MEXICANS TO ATTEND MASS ON SATURDAY

First Public Service Since June, 1927, To Be Held At National Shrine.

Mexico City, June 24.—(AP)—The first public mass in Mexico since August 1, 1926, will be said June 27, at the Church of Nuestra Señora De Guadalupe—Mexico's national shrine, Saturday.

Escual Diaz, newly appointed archbishop of Mexico, in a publishing statement today that while the task of taking inventory of the churches and their delivery by the government back to the episcopate necessarily would take some time, it would be rushed to completion in the case of the Guadalupe church for the Saturday service.

Other churches will be reopened by the priests as quickly as the governmental surrender processes can be completed and priests can be sent back to them. The Mexican national cathedral, on the site of the old Aztec Sacrificial block, probably will be kept closed until the novelty has worn off the new religious services, since it is in a bad state of repair.

Prominent Mexico City Catholics have set in motion plans to have pilgrims to the shrine Saturday creep the entire distance on their knees. Numerous church groups have promised participation in the trip, which would be made over a three-mile cobblestone route.

The shrine Saturday and Sunday past was the scene of visits by hundreds of thousands, at least 100,000 having come Saturday and many more, according to police estimates yesterday. The crowds were of all ages, many of them falling on their knees the last few rods of the approach to the venerable edifice.

Inside the ranks moved forward down the aisles, to the altar and out again six abreast, a constant never-ending stream. Many brought candles, which officiating laymen arranged as best they could, the not tall dropping unnoticed on the happy pilgrims. The altar before the image of the Virgin—the same which is reputed to be of miraculous origin—was loaded high with flowers.

Similar pilgrimages, although possibly not so extensive, were expected to take place every day this week.

Archbishop Diaz yesterday performed the first rite of his archbishopric and incidentally the first public rite of a Roman Catholic clergyman since the acute phase of the religious controversy, ended Friday, was initiated. His act was that of baptism, with the son of Vito Alessio Robles, president of the anti-Re-election party, one of the nation's strongest political organizations as his subject. The ceremony was performed in Allesto's honor.

Archbishop Ruiz y Flores, of Michoacan, has cabled the Vatican asking authorization for Archbishop Diaz officially to assume all duties as head of the church in Mexico immediately, without awaiting arrival of the Papa Bull containing his appointment. The appointment itself was announced by cable from His Holiness to Archbishop Ruiz Saturday.

Highway Patrol Touring State

Raleigh, June 24.—(AP)—North Carolina's newly organized state highway patrol, headed by Captain Charles D. Farmer and including 37 men left Raleigh this morning on a swing over the western section of North Carolina to familiarize the patrolmen with the state and to let the people of the state see the new patrol.

Today the party will visit High Point, Winston-Salem and Statesville and will spend the night at Morganton.

Tomorrow the group will go to Asheville on route 10 and then return to Charlotte on route 20. A swing into Eastern Carolina will be made from Charlotte with Wilmington, Kinston and Goldsboro being visited and the tour ending in Raleigh Thursday.

Captain Farmer and his nine lieutenants are traveling in motor cars and the patrolmen are on motorcycles. All are in uniform and presented a naty appearance as they paraded the streets of the state capital today.

Has Non-Sink Suit. New York—Lieut. Knud Von Clauson-Kaas, Danish aviator, who hopes to fly the Atlantic, has a non-sink suit which he expects will keep him afloat several days in the ocean if his plane falls. The suit has been given a successful trial. The lieutenant floated in it 24 hours at the beach, much to the envy of basted folks ashore.

HAWKSTO MAKE FLIGHT ACROSS UNITED STATES

Flier On Way To New York To Make One Stop Flight Back To Los Angeles.

Metropolitan Airport, Los Angeles, June 24.—(AP)—Captain Frank Hawks took off here at 1 a. m. today for New York City, where he proposed to start a one-stop round trip flight from New York to Los Angeles and return, beginning Wednesday at 4 a. m., Eastern daylight time.

Hawks was accompanied in his Lockheed Vega monoplane by Peter Clausen, mechanic, who will condition the plane before its return trip. Hawks took 340 gallons of gasoline, sufficient, he believed to carry him to Park's Field, East St. Louis, Ill., where he hoped to arrive by 2 p. m., Central Standard time today.

He planned to refuel the plane there and continue the journey eastward, landing at near New York as possible before nightfall. He would complete the trip to Roosevelt Field early Tuesday, he said. Captain Hawks expects to take off from New York Wednesday with 600 gallons of gasoline in the hope of breaking the east-west record of 24 hours, 51 minutes made last February by the late Captain C. B. D. Collyer and the late Harry Tucker, of Los Angeles.

Here he plans to have his plane refueled and the motor checked over in less than two hours for the return trip to New York. The pilot said he hoped to make the westward hop in 18 hours and the return flight in 14 to 16 hours.

In New York, Hawks will have a radio receiving set installed in his plane so that he may receive weather reports en route.

Hawks already holds the west-east non-stop record of 18 hours, 21 minutes, 59 seconds.

German Minister Defends Nation's Foreign Policy

Berlin, June 24.—(AP)—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, made a vigorous defense of the German government's foreign policy, particularly with reference to the reparations problem, in an address before the Reichstag today, answering bitter criticism by Count Westarp, leader of the Nationalists.

The foreign minister declared the newly drawn Young plan was a definite improvement over the Dawes plan from the viewpoint of the burden on Germany. As to its future, he said: "Nobody in the world can give absolute guarantee as to its workability. The experts themselves stated that the maximum forecast can be for only ten years."

Dr. Stresemann's only reference to the United States, which, however, he did not mention directly, was his answer to the Nationalist charge that Germany was becoming a colony of France and England. "No, we are not a colony of the Frenchmen and Englishmen," he said. "To me, it seems doubtful whether all Europe is not in danger of becoming a colony of those who are luckier than we. The fact that the colonies sat down together to work out amelioration for each other because others did not give them amelioration—that is something that cannot be removed from the history of the Paris negotiations."

TUNNEY FILES AN ANSWER TO DIVORCE SUIT

Former Fighter Claims to Have Purchased His Release From Mrs. Fogarty.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 24.—(AP)—James J. (Gene) Tunney, retired heavyweight champion of the world, in an answer today to the $500,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, of Fort Worth, Texas, and New York City, denied he ever had asked her to marry him, revealed that he had paid her sums of money exceeding $35,000 to "relinquish all claims on him."

Bridgeport, Conn., June 24.—(AP)—James J. (Gene) Tunney's answer to the $500,000 breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty of Fort Worth, Texas, and New York City, was filed in superior court here today, together with a counter claim.

Tunney's answer, filed by Homer Cummings of Stamford, his Connecticut attorney, revealed that Billy Gibson, the former heavyweight champion's trainer, paid to Mrs. Fogarty the sums of $1 and $35,000 "to relinquish her claims on the defendant." On receiving these sums (said the answer, Mrs. Fogarty signed a release. The answer did not say, however, whether her charge that Tunney asked her to marry him and was accepted was true.

The answer alleged that Mrs. Fogarty's suit is an attempt to damage the reputation and "vex" the former pugilist and charged that before both the second Dempsey-Tunney fight and the Heeny-Tunney fight, she "spread libelous statements regarding her relations with Tunney and his affairs."

Another allegation was that she is seeking notoriety and financial gain from publicity attendant on the filing of the suit and its public trial.

Four counter charges were listed. The first time was that Mrs. Fogarty seeks "to vex and trouble the defendant unlawfully"; the second, "to extort money from the defendant"; the third, "to ruin from the publication of libelous charges against the defendant, immunity from the penalty, civil and criminal, of the law of libel, relying upon the privilege incident to pending litigation"; and the fourth, "to secure large sums of money from news papers, from notoriety-distributing agencies willing to pay for her statements, photographs and services."

Mrs. Fogarty, in her suit, alleged that in 1925, shortly after she had obtained a divorce from John S. Fogarty of Fort Worth, Texas, Tunney, then in training at Hot Springs, Ark., had asked her to marry him. Subsequently, according to her complaint, he asked again, and was accepted. Then he married "another person"—Polly Lauder.

Spanish Destroyers To Hunt For Lost Fliers In Vicinity of Azores

New York, June 24.—(AP)—A steamship's report of the sighting of a flare, believed that of an airplane, 400 miles south of Cape Race, Newfoundland, Sunday morning, caused curiosity today as to whether the Spanish trans-Atlantic fliers attempted to cross to the American continent without first stopping at the Azores.

Since more than enough time had elapsed since the sighting of the supposed flare for the Spaniards' plane, the Jupiter, to reach Halifax, or New York, it was presumed that if the plane had made such an attempt it was down in the western Atlantic or in an isolated spot in the east Atlantic seaboard.

The Radio Marine Corporation picked up a message from the freighter Buffalo Bridge saying that 5:30 a. m. G. T. Sunday (12:40 A. M. E. S. T.) in latitude 40:04 north, longitude 50:57 west, it had observed "a flare of light bearing six degrees at an altitude of ten degrees."

The radiogram added the object was "apparently an airplane." The position given was approximately 400 miles south and slightly east of Cape Race, on the route the plane probably would have followed had it attempted to cross without stopping. The time also was about that the Dorier Wahl plane of Major Ramon Franco and his three companions would have required to reach that point.

Prior to Major Franco's departure from Alcazars airdrome, Cartagena, Spain, he was reported to have told a writer for Diario La Verdad, of Murcia, Spain, that he had a surprise for everybody, and that if all went well he would reach New York by 1 a. m. Sunday morning.

Madrid, June 24.—(AP)—Spanish destroyers were ordered from the Galician coast today to proceed in the direction of the Azores in search of Major Ramon Franco, Spanish aviator who was believed down between Portugal and the Azores on a trans-Atlantic flight attempt.

Two squadrons of airplanes from airdromes at Melilla and Alcazars in Cartagena, were ordered to accompany the destroyers and conduct the search for the missing seaplane by air as well as by sea.

Official announcement of the search orders said the plane's plight was not considered desperate, since favorable weather conditions prevailed between the Iberian peninsula and the Azores, and the huge Dorier Wahl seaplane was entirely seaworthy.

The official note expressed the theory that the plane had been forced to alight somewhere on its route from Alcazars airdrome, which it left at 4:50 p. m., Friday (10:40 a. m. E. S. T.) to Horta, which it planned to reach at 6 a. m. Saturday morning, stopping briefly for fuel.

It was explained that the plane's radio would cease to function once the plane alighted on the water, and for that reason the silence of Major Franco and his three companions, Major Asturo Gallarza, Captain Ruiz De Aida, and the mechanic, Madariaga, was not considered as ominous.

PRES. HOOVER GOES BACK TO THE CAPITAL

President Returns To Desk After Week-End At Fishing Preserve in Blue Ridge.

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—After an early morning start from his fishing preserve in the Blue Ridge Mountains President Hoover motor back to Washington today, arriving at the White House a few minutes before ten o'clock.

The presidential party arose at 5 o'clock and after breakfasting at the camp began the return trip to Washington. An hour was consumed in traveling the ten mile distance over Doubletop Mountain, as the rains of last night had put the seldom-used road in bad condition. At the foot of the mountain, the White House limousines awaited for the remainder of the journey.

Mr. Hoover appeared refreshed after his two-day stay at the camp and smiled a cheery greeting to the people of Criglersville, a hamlet at the foot of the mountain.

Mr. Hoover's guests on his week-end trip were Secretary Hyde and Mark Sullivan, writer. The party left Washington Saturday morning and reached the fishing preserve about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, spending Saturday and Sunday nights.

Several hours were spent in fishing on Saturday with a good catch resulting and Sunday was given over to rest at the camp.

A series of electrical storms over the week-end played havoc with the telephone line which was constructed into the camp, and which is Mr. Hoover's only direct means of communication with Washington when he is resting there. The line was out of commission for several hours.

FIVE KILLED IN WEEK-END AIR MISHAPS

Commercial Pilot Killed At Albemarle In Parachute Accident.

(By the Associated Press)

Five were killed in week-end air plane and parachute jumping exhibitions.

Two of the victims were parachute jumpers who fell when their parachutes broke.

At Cincinnati, Joe Hite, a parachute jumper, Nomer Nasers, the pilot, and Harold Biddle were burned to death when their plane dived and burst into flames.

E. J. Cain, 23 years old, a commercial flyer, fell 2,000 feet when his parachute rippled and he essayed an exhibition jump at Albemarle, N. C.

William Lowry, 24 years old, at Parma, Ohio, was torn from his parachute when it opened 1,800 feet in the air.

Noted Democrat Passes In Iowa

Fort Dodge, Iowa, June 24.—(AP)—M. F. Healy, 66, who seconded the nomination of Alfred E. Smith at the Democratic convention in Houston last year, died today after a long illness. He long had been a state Democratic leader and had been a delegate to eight national conventions. He was one of the organizers of the Iowa Smith-Robinson Club a year ago.

Yale Professor Is Denied Citizenship

New Haven, Conn., June 24.—(AP)—Professor Douglas C. MacIntosh Dwight, professor of geology in Yale Divinity school, who would not promise to defend the United States against all enemies, was denied American citizenship by Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas today.

Professor MacIntosh reiterated his refusal to defend the country in any war except a "justified war." In a 300 word statement he expanded his views on the subject, saying that he "could" be willing to take up arms in defense of the United States but he reserved the right to serve only when the cause is "just."

INVESTIGATE NARCOTICS AT OHIO COLLEGE

Admission Of Dr. Snook Brings About Activity Among Federal Agents.

Columbus, Ohio, June 24.—(AP)—The use of narcotics at the veterinary school of Ohio State University was under the investigation of federal officers today upon the admission of Dr. James H. Snook, dismissed professor, that Theora Hix, 25-year-old, chief office assistant, whom he confessed slaying, begged frequently for narcotics while in his employment.

William Ford, narcotic agent, said he learned that the department's allotment was kept in a desk, and that no report of the actual use to which the supply was put had been made. Each withdrawal was for "experimental purposes," he said.

Dr. Snook declared in statements after he signed a confession to the slaying that the girl had asked him many times for narcotics, but denied that she was an addict or that he had granted her requests.

Prosecution and defense were engaged today in maneuvers preliminary to Snook's trial on a first degree murder indictment. County Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., said that three alienists who examined Snook will report on him tomorrow. They made an examination after Chester's announcement that he believed Snook was sane on the night he beat the girl into insensibility with a hammer and then cut her throat with his pocket knife. He will fight an insanity plea, the prosecutor declared.

As Chester indicated he will not use the 49-year-old veterinarian's written confession in the trial and conducted further examinations of blood stains on Snook's clothes and automobile, his attorneys prepared for a defense which they declared would be carried as far as possible on Snook's plea of not guilty, which they announced he would make even before his arraignment.

SNOOK PLEADS NOT GUILTY IN MURDER CASE

Confessed Slayer Of University Co-Ed Arraigned In Criminal Court At Columbus.

Columbus, Ohio, June 24.—(AP)—Dr. James H. Snook, dismissed university professor, and confessed slayer of Theora Hix, student at the university, pleaded not guilty to first degree murder indictment when arraigned today in criminal court.

On the request of County Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., Judge Robert P. Duncan set July 22 as the date for trial over the opposition of E. O. Rocketts, one of the attorneys for Snook, who said the defense would not have time to prepare its case.

Dr. Snook entered his plea of not guilty himself. Speaking in a clear voice he answered "Not guilty."

He was brought before the judge handcuffed to another man under indictment for first degree murder—Albert C. Gunning, Columbus, who also pleaded not guilty.

CONTINUES HEARING ON TARIFF BILL

Committee To Listen to Conditions Affecting Wool And Sundries in this Country

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—With the Democratic-Republican independent movement in opposition to the House tariff bill apparently gaining momentum, 4 schedules of that measure which are destined to be the subject of more or less controversies in the Senate engaged the attention today of sub-committees of the finance committee and scores of witnesses.

Two of these schedules—wool and sundries—were open for testimony for the first time since the committee began its public hearings on the bill, while about 100 witnesses already had been heard on the other two—agriculture, and earth, earthenware and glassware. Most of the witnesses who have been heard thus far have appealed for greater increases than the House voted in the duties on products with which they were concerned.

The woolly schedule is the one which contains the House proposal, adopted after considerable controversy, to place duties on hides, leather, boots and shoes, now on the free list. This, with the similar proposal affecting various building materials and that to increase the rate on sugar, is expected to be the basis for several weeks of debate, at least, during the Senate's consideration of the bill after August 19. Lengthy discussion also is likely to grow out of the proposal in the wool schedule to add three cents to the present duty of 31 cents a pound on raw wool and to increase the rates on wool manufactures to compensate for that advance.

Evidence of the growing intensity of the Democratic-Republican independent movement to confine revision to agricultural and related products and to bring about reductions in some industrial schedules was given in statements by Senators Brookhart, Iowa, and Rep. Hill of Tennessee.

The former held that farmers should recognize that however high tariff rates might be made on a commodity of which there is a surplus, they cannot aid its producer. He also said the present law pays farm products only 1.1 per cent actual protection and that the House bill would increase this to only 1.3 per cent, "compared with an effective rate on other industries of 34.9 per cent."

Hull charged that "sinister and selfish forces dominated the House tariff proceedings, and unless the people bestir themselves they will likewise dominate the Senate."

"Agriculture," he said, "for the ninety-ninth time is to be hoodwinked and humbugged by profligate promises of effective tariffs that are a fraud and a swindle, save as to certain minor specialties."

Convent Struck By Lightning, Burns

Montreal, June 24.—(AP)—Struck by lightning the convent of the Sacred Heart at Sault Au Recollet was in ruins today.

Fire, discovered half an hour after a flash of lightning had struck the metallic roofing, burned the structure yesterday.

All of the occupants, including 22 conventual nuns, escaped. The four story stone building and its contents were a total loss, estimated at $1,000,000.

The storm crippled fire alarms and telephone lines so that arrival of firemen was delayed. As the roof and floors fell, the walls crumbled until nothing remained standing but a section of the front wall, supported by a cross and studded eave. Four firemen were hurt.

The convent which was conducted by the Ladies of the Sacred Heart, was widely known as an educational institution.

Paid Alimony To Wrong One

Los Angeles, Calif., June 24.—(AP)—Edward Cruse, 64-year-old negro, who said he belonged to the Crusade of Halifax, Va., before the Civil War, today faced the problem of paying $250 back alimony.

Superior Judge E. V. Rosenbranz filed the order against Cruse upon petition of his wife, Cora Cruse, who claimed the ex-slave owed her $1,250, having craved years ago to pay $5 a week alimony.

"I gave the money to the children," Cruse said. "The children testified their father gave them money each week with instructions to spend it as they got home so the old woman won't get it." Judge Rosenbranz suspended the weekly payments and directed Cruse to pay the $250 in monthly installments of $10.

Chapter I. A BEAUTIFUL BURGLAR

The flash of a face, a puff of breath, and the candle, suddenly extinguished, choked him with its reek. Rigid he stood, peering into the engulfing darkness, every faculty keenly alert, until there stole to him a vague rumble of stealthy movement. Dropping the candlestick, he leapt to grasp draperies that tore in his fierce clutch—to hear a faint cry, a stumbling fall.

Uttering a smothered exclamation, he started backwards to the door, looked it, groped feverishly for another candlestick, took out tinder box and struck a light.

She crouched within a yard of him, hidden in the folds of a long cloak.

"Well, who—what are ye?" he demanded.

"Your prisoner, 'twould seem," she answered, her voice shrill and untroubled.

"Ay, I have ye fast enough," he nodded grimly. "But who are ye? Here's to see!" He stooped and plucked back the hood of her cloak.

Grey eyes, black-lashed, that stared at him from the pale oval of a face framed in dark tresses of misty hair; vivid lips, firm-set and resolute like her smooth-roundered chin; her eyes drew and held his regard, eyes that met his unflinching and with never a sign of fear.

She viewed him serenely, from his disordered wig to muddy riding-boots; his sombre eyes deep-set beneath thick, black brows, his dominant nose, the sardonic bitterness of curling lips, the grim line of jaw, a middling tall man, all lean strength and supple poise despite the careless slouch of broad shoulders.

"You must be Julian Guyford!" said she at last.

"Ha, must I so?" he answered.

"You will help me, sir, to avert shame and misery from one I love."

"A man?"

"A woman, sir, and very young—very guileless."

"Guileless?" he repeated. "Breathes there such woman indeed? And pray, ma'am, he went on, "why should I help you?"

"I ask your aid because you are a man."

"But a man that scorns women-kind!" he retorted.

In one lithe movement she was upon her feet, facing him with chin sparkling a very figure of scorn.

"I doubt but some dairymaid hath flouted you of late, poor youth!" she murmured. "Tis possible years shall heal the smart and bring you a little manhood!"

He laughed harshly and bowed, slapping his knee. "I protest 'tis a most palpable hit. A little manhood says you—hum."

"My Guyford, are you a man of honour?"

"Faith, ma'am, I fear not—question those respectable gentlefolk, my neighbours, and they shall assure you of the fact, with deplorable particularity."

"No, no, your looks tell you, sir."

"My looks, ma'am? You'd say my poor visage matches my reputation! Fie, am I an old-like? Pray was it to brow-beat a disreputable dog or pluck his aid that you broke into his house?"

"Neither, sir, 'twas my duty to steal. To recover a letter addressed to your cousin, Sir Richard Guyford."

"Addressed say you, to Sir Richard Guyford. So—dame my cousin!"

"Heartily, sir!" she murmured, nodding at him fiercely. But he was staring at the candle, whispering softly between his teeth, quite lost in gloomy thought; whereupon she surveyed him anew with quick feminine eyes. His age? Anywhere between 20 and 40. And was it, indeed, the face of an evil man? In puckered brow, grim mouth and indomitable chin was there not an air of latent power—and more, a hint of something nobler? And, despite sullen look, his features were good enough; also he was younger than she had supposed. Now was he truly an evil man or bither disillusioned boy? His age should be about 30—and then all men were children.

"And yet," said he suddenly, "I have neither seen nor heard of such letter!"

"How should you, sir? 'Twas addressed to your cousin Sir Richard, and he is away in London. But 'twas delivered here this afternoon to a man in livery with a scar on his face."

"Ha, this will be Tom Pitt! And you came hither to steal it, ma'am?"

"Or buy it back at any price, before Sir Richard should receive it."

"Reaching out to a bell-rope beside the chimney, he jerked it violently and a distant bell tinkled."

"We will question a rascal, ma'am—say if you fear to be seen, get ye behind the curtains." She hesitated in frowning perplexity, but at the sound of approaching footsteps, vanished behind the draperies. There entered a man who bowed and peered with narrow, close-set eyes.

"Tom Pitt, I want the letter was brought you today, a letter inscribed to Sir Richard Guyford."

"Letter, sir? There was none, sir, none indeed."

"However, I want it, Tom, a letter that was put into your claws this afternoon. Do I get it?"

"Oh, impossible, sir, quite impossible, indeed; there was no—"

Tom Pitt's sleek head rapped sharply against the panelling, and he gasped and choked in the sudden grip of sinewy fingers.

With feverish haste Pitt thrust hand into bosom, and drawing thence a heavily sealed letter, gave it up without a word.

"Exactly!" nodded the other. "Now begone, Tom, and close the door after you."

He was turning the missive over and over when she parted the curtains, her serene assurance whelmed in a tremendous eagerness.

"You—you will give it to me, sir?" she questioned.

"I wonder?" he answered, his sardonic features twisted in sardonic smile.

"Julian Guyford," said she, sinking her voice to passionate whisper, "twas writ to a villain by a foolish girl. Should it come to Sir Richard's hands only God knoweth what evil and agony it may work. Sir, you as Sir Richard's cousin, must be sensible of his ill repute, but of his soulless cruelty and black deceit, none but a woman may know—"

"Faith, ma'am, you paint him a blacker rogue than—even I had thought him. You shall tell me more of his sinning."

"Nay, 'tis vile subject! And I am expected—I pray you give me the letter."

"Aha, the letter!" he sighed and broke the seal, unfolded it and began to read. "Pah!" he exclaimed and turned to glance at the signature. "Are you 'Saccharissa'?"

"No!" she cried, fiercely scornful. "And what manner of things are you to dishonour yourself—to pry—oh, shame!"

"Considering you are a thief, ma'am, a housebreaker caught in the act, I prove in your a singular absence of fear, a deplorable lack of confusion! A very arrogant criminal, a most imperious gallow-bird!"

"Will you give me the letter, sir?" she sighed wearily.

"Be seated, ma'am, and I'll read it to you."

"I'll not hear it."

"Then cover your ears, ma'am! And holding the letter to the candle, he read aloud:

"Dear Sir Richard: I will meet you tonight by the old Mill House, trusting to your honour to return my letters. But oh, Richard, you have promised so often, pray God you will keep your word tonight and return the letters. Indeed, Richard, they was wrote you before I knew what love was—but I do love at last with all my heart—I pray thee return these letters and I will rest your grateful, loving friend, Saccharissa."

"And here is your letter, ma'am, said he, handing it to her with mocking bow. "What manner of letters are these she pleads for?"

"Romantic folly writ by an innocent school-miss to a designing villain, trifles of none account; 'tis this letter might work the harm!"

"Trifles? Yet she would seem vastly anxious for their recovery. 'Tis old Mill House—hum!"

At this moment, from some chamber above, rose a axing and hiccough uproar of drunken voices, waiving the chorus of a song to the accompaniment of thudding heels and ringing glasses. A bibulous voice called plaintively:

"Oho, S'Richard Guyford, some back t'yr fr'ens!"

"Sir Richard?" she repeated. "Sir Richard be here them?"

"He is, ma'am."

"But I heard—they told me he had ridden for London this morning."

"He had, ma'am, but then he changed his mind and rode back again."

"I must be gone; he must not see me!"

"Indeed, but he must, ma'am, since having eyes, he may not help."

"Now meeting his grim, unsmiling look, she recoiled.

"You mean," she faltered.

"That I am Sir Richard Guyford."

"You?" she faltered. "You? Then suffer me—to go, sir."

"None shall let or stay you, lady, least of any I. You came by the window, I think?"

"Yes!" she murmured, not looking at him.

"Then by the window will we go."

"You? You will come?" she questioned, staring, as he took hat, cloak and sword whence they lay.

"Indeed," said he, bowing. "Come now, I shall see you to your carriage, or horse, or friends, or whether you will and, while we walk, you shall tell me more concerning Sir Richard Guyford, his monstrous sinning."

Tomorrow's chapter brings more of this lady of flashing eyes and arresting beauty—and of a "villain," presumably, this nobleman.

He plucked back the hood of her cloak . . . Defiant grey eyes, set in a face of wonderful beauty, met his.

The mystery of Andrew Osden's murder is solved. Romance has survived the hazards of suspicion and intrigue. Lucy and Jerry are happy—married. One important point remains to be cleared up in today's—the final chapter of "Gold Bullets."

Chapter 42.
ACCORDING TO POE

Sixty-nine is getting on for much of this sort of thing and I am glad it is over. Mrs. Moffit has just been in brooding over me with a hot lemonade and a dish of warm olive oil. But now she has gone, and in my old carpet slippers, Polyandria at my feet, I am drowsing over my book and absorbing the pleasant heat from the crackling eucalyptus log in the grate.

I am fearfully alone tonight. Andrew gone and Lucy going—not really going, and I am gaining something unusual in nephews, she tries to assure me, as if I didn't know—leaves me desolate of spirit.

My drowsing eyes fell on a calendar hung on the wall. It is an old calendar and there are many pencillings on the curled and yellow top date sheet, which records the days of the month of July, 1896. The calendar advertises Brewer's Whiskey and its mount pictures a voluptuous lady. Lucy says it is inartistic, Mrs. Moffit says it is sinful, and both of them say I should burn it. Well, I'll take it down after I've had my little joke on Lucy.

Sitting up with a start, I saw that Lucy and Jerry had come in. They have been making love most of the day and I have had hardly a word with them.

"Oh, you were asleep, Uncle John," Lucy cried distressfully.

"Nothing of the sort!" I snapped. "I was reading."

Lucy laughed and kissed me and Jerry grinned and dropped his arm over my shoulder; both of them then perched upon the arms of my chair. I love to have them near me. Their bounding youthfulness warms my cooling blood. Jerry

"Dear me!" I exclaimed. "Don't you remember the story of The Purlined Letter? Listen, then:—"

"A minister of France has stolen an important letter and hidden it in his house. Its recovery is imperative and the highly trained services of the French police are enlisted. At various times during the minister's absence the police examine his house with characteristic thoroughness. They examined every square inch of his rooms and furniture. And—they fail. They fail because they are mathematicians without imagination—and because the minister is a poet as well as a mathematician. Poe's detective is called in. He reasons that the minister, knowing the conventional thoroughness of the French police, is too clever to conceal the letter in the conventional way; he reasons that the minister will leave it where it will be ignored. Poe's detective is right—and the letter is found in an old envelope stuck carelessly in a pasteboard card-rack hung on the wall."

"But I still don't see what your mean!" Lucy carried impatiently. "Do you, Jerry?"

"I'm listening," he grinned. "Go ahead, Uncle John."

Jerry is a smart lad and I chuckled.

"Cast your minds back to that poker game. Lundy is left alone in his room with his ill-gotten winnings. The check and the mining transfer represent, in his estimation, around half a million dollars. These papers are not negotiable by anybody else, but their value is known and if they get into unscrupulous hands they could be sold back to either Lundy or Peterson for a considerable sum. Torridity is full of desperate characters—doesn't it boast of being the toughest town in the West?—and Lundy dares against carrying them around on his person until he records the one and cashes the other. His desk is too flimsy to protect them and his safe is broken. What, then, does he do with them?"

"You know very well what he did with them!" Lucy exclaimed, shaking me.

"Come on, Uncle John," Jerry grinned. "Lucy can't stand any longer."

I beamed on the boy. "Now Lundy was a bit of a poet—Witness that secret room. He placed the check and the transfer between the leaves of that calendar and made them secure with three thumb tacks driven into the wall. And there they stayed for 30 years. And—here they are!"

With a dramatic gesture which I had been practicing since last night I whipped the check and the transfer out of my pocket and presented them to Jerry. He took them reverently and the three of us looked at them together. The pink check had faded a little, the transfer had yellowed. That sprawling "Alex Peterson" . . . rising out of the Lucy—nestled against her uncle—seemed inexpressibly dear to him.

The mystery of Andrew Osden's murder is solved. Romance has survived the hazards of suspicion and intrigue. Lucy and Jerry are happy—married. One important point remains to be cleared up in today's—the final chapter of "Gold Bullets."

Chapter 42. ACCORDING TO POE

Sixty-nine is getting on for much of this sort of thing and I am glad it is over. Mrs. Moffit has just been in brooding over me with a hot lemonade and a dish of warm olive oil. But now she has gone, and in my old carpet slippers, Polyandria at my feet, I am drowsing over my book and absorbing the pleasant heat from the crackling eucalyptus log in the grate.

I am fearfully alone tonight. Andrew gone and Lucy going—not really going, and I am gaining something unusual in nephews, she tries to assure me, as if I didn't know—leaves me desolate of spirit.

My drowsing eyes fell on a calendar hung on the wall. It is an old calendar and there are many pencillings on the curled and yellow top date sheet, which records the days of the month of July, 1896. The calendar advertises Brewer's Whiskey and its mount pictures a voluptuous lady. Lucy says it is inartistic, Mrs. Moffit says it is sinful, and both of them say I should burn it. Well, I'll take it down after I've had my little joke on Lucy.

Sitting up with a start, I saw that Lucy and Jerry had come in. They have been making love most of the day and I have had hardly a word with them.

"Oh, you were asleep, Uncle John," Lucy cried distressfully.

"Nothing of the sort!" I snapped. "I was reading."

Lucy laughed and kissed me and Jerry grinned and dropped his arm over my shoulder; both of them then perched upon the arms of my chair. I love to have them near me. Their bounding youthfulness warms my cooling blood. Jerry

Great Harpist Here Tonight

Salvi, the great harpist, will give a recital this evening at East Carolina Teachers College at 8:30 o'clock in the old auditorium in the administration building. This is the first of a series of five concerts in this state, at colleges and the university. Tomorrow evening he will be in Raleigh. The News and Observer for two days in succession had the date for his Raleigh appearance wrong, but the college authorities here knew they had a contract for this evening. Today's Raleigh paper came out with the correction.

Salvi plays a harp that rumor says cost $20,000. Musicians claim that the harp is worth it and that the harpist who plays it is worthy of such an instrument. Musicians in other parts of the state are greatly interested in the Salvi concerts, and consider them musical events of importance. The beauty of a harp recital is that everybody can enjoy it, and it is not for musicians alone.

The other attractions coming later in the season are all high class and at the same time have popular appeal. The two plays next week by the Coffer-Miller Players, the South Sea Island Quartet, the Marmein Dancers, and the humorist, London, will all give interesting entertainments.

LONDON PAYS LAST TRIBUTE TO GEN. BOOTH

London, June 24.—(AP)—One of the greatest popular outpourings in English annals for the funeral of a great man was witnessed today when final honors were paid to the late General William Bramwell Booth, former commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army.

The same motor car which carried him thousands of miles during his lifetime in his many campaigns for "soul saving" bore his body today on its last journey from Salvation Army headquarters to simple surroundings in Abney Park cemetery, Northern London.

Tens of thousands of Londoners, heads bared, lined the streets along which the cortege passed from London's financial center to the burying ground. A devoted army followed the hearse, taking the same path the body of his father, General William Booth, took in 1912 to a grave nearby where his son was buried today.

The leaden skies which overcast London during the whole morning were momentarily dispelled just as General Booth's body was carried out of the Salvation Army world headquarters, as the sun filled the narrow canyon of Queen Victoria street with bright lights.

The general's casket was draped with flags of the Salvation Army and on the back was a large shield bearing the following inscription: "Bramwell Booth, general of the Salvation Army, born 1956, died 1929; born of the Spirit of 1863, a servant of all."

On both sides of the funeral car was the motto: "In action faithful; in honor clear."

General Booth's wife and daughter, both in deep mourning, together with high officials of the Army took their places immediately behind the body of the dead leader and the cortege moved on to Bishop's gate, then past the Shore-ditch church to the cemetery where burial took place.

Six Lives Claimed By Canadian Storms

Montreal, June 24.—(AP)—Millions of dollars worth of property was damaged and six lives were lost in a violent electrical storm which swept Montreal and environs late yesterday. The storm followed eight days of unseasonable heat.

All of the six fatalities occurred through upset boats, swamped by the fury of the storm.

Miss Mabel Price, lecturer in history at MacDonalds College, her sister, Gertrude, and Miss Madeline Foy were drowned when their motor launch was overturned near Montreal. Miss Gertrude Price came here last Friday from North Carolina to spend the holidays with her sister.

Two men were drowned at St. Anne De Vaudreuil, a summer resort, and another lost his life at Missisquoi Bay.

Lightning struck the Sacret Heart convent at Sault Au Recollets and the loss there alone was estimated at $1,000,000 when the convent burned.

Telephone and telegraph wires were still down today and communication with districts in the storm's path outside the island was impossible.

Someone has asked why Bishop Cannon was not present at the now famous White House Tea Party, and we might add why wasn't he on hand for the DePriest musical.

The Greenville team is back on the home leg today for a series of five contests, and it goes without saying that we wish them as many victories. The brand of baseball being handed out by the locals now is well worth seeing and if you are not a regular attendant now is a good time to get the habit.

The concluding installment of our first serial story and the first installment of our new serial appear in today's issue. We sincerely hope that you have enjoyed the story just completed and that you will enjoy the new one even more. It is our desire to give our readers the best stories that can be had and your comments and suggestions along this line will be appreciated.

The Sales Committee of the United States Tobacco Association meeting at Virginia Beach the latter part of this week will decide on the opening dates for the various tobacco markets in the south. In view of the early crop the opening date should be moved forward at least two weeks this season and it is to be hoped that such action will be taken by the sales committee.

ABOUT TOWN

"That was a hard game to lose to the Sailors last Friday," said a Greenville ball customer today. "and I guess Wilmington people would have said the same thing about it had they been in our place. "But regardless of who ever won, it was one of the prettiest exhibitions seen on any diamond this season. The score of two to one was sufficiently small to keep fans in a state of expectancy all of the time, looking for something that never happened. "It was the first time in several days that the powerful bats of the rejuvenated Tobaccoists had been silenced and it produced pandemonium in the hearts of local followers who were expecting to see the old ball game sewed up at any moment by a slugging spasm. "We will not have the pleasure of seeing many more games of this kind during the season and we might as well make the best of them while they are going, regardless of who wins. "Greenville is proud of the opportunity to entertain two officials of the North Carolina Merchants Association," said a member of the local trade body today. "These men come here tomorrow night to attend the quarterly meeting of the Greenville Merchants Association. They will have the opportunity of speaking about conditions prevailing in this locality and what they have to say should be of inestimable value to merchants here. "The program for this meeting is one of the best of many years, and it is hoped every member will be present to listen to the speakers as they discuss big issues of the moment. "The Yankees have held supreme sway of the American league during the last few years," observed a citizen today, "but they have at last found a worthy opponent in the Philadelphia Athletics. "The Athletics not only demonstrated that they are strong rivals for the pennant this season but back up their claim by handing the Yanks some of the worst wallopings they have had this season. Had it not been for the mighty bat of Babe Ruth, king of sweet, the situation might have been more in favor of the Athletics than it was. The Babe, back from several days' illness, pounded out two home runs and enabled the Yankees to win two out of the five games. "It might have been easy sailing for Miller Huggins the first of the season, but if indications count for anything he has a hard road to travel during the last half of the race. "I was mighty glad to get all the club boys together again," said E. F. Arnold, director of the Park Department of Pitt county, discussing the recent encampment at Camp Leach. "Every club in the county was well represented at the encampment this year, and I believe the boys derived greater benefit from their annual gathering than any other occasion of the kind. They apparently enjoyed mingling with one another, swapping stories of various experiences of individual neighborhoods, and derived much benefit for it. "The clubs have been growing in strength over the past two years, but from now on we expect to see not only continued increase in membership but the springing up of new clubs in other communities. This should add more life to organization work and enable us to carry many more members to encampment next year. "It's plenty hot down this way, but the situation is much more favorable than in the east, where prostration and deaths have resulted from the heat wave," observed from the heat wave," observed from the Greenville man today, as he read

SAILORS WIN FINAL GAME FROM GREENS

Wilmington, June 22.—In a game featured by six home runs, a triple and double, Wilmington this afternoon defeated Greenville, 11 to 4, to keep on the heels of Rocky Mount in the battle for leadership in the Eastern Carolina League.

Of the six circuit drives, Wilmington batters collected five of them. Roscoe hit two and Fary, Wefer and Williams one each. Jones connected for the visitors to drive two runners home ahead of him.

Schofield's triple in the opening inning paved the way for Wilmington's first run.

Red Ellison was effective until the eighth when he slackened his pace after two had been retired. He walked two in order and Jones slammed the gate over the wall. Greenville made a determined stand in the ninth scoring once on a pair of passes and Hiller's single. Ludke and Garbe were socked hard by the tars.

ATHLETICS WIN AGAIN FROM YANKS

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN, Associated Press Sports Writer.

That hysteria in and about the Yankee stadium now in recent rather than current, and the boys are busy checking up the net result, artistic and financial. The Athletics nipped the champions by 7 to 4 before some 55,000 in the fifth and rubber game yesterday, but the really important transaction took place in the counting house. Exactly 184,096 New York fans paid their way at the gate in three days, making the series a complete victory for Edward Grant Barrow regardless of what happened to Huggins.

The attendance set a new record for a single series, beating the mark of 177,152 made by the same teams at the same park last September in three afternoons.

The only fly in Mr. Morrow's coffee was the necessity of tendering Mr. McGillicuddy a check for $48,024 before the armored vans escaped to a downtown bank with the loot.

Although the victory of the Athletics by three games to two, was of itself, hardly decisive, the lead of the Mackme was stretched to eight and one-half games, and the impressions spread among Metropolitan fans that here, indeed, were the coming champions. The current Athletics have in the face of Yankee fire a confidence lacking by their immediate predecessors, and ability to stand up before the Huggmen is all that was missing in the Mackme last year.

The final game was a triumph for Howard Ehmke, the veteran right-hander, although uprising which threatened to assume serious proportions. The series ended without the appearance of Eddie Rommel, the knuckle ball expert who never seemed to fool the Yankees.

The defeated pitcher yesterday was another left-hander and the third Yankee southpaw victim of the series—Eddie Wells. The Birmingham boy's customary wildness was missing, but the Messrs. Simmons and Foxx made up for this little oversight with successive home runs in the fourth. Mr. Mule Haas so caught the spirit that he hampered Wells' rescue, Tom Zachary, for four-baser with the lot in the eighth.

It was Simmons' 18th, Foxx's 13th and Haas' 9th. Now that the Yankee series is over, Simmons, ma, remain out of the game to rest his nether limbs, but the real musical time for the Rappert-Huggins combination seems to be that Simmons can not arrive at this decision earlier. Here is what he did to the champions in three days:

Games, 5; at bat, 21; runs, 10; hits, 13; total bases, 30; two base hits, 3; three base hits, 1; home runs 4; runs batted in 9; average .619.

Lou Gehrig inserted his 20th home run into the proceedings yesterday, placing himself in a tie with Mei Ott of the Giants for the major league leadership. The defeat, coupled with the 6 to 5 victory of the Browns over the White Sox, dropped the champions into a tie with St. Louis for third place, but this hardly will last. The Yanks may not be as good as the Athletics, but they remain some better than the rest of the flock.

Detroit nosed out Cleveland by 8 to 7, advancing to with one game of the Yanks and the Browns, and Washington won from Boston by 7 to 1, in other American League engagements yesterday.

The National League campaign on the Sabbath witnessed the third straight victory of the Pirates over the Cubs, 8 to 7. The Reds shaded the champion Cardinals by 4 to 2 and the Brooklyn Robins nosed out the Giants by 9 to 8 in fourteen innings, giving the day a pronounced Pirate trend. The Buccaneers led the Cubs by two and one-half games, the Cardinals by three and the Giants by three and one-half.

The Braves completed the National League program by taking two from the Phillies, 5 to 1 and 7 to 5.

Heavyweights Hold Stage During Week

New York, June 24.—(AP)—Heavyweights in general and Paulino Uzcudun and Max Schmeling more particularly, will "hog" virtually all of the nation's fistie stage this week.

The so-called "German Dempsey" and the Spanish woodchopper will clash over the 15-round route at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday in one of the year's most important bouts.

Some of the most optimistic of the fans believe that out of the bout will come the next occupant of the heavyweight throne vacated by Gene Tunney. They are basing their belief on the theory that the German will win decisively. The Teuton sharpshooter certainly has done everything that could be asked of him in his few appearances in America and a triumph over Paulino undoubtedly would boost him into the same class as Jack Sharkey and Jack Dempsey, the two leading contenders for the crown.

But the catch in all this is the iron-chinned Paulino. The Basque had fought them all and never been dropped. He has lost a few decisions here and there but the majority of his appearances have been winning ones. There is considerable doubt in the minds of some experts whether Schmeling's right hand can halt the ever-crowding woodchopper and whether the Teuton can withstand Paulino's body attack.

The battle tops a 45-round card at the annual milk fund charity ring carnival. Otto Von Porst, bone-crushing Norwegian puncher, meets K. O. Christner of Akron, O., another heavyweight slugger, in the ten-round semi-final.

Although the milk fund show overshadows all other of the coming week's fistie shows, there are a number of other first-rate attractions. George Godfrey, Young, Stribling and Johnny Risko, all leading heavyweights, all will swing into action. Risko meets Tuffy Griffith, the Sioux City light heavyweight, in a ten rounder at the Olympia Arena, Detroit, Thursday night. Stribling meets a rugged, if mediocre, foe in California Jack Lee at Flint, Mich., tonight. Godfrey engages Chuck Wiggins, Indianapolis veteran in a ten rounder at Cleveland Tuesday night.

Chicago's big bout of the week, the opening outdoor bout at Miller's Stadium on Thursday finds Jackie Fields, N. B. A. welterweight champion, battling Farmer Joe Cooper for ten rounds or less.
