FREE WILL CHURCH T ACTION OF PASTOR

Decline Resolutions Prohibiting Indulg-Amusements

The Greenville Free Will Baptist Church in special session last evening declined to receive at this time the resolution presented by the pastor receptly to the official board, after a lengthy discussion. The resolution would have subjected to suspension members of the church who engage in gambling, attend places classed as places of questionable amusement. or visited swimming resorts or engaged in secular work, except necessity on the Lord's Day. The resolution would have also demand attendance of members annually at the church conferences and financial support for good standing, but the fight centered around the clauses referring to

The above is the only comment I have to offer upon the action of our church last evening. Nor shall I attempt to defend myself from the personal attacks made during the discussion. All thinking people know that the spirit of Christ does not lead Christians to evade an issue by resorting to public personal abuse, and I leave the defense of my character in the hands of God. I am saxing only that in my heart there is no ill will toas I ever have my church to prayer, unselfish prayer, at the altar of God. There is the best place to win victories after all. Every Effort Being Made to Save Canadian Financier From the Gallows; Additional Funds Are Expected to Pour in As Result of Robert Scott's Confession That He Did the Killing

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 5 .- (INS) -The next move of attorneys on the checkerboard of legal procedire to save Russell Scott, sen tenced to die on the gibbet October 15 at Chicago for the murder of loseph Mourer, a drug clark, is eing awaited with great interest by those interested in criminal procedure.

William Scott Stewart is Scott's attorney and is making every ef-ort to save the former Canadian financier from the gallows.

Additional funds are expected to pour into the Scott defense fund as a result of the confession of krobert Scott, Russell's brother. that he fired the shot killing Maur-

Another appeal to the state supreme court is the expected maneuver from Stewart. The supreme court already has had the case beore it on three different occasions. It has passed on Scott's trial and conviction and affirmed the jury's verdict against him. When the case bobs up again it will be for a review of the jury finding that Scott has recovered from mental trouble for which he was sent to Chester penitentiary hospital, staving off a sentence of hanging.

The hearing of this cause was before Judge Marcus Kavanagh at Chicago and probably will be based on the fact that Scott was denies a change of venue when the hearing was held. If the supreme court sustains this finding, Scott's only hope is in a direct appeal for clemency to Governor Len Small.

The pardon board heard Scott's plea prior to denial of clemency by the governor before Russell was found insane and there is nothing new to be offered to it. It was asserted at that hearing that Robert Scott had fired the fatal shot. but at that time he had not been located. His confession, therefore, offers nothing new to the board.

THE POWER BEHIND PROGRESS

N the Fall of 1923 an odd form of calamity befell New York City. It was not an "Act of God." Fire, flood or famine did not threaten. There Fire, flood or famine did not threaten. There was neither rumor of war nor suggestion of riot. The weather was friendly, the public health good, transportation was uninterrupted and usiness moved smoothly—yet into this peaceful picture there suddenly descended a kind of community paralysis that filled multitudes with dismay. Had it not passed as swiftly as it came, it would be hard to calculate its consequences, but even its few days of duration cost millions of dollars. More than this, it revealed in a somewhat startling way the degree to which all the activities of a great city were dependent on a commodity which most people had taken unthinkingly, as a matter of

What had happened? Merely that for the first time in two centuries New York found itself without its usual newspapers. A press room strike had halted their publication,

While most people had been aware of a controversy between publishers and employees, it had generally been regarded in the casual way with which one is apt to view the affairs of others until, on a certain day, it became suddenly and distressingly personal. On that day there was no paper on the doorstep. The news-stands were unnaturally bare. Commuters were driven to watching familiar landscapes as their trains rushed city-ward instead of renewing their contacts with the happenings of the four continents. The world seemed strangely out

Store sales sagged abruprly, for only the strangely alone. People cannot co-operate abow windows remained to tell the daily bargains. Finance, always dependent on the latest news, was thrown back upon the thin stream of information that came trickling through the tape. What was happening in Washington, in Chicago, in London? The world of business was hesitant, ancertain, because it was poorly informed. Even for the humblest tradesman this guiden stoppage of news was an inconvenience; for many others it was fraught with the gravest possibilities.

Why was this experience so disconcerting? Because it produced a feeling of isolation, it cut off the city from the outside world—not physically, but mentally; it even cut off the readents of the city from knowledge of each other, because people liave come to rely almost entirely on the papers for their local news. One may be in a room with a number of others, but it the lights are suddenly turned out, one feels labors and abilities of hundreds within its

War Veterans To

Organize Society

Topeka, Kansas, Aug. 5 .- INS Descendants of the Civil War veterans in Kansas are leading in the organization of a new patriotic society. There are few Civil war soldiers living, and the mem bers of the Sons of Veterans are growing old. It is the purpose of the now organization to keep alive the memories of the Civil war by including in this new organization all descendants sons and daughters and grandchildren of soldiers who served in the struggle for national Union.

Chanute is the national headquarters of this new society to be known as the Sons and Daugh ters of the Civil War. Col. C. S. Nation, its originator and first president, is a former state commander of the Sons of Veterans. He designed it as a means of patriotic activity for the generations following the Sons of Viterans and providing also an oppportunity for vomen not eligible to membership in the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic or the Woman's Relief Corps.
