MARKETS

COTTON
New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady today, January 12.75; March 12.90; May 13.13; July 13.32; October 13.51.

New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The cotton market opened today with a decline of two points to an advance of one point, active positions showing net losses of about five to seven points with March selling off to 12.88 by the end of the first hour. There had probably been some buying late last week in anticipation that unsettled weather conditions would develop rains in the south. Nothing of the sort was shown by the early news the outlook being for fair and colder, however, and there was some liquidation and reselling during today's early trading.

STOCKS
New York, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Prices were irregular on stocks today. Demand centered in the rails and oils which moved upward with the Union Pacific and Phillips Petroleum the leaders. United States Cast Iron Pipe sold at an initial loss of one point. Heaviness also developed in some of the railroad equipments.

Every dollar the automobile owner thus pays, he gets back more than double, saving on tires and increased mileage per gallon. A rough road is the really heavy tax on motors. Although some don't know it.

Statistics for the past year show that the Board of Trade in Chicago sold in 12 months thirty-four billion bushels of grain. In one month more than three billion bushels of wheat were sold. It interests farmers, to see brokers selling in a month ten times as much wheat as the United States can grow in a year. But that's business; grain is only farming.

Daily News Letter
Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 10.—Yale undergraduates continue to throw into the discard those customs that in other days formed high lights of the college year. Having succeeded in disposing of chapel after 229 years, students now have dropped the Whiffenpoofs whose annual public appearances were a joy to children and grownups as well. The Whiffenpoofs merely put on outlandish costumes and paraded the current events, as Dr. Crippen once and Channel swimming recently.

But the Alumni Weekly, official organ of staid men who graduated years ago, pronounced the Whiffenpoofs a source of public nuisance and the undergraduates announced the Whiffenpoofs would trouble no more. The graduates had taken away annoying chapel, so why shouldn't the Whiffenpoofs be dropped as an event there?

A thriving branch of Yale has been established in the woods of east of New Haven, and there in the summer time courses will be given in surveying, railroad engineering, highway engineering and water supply engineering. Two groups of one hundred men each will put in four weeks per group there starting next summer. Later, according to plans now in the works, courses in architecture, forestry, and in work of other schools of the University may be conducted in the same place under conditions that approximate camp life in the Adirondacks. Two thousand acres of land centered about a mile-long lake have been provided with dormitories, recitation and study rooms, and sleeping quarters beside the usual club facilities. The Yale Engineering Society, made up of men who have graduated from Sheffield Scientific school, presented the plant to the University.

The Yale School of Nursing directed by Dean Annie W. Goodrich was founded only three years ago by the Rockefeller Foundation when it became apparent that developments in preventive medicine have made a re-shaping of nursing education necessary. In its curriculum the Yale School of Nursing has broken away from the present apprenticeship system of nursing training and focused its attention upon the educational training of the student, eliminating many routine tasks which contribute little or nothing to this training. Under the Yale plan the period of training to be a nurse has been shortened to twenty-eight months.

Now sixty-five students whose weight was below normal, each gained an average of five pounds in weight, with one gaining twenty-four pounds is told in the annual report of the Department of University Health made public here by officials of the department.

The gain in weight, the report says, was brought about because the following points were stressed in the voluntary classes in nutrition held for these Yale students below average weight:

1. Regularity of meals.
2. Sufficient calories in the diet by the choice of food eaten at meals, and the addition of "morning and afternoon lunches.
3. Correction of any defects in the way of chronic infections, such as chronic tonsillitis.
4. Rest before evening meal.
5. Adequate sleep at night.
6. Moderate exercise.

"Forty-two Freshmen attended the two classes in the fall term over a period of fifteen weeks, the report continues. "During this period the average gain of the entire group was five and one-half pounds."

See Revival in British Trade For This Year

Liverpool, Jan. 8.—(INS)—"The year 1926 was one of consolidation and readjustment for British trade," says Sir Max Muspratt, President of the Federation of British Industries, and ex-Lord Mayor of Liverpool.

Sir Max pointed out to me that Board of Trade figures for 1926 show an almost general decrease in port. "But," he asked, "can officials figures be always taken as British trade, both import and export. "But," he asked, "can officials figures be always taken as a reliable trade barometer? It is often extremely unreliable to measure trade in terms of money."

This was specially so in 1926, for although the figures incontrovertibly show a contraction in trade, this will be found to be very largely accounted for by the heavy fall in world prices which took place during the year, a fall which was particularly heavy in raw materials, especially cotton. As an instance, it is more than likely that the whole difference between 1925 and 1926 imports from America was accounted for by the decline in price of one of our principal annual purchases from the United States.

Apart from this, the cessation of our coal exports alone is estimated to have reduced our export figures by approximately $125,000,000. Therefore, without even probing deeper, the record of the year may not have been nearly as bad as might be first imagined.

The most notable feature of the strain it has placed on British finance, or on the enormous blow dealt to British trade. The most notable feature by far is the manner in which British industry and commerce taken as a whole has been able to keep going and even, in some cases, to increase, despite the drastic curtailment of coal supplies.

One of the great developments of British trade has been the extension of the Home Market. Since the war exports have been decreasing at the expense of imports and have obstinately refused to reach their pre-war levels. Imports on the other hand have actually exceeded the pre-war normal.

This can be largely accounted for by an extraordinary industrial development in and around London in parts which have been traditionally looked upon as residential or agricultural. In these districts, small industries are growing up which, by taking advantage of motor transport and electrical facilities, have been able to avoid many of the handicaps imposed upon trades in the industrial North, by taxation and traffic congestion.

Thus 1926 stimulates the observer to ask whether the days of British dependence upon her export trade are numbered. The movements are at present only embryonic. I do not imply that the export trades are on their death bed or that the rise of heavy metal industries has been run. It may merely be that the scales, which immediately pre-war were heavily weighted in favor of export trade and foreign capital development have since shifted in favor of our internal trade.

Merchant Ships Carry Booze to U. S. Grom Paris

Cherbourg, France, Jan. 6.—(INS)—Few chartered ships loaded with wet cargoes are leaving French ports for a run anywhere along the American coast-line.

Contraband cheer has been exported on a larger scale from France, for more than a year in reputable merchant ships and in the many passenger liners crossing the North Atlantic.

These revelations came today from a reliable source during an investigation by the International News Service of how champagne and liquor could have reached New York and other American cities. It would be hard to find anyone better informed on this subject than William Foyle who was convicted in New York of two years ago, when he was chief purser of the Royal Mail liner Orduna.

Foyle is a British subject and now manages the Anglo-American Hotel in Cherbourg. With other members of the Orduna's crew, he was profitably engaged in catering to New York. When the Orduna called at Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg, extra stores of beer, Scotch and champagne were taken aboard without the captain's knowledge. These prohibited beverages were covertly disposed of in New York.

Foyle says they were caught "because a customs man, was dissatisfied with his rake-off and turned us in." The purser's confession resulted in a libel being filed against the Orduna, whereby the United States Government sought to seize the ship. He explains that he was forced to give up a seafaring career then, as he was blacklisted thereafter by all steamship companies. But there are today many well-paid agents of bootleggers, Foyle asserts, among the crews of the

Golden Rod Retires Flag From Army Life

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 7.—(AP)—After having served in the Mexican, Civil, Spanish and World Wars, Kentucky's 80-year-old State flag has been forced out of military life by a sprig of golden rod.

The flag first as service under the Second Regiment, Kentucky National Guard, known in 1848 as the Kentucky Volunteers. The addition of a wreath of golden rod to the State however to the Kentucky seal, the field of blue was authorized in the 1925 session of the Legislature. The State flag of California was golden rod on it however, and because of this the United States War Department could not accept Kentucky's banner as the standard of the present 14th Infantry of the United States Army.

Consumption of hard liquor in Germany last year was only one-third that of pre-war times.
