

WALTER WILSON DISAPPEARS IN CHINA

VICE CONSUL AT SHANGHAI IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN A VICTIM OF KIDNAPPERS

Greenville Man Has Not Been Heard From Since Leaving Residence Yesterday Morning Presumably to Play Golf; Relatives Here Gravely Concerned Over the Report.

Shanghai, May 2.—(AP)—Walter B. Wilson, Jr., of Greenville, N. C., American Consul at Shanghai since 1920, disappeared yesterday morning after leaving his residence presumably to play golf. He had not returned up to a late hour tonight and a search for him has been unavailing.

Mr. Wilson after a vacation in the United States, returned to Shanghai March 25. He is a member of a prominent family and several of his brothers are West Point graduates.

Although the consulate has made little comment on the disappearance of the vice-consul, confidential facts indicate that at six o'clock Tuesday morning he proceeded to the Shanghai golf club, in Chinese territory, where he wrote five letters—three to local friends, one to the newspaper, China Press, and one presumably to his family in America. He gave these letters to a servant with instructions to mail them that day, the servant obeying. Only two of the letters have thus far been received, one by a friend at the consulate and one by the China Press. The newspaper is withholding the contents of the letter, although requested to make it public.

News that W. B. Wilson, Jr., of this city, was reported missing today in Shanghai, China, came as a distinct shock to his family and friends here and led to the belief that he was the victim of kidnapers.

Immediately upon receipt of the information furnished through the Associated Press, W. B. Wilson, Sr. of this city, talked over long distance to Major Frank W. Wilson, of Washington, D. C., brother of the missing consul, and the matter was placed before the State Department. Other than the facts contained in the Associated Press Bulletin—Consul Wilson's father is without information regarding his son's disappearance.

The missing consul is a member of one of the city's most prominent families and was one of six brothers who received nation-wide publicity during the world war in view of the fact that all were serving as officers under the American flag, five of them in the regular army at the time America entered the conflict.

Immediately after America's entry into the war, the now missing consul, who was associated with his father in business here, was commissioned in the Merchant Marine where he served through the war. Following the Armistice he was made traveling representative of the American Shipping Board and in that capacity visited several South American and European countries. After returning home for a short furlough Mr. Wilson began a trip around the world in behalf of the interests of the Shipping Board and while on this trip he received appointment to the consulate in Shanghai and left his ship there to take up his new duties.

During the past winter Consul Wilson spent some time here with his father. He left this city the middle of February to return to his post and just last week his father received a letter announcing his safe arrival there.

Consul Wilson's five brothers are now serving in the army as follows: Colonel Durwood S. Wilson, Fort Benning, Ga.; Majors Frank W. and Bascom L. Wilson, Washington, D. C.; Capt. William R. Wilson, Los Angeles, Cal.; Captain Carl B. Wilson, Honolulu, Hawaii.

BIG REWARD FOR KILLER

Murderer of Girl at Theatre On Sunday Night Sought by Chicago Officials.

Chicago, May 2.—(AP)—The Sunday night murder of the 17-year old theater usherette, Pearl Eggleston, has challenged Chicago public opinion. Rewards totalling $2,100 have been offered, including $500 by the city of Berwyn and $1,000 by the management of the Ritz theatre where Miss Eggleston worked and where she was shot by one of three men who robbed the ticket office.

The girl's funeral today took on the attributes of a civic rite, the mayor of Berwyn and the alderman of that suburb were in attendance, as were official representatives of Oak Park and Chicago.

First Air Mail Reaches Atlanta

Atlanta, May 2.—(AP)—The first air mail from New York over the New York-New Orleans route reached Atlanta, the key terminal at 5 A. M. today, 17 minutes ahead of schedule. Sid Malloy, pilot said ideal conditions prevailed and that an extra ship to handle souvenir mail overflow was due about 8 o'clock. Malloy took off at Richmond, Va., at 1 A. M.

A relay ship was held here by the post office department but expected to continue on to New Orleans momentarily.

The New Orleans bound relay plane took off at 6:20 a. m., after a delay occasioned by transfer and post office checkup. The ship, piloted by Vivian Jones, carried 130 pounds of mail, unloading much here. It was due in New Orleans at 11 A. M.

Smith Wins Sweeping Victory In California

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—By his sweeping victory in the California presidential primaries, Governor Alfred E. Smith has passed his first big test of strength in the race for the nomination.

Herbert Hoover, who like the New York executive, is showing his heels to his opponents in the fight for the Republican nomination, has further advanced his lead by winning the 29 delegates in his home state, and stimulated hopes of his supporters by polling a tremendous vote.

With full delegates states in the field for himself, Senator Reed, of Missouri, and Senator Walsh, of Montana, who like Smith, is a Catholic, and who had the backing of William G. McAdoo, Smith's opponent in the Madison Square Garden fight in 1924, the New York Governor faced his first real convention opposition in the California primary.

KITTY HAWK PAYS HOMAGE TO WRIGHTS

People of Little Sea Village Unveil Monument to Pioneers of Aviation.

Kitty Hawk, May 2.—(AP)—With the great outside world echoing acclaim for the latest feats of modern aviation, villagers of this isolated sea reef paid homage today to Orville and Wilbur Wright, first to fly in machines heavier than air and propelled by an engine.

Near the lonely dunes, close by the ocean, a modest marble monument has been erected. It is inscribed: "On this spot, September 17, 1900, Wilbur Wright began the assembly of the Wright Brothers first experimental glider which led to man's conquest of the air. Erected by citizens of Kitty Hawk, N. C., 1926."

Those assembled to watch the drawing of the veil from the stone included many persons who were intimately associated with the Wrights during their struggles to make their huge boxkites fly.

At first regarding them as somewhat "crazy," Kitty Hawk finally took the brothers to heart and was electrified when on December 17, 1903, Orville Wright made the first successful flight in a power driven airplane.

News of the triumph was borne to the village by a life guard who assisted in the experiment. Running and virtually out of breath, the man came in yelling "They've done it. They've done it. Danged if they ain't flew."

The scene of the initial flight was Kill Devil Hill, about 3 miles from here where the Wrights found a constant wind for their experiments and a sufficient eminence from which to project their machines into the air.

In contrast to the latest trans-Atlantic air monster, the first machine to fly was a frail little box kite affair, propelled by a four cylinder motor which the Wrights constructed themselves. The pilot reclined in the center of the contraption and was at the mercy of wind and mishap. The maximum distance flown was 582 feet after four trials were made.

The Wrights spent nearly three years here in their experiments, living for part of the time in a tent near the scene of their labor. Most of the inhabitants recall vivid memories of the time.

The monument chiefly was sponsored by Captain William J. Tate, who is keeper of the lighthouse at Coinjock. Tate was an intimate friend of the Wrights from the first day they set foot here. His friendship for the aviators led the town to the same "crazy" category in which they first placed the Wrights. The son of a shipwrecked Seaman.

CAPITAL CITY TODAY HONORS BREMEN CREW

Fliers to Return to New York Tomorrow for Resumption of Festivities.

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—The crew of the Bremen was welcomed to Washington today as pioneers whose feat symbolized the ever-narrowing distances between the nations of the world.

Coming by train in the early morning hours, the German-Irish trio which accomplished the first non-stop flight of an airplane over the north Atlantic from the east received from Secretary Kellogg, representing the American government, the formal greetings of the nation, to supplement the tumultuous welcome they were given in New York City.

Their trip to Washington was uneventful, but their greeting at Bolling field, where the formal exercises were held, was both enthusiastic and impressive.

The three fliers—Von Huenefeld, Fitzmaurice and Koel—were met at the aviation field by Major Howard Davidson, the commandant, who transferred them from private automobiles to army machines and they made their appearance before the crowd to the accompaniment of music and salutes.

Under a brilliant sun, with only occasional breezes to rattle the German and Irish flags and the stars and stripes which had been raised, the visitors were greeted by Secretary Kellogg as men who had "marked another milestone on the path of man's conquest over the forces of nature."

"It is with deepest admiration for your magnificent exploit that I welcome you on behalf of the American people and the United States," the secretary said. "I like to consider your achievement symbolical of every narrowing distance which separates nations of the modern world, both in real and figurative sense."

The Bremen's crew rode triumphantly up to the welcoming stand and saluted the four flags. The army band then played the national anthem of the Irish Free state, followed by the German anthem and finally the Star Spangled Banner.

After secretary Kellogg had greeted them, ambassador Von Fritzsche of Germany and Timothy Smiddy, minister of the Irish Free State, offered their welcome.

New York, May 2.—(AP)—The much fetted crew of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen will be back in New York tomorrow for a continuation of festivities before leaving for a tour of the country probably May 8.

Their New York visit came to a temporary end last night with the city's banquet at the hotel Commodore.

Just after Major Fitzmaurice, Captain Koel and Baron Von Huenefeld entered, the audience stood in silent tribute to Floyd Bennett, who will be further exchanges before

Mayor Walker and the German-Italian fliers were heard in Berlin and Dublin, as they exchanged polite-nesses in New York, three thousand miles away. Radio has made the world small, and flying should make it friendly.

Those fliers will be able to tell Europe that this nation has put away older neuroses of the war.

The Italians with Nobile on his second trip to the north pole, are landing in the Caproni stops, at Milan, what will be the biggest heavier-than-air ship ever constructed. All metal, it will carry six engines of 1,000 horsepower each. An autogyro has its advantages. It can encourage the individual and get things done.

Lady Mary Bailey landed in Cape Town yesterday, having flown alone from London, a long journey from Italy Britain to hot South Africa.

Flying which demands coolness, balance and courage, but no great physical strength, opens a new field to women.

"We" took their last flight today yesterday when Lindbergh flew to Washington and delivered the Spirit of St. Louis to the Smithsonian Institute.

The ship, built by the Wright Brothers, first heavier than air machine that ever carried passengers, should be in the Smithsonian also, instead of being sent to Great Britain. However, it doesn't matter, the glory of achievement cannot be exported.

Religious faith gives consolation but sometimes it causes worry.

News from Morocco tells of two Moors guillotined for murder. They wept, showing intense distress and sorrow when told their heads were to be chopped off. Mohammed says a body with a head cut off can't enter paradise.

In the great Indian rebellion, when natives murdered many Englishmen, religion played its part. The rebellion started when the natives were obliged to bite cartridges smeared with pig fat. Many of the guilty were executed by being fired from cannon, their bodies blown to pieces. In that condition they couldn't possibly carry out their after-death plans.

Christianity is kinder. It teaches that the dust of the grave and the biting of the worms do not prevent rising in the flesh, "as you were."

One hundred men, women and children found mummified in a cave in Mexico are believed to have been buried alive. Contortions of the dead bodies showed acute suffering before death. Some mummies were tied together by their thumbs.

The dead may have been offered as sacrifices to some ancient Mexican God to placate a man regulating earthquakes. The Chinese believe in an earth dragon and are careful not to disturb him. Mexicans came originally from Asia.

Among barbarous peoples, as depicted in the picture.

GOV. M'LEAN IS SPEAKER AT PINEHURST

Lauds Work of Medical Men in Annual Meeting of Society and Board of Health

Pinehurst, May 2.—(AP)—The medical profession was given credit for the recent progress of North Carolina, material as well as cultural and educational, by Governor McLean in a message read today at the joint session of the state medical society and the state board of health here.

After expressing regret that he was unable to come to Pinehurst, the chief executive extended to the medical profession "sincere thanks for the valuable and indispensable contribution they have made to the cause of public health and thus to the happiness and prosperity of North Carolina."

The profession was congratulated upon the trend by which it now devotes more attention to preventive medicine rather than concentrating upon the cure of diseases already developed.

"This trend is shown," Governor McLean said, "in the increasing attention given to pre-natal care for expectant mothers, the examination of school children to detect latent or obscure conditions which might later cause trouble, and in the stress now being given by the medical profession to periodic health examinations."

"I recall that the former president of the North Carolina medical society, Dr. John Q. Myers, in his annual message, painted a picture, not too Utopian, of the possibilities of increasing the span of life greatly by regular and systematic health examinations. Dr. J. T. Burrus, president of this organization, had admirably advocated such work, and I feel sure that the general assembly of next year will make provisions for extending and expanding this important phase of work."

On behalf of the state board of health, he expressed thanks to physicians for the cooperation they have given that body.

Artic Fliers To Leave For Norway In Next Few Days

TWO HUNDRED INJURED IN FIGHTING IN POLAND

Police have arrested more than 500 persons. Six were killed during the conflicts.

Egyptian Crisis Takes Turn For Better Today

London, May 2.—(AP)—The Egyptian crisis took a favorable turn today when Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, announced in the House of Commons that the instructions which it had previously been thought necessary to give to certain British warships had now been countermanded.

The British Cabinet discussed the Egyptian reply to the British demands this morning. The reply had been handed to the British High Commissioner last night at Cairo. It explained that the public assembly bill to which the British government took exception had been put aside until next November. This did not meet the desires of Great Britain which demanded its withdrawal.

The Egyptian note, however, explained the difficulties of withdrawal of the bill in view of the previous action of the Egyptian legislature, and this was taken into consideration by the British government. It is probable that there will be further exchanges before a definite action is taken on either side.

The British Foreign Minister also announced that the British reply to the Egyptian government's note, while welcoming its sentiments, warned the Egyptian government that if the assemblies bill were revived or similar legislation introduced Great Britain would again be obliged to intervene.

It could enter upon no discussions of the declaration on 1922.

Sir Austen went on to say that the Egyptian note was a lengthy document, which he would issue for publication tomorrow. He read the British government's reply, however.

Pressed as to whether the Egyptian note was couched in friendly terms, Sir Austen said that in the note he had just read "we take note of the fact that the Egyptian government state that their decision was taken in conformity with their ardent desire to reach an understanding and with their conciliatory sentiment. I think that it is a sufficient answer."

TURLINGTON TO MANAGE HULL FIGHT

Iredell Man to Champion Cause of Tennessee's Favorite Son For President.

Raleigh, May 2.—(AP)—The Democratic presidential campaign in North Carolina today began to move along more definite lines of cleavage and organization. Representative Zeb Vance Turlington, of Iredell, let it be known here last night that he had undertaken to manage the activities in the state for Tennessee's favorite son, Cordell Hull, member of Congress and former national chairman of the Democratic party.

The Iredell legislator, whose name is borne by the North Carolina prohibition act and who is prominent in activities of the Presbyterian church, is the first state manager definitely and officially appointed, so far as the records show. Both Governor Smith, of New York, and Senator Reed, of Missouri, have visited the state since they became aspirants for the White House, but up to date, there has been no announcement to the setting up of organizations in their behalf.

Disparages from Washington said that Senator Stimson, who has placed himself among the leaders of the anti-Smith campaign, knew of Turlington's selection by the Hull forces, but had no comment to make upon the development.

Turlington refrained from making any statement, saying he had not had time to formulate any plans as the matter had not been mentioned to him until yesterday when he received a telegram from Washington friends of the Tennessee candidate, asking him to serve. Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, signed the message received by the Iredell attorney, who replied that he accepted "with pleasure."

Hull headquarters will probably be opened in Raleigh shortly, it was indicated by the newly designated manager.

Turlington was in Raleigh to appear before the Supreme Court but while here he conferred with Gov. McLean, Secretary of State J. A. Hartness, and Josephus Daniels, among others.

Mr. Ford was more than usually reticent on sailing and declined to talk. They have been here since April 6.

BILLY SUNDAY TALKS ABOUT MERCY OF GOD

Evangelist Put Over Powerful Sermon to Fairly Large Congregation Last Night.

Using as his subject, "The Mercy of God," Rev. Billy Sunday, evangelist, last night delivered probably one of the most powerful sermons of his campaign in this city. Despite overcast clouds yesterday the mammoth warehouse building serving as a tabernacle was comfortably filled and the service proved decidedly inspirational and impressive.

"Did you ever thank God that you can hear?" the evangelist asked in the course of his sermon. "Did you ever thank Him that you can hear the voices of your friends, your dear ones, your wife and your children, and the sound of children at play; that you can drink in the melody with which God has filled this world; hear the word preached and hear them sing?"

"Did you ever thank God for the blessings of taste? You know there are people that cannot tell by taste whether they are eating strawberries and cream or baked shavings. There are other people that have such vicious tastes it is almost impossible to eat; and you ought to thank God for making so many good things taste good. God might have made our good taste like quinine or garbage, but he didn't."

"Talk about the disagreeable things—just stop where you are. Think of the good things in the world, and then thank God that you don't have to hold your nose and make a face every time you sit down at the table. There are people who don't know what it means to sit."

With vigorous gesture of arms and legs, Mr. Sunday drove home his sermon in masterful and convincing style, and called hundreds of his hearers to leave the building realizing the blessings which they had been enjoying.

Singing last night under direction of Homer Hammond, choir director, again played an important part in success of the service. It is true the choir list was not as well filled as it was Sunday, but this detracted little from the enthusiasm of the singers who sang with complete abandon and zest all through the service. Mr. Hammond has a knack of getting people to sing with freedom and spontaneity and last night was no exception.

Tonight Mr. Sunday will preach on the "Prayer of the Unsaved." It will be one of the most timely sermons of the campaign, and with ideal weather conditions as forecast by brilliant sunshine this afternoon, it is expected the tabernacle will be packed to capacity.

Mr. Sunday will speak in Washington Friday morning of this week under auspices of the Ministerial Association. He had oftentimes expressed a desire to visit the Washington home of Rev. James Fowle, D. D. of St. Louis, and accepted the invitation from the Washington ministers with more than usual pleasure.

Two hundred additional seats have been placed up near the pulpit in the tabernacle at the warehouse here in order that people may get nearer the speaker.

Special preparations are being made for the services here next Sunday afternoon when the evangelist will speak to men on the subject of "Corkscrews, Bootleggers and Crooks." This will be the launching of a campaign against the wet element, and promises to be one of the most strenuous in history of the section.

"In Romans, the twelfth chapter and the first verse: 'I beseech you therefore brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God.'"

"We have here a call for volunteers and not an order for a draft. The army of God is never made up of drafted men and women. God has never owned a slave. All the service that weighs an ounce in the sight of God is that which is prompted by love.

"It isn't a call to a hard duty, but to a glorious privilege. It is not something you must do, but something that you may do. It is not a command or a bid to a laborer to take a hoe and a spade and go out in the field and dig, but a loving invitation to a son to do the thing that can express your gratitude."

"See the motive that prompts our action: 'I beseech you by the mercy of God—not the judgments of God, not the servilities of God, not the anger of God. It is Calvary' (Continued On Page Six)

FARRELL OUT FOR BIG GOLF HONORS TODAY

By BRIAN BELL.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, May 2.—(AP)—Johnny Farrell has won most of the little golf championships and never the big one, but he is not downhearted. Only 27 years of age, he believes he will be open champion before he is forced to retire.

When he does win the title he will put this way to it. The smiling, superlatively groomed Westchester pro is the world's greatest long distance putter.

Johnny is only a common or garden variety of putter from four to five feet, but from 40 to 50 feet, he is a combination of deadly poison and high explosive. He has made 667 putts in serious competition better measured in yards than in feet.

"What is the explanation?" he was asked. "Have you always been a good putter?"

"Always," was the reply. "I could put before I could play any other part of the game. I was a caddy at Swinney and could practice putting when I was not carrying clubs while, of course, the caddies could not play on the course.

"I learned to sink the long ones, carrying Jerry Travers clubs. He never tried to lay the ball dead to the cup. Every time he putted, no matter how far away he was on the green, he went for the hole. I caddied for him every chance I got and as he was four times amateur champion, and won the open once, I didn't see how I could pick out a better example to follow."

Johnny has had only one putter and still has it. It is of aluminum and was given him by Tom Kerrigan, the Swinney pro, when the black headed boy with the smiling eyes, was working in the shop at Swinney.

The leather covering on the handle is worn and falls away from time to time but Johnny won't do anything about it. The old putter has stood him in good stead too often to take chances of changing its feel.

"Of course you think every year is your year," Johnny said as he chatted of his prospects for 1928. "But I really believe I will win. I have played good, sound golf all winter but not too much and I am ten pounds heavier than I have been."

"The extra weight will be helpful. I have to thank Artie McGovern for that. I figured it was a poor rule if it wouldn't work both ways so when I found Artie and his gym had taken a lot of weight off Babe Ruth, I thought he might be able to put a third as much on me."

"Golf's a gamble and the lightning strikes some times when you least expect it, but you have to take steps to be as right as you can for the big tests. The physical part, I have found not so important, for golf itself keeps one, who plays steadily, in shape. It's a terrific mental strain through a big championship and if you go through without cracking you are lucky."

Johnny is frequently referred to as the game's best dressed golfer. "Does it help your play to be well groomed?" he was asked.

"You bet," was the prompt reply. "I have more assurance and feel better all around when I know that I will stack up all right on my clothes when the big galleries looking at me." Johnny has 30 sweaters, a dozen suits, several dozen pairs of hose and six pairs of shoes.

Johnny stresses the fact that he is "pro" at the Quaker Ridge club. "no," the pro," he said. "The pro's is my older brother, Jim. He's the works."

The Fayetteville Highlanders remain in undisputed possession of first place in the Eastern Carolina by yesterday annexing the fifth straight victory of the season, winning from Kinston by a score of 3 to 1. Both pitchers were hit freely but were given errorless support all the way, which resulted in the score being kept at a low figure.

Manager Joliff took the mound for the Greenville club and managed to defeat Goldsboro by a score of 5 to 3, this being the first game the Tobacconists have won since the season started. Joliff was touched by Teague's trenchmen for a total of 16 safeties and one of these was a home run, but the former Virginia leaguer was stingy in the pinches.

After sailing the gallant main in great fashion for eight innings yesterday, the Wilmington Pirates were forced to strike the Jolly Roger in the eighth inning and were made to walk the plank by the Rocky Mount Buccaneers, the final score being 8 to 3. Four errors by the Wilmington Club contributed in large measure to the downfall of Weaver's outfit.

Today's schedule calls for Fayetteville to play at Rocky Mount; Wilmington at Goldsboro and Greenville at Kinston.

RUTH COMES BACK STRONG WITH WILLOW

By The Associated Press.
The American League race so far as it concerns the Yankees and Washington Senators seems to have resolved itself into a personal duel between Babe Ruth and Buck Harris' crew of pitchers.

Ruth cracked out homer number five a triple and two singles off Marberry and Van Alstyne at the capital yesterday and the Senators took their eighth consecutive beating, 8 to 5. It was the Yanks sixth straight win.

Four of Ruth's five homers have been achieved at the expense of Washington pitching. The Bambino has been the leading light in practically all of the five victories of the champions over the Senators.

Ruth's fifth and sixth home runs last year—his banner season—came on May 1 in his sixteenth contest. He has played in 14 games so far this season.

Connie Mack's Athletics kept pace with the titleholders by beating the Red Sox at Boston, 5 to 3, stretching their winning streak to seven in a row.

Cleveland retained second place, a step ahead of the Mackmen, by taking a 4 to 3 battle with the St. Louis Browns.</

SUNDAY TALKS TO STUDENTS

Evangelist Spoke at Chapel Period at the Teachers College This Morning.

The Rev. W. A. Sunday lectured at the chapel period at East Carolina Teachers College this morning. He talked on the subject of education. Education is not so much what one learns so much as it is a matter of habits and attitudes. There are two sides to it: one that we give ourselves and the other which we acquire by association. He told of the time he served as a janitor in a public school in Iowa, got up at 2 o'clock in the morning and built 14 tires and swept 14 classrooms each day.

"Education," he said, "is to do a common thing in an uncommon way. 50,000 pieces of mail are dropped in to U. S. post offices daily and it cost Uncle Sam a lot of money to hire some one to go around and tie up the packages that go into the mails half tied up. It keeps one half the world busy picking up after the other half."

Here are some of the things he told the girls to do:
Have a definite aim in life.
Develop perseverance and courage.
Rate yourself often and see if you rate A, B, or C or less, and don't be satisfied with less than an A rating. Be like an alligator, grow as long as you live.
Develop the spirit of kindness. Be governed by your admirations and not your prejudices.
Be honest.
Don't carry a stack of excuses. There is no such thing as fate.
Be careful of the company you keep. "We are a part of all we come in contact with," he said. "Byron was a pretty decent fellow until he began running with Shelly."

Asheville Murder Case Expected to Reach Jury Today

Asheville, May 2—(AP)—The case of Everett D. Corriher, charged with the murder of his first cousin, William Sumpter Carpenter, seemed likely to reach the jury early this afternoon.

Closing argument for the state was made Wednesday morning by Solicitor Robert M. Wells. Solicitor Wells asked the jury for a verdict of murder in the second degree, declaring it to be the jurymen's duty to society to remove Corriher from society as a dangerous chronic alcoholic.

He spoke of Corriher as a man, admittedly addicted to alcohol for 20 years and an assailant of his own mother, declaring he killed Carpenter, a much younger man of good character who had gone into the Corriher home to protect the mother from the son. He read the legal definition of murder in the second degree arguing that Corriher was guilty on his own testimony.

NEW UNION STATION CASE UP AT RALEIGH

Raleigh, May 2—(AP)—After a day of skirmishing by counsel, the appeal of interested railroads from the corporation commission's order that they erect a new union station in Raleigh, today reached the stage when issues of fact were to be presented to a Superior court jury, composed largely of Wake county farmers.

The railroads, the Seaboard, the Southern, and the Norfolk Southern, fought in vain yesterday to get before the court plans for remodeling the present station, but Judge H. C. Cranmer ruled against them.

It was the first sitting of court in two weeks owing to the two weeks' term of criminal superior court which came as a conclusion here Friday afternoon, and the docket was the most congested of some time. However, work was completed during the afternoon hours.

Henry McCoy, colored, alias Jones Manning, was given eight months on the roads following conviction on a charge of giving worthless checks. He was given concurrent sentences totaling twenty months in three other bad check cases.

Negro Nominated As Successor to Late Congressman

Chicago, May 2—(AP)—Four ward committeemen, substituted for a primary and elected yesterday named Oscar DePriest, 57-year-old negro, as the Republican congressional nominee from the first Illinois district. His name will replace that of the late Congressman Madden.

DePriest is a former alderman and county commissioner. His home was bombed several years ago during racial disturbances.

The first congressional district is largely populated by negroes, yet the late Congressman Madden won re-nomination easily over the negro candidate, William L. Dawson.

Dawson indicated he would challenge the selection of DePriest on the ground that the committeemen who made the choice had not received their certificates of election following the April election, and so were unqualified.

STOCK MARKET
New York, May 2.—(AP)—The stock market headed upward today stimulated by heavy buying of public utilities, motors and investment railroad shares, although prices tapered off somewhat shortly after noon in sympathy with a wide selling movement in the oils. A number of ordinarily obscure issues came to prominence as professional traders sought out the laggards in the list.

New peaks were established by a long list of high grade issues, such as American Telephone, American Can, Kennecott Copper, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway. Radio scored an extreme gain of 6 points and General Motors, Graham Paige, Electric Automobile and the New York traction shares had advances of 3 to 4 1/2 points.

Large priced shares, responding to the rapid movement of Chicago & Alton common, which sold as high as 10, last double its closing quotations on Monday, were in sharp demand. Minneapolis and St. Louis was turned over in round amounts, selling up to 6 3/4 compared with yesterday's close of 4 1/4. Chicago & Alton preferred touched a new peak at 26 3/8, but not heavy realizing sales and slipped back to 26, dragging the common back from its high level. New York, Ontario & Western was heavily accumulated in the early afternoon, rising 3 points to 36 1/2.

The speculative buying of the oils apparently had ceased for the moment, at least, and most of them fell back on extensive profit taking and short sales. Losses ran as high as 2 points in Pan American "B" Mexican Seaboard and Atlantic Refining. The scope of the selling in this group eventually caused the general list to taper off from its high figures in the early afternoon.

The closing was firm. Total sales approximated $3,900,000 shares.

Inferiority Complex Is Seen In Copying Of Men's Manners

Just because a woman sets out to conquer a man's field is no reason why she should sacrifice femininity, believes Miss Annie E. Peck, noted mountain climber. She is shown in the costume she wore while scaling the peaks and as she now appears.

New York, (AP)—The adoption of masculine manners by women is evidence of an inferiority complex, suggests Miss Annie E. Peck, noted mountain climber and explorer. Miss Peck, who sought a man's education and a man's occupation, believes in femininity and demonstrates it by the bit of lace at her throat, her softly curving coiffure and her narrow, high heeled shoes.

Twenty years ago, Annie Peck put on knickers, a sweater and a pair of heavy shoes and ascended Mt. Hucscaran in Peru. It was a hard scramble that established her reputation as a climber.

But the other day she sat in a chintz-covered arm chair, gazed thoughtfully at a well-kept hand and remarked that she made the climb only to show that women were just as capable as men.

"The trouble with most women, more particularly the women of my day," she said, "is that they consider themselves 'a' man if they do something that men do. They think it smart to wear masculine clothes, to swear, to be very nail-fellex-well-met.

"That's all very well, but it's an admission on the part of women that they aren't as good as men, that they are going to try to be just as good by the usurpation of all the masculine trimmings."

When it was time for Miss Peck to go to college, back in 1870, she wanted to go to a man's school. But she was denied admission to Brown, where her father and her brothers were graduated, so she went to the University of Michigan. In a class of 78 students eight were women. All of them, said Miss Peck, became successful in their chosen fields of work.

There followed for this fragile looking girl, whose diminutive size belied her excellent physical condition, years of teaching school, of studying in Europe and finally a consuming desire for travel, for exploration.

In 1895 she climbed the Matterhorn, and in 1897 was the first woman to ascend the Orizaba. Many record ascents were to her credit in the years that followed until her last climb in 1911 of two peaks of Mt. Coropuna in Peru, both of which were first ascents ever made of those peaks.

She has definitely retired from the active life of mountain climbing and devotes herself to writing. She is the author of two books on South America.

REVOLUTION COST HEAVY
Over 2,000 Nicaraguan Lives Said to Have Been Lost In Conflict to Date.

Managua, Nicaragua, May 2.—(AP)—Termining the current revolution the worst in 100 years; the annual report of Colonel Clifford D. Hays, collector general of customs, estimates its cost at more than $20,000,000 and between 1,500 and 2,000 in Nicaraguan lives. The loss of life is considered a high proportion for a small country and would amount to more than 350,000 if applied to the United States on the same ratio.

The monetary cost I held a big sum for Nicaragua to divert from public improvements and the country can not even pay one-half of the claims filed. These are more than $17,000,000 and cover property destroyed or commandeered by governmental and revolutionary forces.

The claims are for damages up to March 31, 1928, and do not include any damages done lately by rebels in the La Luz and Pis Pis mining regions. The largest claim close to $1,000,000 was filed by Charles Butters, American owner of the San Albino gold mine, destroyed by rebel forces.

Other expenditures were: More than $4,000,000 diverted from government revenues intended for other purposes, $180,000 used for military expenditures instead of paying salaries due teachers, $321,000 due the governments of the United States and Salvador for arms and ammunition $254,000 for voluntary and forced loans to the government from citizens $95,000 due New Orleans banks for loans, $84,000 due foreigners for loans.

The arrival of American marines early in 1927 saved Nicaragua from general destruction and from anarchy, the report says.

The report stresses that customs collections were the largest in the history of the country despite the revolution.

OIL MAGNATE STILL TELLS ABOUT BONDS

Harry Sinclair Tells Senate Committee of Continental Company's Transactions.

Washington, May 2.—(AP)—Harry E. Sinclair told the Senate Teapot Dome committee today that he and Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, frequently discussed the Continental Trading Company oil deal but that neither disclosed to the other that he was getting bonds from the Continental or from H. H. Blackmer, who was described as the principal figure in the transaction.

Testimony before the committee has been that Stewart and Sinclair received more than three quarters of a million each after the Continental had sold oil to their companies at a profit at 25 cents a barrel.

This money, they have testified, has now been turned back to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company, owned jointly by the Sinclair and Standard of Indianan interests.

Sinclair said today that his oil concerns and the Standard of Indiana had gone into partnership for business reasons.

"It was advantageous to both," he said, explaining that both of his companies and the Indiana Standard had large refineries in Chicago and Kansas City and they went together on the Sinclair Pipe Line Company so as to get oil to those refineries.

"This ended sharp competition between the companies?" asked Chairman Nye.

"There was no competition in the transportation of oil," Sinclair replied.

"You and Colonel Stewart guaranteed the contract between the Continental and Col. Humphreys?" Nye pursued. (A. E. Humphreys, of Denver, who sold the oil to the Continental).

"I did not guarantee that contract personally. It was subject to the approval of the directors of my company," Sinclair replied. He added that the liability under the contract was not very large as payments for the oil were not made until delivery had been made.

"It was one of the largest oil contracts ever known, was it not?"

"I would not say so as I have not seen all the oil contracts."

"What was the occasion of your visit to Mr. Fall (Albert B. Fall) in November, 1927?"

"I went down there to see about the lease of naval reserve number three (Teapot Dome) and Osage Indian oil lands."

Sinclair's attention was called to the fact that those matters were discussed on his visit to the former Interior Secretary in December, 1927.

"Oh, yes, I went there in 1927 to discuss royalty oil from the Salt Creek fields," he explained.

"Is it not true that your bid for that royalty oil was made after the advertised hour for receiving bids?" Nye asked.

"I cannot say."

"Can you tell how you gained control of all the royalty rights in the Salt Creek field?"

"The only control my companies have to any oil in the Salt Creek field was based on bids made to the Interior Department."

BILLY SUNDAY TALKS ABOUT MERCY OF GOD

(Continued from Page 1) to which the text points and not sin. It is the gospel and not the law through which God makes the appeal, and the compelling force is gratitude, not fear.

Be Not Afraid. "No child will ever do its best if it is kept half scared to death for fear it will be liked if it doesn't, and if it is doing its best, and you appreciate that, it will encourage it to do better.

"We are not commanded to do it, but we are entreated, and that's the amazing thing. God has the right and the power to make you or me do anything he wants done, but he isn't dealing with you in that way, not at all. He is giving you a chance to show that you love him.

"By the mercies of God? What do they mean to us? Has God been good to us, and, if so, how good has He been and how much? Have we anything to be grateful for, and, if so, what?"

"The man who loves his wife, he will like time, no matter how many business cares and duties crowd in upon him, to sit down and think back and recall how good she has been, the sacrifice she has made, and if he does that, his heart will never grow cold and you will never find him whining around the Court-house for a divorce.

"And the professional child of God that doesn't do a similar thing for the Lord, he isn't worth a nickel-a-bunch, and God knows that, and God wants to keep our hearts warm by having us frequently consider what God has done for us and is doing, and the only thing that can inspire gratitude in us is goodness.

God's Mercies.

"Let's go back and see if we have anything to be thankful for. If God has done anything for you worth considering, I don't care, you can sit there, a vile sinner, and yet God Almighty has done something for you that is worth considering, although you have never taken His name on your lips except in blasphemy and derision.

"The mercies of God—you might as well try to count the drops of water in the ocean? You might as well attempt to count the grains of sand by the seashore. You might as well try to count office-seekers after a presidential election.

"But it won't hurt you to try, and I think it will help you a little bit. The man who has a little God is the one who never takes time to consider what great things God is doing for him; and if you will go back for just one year to find a place to begin, you will cry with David. According to the multitude of thy tender mercies."

Unaccountable.

"A visitor was walking through the beautiful and well-kept grounds of an insane asylum out West, and he heard a voice shrieking to him from the fourth story. Looking up he saw a man standing at the grated bars, shaking them, and he shrieked down to my friend and said: 'Stranger, did you ever thank God for your reason?'

"He said it startled him and made him think. Up to that time he couldn't recall that he ever had, but he never allowed a day to go by after that time that he didn't do it.

"Have you ever thanked God for your reason? Did you ever do it, or you? Oh, if not, I beg of you, begin now. There are people just as good as you yonder in the insane asylum that don't even know the mother that gave them birth and at whose breast they nursed. Oh, how grand it is to be clothed and in your right mind and not locked up in a mad-house!

"I think it would be a thousand times easier to follow my child to the graveyard and listen to the crows fall with unutterable agony, and fill the grave myself, than to see one of them lose his mind and pound his brains out in a cell in an insane asylum.

"Did you ever thank God for your eyesight? Whenever you look into the sightless eyes of a man or woman you ought to thank God that He has given you eyes to see this old world, filled with beauty; to see the rose and the sky, the waterfall, the snow-covered mountains, the sunrise, the sunset, the rainbow and the storm cease. Oh, never again look into the face of your mother or your children without thanking God that you can see while others just as good as you are groping and feeling their way to a hearer.

Give Thanks.

"By the mercies of God! Did you ever thank God that you can hear—hear the voice of your friends, your dear ones, your wife or your children, and the sound of little children at play; that you can drink in the melody with which God has filled this whole world; hear the word preached and hear the voice of your mother or your child. Stop to a telephone hear your loved ones in Chicago or San Francisco.

"Did you ever thank God for the blessings of taste? You know there are people that cannot tell by taste whether they are eating strawberries and cream or baked shavings. There are other people that have such vicious tastes it is almost impossible to eat; and you ought to thank God for making so many good things taste good. God might have made our good taste like quinine or garbage, but He didn't.

"Talk about the disagreeable things—just stop where you are. Think about the good things in the world, and then thank God that you don't have to hold your nose and make a face every time you sit down at the table. There are people that don't know what it means. No, sir!

"Did you ever thank God that you can breathe, breathe without pain, that you have good lungs? Of all the people who die in this country, one out of eleven die from consumption; and of all the women who die, one out of eight die from cancer. But the time will come when the physicians, by their marvelous skill, will defeat the white plague and beat back that dread scourge which pushes one out of eleven into the coffin. Ever thank God that you can breathe?"

Blessed Sleep. "Did you ever thank God that you can sleep? If not, if I was the Lord, I'd keep you awake every night for about a month until you appreciated it. There are a lot of people that don't know what it is to sleep unless they take an opiate, and then they work over in their mind what has been calling thru the day.

"Did you ever thank God for the hospitals? Did you ever thank God for the doctors? Ever thank God for the nurses? Oh, how many of us here tonight would be in our graves if it wasn't for the skill of the men who come with the scalpel and trocar to remove the putrefying abscesses that bore their way toward our vitals and threaten to put us in the grave?"

"Did you ever thank God for all the wonderful blessings in the world, by the mercies of God? For the bread you ate for your supper, while other people, just as good as you, will go to bed hungry? You live above the hunger line and they live below the hunger line."

"Did you ever thank God for the drought that never came; for the fact that America has never scraped the bottom of her meal barrel, never for the cattle on a thousand hills; for the green of spring, which is a harbinger of what God will do for us, and our granaries will be full in the fall; for the lie that somebody uttered about you, derogatory to your character, and that because a boomerang in the face of the reprobate that dared spew it out to assassinate your character or the health that enables you to sit here and listen while others just as good as you are writing in pain and suffering in some hospital or home?"

Democracy in Religion.

"A friend of mine went to England years ago to deliver some addresses on the labor question, and one day the chairman of the day was the daughter of an earl, and she introduced my friend something like this: 'You of the working class, you of the common people, must be convinced that we of the aristocracy are much interested in your welfare and we desire to inform and enlighten you upon these topics, for we have brought Mr. So-and-so all the way from America to speak to you.'

"And they all said, 'Hear! Hear!' 'Well, that's all right in England, where they do want scraps to royalty, but that never will do in democratic America, where one man is as much as another.

"The mercies of God! Nowhere in the Bible do you find such language addressed to a sinner. Sinners are rebels. Sinners are in rebellion against God any time they never called 'brethren.' They are not treated. They are commanded. God commands all men everywhere to repent. God entreats you to do something for Him.

"It is a call to trust God in the fullest and in the completest sense like Isaac trusted his father, Abraham, and if we love God as we should, then we will trust God as we should, and when I fully realize God's mercies to me, I am not going to have much mercy on myself. I will not simply sit down and fawn myself and sing: 'I will go where you want me to go, dear Lord,' and then go to the devil or to bed or some place. No, no, that won't do.

Present Yourself.

"Present your body, not your wife. Present yourself, not your child. 'It is a personal matter between you and the Lord.

"Henry Varley said to Moody when he was in England, 'Moody, God is waiting to show this world what He can do through some man who is willing that He should do what He pleases with that man.'

"Moody jumped to his feet and said, 'Varley, by the grace of God, I will be that man; and God took him and hurled him as a mighty thunderbolt and shook the world for Jesus Christ with his truth.

"And are you willing to let God, my friends, have a chance to show through you to the world what religion is? The college shows through its graduates what they can do, the medical school, the law school. Let God show to the world through you what Christianity is in the world. He is helpless to do it, and that is all He is doing and the only way He can do it.

"Now, are you willing to let God say where you shall live? Are you willing to let God say whether he wants you here, in China, in Japan, or on the Malay Peninsula? Are you willing to let God take your body and do as he pleases with it? God's Warfare.

"Oh, God has a warfare on hand. It is right against wrong, heaven against hell, Christ against the devil, virtue against vice, sobriety against drunkenness. God doesn't want to draft you if you are not willing to come. I beseech you by the mercies of God.

"And if God could only get possession of the flesh and blood that belongs to Him, what a commotion He'd create on earth and in hell. And if God had some of your feet He'd point your toes in different directions from what they have ever gone before. God would make some of you fellows walk straighter in politics and religion than you ever have done in the past, take it from me.

"He would make some of you begin to wear out shoes making things right that have been wrong. He would keep some of you busy carrying back goods and money that you have swindled somebody out of that you acquired by crooked practices or cunning.

"If God had the feet that belong to Him you wouldn't let the devil use them, trotting around, gossiping about your neighbors. No, if God had your feet, you'd find it easier to walk toward the church, harder to go toward the haunts of sin, and you wouldn't be so busy that you couldn't get down on your knees and look up to heaven, and you'd make ever step of your life conform to the Golden Rule and the Sermon on the Mount. Some people do all their work for God with their mouth. God wants that part of you that is on the ground as well as up in the air.

"What would Uncle Sam do with an army if he did not have control of their feet. What would he do if all they did was to sit around the camp and watch the bacon fry and chew the rag? How many battles would he win with a bunch like that?"

Half-soled Cushions.

"Some of you never done more for God than that. Then, I know some preachers whose study cushions need half-soled more than their shoes.

"Yes—all I have said about the preachers, I can say it about you and add 100 per cent and then double it and I could not get within gun shot of you.

"If God had full control of our hands, how many things you would let hold of that you are holding on now with a death-like grip. What have you in your hand that God wants you to drop?"

"There are things in our possession that we must let go of or they will drag us to hell. How many dollars have you taken in that belong to somebody else? Oh! Give your hands to God and see how quickly He will pry open your fingers.

"Some people are working so hard with the muck rake they are going to lose the crown that God has stretched above their head. 'Undress' Ball.

"A friend of mine started to learn typewriting. His fingers were like sticks. He became so proficient that he can rattle off 120 words a minute on a trial. You let God have your hands and He will train you to do things with them that will make the angels wonder and look with jealousy.

"How many burdens you would be lifting on that gay, you would never touch your fingers to. How many tears you would see that you would stop to wipe away if God Almighty only had your hands. This old world would be a vestibule to glory and a suburb to heaven, if God only had your hands.

"Down in a Southern city, was a young lady. They were having what they called a 'dress ball,'—'undressed ball' would be nearer right. They did not have clothes enough on them to make a pad for a crutch. And presently a young fellow stood there and he did not dance and one of these society belles, with a soft liquid, Gaelic expression; a straight Grecian nose, large lustrous brown eyes that set far apart; her hair like a raven's wing, her teeth looking like ledges of pearl and Arctic snowdrifts; her neck like a swan; she came up to him with a gaze of Spartan-like championship and she said to him, 'Will you pledge a glass of champagne with me?'

"He said, 'No, ma'am, I do not drink.' "She said, 'Had I known that you did not drink I would have stood upon the formality of an introduction, and I would not have trespassed upon the rules of etiquette and spoken to you. But you looked so lonely that I thought I would run the risk of incurring your displeasure and having you think me bold and forward by speaking to you. Not one glass?'

"No, Thank You." "No, thank you." "I cannot understand you." "And he backed off, but a dude came up and the same thing went on between the monkey and the

Read What Others Say: Mrs. W. J. Burrows, Box 927, Electra, Texas, writes: 'I want to tell the world what a great and good PELLAGRA treatment you have. I feel better than I have for 14 years.' Mrs. Sallie Strong, Route No. 1, Long Island, Ala., writes: 'I will always praise you and your wonderful medicine. It has done me more good than all other medicines I have taken.'

man. He said, 'Come on, be a game sport. Come on.'

"And others nagged him to desperation and finally he said, 'Well, I could drink just one glass.' "And he reached out his hand and took it and he looked at it a minute and he drank it down. Another and another, another. He became glibly tongue-tied and they pushed him out on the ballroom floor and he became so drunk that the girls had to hold him up to keep him from falling.

"Now, they were happy because they could not bear to see anyone on the square. The dirty bunch had gotten him to hell and they seemed to be able to go to bed happy now.

"They danced on and drank and drank until midnight. At 2 o'clock a man could be seen walking up and down in the shade of the depot platform and he would pull a pint flask from his pocket and drink it down and say, 'Oh, God, what will mother say?'

"Then he would stagger into the darkness and take another drink, and when he had emptied the bottle he hurled it out on the rail and when the headlight of the midnight express on the Shore Line was coming for New York, he staggered aboard and went back to his home in Vermont, where two months later he died of delirium tremens. He shook his fist and shot it into the face of his father until the blood spouted from his nose.

"Oh, if you could have seen the letter that mother wrote back to that society belle, if so, you would say with Lady Macbeth of old, 'Will not all Neptune's seas wash this blood away?'

"Oh, use your hands to pull people out of the mire and not to shove them hellward.

Givers Ashamed.

"A rich man heard a sermon one time and he went home, and it troubled him. He said, 'That preacher made me look into a glass this morning and what I saw there made me ashamed of myself.'

"His wife said, 'Why? You are a generous giver. You give money to the church.' "Why, some people think I do, but I earn three or four times as much as most of the members of that church, and they give three or four times as much as I do. I am going to give something that will miss and I am determined that it shall cost me something. I smoke big cigars and pay good prices for them, and I am going to quit and turn that money into the church. Will any of you join me?"

"The wife said, 'I like tea. Young Hyson and Oblong mixed. I will give that up.'

"And he turned to his daughter, and she liked a lot of nice things and finery and, with much regret, she specified some things that she would give up.

"And he turned to the boy, who was feeding his face with mashed potatoes and chicken gravy, and he said, 'What will you give up?' "The boy said, 'I will give up salt mackerel. I never did like the darn stuff, anyway.'

"Salt Mackerel Piety. "We have got too many salt mackerel Christians. If they have something they don't want and nobody else wants, they give it up for they think it is good enough for God.

"Take too little girls playing Noah's Ark in the bath tub, until finally they got tired and one of them pulled out the stopper and said, 'The flood is over.'

"But the other little girl knew the Bible and she said, 'No. When the flood was over, Noah came out of the Ark and built an altar.' "So they took the soap dish and turned it upside down. Then they hunted up a boy whom they had a leg off and they put it on the altar.

and said, 'That is good enough. We don't want it, anyway.'

"And there are a lot of folks doing the same shell game today. You think anything is good enough for the Lord, my friends. No, sir. Not on your life. God wants your bodies and blood in them.

"Cain's altar made ten times the show that Abel's did, but Abel's had one little lamb, but it had blood. It was God's appointed way. God accepted Abel, but He passed Cain up like a hobo does a woodpile.

Proof of Love. "Now, some love proves its love by the way it gives. The man that gives his wife a ten cent pin cushion at Christmas to show her how much he loves her, he is the devil's idea of what a husband ought to be.

"How thankful you ought to be, intelligent and rational beings, that God gives you a chance to show heaven and earth and hell what you think of the Lord. How thankful you ought to be that God gives you a chance for you to show your colors for truth.

"No, I don't believe the most glorious singing angels in heaven have any such chances as we have. Nobody up in heaven can suffer—they are done. Nobody up in heaven can make sacrifices—all is over. Angels may claim they love God, but they haven't the chance to prove it by the sacrifices we can make.

"When you give a gift, it has left your hands, it is gone forever. A little girl was showing a friend of mine some Christmas presents and the friend said, 'How beautiful, but how long can you keep them?' "They are presents; I don't have to give them back."

"Yet, there are some people that will snatch themselves back from God when their ardor cools a little bit.

"A man will rob God a good deal quicker than he will rob a fellow man. Yet you can rob God of your money and rob Him right and left and think nothing of it.

"And your bodies—that takes in your head as well as your hands. God wants brains as well as muscles and bones. His business is the greatest in the world and He wants your help.

Business of Lord. "Oh, is there any reasonable, rational, intelligent being that would refuse to give God his help? Would you refuse to give your country your help? Then you don't deserve to have a decent person spit on you.

"I repeat, God's business is the largest in all the world. He wants our help and we ought to do our best planning in the world for the Lord."

That was the old poker player's remark, as he "raised." To discourage.

Postmaster General New calls Secretary Hoover "a true American," saying: "No man has done more to demonstrate American intelligence and capacity."

The statement that Hoover "has leanings toward Great Britain" makes the British laugh. It was Hoover that first detected and exploded the British rubber trust that was to take hundreds of millions a year from the Yankees.
