Reports from officials indicate that exhibits at the Pitt County Fair this year will be more numerous and better than ever before. It is to be hoped that every community in the county will be represented among the exhibits. Every community has the best product in a certain line and exhibiting these products at the county fair will gain much for the community as well as furnish valuable knowledge to persons from other sections.

THE CHILD AT SCHOOL

With the opening of another school year, the problem of encouraging the child to make the most of the opportunities which the school offers again presents itself. It is a problem in which parents as well as teachers should take a keen interest.

Perhaps the most important objective to be sought is to awaken in the child a real desire for knowledge.

It should be pointed out that it is possible to derive enjoyment from the pursuit of school studies if one approaches them with a genuine ambition to learn. The child should not be led to feel that going to school is an unpleasant duty. He should be impressed with the fact that it is a privilege to be appreciated, not only as a preparation for after life, but as a means of present happiness and satisfaction as well.

Some children appear to realize this without much urging, but others seem to be naturally averse to mental effort, and require patient handling in order to arouse their interest in the school work.

Parents should not place the entire responsibility upon the teachers, but should cooperate with them not only in insisting upon punctual attendance but also in leading the child to adopt a proper attitude toward his studies.

PRESS COMMENT

SWAT THE SIGNS FOR SAFETY AND SCENERY

(News and Observer)

"Unofficial signs placed along the roadside either attract attention or they do not. If they do not, they are useless. If they do, they are dangerous because every driver needs to have his time and attention and thought and eyesight all concentrated on the one idea of proceeding safely and avoiding the possibility of accidents. Whether such signs are attractive and hence dangerous or unattractive and simply useless, they are distinctly objectionable and will be gotten rid of to the limit of this department's ability to do so."—Samuel McGowan, Chief, Highway Commission of South Carolina.

There has been much talk about the ugliness of the glaring signboards, erected on all roads leading into every town and city. They shut out and mar the scenery. For that reason they are more than an eye-sore. But we are so commercialized that it is too much to hope that a mere aesthetic appeal will be sufficient to stop glaring and garish advertising on signboards almost as big as a house.

But the public is becoming educated up to the doctrine of Safety First and to the motto of "it is better to be safe than to be sorry." If billboards are merely ugly, is a desire to see the flowers and trees and growing crops to stand in the way of telling travelers where to buy the best oil and cigarettes and soft drinks etc.? Business is superior to beauty. But, if these big signs endanger human limbs and human life, an altogether different question is raised.

In South Carolina the Highway Commissioner, Admiral Samuel McGowan, has made a study of the effect of big signs upon safety of travel on the highways. Other states have done likewise with the result that some of them have legislated against them. Massachusetts has adopted a constitutional amendment permitting the Legislature "to regulate and restrict all outdoor advertising on public highways, in public places and on private property within public view." Connecticut has, in addition to other regulations, imposed an annual tax of three cents per square foot on billboards. The Supreme Court of Missouri has decided that "this class of advertising might be entirely suppressed by statute with out offending against either State or Federal Constitution." California has enacted protection laws as have New York, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Minnesota and Washington. Some court decisions classify big billboard advertising as an offense to the eyes and declare it as much a matter for the exercise of police power of the government as are offensive noise and odors. Florida has adopted the slogan, "Swat the Sign and Save the Scenery." In Hawaii big billboards are permissible only in commercial districts. In Europe this offense to the eyes and danger to motoring is nothing like the ugliness or the danger as in this country. England has a Society for Checking the Abuses of Public Advertising and it has done much to preserve the unbroken view of the restful loveliness of its quiet countryside.

The legal power to order the removal of big billboards has been raised and there are varied constructions. The Supreme Court of the Philippines sustained a statute permitting the regulation of billboard advertising as a proper exercise of the police power of government, and added: "If the advertisers were required to put their advertisements on the side of a billboard facing the road, billboard advertising would soon die a natural death." It is argued that the regulation of billboards is not so much the regulation of private property as it is the regulation of the use of streets or other thoroughfares. It is not true that billboards derive value from the private property on which they stand. They derive their sole value from proximity to the public thoroughfare. No body puts up billboards on land remote from roads.

Newspapers have been deprived by law of what they contended was their inalienable right. The State of Louisiana licensed the Louisiana lottery. Newspapers advertised drawings. The whole concern was gambling with little chance to those who were deceived. The Postoffice authorities denied the right of newspapers to second class rates carrying that advertisement. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision. Newspapers lost hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising by that decision. No liquor advertisements, or any sort of game of chance can appear in a newspaper. These cases show that the campaign against ugly billboard advertising is the same as was made upon advertising in newspapers. In the case of newspaper advertising of lotteries there was no question of danger to limb or life involved.

A new angle to the attempt to end the ugly defacing and dangerous big signboards on highways has arisen in South Carolina. Exercising what he believed to be a duty to safety on the public highways, Chief Highway Commissioner McGowan ordered their removal from the State highways. It was contended that no such right existed and that the Commissioner had exceeded his powers. Upon application to the Attorney General for his opinion, that officer wrote to the Highway Commissioner that "no law is found empowering their removal when they are not so constructed as to endanger or interfere with the traveling public using the State highways."

"Fine," said the advocates of ugliness and hiding the scenery by bold proclamation, "Go to Browns for the best oil and gas," and others who feel they have an inalienable right to deface the landscape to attract the attention of people in the auto to their wares.

Not so fast. Highway Commissioner McGowan (he is "a Daniel come to judgment, yea, a Daniel") accepted the law as declared by the Attorney General and made this public statement under which he proposes to end the signboard nuisance. He stated in a letter to the North American Service Company: "This of course, was simply another way of saying that the State Highway Department is at liberty to remove such objects as do 'endanger or interfere with the traveling public using the State highways'—which point, I think, is fully covered by the fourth paragraph of the enclosed 27 August, 1926, memorandum—the fact being without any possibility of intelligent question that, if the signs you erect did not attract attention, you could not expect to be paid for putting them up, whereas, if they do attract attention they most decidedly endanger and interfere with the traveling public using the State highways."

Section four, referred to by Commissioner McGowan, is quoted as the text of this editorial. It is so new and so plain an exposition that it is quoted here as the last and conclusive word in the argument in favor of preserving the scenery from ugly signs that offend the eye, many of which by compelling the attention of the driver, endanger limb and life on the public highway.

"Unofficial signs placed along the roadside either attract attention or they do not. If they do not, they are useless. If they do, they endanger because every driver needs to have his time and attention and thought and eyesight all concentrated on the one idea of proceeding safely and avoiding the possibility of accidents. Whether such signs are attractive and hence dangerous or unattractive and simply useless, they are distinctly objectionable and will be gotten rid of to the limit of this department's ability to do so."

Mrs. W. L. Patrick left yesterday for Wilson, where she joined a party for a trip to Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

Arthur B. Corey has returned from a ten days business trip to Clearwater, Tampa and St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mrs. David J. Whichard, Jr., has returned from a visit in Goldsboro.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson, of Washington, was the week-end guest of Miss Elizabeth Phelps.

Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Spence and children spent Sunday in Goldsboro.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore has returned from Seven Springs where she has been spending the summer.

Miss Ida G. Whichard, of Stokes, is visiting at the home of Mrs. D. J. Whichard.

Kenneth Whichard, of Whicher, R. A. Whitaker, of Kinston, was a Greenville visitor today.

added impressiveness to the ceremony. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. S. W. Hill, of Tayboro, sweetly sang, "To You," and "At Dawning." She wore a lovely gown of white georgette and held a colonial bouquet of yellow asters. Mrs. Troy W. Rouse, of Greenville, sister of the bride, presided at the piano. She wore a lovely dress of rose georgette and taffeta trimmed with silver crystals. Her flowers were deep pink asters. She played as the professional. Lohengrin's wedding march, during the ceremony she rendered "Traumerei" and as a recessional she used Mendelssohn's wedding march.

First to enter, to the strains of the wedding march, was Miss Nannie Lindsey Stokes, of Greenville and Raleigh, as first bridesmaid. She wore blue georgette over taffeta, silver slippers, and carried a colonial bouquet of pink asters. Next to enter as first groomsmen, was Mr. William B. Campbell, of Wilmington. Then followed Miss Rachel Hazelton, of Winterville, dressed in pink georgette, wearing silver slippers and carrying a colonial bouquet of blue asters; followed the second groomsmen, Mr. Millwee Beal, of Atlanta. The little flower girls came next, wearing dresses of orchid georgette. They were little Miss Virginia Rouse, niece of the bride, and little Miss Lucile Cox, cousin of the bride. Next to enter was Mrs. A. T. St. Amand, of Wilmington, sister of the bride, as game of honor. She was beautifully gowned in peach georgette and carried a colonial corsage of blue asters. Miss Mildred Moomaw, of Bristol, Tenn., entered next as maid of honor, gowned in yellow bouffant taffeta with chiffon trimmings. She carried a corsage of lavender asters.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Ashley T. St. Amand, who gave her in marriage. She was dainty and beautiful in her bridal dress of white imported brocade. Her veil made coronet fashion, was caught with orange blossoms and her train was of white imported brocade. Her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley.

They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. John Gaylord, of Wilmington. There Rev. James E. W. Cook, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, of Greenville, officiated, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

Immediately following the reception given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord, accompanied by a few members of the bridal party, left by motor for Goldsboro. There they boarded the train for Western North Carolina. They will be at home after September 25th, at 1612 Orange St., Wilmington, N. C.

The bride, a graduate of Salem College, is the lovely and attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. T. Cox, of Winterville. The groom is a very popular young accountant of Wilmington. Both bride and groom possess a host of friends throughout the state.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Miss Mildred Moomaw, Bristol, Tenn.; Mr. John Gaylord Mr. and Mrs. Ashley T. St. Amand Mr. and Mrs. George O. Gaylord and daughter, Mr. J. R. Johnson, Mr. J. F. Gaylord, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Campbell, Mr. James F. Tyre, of Wilmington; Mrs. M. W. Uzzell, Mr. Francis Uzzell, Miss Elizabeth Uzzell, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Miss Isabel Dawson, Dr. and Mrs. Frank S. Lynn and two sons, Baltimore, Md.; Rev. W. E. Cox, Richmond; Mrs. John

NEW FIRM JOINS LOCAL MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION

Williams-Chapman, Inc., who have recently opened in the Mumford building, one of the most attractive stores in the city for ladies' ready-to-wear and their various accessories, today became members of the Greenville Merchants Association. When approached today by the Association's secretary relative to becoming a member, Mr. Williams, the manager, stated that he appreciated the opportunity because his firm had great confidence in Greenville, Pitt county and the people who make up the population of the city and county, and that he realized that an organization such as the Merchants Association, was essential for the mutual benefit of both the buyers and the merchants. The new firm has an attractive store and is a credit to the business life of Greenville.

Honolulu, Sept. 13.—Various localities have their own methods of conducting the real estate business, but one of the most important in Hawaii, outside of the offices operating for real estate business alone, are the so-called 'hul' organizations which have sprung into prominence with the present activity at Waikiki beach and the beaches on windward Oahu.

The word 'hul' (pronounced hooey) is Hawaiian and is defined in the dictionaries of that language as a 'coming together.' It represents a pooling of interests in a common purpose to put some project through. In the old days the Hawaiians joined together for planting or fishing and each separate organization was known as a 'hul.'

The advantage of the hul is that it enables the small fellow to get in on a chance for profit. Clerks, stoveries, yardmen and housemaids find in the organization a place to put their meager earnings and by these combined resources carrying out business deals of no mean value.

The Hawaiians and Chinese have an especial liking for hul organizations and more than one, putting his small holdings into a common fund for the purchase of real estate has seen handsome profits as a result of the present active interest in island lands.

Passengers arriving here on the Taiyo Maru said that Tenko Nishida, founder of the 'Ittoen' sect, although he traveled on a first class ticket, spent his time helping the crew wash decks and scrub brass fittings. He also ate with the crew in the steerage quarters. Nishida has come here to spend several months preaching the gospel of his sect, the basic principal of which is service and the motto of which is 'labor is prayer.' From here he will continue on to the mainland. He is about 60 years of age and is known as the 'Socrates of Japan.'

Masao Kajita, a Japanese resident of the island of Maui, took his life long friend Matsuzo Tsui and Tsui's two little girls for an automobile ride. Crowded too close to the edge of a narrow mountain road, Kajita's car overturned and Tsui and his children were killed. Finding that Kajita had no driver's license, the district judge sentenced him to serve 15 days in jail and fined him $100. Kajita took the sentence and fine cheerfully, but decided that they did not meet the ends of justice. So after serving his jail sentence, he drowned himself in the waters of Kahului harbor. Friends of the dead man say he felt that, however unwittingly, he was responsible for the death of three; that for the remainder of his days he would be a marked man among his associates if he continued to live among them, but if he voluntarily followed Tsui into the spirit world he would leave behind the unblemished name of an honorable man. This purpose, the Japanese say, Kajita accomplished.

One of the most interesting court sessions ever held in this city was that presided over by Judge E. K. Massee, of the circuit court when he in company with court attaches and a small detachment of lawyers embarked in a fleet of three small rowboats navigated by Japanese fishermen to watch a series of experiments in Palama Basin to prove that refuse from certain pineapple canneries was poisonous to marine life. In place of a pair of scales and a blindfold, Judge Massee carried a wire fish basket. Fish were placed in the basket and immersed in the water at the point where the pineapple refuse enters it. In the course of two hours seven infant mullet succumbed. Lawyers sat in the rowboats, watches in hand, counting the minutes before each doomed fish breathed its last.

Crop Report for North Carolina

Raleigh, Sept. 13.—(INS)—Crop conditions in North Carolina show an average of 78 per cent of a normal condition, according to September 1 forecasts by the National Crop Reporting Board, it was revealed in figures released today by the Co-operative Crop Reporting Service.

After an adverse spring and very dry summer period, the forecast is for an 83 per cent corn crop, 79 per cent tobacco, 69 per cent cotton, 79 per cent apple, and 78 per cent sweet potato production, the report said.

A review of the September 1 crop report for North Carolina, as passed upon by the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture, shows that the condition of the corn crop is 83 per cent of a full crop. This, the report said, indicated 47,981,000 bushels. This figure, the report said, was comparatively better than last year, but was somewhat under the five year average.

A summary of additional crop conditions is: Late Irish potato crop, 64 per cent; cultivated hays, 77 per cent; meadow hay, nine ton yield; clover hay, 68 per cent; alfalfa, 75 per cent; peanuts, 75 per cent; cowpeas 82 per cent; soy beans, 60 per cent; sorghum cane, 83 per cent; pecans, 78 per cent; grapes, 65 per cent; pears, 67 per cent; and paches, 67 per cent of a full crop production.
