no suggestion of the forbidding museum holds the visitor at arm's length. Even the old gig, which Jefferson designed, and in which he rode to Philadelphia to sign the Declaration, seems a symbol rather than a relic.

One touch of sadness, felt by almost every visitor, is the empty book shelves. One who has seen the library of Sir Walter Scott looks with sadness upon the bookless shelves in Jefferson's library once filled with the most carefully selected and valuable volumes known to his day. Although he served his country without compensation for 60 years, his library was sold to congress for a small sum to meet his debts.

Jefferson's hospitality knew no bounds. Three of the 35 rooms of his home were set aside for Madison, Monroe and Lafayette. When he retired to Monticello, a stream of guests came to visit him; sometimes whole families visited him for months. It was said that "everyone in the United States of any enterprise sooner or later found his way to this extraordinary hermitage." This is also true today. The crowds that came to Monticello usually invaded the corridor and even passed into the rooms of the house to watch Jefferson merely pass from one room to another.

The life he was leading, although he did not know it at the time, was slowly driving him to bankruptcy. He was in fact keeping an unusually large hotel, giving room and board without receiving one cent in return from his guests. He himself wrote that "an ox lasted only a day or so." Sometimes he had to prepare 50 beds for a night.

Added to the dwindling of his resources, the pre-revolutionary debt on his wife's estate became due in England and nearly half of his fortune was swept away at one blow. The indebtedness that he had made for a friend cost him $20,000. Things were going from bad to worse. Then finally he had to sell his library to congress for $23,950.

When the news spread through the country that President Jefferson was planning to sell his property by lottery in order to secure money with which to pay his debts, public meetings were started to obtain subscriptions for Jefferson's use. This action on the part of the public made his last days a little easier but that was all the benefit he derived before he died. The debts still hung over the estate, the subscriptions ceased, the lottery was a farce and the executor disposed of the estate.

Bankrupt Days
The way to bring tears to the eyes of Tom Rhodes, who for the last 36 years has been the keeper and the host at Monticello, is to pick a leaf or trample on the grass every blade of which is dear to him.

With unswerving devotion he aided the late Jefferson Levy, the last private owner of Monticello, in keeping this sacred spot in condition until such time as it should belong to the people of the nation. Large sums were refused from those who wished to purchase the property for private use. Finally the owner, himself facing bankruptcy and the foreclosure of mortgages, told the governor of Virginia that he would reserve the home and 20 acres but that the demands of necessity forced him to sell off the remaining 620 acres. This was in 1923.

Governor Trinkle at once telegraphed Stuart G. Gibboney, a prominent New York attorney, a native of Virginia and a direct descendant of Patrick Henry, to "come down and save Monticello." In consequence, on the one hundred eightieth anniversary of Jefferson's birth, April 13, 1923, the Thomas Jefferson Memorial foundation was established by organizing a non-partisan group of volunteer men and women dedicated to the all-American task of acquiring Monticello as an enduring tribute to him who demonstrated the fundamental ideals on which our nation was built.

Jefferson's Service
Although a great financier recently remarked that, were Monticello placed under the hammer it would in 20 minutes bring $1,000,000, through the efforts of M. G. Gibboney and the patriotic generosity of the late owner, this "finest example of American architecture, with Jefferson's law office, his honeymoon lodge and several other outbuildings with valuable furnishings and priceless Jeffersonian relics and with over 640 acres of land have all been purchased for only $500,000." That and a like sum for the endowment of the property, which has the potentialities of a great park, are all that is asked of the entire country, so that the people may forever own this beautiful and inspiring haven of patriotism.

Edward O. Leader, noted Yale crew coach, was photographed immediately after his marriage to Helene Meta Gilbert, of New Haven, Conn., in New York.

Those visitors who are fortunate enough to enjoy a half hour chat with Mrs. E. D. Hotchkiss, the Monticello pioneer chairman for the state of Virginia, on her palatial porch near the Jefferson estate, carry away a fund of inspiring information and many humorous stories.

Did you know that Jefferson introduced into this country merino sheep, Italian rice, rotation of crops and terraced farming? Do you know that he invented the manifold signing machine, letter copy press, improved plow and that he originated the American system of decimal coinage? Do you know that he owned and played a Cremona violin and that he was a student of natural history, Indian languages, Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, German, Italian, mathematics and philosophy, and that he was rector of the University of Virginia? Do you know that he designed and built Monticello, that he designed the buildings of the University of Virginia, the state capitol at Richmond and aided in the plans for the United States capitol at Washington?

Thomas Jefferson was 100 years ahead of his time. We are today just catching up with him.

Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population.

Parsi, June 2—(INS)—"When even the men haven't any rights, how can you expect the women to have them?" says Fareded el Akle, visitor from Syria to the International Congress for Woman Suffrage in Paris.

One would never dream that Fareded el Akle were Syrian, for she speaks English perfectly and dresses like any English woman. She has been a teacher in the American school at Beirut for fifteen years and has a thorough knowledge of public problems and questions of the day. She is expecting to take a great deal of information back to her women in Syria to help them in the fight for their rights. Still under Turkish law, the men have little to say about their laws and government. Naturally, the women have much less.

The little strip of land called Syria, no more than five hundred miles long and seventy wide, is one which, after the war, was awakened to the fact that it has the right to decide its destiny and determine its government. The intellectual awakening brought about by the educational activities carried on by various European and American missions has steadily grown. Changed conditions of the country have brought into play forces hitherto unknown. Among these and one of the greatest, according to the Syrián visitor, is the woman's movement.

"A few years ago," says Fareded el Akle, "it was regarded shameful for a young woman to depend upon herself for a living. Now it is the other way around and the Syrián woman is educating herself to be a teacher, clerk, doctor, government employee, newspaper woman, relief worker, or what-not."

All the cats came to Paris recently when the Cat Club de France held its first International Feline Exposition at the Salle Wagram.

Three hundred and fifty fluffy, down, soft purring animals, meowed their way to the show-rooms. Piled on long polished tables and arranged in fifteen rows, each in a gilded, beribboned cage, all varieties and shades of feline aristocracy and beauty vied for the visitor's attention. Every one of them had the air of being attended by a second maid, or a feminine chemist.

There were Persians, blues, blacks, whites, fauves, cats from Spain, India, China, Holland, Egypt, Belgium and nearly every other country under the sun. There was the Siamese, the cat-god, seeming to offer himself for adoration. There were beautiful Angoras, blue ones and white ones with rose noses and green eyes.

The high speed has caused driver Bob MacDonough's shirt to be blown off his back. It streams in the wind behind hanging to his shoulders.

It is fortunate for us that the air has power. A shooting star is a lump, often of solid metal, melting and disintegrating by friction of the air caused by its terrific speed, flying to the earth in harmless dust.

Everything is comparative or "relative" as Einstein puts it.

Human insects stood or sat today for four hours, watching the roaring machines rolling around at the "horrible speed" of more than 100 miles an hour.

Link across the track, opposite the judge's stand was a humble little wire pressed by each car as it went over, and that wire recording the exact time of each lap sent its report to the judge's stand at a speed of 186 miles a second.

Men have not merely a great deal to learn, but everything to learn about speed and use of power. C. F. Kettering, able engineer at the head of the General Motors experimental laboratory reminds you that the only gallon of gasoline contains enough power

PRINCESS JULIANA

VISCOUNT TREMATON

Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of England, endorsed a sensational report pronouncing the Soviet Government stable. Rosa Ponselle was recovering from an operation in New York. Viscount Trematon, nephew of Queen Mary of England, was mentioned as a possible consort for Princess Juliana of Holland.

er to drive a Ford car from St. Louis to Detroit, 450 miles. And Henry Ford's engine, very efficient, gets only 15 miles from that gallon, which means 97 per cent of its power lost.

Mr. Kettering doesn't predict but thinks it quite probable in twenty years automobiles will travel 150 miles to the gallon of liquid fuel. But don't wait until then to buy your car. Fifteen miles of travel on 22 cents worth of gaso-

The engines in today's race prove that man, although wasteful, is considerably more efficient than Mother Nature. You know the size of an ordinary horse. Those small concentrated engine racing around the brick track today, develop one and one-half horse power in one cubic inch of piston displacement. Compressing a horse and a half into one cubic inch without losing any power, and with great economy in feed and upkeep, is an achievement.

The horse's heart beats about sixty times a minute in the pistons of engines that raced yesterday, there are 450 explosions every second. And the revolutions of the flywheel at high speed go up to 7,000 a minute.

Yet all this is awkward, slow, cumbersome compared with Nature's microscopic achievements.

If you could look inside an atom of hydrogen you would see that negatively charged electron in that atom revolving around the positively charged nucleus at a rate of speed that seems utterly preposterous when written down. In proportion to its size a negatively charged electron is as far from its nucleus as ours is from the sun.

And the electron revolves around the nucleus one thousand trillion times in a second. Endless millions of such atoms of hydrogen are in one small tear in a corner of your eye. Yet small as the atom is, that electron in its tiny orbit actually travels at a speed of thirteen miles per second. That is something for our un-gainly minds to think about.
