FLIERS STILL IN THE AIR AT CULVER CITY

Endurance Flight Enters Fourth Day Over California City Today.

Culver City, Calif., July 8.—(AP)—Escaping for the second time from being forced down for lack of fuel, L. W. Mendell and R. B. Reinhart piloted their single motored biplane into the seventh day of its endurance flight today. At 7:29:30 a. m. the fliers began their 145th hour in the air, determined to better the endurance of 174 hours, 59 seconds.

The airmen this morning dropped an emergency note saying they had only a 45-minute supply of fuel left and a hurried refueling contact was made at 7 o'clock. A similar difficulty early in the flight almost put an end to the project.

The pilots originally set out to better the record of 173 hours, 32 minutes and 1 second, set by Reginald Robbins and James Kelly at Fort Worth, which had stood until the completion of the Cleveland flight.

Mendell and Reinhart kept their plane circling close to the lighted airport here during the early hours today. The 220-horsepower motor was functioning perfectly.

Late yesterday the pilots dropped a note which carried with it the spirit of determination to better all marks for sustained flying. The pair said they had grown accustomed to the routine.

Continuance of favorable weather also was considered one of the reasons for the confidence held by the pair.

NO WORD FROM UNTIN BOWLER YET RECEIVED

Chicago Plane Believed To Be "Somewhere In Canada" On Way To Berlin.

Ottawa, Ont., July 8.—(AP)—The amphibian airplane "Untin" Bowler took the air today from an undetermined point in the Hudson Bay country, continuing its flight from Chicago to Berlin.

The takeoff was indicated in a message received by the Canadian government wireless offices here from the station at Port Burwell on the Hudson Straits. The message said:

Chicago, July 8.—(AP)—"Somewhere in Canada" was the most definite address today of the Chicago Tribune's Chicago-to-Berlin amphibian plane, the "Untin" Bowler, and its crew of three who were last heard from early Friday.

Operators have been constantly on duty at the Tribune's short wave length radio station in Elgin, Ill. Six feet tall and weighing 230 pounds, the young woman told of strangling Kitzelman, wrapping his body in a quilt, rolling it downstairs, placing it into an automobile and driving into the country where she dumped it by the roadside, poured naphtha over it and then touched a match.

Kitzelman himself was a big man, weighing 200 pounds, and her signed confession would have been less plausible were it not for her own size. For several days after the still burning body was found by two farm boys on July 1, it remained unidentified. A brother finally made the identification by a set of false teeth.

After two hours of questioning, the woman detailed for county officers the story of her affair with Kitzelman and its ending. Her confession told of her growing disgust with Kitzelman's habit of drinking to excess.

"He came to our room over the gambling house at Wyoming, Ill. Sunday morning (June 30)," she confessed, as released by officers, said. "He had been drinking. He grabbed a chair and tried to strike me with it. I got away from that. Then he tore a mirror from the wall and brought it down on my head. It smashed into a thousand pieces and almost stunned me."

"Finally I got him on the bed and sat watching him an hour. I got up, drank some more and fell back on the bed in a stupor."

She told then of choking him with his own belt.

"I got some fish and tied him up, bending him so his chin rested on his knees," she said. "Then I rolled him off the bed, and wrapped the quilt around him, like a bundle. I didn't want to carry such a load down, so I rolled it down the stairs. At the foot of the stairs I picked

KING HEARING PROLONGED BY NEW ARGUMENT

Trial Of Wife Murderer Not Expected To Be Completed Before Tomorrow.

Chester, S. C., July 8.—(AP)—Chances for a verdict tonight in the case of Rafe King, who has been on trial here since last Monday for the murder of his wife, Faye Wilson King, are remote.

Announcement was made this morning that two additional arguments were to be made to the jury today, which with the six already scheduled makes it appear certain that it will be tomorrow before the jury will get the case.

David A. Gaston, of the state counsel, and David W. Shand, of defense, will be heard today. Solicitor Harry Hines said soon after court convened this morning. These two attorneys had been eliminated in the Saturday announcement of speakers.

James A. Marion of York, of the prosecution, was the first speaker this morning, tracing the state's theory of the alleged crime in detail.

During the course of his speech, however, he came to the defense of J. Frank Faulkner, chief of York county police, and Fred C. Quinn, York county sheriff, declaring that the charge that they had planted evidence of the bloody clothes in the attic "falls to the ground like the tissue of lies it is."

Attorney Marion declared the crime was committed shortly after 11 o'clock after Mrs. King returned from the home of neighbors, where she had gone to purchase milk. He said there was a struggle, that King struck her in the head with a piece of wood and then "took a piece of cord or his hands and choked her."

The attorney declared King put the body in the plunder room and then "spent the busiest three hours of his life" cleaning the evidence, and then he began to think of an alibi.

King called for his doctor and talked the thing uppermost in his mind, "the picture of his wife's face, lying black in the plunder room." The attorney avowed that King had on his best clothes that morning, having planned to go to Shelby, and that the blood from his wife splattered on the suit.

He pictured King trying to wash out the "tell-tale spots" on the shirt coat and vest, and how King finally thought it best to hide them in the attic.

Referring to Mrs. Ione Moss' testimony that she had noticed the suit in the closet the day after Mrs. King's death, Mr. Marion declared it best to "draw a cloak of charity" over it, adding that it was testimony of a sister trying to save her brother's life.

or less closely together again in the tariff debate at least insofar as the effort to confine revision to agricultural and related products is concerned.

That movement, already organized among Republican independents, was given fresh support in the Simmons statement, which assailed the House bill as "the most signal victory ever won by the seekers after privilege and government favors" and declared that unless the finance committee changed it radically, the Democrats would attempt to limit it to agricultural rate revisions.

The administrative provisions have not yet been reached in the committee's public hearings, which are expected to continue until the latter part of the month. Under the schedule adopted before they began last month, the hearings were to have ended this week, but the Independence Day recess and the desire to give witnesses all the time needed to present their arguments fully has forced an extension which is expected to delay presentation of the bill to the Senate.

Two of the sub-committees conducting the hearings ended their holiday today. One, concerned with the metals schedule, had about 40 witnesses to hear today and tomorrow, planning to complete their testimony before Thursday and then take up the views of four leaders in the automobile industry on the question of reducing or eliminating the duty on motor vehicles.

Chairman Smoot, meanwhile, was preparing to lay before the committee a sliding scale tariff as a substitute for the present duty of 1.76 cents a pound on Cuban sugar and the rate of 2.40 cents proposed in the House bill. He has described his plan under which the rate would increase as sugar prices declined and vice versa, as providing lower rates than the House schedule, but has withheld details.

The extent to which the Democrats will gain support from Republican independents for their campaign against the clause in the Senate has not been indicated. It has been made clear, however, that the two groups, which succeeded twice in overriding President Hoover's opposition to the export debenture plan of farm relief, will stand more

Warfare On Sin Started From Pulpits Of Various City Churches Yesterday

Ministerial warfare on evil influences purporting to exist in Greenville and environs was launched from the pulpits of various city churches yesterday morning. It was not the kind of warfare that left the community reverberating with the thunderous tones of the minister's voice.

It was not exactly the kind of warfare the general run of people expected, but it was warfare to the forces of evil that their influences will no longer be tolerated.

The services in most instances were largely attended despite the sizzling temperatures offered by the weather man. Numbers of persons who usually made it a habit of spending the week-end at the beaches remained at home to hear of the kind of sin that has been eating at the heart of the community without due public recognition.

But if any attended their respective churches anticipating "fire and brimstone" they were undoubtedly disappointed. It was not a fight upon any particular individual or body, or any special form of sin for that matter—it was simply a state-

Lengthy Controversy Seen In Administration Change On House Tariff Measure

Washington, July 8.—(AP)—The administrative provisions of the House tariff bill, increasing the chief executive's power to change import duties, stood out today as rivaling even the sugar schedule as a potential source of prolonged controversy in the Senate.

An organized Democratic effort to eliminate the flexible provision from this section of the measure was seen in the issuance by the Democratic national committee of a statement by Senator Simmons or North Carolina, ranking minority member of the finance committee, announcing a "fight to the bitter end" against the proposal.

The statement described the flexible clause, first enacted in 1922, as "proposition on the part of Congress to surrender this essentially legislative function to the executive branch of the government," and said it "involves a principle fundamental in our representative system of government; namely, the right of the people to control the purse strings through their representatives."

Repeal of the clause through limitation of the flexible provision in the House bill was sought by Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking Democrat of the ways and means committee, shortly before the measure was passed by that chamber. Lack of unanimity in favor of it among Republicans was demonstrated during the preceding debate with a vigorous argument against it by Representative Beck, Republican, Pennsylvania, a former solicitor general.

The extent to which the Democrats will gain support from Republican independents for their campaign against the clause in the Senate has not been indicated. It has been made clear, however, that the two groups, which succeeded twice in overriding President Hoover's opposition to the export debenture plan of farm relief, will stand more

ROCKEFELLER CELEBRATES HIS BIRTHDAY

Veteran Oil Magnate Observes 90th Milestone At Home At Tarrytown, N. Y.

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 8.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Master of the fine art of living, celebrated his 90th birthday anniversary today.

Observance of the day brought little deviation from the daily routine by which the veteran oil magnate has learned to be healthy and happy.

Entering his 91st year, Mr. Rockefeller is the dean of world figures. Thomas A. Edison and President Hindenburg, of Germany, are 82. George Haven Putnam, publisher, is 85. Georges Clemenceau, the grand old man of France, is 87. One biographer has predicted Mr. Rockefeller will live to be 100. But he himself professes never to think of the termination of his life. "I am too busy trying to be useful," he explains.

The day marks the close of the third decade since, having amassed a $1,000,000,000, Mr. Rockefeller relinquished his business interests to his son.

In those 30 years he has evolved a philosophy of life based on moderation and quiet activity so that where at 90 he was a semi-invalid, today a diet that would agree with him, today he announced that he was in perfect health, enjoying the future with cheer and hope.

In a statement he said: "I have every reason to be grateful on my 90th birthday. Everybody has been so kind and good to me all the year. With perfect health and full of hope and cheer for the future, I have nothing but kindness and goodwill for everybody."

His birthday was spent with members of his family, three generations of them at his estate, Rocanico Hills.

Mr. Rockefeller's day begins when he arises at 7 a. m. He goes out to breakfast at 8, his pockets tingling with the day's supply of shiny new dimes and nickels.

After breakfast there is a game of numerica in which he finds relaxation after every meal. An hour goes to business matters with his secretary follows. Then there are nine holes of golf with a neighbor or guest. His score usually is somewhere in the forties. There are many anecdotes of his golfing. "I never knew a golfer to have a bad character." One partner mentioned popular play. "I did not have a popular start," said Mr. Rockefeller, "but I have had a long run."

Luncheon is usually his principal meal and he eats heartily. He eats what he likes. No food or drink is barred except alcoholic liquor. In the afternoon a long motor trip with members of his family or anyone his whim prompts him to invite.

The dinner planned for his birthday was a quiet meal with only members of the family present to share the birthday cake.

The benefactions financed from the Rockefeller fortune, and administered by others are estimated at $750,000,000. They mainly are devoted to the achievement of a better life for humanity through the conquest of disease and improvement of living conditions. The medium being the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. The father of John Davison Rockefeller was an itinerant country doctor.

C. W. Crawford Died Yesterday

Charles W. Crawford, 56, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Waters, at 800 West Third street, at 4:30 p. m. yesterday.

He leaves surviving, his wife, Mrs. Lena Davis Crawford; two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Waters and Mrs. V. C. Baker, all of Greenville; two brothers, one sister, and step-mother, in the state of Michigan.

Mr. Crawford was a native of Michigan and lived there until some years ago, and has lived in Greenville for the past several years.

He was active in farming and dairy business until his health failed him. He has been in failing health for a long time.

Mr. Crawford was a member of the Methodist church and services were held from the home at five o'clock this afternoon by Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial M. E. church, following which he was buried in the Nobles cemetery on the Kinston road near Winterville.

Funeral bearers were: L. H. Rountree, Henry Smith, Ole Ray, Walter O. J. Standell, Ben Harris, George Dall.

Sought As Bandit

Dorothy Sullivan, 32, is being sought by Topeka, Kas., police as the woman who kidnaped an automobile driver and forced him to intercept payroll messengers, who were robbed of $14,000.

PRES. HOOVER RETURNS TO THE CAPITAL

Chief Executive Back At Desk After Fishing Trip To Preserve In Virginia

Washington, July 8.—(AP)—President Hoover returned to the White House shortly before 11 o'clock today from his fishing camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia where with Mrs. Hoover and a group of friends, he had spent the week-end.

The presidential party made an early start from the fishing camp and arrived in Criglersville, a small village at the foot of the mountains, a little before 8 o'clock. There it divided, Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Vernon Kellogg and Herbert Hoover, Jr., returned to Washington in one of the president's private cars, at some distance behind the rest of the party. Mrs. Hoover was at the wheel.

Other guests on the trip were Dr. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, William Hard, and Walter Newton, the president's secretary.

The president seemed much refreshed by his rest in the mountains and smiled cheerily to groups of spectators which gathered along the road awaiting his passage. He returned to Washington to face the windup of his task of selecting the personnel of the federal farm board, the first meeting of which he has called for next Monday. Three members remain to be chosen and Mr. Hoover expects that these places will be filled within the week.

To Raise Sugar Price
New York, July 8.—(AP)—The Federal Sugar Refining Company announced today that tomorrow it will increase the price of sugar from 5 to 5 1/4 cents a pound.

Four Injured By Earth Shocks At Long Beach, Cal.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—(AP)—Four persons, two men and two children, were injured in an earthquake which severely shocked Los Angeles and combed within a thirty-mile radius at 8:45 a. m. today. These injuries were reported from Santa Fe Springs, Oltown, fifteen miles south of here.

Long Beach, Hermosa Beach and Santa Monica, on the Pacific ocean, felt the tremor more than the inland communities of Pasadena and Glendale.

The tremor was an undulating north and south movement, causing chandeliers in some buildings to sway like pendulums, battling windows and moving small objects, but causing no damage.

A second tremor of less intensity, was felt an hour later at 9:45 o'clock.

In Long Beach the Press-Telegram building at Sixth street and Pine avenue, was rocked for more than fifteen seconds, causing the machines in the composing room to vibrate while printers were getting out the first edition.

Other buildings in the city rocked perceptibly. Considerable excitement was created as it was the first earthquake of any consequence ever felt there.

TWO DIE IN GUN BATTLE IN ARKANSAS

City Marshal And Bootlegger are Dead Today As Result Of Liquor Raid.

Camden, Ark., July 8.—(AP)—A coroner's jury today exonerated Constable Luther Meeks of blame for the fatal shooting last night of Walter Patterson, an alleged bootlegger, who was slain after he had killed E. R. Marsh, city marshal at Clidester, during a liquor raid. Sheriff Arthur W. Ellis went to Clidester today to investigate the double killing.

E. W. Clifford, deputy prosecuting attorney, said it was not likely any other arrest would be made.

The officers had raided Patterson's home and were said to have found liquor in a smokehouse. They arrested Patterson and were taking him to jail, when, according to Sheriff Arthur W. Ellis, Patterson seized Marsh's pistol and began firing at Marsh.

After he dropped Marsh, Patterson opened fire on Pruitt, the latter reported and was killed by Constable Meeks.

Patterson's brother, Albert, although not at home at the time of the shooting, was arrested later, a prohibition charge probably will be filed against him, officers said.

For the Love of a Lady

By JEFFERY FARNOL

SYNOPSIS: Helen D'Arcy is plighted by Sir Richard Guyford's indifference to her invitations to visit her home. She rides to the Guyford estate and contrives to have Richard rescue her from a wide-dashing horse. Richard has been challenged to a duel by his cousin, Julian, a rascal. Moved by the danger in which Richard stands, Helen utters a fateful sentence—"Should Julian give me cause, I would shoot him!"—words that are to cast a deep shadow over their romance. Helen's haughty spirit, however, is not long subdued. She becomes angry with Richard and rides off in high disdain.

Chapter 13. BEWARE—THE CAT'S EYE

Now it befell, about this time, that Julian Guyford, languishing in his sickness, was haunted by evil dreams of soft feet that crept about his chamber, and of one who sought for the hidden thing the while he himself, sunk in a dreadful lethargy, lay helpless, until he sank into black deeds of unconsciousness.

But upon a morning he opened his eyes to see Doctor Samson.

"How are you today, Mr. Julian?" "You puzzle me! You don't improve, sir!"

"Improve?" cried Julian, with trill of queer, high-pitched laughter. "I'm dying, man, dying . . . by inches! Every day I grow weaker, and every night . . . I see visions . . . feel hands touch me! The dark! And every day I am worse—mark that!" "How—don't you see it? Must I tell you—murder, Samson, murder!"

Doctor Samson recoiled in horrified dismay, and Julian spoke:

"Eh, Samson, I do I shock ye? How long have I lain here?"

"Eight days, sir."

"Aha, and why? Have I any bones broken? Not one! Am I cursed with any deep-rooted ailment? No! Then what ails me, Samson?"

"Sir, I confess—"

"Then I'll resolve ye this mystery, and in one word—poison! Ay, poison, my good fool! They're dragging me nearer my grave every night! . . . killing me, Samson, killing me by degrees, slow but sure! But I'll up and cheat 'em yet! Bring me my clothes, . . . The quick whispered speech ended in a gasp, and the sick man sank back trembling, while Doctor Samson, silent and aghast, stared down at him.

"Mr. Julian . . . sir," he stammered. "This dreadful accusation, this . . . whom do you suspect?" "Villains, Samson, an arch-rogue, my snake—Tom Pitt!"

"Mr. Julian, said the doctor, "let me beg you to compose yourself. These horrid suspicions are but the outcome of your fevered mind."

"Tush!" cried Julian in swift passion. "I'll up, I'll quit this cursed inn!"

"Sir, to go abroad may prove fatal."

"And to be here, Samson, surely means my grave. So I'll die if I open air if I needs must. . . . Here's for it!" And Julian, slipping out of bed, Julian took two steps, reeled, clutched the bed-post.

Then, supported by the sturdy doctor, he began to stumble across the chamber; fiercely resolute, he set his teeth until gradually his strength returned somewhat. Thereafter, he dressed himself slowly, and now he tottered up and down again, then sinking into an elbow chair at last.

"Brandy!" he gasped, "no, not out of the bottle! Get some from the landlord John; 'twill be safer!"

Shaking dubious head, Doctor Samson departed on his errand. Asprawl in the chair, Julian remained motionless until hearing a slight sound, he glanced up to see the latch lift stealthily and the door begin to open; then into the room came the sleek head of Tom Pitt.

"I'm here, Tom, lad!" said Julian. "I'm about again, Tom—the which shall surprise thee;—I see it does! But why so pale—ha? Come hither, now, Tom, answer and tell me—where is thy master?"

"Why, sir Mr. Julian, you are my master."

"Lying dog!" Julian's cane whizzed viciously and, smitten across the face, Tom Pitt uttered a shrill cry. Julian followed and struck at him till his strength failed.

"Off . . . worm!" he panted. "Get ye . . . to your master and tell him I choose steel or a bullet rather than poison. . . ."

Tom Pitt crawled to the door and, uttering no word, looked at his erstwhile master. Now, meeting this look and reading it aright, Julian laughed faintly.

"Shoot straight!" said he, then Tom Pitt went his way.

Doctor Samson, returning with the brandy found his patient sunk down in the chair. Having gulped the potent spirit, he sat a while staring.

"Ha, 'tis a dog-hole, this!" he exclaimed. "Tis an accursed place, a very death trap—come help me down the stair out into the sunshine!" Crossing unsteadily to the tumbled bed he drew a pistol from beneath the bolster.

"There's more about this pistol than meets the eye!" Then slipping the weapon into wide coat-pocket, he took the doctor's arm, and having slowly descended the wide stair, came forth into the sunshine.

"The sun is strangely pleasant—let us walk. I'll seek out Cousin Dick!"

"But, sir!" cried the doctor. "Mr. Julian, you'll never attempt to cross blades—"

"No, no!" he answered jovially. "I mean to kill him—once on a time, but today my thirst for his blood is strangely abated. My present desire is but for a word with him. Yet Wear is a good step hence. Yet I'll walk to the stile by Fallowdene Wood."

They set off together. The doctor noticed how he would glance behind him with eyes alert—expectant. When they reached the stile at last, Dr. Samson ventured to question him:

"Mr. Julian, who do ye look for?" "Lord, man," gasped Julian, "don't I tell you I'm haunted! Nay, my good soul, I am not mad—in proof whereof—take this!" and drawing the pistol from his pocket, he thrust it into the doctor's reluctant grasp.

"You shall at your convenience seek out my Cousin Richard and give him this weapon—say I bade you tell him there is more in this than meets the eye! . . . And now you may leave me."

Gravely and with many ominous shakes of the head, Doctor Samson trudged heavily away; long after he had gone Julian sat there, listening eagerly, and on his face that some dark look of expectancy. At last he rose and went on into the wood. Once he started and turned to stare towards the dense undergrowth whence had come a vague stir, and he smiled faintly, because here was no breath of wind to cause such stir.

Smiling still, he walked thither, a certain lofty, straggling bramble-bush. Whistling, he approached this bush—to be defensed, blinded, smitten through by a sudden keen agony that brought him to his knees, gasping and choking horribly. Something small and bright rolled within his falling vision. Groaning, he raised himself and took up this gleaming object, to stare at it through gathering mist. . . . A hurry of spurred feet, strong arms lifted him and, opening swooning eyes, he beheld a face close above him.

"Aha . . . Dick . . ." he gasped.

DIG PLANE TOOF-OFF AT OLD ORCHARD, ME. EARLY THIS MORNING

Karlruhe and Caronia, bound for New York over the north Atlantic route.

The Conte Biancamano, scheduled to leave Gibraltar today, will steam a course somewhat to the south of the north Atlantic track.

Ships from New York now at sea include Aquitania, the Ambrade, Veendam, the de France, Arabic, American Merchant, Albertic, Frederick VII, Deutschland, Minnewaska, Republic, De Grasse, Muenchen and Milwaukee, all for European ports.

Those bound for Mediterranean ports from New York include the California, Edison, Providence, Mindro and Presidente Wilson.

New York, July 8.—(AP)—Roger Q. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey, who took off from Old Orchard in Rome today, have been identified with several long distance and trans-Atlantic flight projects.

In 1922 Yancey was co-pilot with Steven Lacey in one of the entries in the New York-to-Spokane national air derby. Shortly after their third attempt to start, Yancey piloted the plane back to Roosevelt Field, N. Y., clinging to a strut with Lacey unconscious in the cockpit from gasoline fumes.

Williams was associated with Clarence D. Chamberlain in 1927 on a series of attempts to set a new endurance flight record. Their efforts were abandoned after they were forced down by ice on their third attempt.

In March, 1928, Cesare Sabelli, Italian war ace, announced Williams had been chosen as co-pilot in the plane Roma on a flight to Rome. The American pilot withdrew from the project, then resumed relations with Sabelli.

After Sabelli's plans failed to materialize, Williams announced plans in October, 1928, for a flight to Rome in Charles A. Levine's monoplane, Columbia, with Pietro Bonnell, another member of the Sabelli crew.

The Columbia crashed on Westbury golf links when Williams and Bonnell attempted to take off October 11. The flight later was abandoned for the rest of the year because of weather.

Williams and Yancey joined forces early this spring to renew the New York to Rome flight attempt.

Their first try made June 13, the day the French plane Yellow 3rd left Old Orchard, ended in a wreck when their plane, Green Flash, struck a soft spot in the beach in the take-off. A previous start also ended in failure when a landing wheel dropped off.

After the wreck of the Green Flash, Williams and Yancey acquired the plane, North Star, which was purchased by Mrs. James A. Still-

TOO MUCH MONEY RUSHES TO NEW YORK

It is unquestionably true in our opinion that the financial problems of this country have not been solved by the organization of the Federal Reserve Board. The entire country is pouring too much money into the great financial centers to be loaned for stock jobbing operations, because of the high call money rates, with the result that local needs in many parts of the country are not met by banking conditions. There are very few business interests that can afford to pay the high cost of money which now prevails; not merely by the nominal rate of interest which is paid, but by the regulations which require that a large amount of the money which is borrowed from a bank be left on deposit.

Under conditions the chain stores, with their vast accumulation of money, rush their funds to New York or other leading cities almost instantly upon its deposit in local banks from daily business. Other great corporations having a surplus also send their money to a large extent to the leading centers, especially to New York to be loaned on call, in order to secure a higher rate of interest. About half of the money loaned on call in New York is furnished by such corporations, the balance being loaned by the bankers. If it were possible to bring about, through the action of the Federal Reserve Board, a low discount rate, say not over 4 per cent, to prevail throughout the country, this rush of money to New York would be stopped and the supply available for the country at large would be increased to the good of the whole land. Call money in New York should not be permitted to carry rates which draw outside money to that city, for speculative purposes. This situation demands attention and must have it.—Manufacturers Record.

ABOUT TOWN

"The Ministerial Association of Greenville has started relentless warfare upon the forces of evil existing in this city," declared a citizen today, commenting on the sermon dealing with "Public Morals" delivered at the various churches of the city yesterday.

"The entire citizenship should rally behind the ministers in their effort to clean up the city. No city can be better than the people who comprise its population, and it is upon the basis of this conclusion that we must get busy and obliterate the last signs of sin and corruption. The nature of these evils are apparent to the man who has kept in close touch with developments of the community the last several weeks, and it would be futile to go into them in detail. It is a known fact that the standard of morality is not what it should be and the only way to improve the situation is to fight the influences responsible for it. If you believe in the ascendancy of the forces of righteousness, then use your influence in that direction. The cost to you will be small, but the fruit of your labor will be lasting."

"The Eastern Carolina league has adopted the split season plan despite decided opposition from a majority of the clubs when the matter was first proposed," observed a baseball fan today. "The yielding of Rocky Mount and Goldsboro to the split season advocates made the plan possible and the winner of the first half was announced during the first of the week."

"The nip-and-tuck race of the circuit has held the undivided attention of the six towns ever since the opening day, and should such a close race develop during the last half excitement will be at fever heat during the remainder of the season."

"The adoption of the split season gives Greenville and Kinston a chance of evacuating the last two rungs of the standing of club column and of starting out anew. In other words, it will give the clubs a new lease on life and inject new enthusiasm into fans who were beginning to despair of doing more than lagging along until the final game had been played."

"While some oppose dividing the season into halves, it seems by far the best plan that could have been adopted under the circumstances, and should renew interest in the game in every town concerned."

"Airplanes ought not lose their way while passing over Greenville with two tremendous signs to guide them," said a well known business man today, discussing the new signs of the Standard Oil Company and that atop the National Bank building.

"While Greenville has no airport there are plenty of large fields hereabouts where planes might land in case of an emergency. But whether they land or not, the signs will help guide the fliers wherever they have started."

"Both of the huge arrows point north, and fliers will be able to set their compasses and continue their journey confident of being correctly informed regarding direction."

"It is gratifying to note that the State Highway Patrol got such a result; during the first week of its service," declared a reader of the Reflector today, commenting on the 2,000 cases handled by the patrol during last week. "The activity shows to what extent the officers will be able to serve the state in the future. That they will be able to improve traffic conditions upon the most congested highways of the state goes without saying. In fact, an improvement is already noticeable. The majority of people are driving with greater care and are also giving more attention to the condition of their cars so that they will meet state requirements. "Some doubt as to the value of the patrol was entertained at first, but it seems a settled fact now that the organization will be able to accomplish much good in behalf of

STEAMSHIP HITS BOAT IN THE FOG

One Injured When Prince George Collides With Patrol Boat Near Boston.

Boston, July 8. (AP)—The steamship Prince George, bound from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, to Boston, with 249 passengers, was in collision with the coast guard patrol boat, Agassiz, in a dense fog 65 miles east of Boston Light yesterday.

All passengers were transferred from the Prince George to the Agassiz and only one, Miss Seretha Nickerson of Greenwich, Conn., was injured. She was slightly bruised after the accident.

Two members of the patrol boat's crew were severely hurt. Orlo D. Houser, seaman, who was at the wheel when the ships came together and Alfred R. Johnson, boatswain's mate first class.

Johnson, although suffering from a severe gash across his forehead, refused medical attention until all the passengers had been removed. The Prince George was struck on her port bow and the impact ripped a jagged hole six feet wide and extending below the water line in her steel side. She suffered a flooding of her No. 1 hold and limped into port with a slight list. The stem of the Agassiz crumpled but she did not take much water.

The Prince George's ten lifeboats were lowered within 15 minutes after the alarm was sounded. Gangplanks were rigged and most of the passengers, many of them with their baggage, made their way aboard the patrol boat as the steamer put alongside.

The Agassiz was under command of Boatswain G. P. Hammond, who was making his first trip as commander. Captain Adelbert MacKinnon, a veteran of the Boston and Yarmouth Steamship Company's service, was on the bridge of the Prince George. His ship carried a crew of 81.

The Prince George is a twin-screw ship of 2194 tons. She was taken to a drydock. Officials hope to have her back in service within a week.

A coast guard court of inquiry convened here today to investigate the cause of the accident.

GARBEE PUTS BUGS ON RUN

Goldboro, July 8.—The Goldburs today were vanquished for the second time by the shutout route in the Greenville series when the visitors won a dull and slow game at Griffin Park, 9 to 0. Garbee, who was retired to the showers in the first inning of yesterday's opening game, held the Bugs to four scattered hits, while his mates were securing 12 off Rose.

Kendall's home run over the right field fence in the initial stanza was the outstanding clout of the game. Every Greenville player secured a hit with the exception of the pitcher.

SECOND HALF E. C. LEAGUE OPENS TODAY

The split season of the Eastern Carolina league is an actuality now and the beginning of the second half today finds Rocky Mount, Fayetteville and Kinston playing hosts to the other members of the circuit. The split season actually came into being last Saturday when President Bramham announced that Rocky Mount and Goldsboro had acceded to the desire of the other four clubs to divide the season.

In making the announcement President Bramham stated that "Goldsboro and Rocky Mount had decided to yield to the majority to make the vote unanimous," and that they did so against their own wishes and judgment, and solely because it is made to appear to them as for the vital interest of the entire league."

Wilmington won the first half, Rocky Mount held second position, Goldsboro third, Fayetteville fourth, Greenville fifth, and Kinston sixth. The fight for the basement has been almost as strenuous and exciting as was the battle between Wilmington, Rocky Mount and Goldsboro for the first position. Kinston started off the first half by sinking to the depths of the cellar, but a spurt of brilliant playing enabled them to evacuate in favor of Greenville. The Tobaccoists played brilliantly at times and furnished a brand of ball that baffled the league leaders, but for some inexplicable reason they found it impossible to get out of the basement until the day the decision was reached to divide the season into halves. This came about through the failure of Kinston to annex both games of a double header and the good fortune of the Tobaccoists in taking two games from the Bugs, in the final series at Goldsboro.

It is of especial interest in the face of the cellar battle of the first half, that Kinston and Greenville should face one another in the opening of the second half play at Kinston today. Just what the outcome of the series will be is a matter of conjecture at this time. Both clubs have done everything within their power to strengthen weak spots during the last several days, and the opening game today is expected to be fraught with spectacular playing on both sides.

But interest is not alone confined to the Greenville-Kinston game. With all clubs getting a new start, or a new lease on life, as it might be termed, tremendous crowds are looked for in all cities where opening games are to be played. After the breaking of the ice today, the race will begin in real earnest and every club will be on "its toes" in an effort to remain at the top, or as close to the top as possible, during the remainder of the season.

The week's slate for the league follows:
Monday and Tuesday—Goldsboro at Rocky Mount; Wilmington at Fayetteville; Greenville at Kinston.
Wednesday and Thursday—Fayetteville at Greenville; Rocky Mount at Kinston; Wilmington at Goldsboro.

Friday and Saturday—Greenville at Wilmington; Kinston at Rocky Mount; Fayetteville at Goldsboro.

ATHLETICS DROP TWO IN A ROW

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
Events over the week-end were not exactly beer and skittles for Mr. Cornelius McGillicuddy, what with the loss of Mickey Cochrane and two ball games. But even so, the Athletics cannot yet be said to be in any need of a wall against which to place their backs. The Yankees were able to get only an even break in their first two skirmishes at St. Louis, and the Mackmen were left with a lead of eight and one-half games.

The Macks were more concerned over the return of Cochrane to the line-up than with the immediate fight at hand. The loss of a 365 batter who also is one of the leading catchers in either league, never did any team a bit of good not even one like the Athletics. Cochrane is suffering from a fractured rib, injured by a pitched ball in the Washington series.

Physicians promised an early return of Mickey to the line-up, but declined to specify any particular date.

Having shaded the Athletics by 5 to 4 on Saturday, the White Sox did a more thorough job yesterday to win by 9 to 3. Ted Lyons halted the Mackian attack while the Sox climbed upon Earnshaw, Yerkes Shores and Rommel for eleven safe hits.

At St. Louis, Hoyt was falling for the Yanks after the champions had stretched a winning streak to eight games by taking the opener on Saturday. Fitted against Alvin Crowder, he put on a neat pitching battle for six rounds, only to crumple in the seventh after the Huggmen had driven Crowder from the box.

The Browns hammered Hoyt for two markers in the seventh and three more in the eighth to win by 7 to 2. Wiley Moore was called into action too late to do any good.

Since June 1, it has been observed that the Huggmen in that time have won 24 games and lost only 11, a 686 game which, if maintained to the finish, might easily save Huggins' fourth place. In the same period the Athletics have won 24 and lost only 9. No imagination is needed to picture the result of a possible prolongation of this 727 pace to the finishes.

An even break from this point to October 6 would send Mr. McGillicuddy home with 94 victories. To beat even so poor a record by the Athletics, the Yanks would have to win 51 and lose only 32 of their remaining 83 games.

Earl Whitehill pitched four-hit ball to give Detroit a 9 to 1 victory over Washington yesterday, and the Indians divided a pair with the Sox in Cleveland. The home team won the opener by 4 to 2, but lost the nightcap, halted at the end of the fifth by rain.

The three foremost contenders in the National league maintained the tension by winning simultaneously yesterday, but the Giants gained a paper advantage by taking two games from the Red; while the Pirates and the Cubs were limited to one victory each.

Fred Fitzsimmons ran his string of scoreless innings against the Reds to 27 by shutting out Jack Hendricks' boys again yesterday. Fitz won the series in Cincinnati last month, each by the whitewash route, and repeated in the opener yesterday by 8 to 0. Both Luque and Genewich were knocked from the box in the second game, but Ralph Judd did some fine under-taking at the finish, and the Giants just lasted to win by 8 to 7.

Home runs by Grantham, Braine, Fussell and Comrosky helped the Pirates to defeat Brooklyn 17 to 6 yesterday and so to maintain their lead of half a game over the Cubs, who won in Boston by 15 to 4.

SPORTS SLANTS

By ALAN E. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)
New York, July 8.—(AP)—The campaign along the sports trails has reached the half-way point with a flock of upsets already on record and quite a few more in prospect before the base-hits give way to touchdowns in popular appeal.

Here are a few of the principal surprises so far:

Golf—The might of Bobby Jones over Al Espinosa in the U. S. open playoff and the failure of Johnny Farrell, 1928, champion, to qualify for final 36 holes.

Tennis—Defeat of Cochet by non-ranked Tilden Hunter in the Wimbledon doubles by young Americans, Van Ryn and Allison in winning title.

Rowing—Defeat of California Eight, 1928 world champions, in Poughkeepsie regatta; victory for Browne and Nichols School of Boys of Cambridge, Mass., in Thomas challenge cup final at Henley after Columbia's favored "lightweights" were eliminated.

Track—Victory of Eddie Toon, Michigan negro, over Bruce Wyckoff, Sweet and others for national spring crown.

Turf—Defeat of Blue Larkspur, favorite for 3-year-old crown, by 30 to 1 shot, Grey Coat, in Withers stakes; triumph in classic English Derby for Frigo, 33 to 1.

The biggest upset in sport over the next few months is the prospective downfall of the world's champion Yankees in baseball. The Athletics, choice of only about 10 out of about 60 experts in the pre-season American league dope, appear well enough equipped to protect the big lead they have gained over the titleholders.

The National league race is too close to determine whether an upset may occur. However, the Pittsburgh Pirates, not so favorably regarded in the advance figuring, now have as bright prospects as either of the two pre-season favorites, the Cubs and Giants.
