

FORD PLANT FEEDS OLD WAR SHIPS INTO FURNACES TO SALVAGE METALS

Detroit, Oct. 27. (INS)—Two hundred merchant ships, the formation of a once dreamed of American merchant marine to rule the seas, are going into the open hearth furnaces of the Ford Motor Co., to reappear as automobiles and tractors, in one of the most unusual salvage experiments in industrial history.

Rapidly and efficiently a great organization of men and machinery at Fordson is cutting the steel hulks into hundreds of pieces.

Today, a fine sea-going craft, tomorrow so much scrap steel. This is the story of each ship as it joins in the line of systematic destruction along Ford frontage on the River Rouge.

The fleet of ships, aggregating 370,000 tons cost Uncle Sam in the war days almost and even $100,000,000.

For salvage purposes, Henry Ford bought the fleet for $1,697,470.

The task of towing the ships from the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic sea board ports is a story of marine achievement. Fifty of the ships were too large to pass the Welland canal, making it necessary for them to be cut up in the east and loaded into the small craft.

Several of the ships barely escaped destruction on the rocks near Halifax. Others have encountered trouble in the Welland canal. However, to date, none have been lost.

Already 57 ships, loaded with 15 of the boats cut up in the east, have arrived at the Fordson plant. Before the regular arrival started in May, the Ford engineers had made full preparations for the salvage of every part of the ships in the least possible time and without waste of material or labor.

Four railroad trucks were laid parallel to the banks of the River Rouge at Fordson. At the lower end of the Fordson river-frontage, arrangements were made for stripping the ships.

A large carpenter shop was erected to handle all wooden parts. A large storage warehouse was made ready to accommodate them. The dismantling was arranged progressively, on the same principle as Ford cars are built.

As the ships moved along, the different parts were removed by the several departments of salvage. A belt carrier takes these parts to the distributing counters. The lumber, metal, rubber, leather and other component parts went

Kills Sister

Albert Disken, three, of New York, is puzzled. He can't understand what happened to his baby sister. He threw powder on her from the car he holds. But the baby did not gurgle as she did when mother did it. She was smothered by the powder.

Not one particle of waste. As the ships began to arrive and the lumber on them was torn down, the Ford plant cut off its shipments of lumber for shipping purposes, i. e., crates and the like. The lumber from the ships was saved into the proper lengths and made excellent shipping timber. Much were all saved, some straightened and used in the shipping department, and the balance melted. Piping valves and faucets were sent to a shop where they were whipped and oiled and sent to the stock rooms.

Each boat had fine cabins, ice plants, electric light plants, engines, boilers, propellers, searchlights, cooking equipment and a score of other fixtures, all of which was sent to the Ford stock rooms.

"It is a great waste from the government's standpoint," said Mr. Ford. "But they were needed at that time."

"From our standpoint, it has been an excellent experience. Also, we have gained for our employ a fine crew of men, the men who are bringing the ships to the River Rouge for us. We are glad to have them with us."

The company has already found use for 15 of the ships engines. Converting them has been comparatively simple. They are set up with their boilers. Oil burners are installed under the boilers and the engines, instead of being attached to a propeller shaft, are attached to a generator thus furnishing power for the plants.

One of the sets is now supplying power for the Ford locomotive repair and rebuilding shops. It is a huge, fine piece of equipment.

Plans call for use of others in the Lincoln plant, the Ford plants in Paris, France, Chester, Pa., and other points.

"They are good engines," Mr. Ford said. "We only take off the reverse gear; we don't go backward."

In addition there are thousands of pieces of equipment of other kinds, practically as good as new, and which are expensive on the market. Cleaned and oiled and repaired when necessary, they go into the Ford stock rooms, saving the company today or tomorrow expensive purchases.

No less than 1,000 men are being given steady employment on the salvage jobs and their wages are above the average employee, due to the nature of the work. They are steel workers; torch men for the most part. Possible from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 will have to be paid them in wages before the job is completed.

Mr. Ford is well satisfied with his greatest saving experience. He accepted the task at the request of the government and it has been well done. Government inspectors who have observed the work have been pleased.

It may develop that Mr. Ford will decide to put a few of the ships into service with his present merchant fleet. He has intimated as much. In this event, under the terms of the contract, he will be required to pay the government a bonus over and above what he pays when the ships is scrapped. The bonus is said to amount to about $15,000 per ship for lake type, and $50,000 for ocean-going vessels.

Mr. Ford is not permitted to sell or give away one part from any of the ships. The government does not want this equipment on the open market.

However, any new Ford car or tractor is very liable to be held together in part by steel which at one time was a part of the now defunct American merchant marine.

a territory to the city would entail an extra burden in providing added fire-fighting equipment, police protection, sewage facilities, lighting systems and new streets.

However, these proponents say that inasmuch as the city has reached a point where it is impossible to expand further without additional space, are willing to reach out and take these wide spaces, this is the only remedy in sight for present conditions here.

Many individual home owners in the country are said to be agreeable to the merger on the basis that it would provide them with more and better conveniences and in many cases at lower rates of taxation than now prevail.

Adoption of the proposal would put a large area of the farm land of the county under city government. Statistic, compiled by the Board of Freeholders, who drew up the merger plans, show there are now 2,398 farm owners in the county, who possess 192,969 acres of land.

Of this amount 131,882 acres are filled with crops. To adjust taxation of this land equitably, the annexation proposal provides that an ordinance may be passed for a graduated scale of taxes, with the proviso that the tax on farm land, shall not exceed one-half of the total rate.

New Radio Discovery to Send 'Bouncing' Waves Across Earth

San Diego, Cal., Oct. 27. (INS)—The radio world eagerly awaits further details of a revolutionary discovery by Major Francis B. Pierce of the Marine air corps whereby radio waves may be "bounced" over the earth's surface descending only where destined.

Perfection in the method of handling these "bouncing" radio waves will make the United States navy supreme in wireless communication, Pierce declared, as radio messages could be bounced over intervening enemy vessels.

"I have noticed strange properties in certain short waves," Mr. Pierce said. "They appear to leap many miles, and then disappear in full force. We communicate with destroyers thirty miles off shore while intervening ships were unable to detect."

discovery has commercial value, as it would eliminate interference from station to station.

Complicated tower charts by which radio officers can determine what power to use in the "bouncing" their message, are announced. These charts will enable being worked out, it was unable officers to determine at a glance how to skip intervening ships.

Major Pierce was the first radio officer in the United States Marine Corps. He has devoted many years to his search for a short wave transmission capable of penetrating intervening objects without interception.

MISSES HIGGS ENTERTAIN
 In honor of Miss Emily Moye, bride-elect.

Misses Madeline and Elizabeth Higgs entertained at the hostess club on Tuesday when a large number of friends enjoyed their hospitality at an informal buffet luncheon, honoring Miss Emily Moye, bride-elect.

The hostesses warmly welcomed the guests and introduced them to Miss Emily Moye, the honoree. The reception room was effectively decorated in red dahlias, golden pumpkins and ferns. Miss Jessie Moye invited the guests into the attractively arranged dining room. The color scheme there was pink and green. Ferns, sultanas and pink dahlias were used profusely. The center of interest was the long table. Suspended above this by streamers of pink tulle and lace fern was a canopy of pink rosebuds from the edge of which cascaded a show of hearts and from the center there was looped a miniature bride and her two maids. On the table below there was a large silver basket of pink dahlias and pink rosebuds, surrounded by miniature brides and grooms. At one end of the table Mrs. S. J. Everett and Mrs. Alwyn Darden served fried oysters and Hesperides apples; at the other Mrs. Robert Everett, of Palmyra, and Mrs. Edward Griffin poured tea. Misses Ivey and Annie Shields Van Dyke, Mrs. Herman Duncan, Miss Rosina Pittman of Scotland Neck and Miss Bessie Brown served cheese breadsticks, saltines and pickles. Just before their departure the bride-elect was presented an attractive novelty. A French boudoir tray, whereupon she was showered with rice from the tiny slippers which were used appropriately as favors.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT
 "God's hand touched him and he slept." In a peculiar sense these words describe the going of James Madison McGowan. On the evening of October 2, 1926, without a moment's warning he was taken from his loved ones and friends to the land of the Great Unknown.

Greenville has never received a greater shock than when the news came that Matt McGowan had been killed. His death was a hard blow to the Greenville Tobacco Market, for he was a hard worker and was liked by all who knew him, both farmer and buyers. Matt, as he was known by his friends, was a fine type of gentleman, tender hearted and kind to all with whom he came in contact. He was never happier than when he was doing something for the benefit or pleasure of Trade extends to his loved

URGES CITIZENS TO CONTRIBUTE TO RELIEF CUBA

Cuba Aided Florida and Now is Time for Americans to Reciprocate

Washington, Oct. 25 — (INS) — Recalling that Cuba came promptly to the aid of Florida with a $25,000 contribution, President Coolidge today expressed the hope that American citizens would return this manifestation of good will by contributing their money to help the island republic recover from its own hurricane disaster.

The question of Cuban relief was discussed at today's cabinet meeting on the basis of a report from the American Red Cross. It will be necessary, the White House spokesman announced, to reconstruct 10,000 houses in Cuba, material for which will cost in this country approximately $42 each. While there has been no general drive launched, the President is hopeful that much of this necessary $420,000 can be raised in the United States.

The Red Cross reported approximately 600 dead and from 3,000 to 5,000 injured in the Cuban hurricane in excess of $900,000. L. L. McKean, with property damage probably in excess of that sustained by Florida.

Iowa to Probe Whipping Girls in Institution

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 27, (INS) — The board of control of the state of Iowa is preparing to look into the charges, brought by inmates and admitted by officials, that girls at the state training school at Mitchellville are whipped with rubber hose, kept for days at a time in pitch-darkness "punishment rooms," put on a diet of milk and bread and forced to wear bands of adhesive tape on their foreheads in punishment for violation of various rules.

The matter was brought to the attention of Governor Hammill and the board of control when three girls from the school told their story to Edward A. Beasley and Robert Shaw, sheriff and prosecutor respectively of Keokuk County, where the girls were apprehended. Shaw and Beasley brought the girls here where the charges were repeated.

When Miss Rae Hanchett, superintendent of the school was asked about the charges she readily admitted them and declared the state board knew the girls were whipped at the school.

The three girls, Marion Jerauld 19, of Sioux City, Alma Kyd, 17, of Des Moines, and Laurena Osborne, 17, of Delta, were returned to school, where Miss Hanchett placed them in the "punishment room," as a disciplinary measure because they ran away.

"It is true that girls are whipped with a rubber hose," Miss Hanchett said. "But such punishment is necessary. We don't like to whip girls but we must maintain discipline and whipping seems to be the only successful method of getting it. A girl is never struck more than eight times with the hose, although in institutions in other states of which I have knowledge, a girl is often whipped much harder. In Texas instructions a girl is sometimes given thirty-six hits with the whip."

Miss Hanchett said when she took charge of the training school three years ago, she hoped to conduct it more as a boarding school than a house of correction.

"I told the girls I wished to put them on an honor system in which me and my assistant, would be teachers and not palliers or jailkeepers," Miss Hanchett said. "But it was no use. It simply meant a wholesale violation of rules and regulations."

Adhesive tape, the superintendent said, was applied to the foreheads of girls who cut their hair in such a way as to make bangs of it. The girls may wear their hair bobbed, she said, but bangs are prohibited.

The "punishment rooms" were declared by Miss Hanchett to be well ventilated.

"They are dark, of course, and have no windows of any kind. The openings that permit the air to circulate freely are at the tops of the rooms, so arranged that no light comes through them. Girls placed on a restricted diet."

Girls in these rooms also are kept in solitary confinement.

Miss Hanchett says the girls today are harder to handle than those of former years.

"I guess it is the new mode of living," she said, "but whatever the cause, girls of today are not as amenable to discipline as in former years. They have no respect for authority and restraint of any kind."

Los Angeles Expects to Capture 1926 Coast Classic

San Francisco, Oct. 27, (INS) — The 1926 football classic looms for the golden state of California and the sunny city of Los Angeles.

On December 4, Coach Knute Rockne will unleash his Notre Dame football team against the "Terrible Trojans" of the University of Southern California.

As far as the western entry for the classic is concerned, it today seems certain that it will be an undefeated eleven when it faces the Notre Dame team.

Coach Howard Jones, once famous in old Iowa and now the most popular hero of New Iowa, has whipped together a powerful eleven at U. S. C.

The thundering Herd started the 1926 season for ahead of any eleven on the Pacific Coast. Material has forced veterans of two years standing to the bench.

Adam Walsh, who was the captain of the Four Horsemen team of Notre Dame, and now coach of the University of Santa Clara eleven, declares that the Southern California eleven is greater than Rockne's 1924 Notre Dame eleven.

The Trojans have caught the "shift" too.

Coach Jones has devised his own style of dancing and every man on his team shifts on each play.

The Trojan cut wide open in their play.

Drury, Laranetta, Kaer, Williams and Hester are all triple threat back, with a punch.

Drury is the power in the Trojan machine and is hailed as an all-American fullback.

A powerful line supports the backfield.

Cravath the center, is one of the greatest ever seen on the Pacific Coast. Gorrell and Taylor guards have been chosen as all coast players, for the past two years.

American college students are not addicted to booze orgies, the Rev. Arthur Foley Winingham-Ingram, Bishop of London, declared after a tour of United States. Harry P. Princess Sophie Charlotte was granted a divorce from Prince Eitel Frederick, second son of Wilhelm II. of Germany.

Great Trojan teams have always been the thing on the Pacific coast but they never managed to survive a season without defeat.

Correggio Portrait Is Restored to Its Place of Honor

Lenningrad, Oct. 27, (INS) — Stored away in a basement of the Hermitage museum, covered with dust and classified as a third rate picture a portrait by Antonio Allegri da Correggio, great 16th century Italian master, has just been discovered through the perspicacity of a visiting Italian professor. The painting, hitherto deemed unworthy to hang in the Hermitage, has been cleaned and given a place of honor. Whereas the museum a month ago would have sold it for a few dollars, its price is now estimated at $100,000.

Professor Adolf Venturi, of Rome University was responsible for making the find. He inquired of the museum curator whether there were any old odd Italian works, by minor painters in the store-room.

Given the opportunity to look over the room where the odds and ends were kept, Professor Venturi immediately spotted the painting in question as a genius Correggio. On later examination by other experts, the Professor's judgment was confirmed.

Honolulu, Oct. 27. (INS)—Evidence that Spanish sailors landed in the Hawaiian Islands two or three centuries before the coming of the first American missionaries, contained in a document recently discovered in the public archives of the territory. This paper, originally written in Barcelona, Spain, was among the possessions of the Kamehameha line of kings. In it, a portion of the islands believed to be the district of Kauai, island of Hawaii is referred to and the inhabitants are described as "long brown men."

The supervisors of the city and county of Honolulu have voted to accept the gift of the Bishop Estate trustees of 150 acres of land for a public park near Koko Head crater. The terms of the gift are that the municipality shall lay pipe and furnish water for the park, which the supervisory body has agreed to do. The new park is about eight miles from the center of the town on the southern end of the island. It contains many natural advantages for scenic development, including the quaint little bay of Hanalei, which was one of the favorite fishing spots of old time Hawaiians.

Hawaii's superintendent of public instruction, Will C. Crawford, proved recently that war time training has its peace time uses when he borrowed an army plane from Lake Field and flew it to an official inspection trip to the island of Kauai, some ninety miles north of Oahu. Crawford is a member of the aviation reserve corps and spends two weeks in training each summer at the annual encampment period. He is considered in army circle, as one of the best civilian fliers on the island. Consequently when he discovered that a change in sailing schedules had caused him to miss an inter-island steamer the other evening, he had no difficulty in securing a plane and a machine for an early flight the following morning to Kauai.

A day's tour through the territory's penitentiary with a visit to the dark cell and a practical demonstration of the "Oregon boot" included, was the unusual sentence pronounced by Federal Judge William T. Rawlins of the local district court on a 17 year old Hawaiian boy who had confessed to breaking into the post office at Kaaunakakai village, island of Maui. The lad stated that he had ordered a pair of shoes by mail, collect on delivery. As the time for the arrival of the shoes drew near, he found himself without funds to pay for them. Accordingly he hit upon the idea of taking them for nothing. Once inside the postoffice, he stated, he heard noises in the dark and frantically seizing all of the bundles in reach he made for the open. He was arrested the following day. Judge Rawlins imposing sentence cautioned prison officials to make the tour complete and impressive.

Mrs. Lukia Makana, an aged Hawaiian woman, one of those few who still cling to the ancient grass hut and the hand-pounded poi, has never visited the cities of the Pacific Coast, never in fact been off of the island of Oahu, but nightly by a radio set whose aerial is suspended between a mango and lauhala tree she listens to jazz and bedtime stories which swing down on the trade wing from broadcasting stations across the two thousand miles of ocean water. Mrs. Makana is 75 years of age, strong of body and clear of mind. Her home fits snugly up against a cliff of the Koolau mountain range, windward Oahu, and a little mountain stream bubbles past the hut spreading itself into the tea-patch a little farther down the valley.

MARKET REVIEW

(By W. S. Cousins, INS Financial Editor)
New York, Oct. 27.—(INS)—Industrial stocks received an excellent stimulus to higher prices today through the publication of the third quarterly earnings of the steel and General Motors corporations; and railroad stocks from the flattering September earnings and the boosting of Pennsylvania Railroad's dividend, to 7 from 6 per cent. With the exception of a few of the stocks, the market was exceedingly slow to respond. So slow, indeed, that professional traders, despairing of recuperative power, trained on the heavy guns of short selling and threatened for a time to start a new and violent reactionary movement. Concentrating on the motor shares in the early period, these professionals, aided by further pool liquidation and distress selling, wielded the big stick over the speculative industrial stocks. The first 23 of the class one railroads to report September earnings had total net operating income of $73,651,000 against $69,494,000 in the same month last year, a gain of 6 per cent. Combined with Norfolk and Western's $3 extra dividend and Pennsylvania's increase of the common dividend to the 7 per cent rate, this made a very favorable setting for speculation in the railroad stocks. United States Steel and General Motors dominated the industrial stock list, with the bulk of trading at about 2 points above Tuesday's close. Oil stocks did well to hold their own in the face of a 52,000 barrel daily increase in crude oil as reported by the American Petroleum Institute, with probably more to come. This is a keen disappointment to the bulls in oil stocks, who logically looked for the usual tapering off of crude output after the last week in September. Outside of these stocks market movements were negligible. Rubber and tire stocks encountered more opposition than in the last three sessions, though U. S. Rubber was always wellthought and advanced about 11-2 to 61 3-4. International Rubber moved up fractionally to 16 1-2 inactive trading. Sugar and tobacco stocks maintained their buoyant tone in reduced trading, while the pool specialties were conspicuously absent from the trading list. Money was in good supply and loaning rates unchanged. Commodity markets were unsettled, with cotton losing ground to sell at close to 12 cents a pound for December and January options. Copper was quoted at 14 cents a pound delivered. New Haven's sharp advance to 43 1-2 for a 3 point gain, was the feature of the final period. Price trends were generally high

Western Slush Fund Probe Ends

Seattle, Oct. 27.—(INS)—The State of Washington Senatorial slush fund investigation has been terminated today, the probe lasting three days. At the conclusion of the investigation, which was conducted by Senator McNary, of Oregon, A. Scott Bullitt, Democratic nominee, who was accused of spending huge amounts of money in his campaign, declared that in his opinion he had been completely vindicated.

Immediately after the investigation was adjourned, Senator McNary entrusted for Portland, where the Oregon slush fund is slated for investigation. McNary would not make any comment other than to say "We have heard all the evidence obtainable, and the public can now draw its own conclusions."

J., a jewelry salesman, was taken from the railroad station by a taxi driver and placed on the sidewalk, Chapman, said, when a porter went for the trunk a few minutes later, it had disappeared.

Atlantic City, Oct. 27.—(INS)—Federal prohibition agents early today seized the largest still ever found in New Jersey, a plant valued at half a million dollars and so large they said it would have to be dynamited because it is too huge to be dismantled. The plant was capable of a daily output of 5,000 gallons of coal estate man described when "hooh," according to the agents
