

Crime Prevention Is More Important Than Detection

Chapel Hill, N. C., Aug. 10.—(AP).—Crime prevention is more essential than crime detection, C. F. Chalane, New York police inspector, said in an address here today before 55 policemen attending the University of North Carolina's training school for North Carolina policemen.

Inspector Chalane is one of the principal lecturers at the ten day institute. He spoke on the functions, sphere of authority and procedure of the policeman.

"Crime prevention is more essential to tax payers and society than crime detection, and the best policeman is the one with the least crime on his beat," said the inspector. "The functions of the policeman are to preserve peace, enforce the law, protect life and property, prevent and detect, crime and arrest violators of the law."

The average citizen, he said, knows little or nothing of civil or criminal action but regards the policeman as the agent of redressing all grievances. Because the policeman is generally not sure of his duty and authority he is frequently unpopular.

"Memorize these five functions," he advised the officers, "and when confronted with a problem of duty and authority, decide it on the basis of whether the substance of the complaint constitutes in any manner anything contained in one of these functions."

"Our position," he continued, "is to enforce the laws made by legislative branch and bring the violator before the judiciary for punishment. If we would do only this and not attempt to make law or punish persons for violating it, we would save ourselves a whole lot of trouble."

He explained that a policeman has power to make arrests when he sees a crime committed, when he has a warrant or when he knows a felony has been committed and has reasonable grounds to believe the person to be arrested has committed it.

LACK OF INTEREST IN BIG PRIZE CAMPAIGN PUZZLING

Puzzles Management That situation is an enigma to the campaign management. It is beyond understanding. In spite of a fair showing of entrants, which is even then all too small, there are still more capital prizes to be distributed than there are active parties to be had for the asking.

Have Many Prospects Perhaps you are one of those folks who will say, "Everything has been worked, everybody has subscribed." Now listen to a few facts. It is a matter of figures that The Reflector are right now distributing over 3,000 copies right in this section. So far not quite 2 per cent of these have renewed. Let us take for the sake of argument that another 2 per cent may have promised their subscriptions. Then, what about the other 96 per cent. Do you think there is enough business there to help scores of people to make big money?

The Reflector doesn't mean "maby" about this thing. So why should you? These newspapers have four costly automobiles, six $100 cash prizes, and as many purses of cash at ten per cent commission as there are active candidates, here which will be given away regardless of whether there are two or two hundred. All that we can do is furnish the prizes and point the way. We can have nothing to do toward mak ing people win them. That's where you come in.

Now, let's get started today. Don't put it off any longer if you have the slightest desire to make any where from a few dollars to as high as $1,775.00. You can win just as big as you will.

And, another thing. There is just as good an opportunity for many many people who have not yet entered the campaign to get in and go over for the very best we have to give. There are whole sections, entire circles of people who are without a representative to claim their support. There are towns and rural communities where no one is entered.

This is the time to enter and start just stop to ponder on the fact that there will soon be given away absolutely free a $1,275.00 Hudson Coach, a $1,000 Oldsmobile Sedan, a $658.00 Chevrolet Coach, a $625.00 Ford and also $2,500 in cash.

Then make up your mind to have any part of it and start if you are in and enter if you are not.

The campaign department offices are open each evening until 8 o'clock in order to furnish information and issue supplies.

Plan To Deport Aliens Arrested In Indiana Ring

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Deportation proceedings against unnaturalized aliens arrested Tuesday night in wholesale raids by federal agents in East Chicago, Ind., were contemplated today as federal authorities scanned the records of the 101 persons charged with specific offenses.

Others of the nearly 200 persons arrested were freed yesterday after they had been questioned and had satisfied officers that they were not connected with the alleged vice and liquor ring which government officers said have controlled the town for months.

In answer to business men and civic groups who asserted that East Chicago had been labelled by the wholesale raids, United States attorney Looms issued a statement denouncing the hold which, he claimed, organized vice and liquor interests had fastened on the town's politics.

"The law enforcement machinery of Indiana in this district has not only broken down, but completely disintegrated," he asserted.

Looms added that Illinois gangsters, especially from Chicago had played a part in "the corruption of this section of Indiana."

Cop's Double Gets Him In Trouble

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—In the case of Patrolman John J. Condon it would appear his face is his misfortune.

Not that Condon isn't a handsome policeman, but after his third arrest in three days as a robber suspect he is convinced there are too many criminals who look like him.

His third discharge as a robber suspect came with the identification of Ray Cooper, also a robber suspect, as the man who on June 22 held up a grocery store, a crime for which Condon has been in jail awaiting trial since June 28. Assistant District Attorney Sanlangero said the resemblance between the two men was so strong no jury would convict the patrolman. Condon who had been arrested and discharged twice previously as a robber suspect said all his troubles were due to doubles.

Rhinelanders Files Suit For Divorce From Mulatto Wife

Las Vegas, Nev., Aug. 15.—(AP)—A divorce suit on behalf of Leonard Kip Rhineland, scion of a socially prominent New York family, charging that his mulatto wife, Alice Jones Rhineland, had "taken advantage of his youth and inexperience" in persuading him to marry her, was on file here today.

It was Rhineland's second suit to obtain a divorce from the daughter of a New Rochelle, N. Y., negro coachman. Several years ago a similar case in New York failed to bring him a decree. Since then they have been living apart, Mrs. Rhineland receiving a separate maintenance.

In his new complaint, Rhineland charged that the defendant, by her artifices and wiles so dominated him "that he was led into the marriage ceremony. He claimed that she caused him to be estranged from his family and friends, causing him "great humiliation."

Loss From Fire Shows Decrease In N. Carolina

Raleigh, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The fire loss on buildings and contents in North Carolina in July totaled $292,696 from 159 fires, a decrease of over $280,000 from the damage of $557,801 from 165 fires in July, 1928.

Insurance commissioner Dan Boney, in announcing the figures, said that but for the heavy loss in the Carolina Beach pavilion blaze the month would have probably set a new July low record.

Four damage fires accounted for more than half of the entire loss in the 159 blazes where damage was done, the report of Andrew Joyner, statistician, pointed out. The four big losses were:

Carolina Beach Pavilion, $119,000, a store at Goldsboro $20,000; a store at Charlotte, $28,258; and a saw mill in Polk county, $10,000.

During the month the following towns reported no fire damage while all reports not in; Rocky Mount, New Bern, Elizabeth City, Salisbury, Henderson, Waynesville, Lenoir, Oxford, Marion, Southern Pines, Elm City, Smithfield, Ahoskie, Washington, Weidon, Lumberton, Raeford, Graham, La Grange, Maxton, Kaniapolis, North Wilkesboro, Mount Olive, Gibsonville, Williamston, Roanoke, Rapids, Edenton, Spencer, Lenoir, and Farmville.

The local Merchants' Association will begin a drive next Tuesday to raise $3,500 to be used for advertising purposes in putting Greenville and its advantages before the world.

We have just received a check for nine cents as the first installment on an account of several dollars against a business that is now in the process of liquidation. When we opened the envelope and exhibited the contents to a bystander his remark was: "Well, at that you are getting more than the farmers will get out of all this so-called farm relief legislation."

With the opening of the tobacco market just a few weeks off, things are beginning to hum in tobacco town in preparation for another record season. Each year the Greenville Tobacco Market serves a wider territory and makes new friends, and in order to better serve this ever growing number of patrons, many additions have been made to local warehouses and factories.

ABOUT TOWN

"We could have given away several hundred of those automobile tire covers bearing the lettering, 'Greenville, the Hub of Eastern Carolina,' declared C. B. Rowlett, secretary of the Merchants Association, speaking of one of the means employed in advertising Greenville.
"We only had about 150 of the covers, and they were gone in a few days. I have had hundreds of requests for them since the first one appeared and we are sorry we are unable to supply the demand.
"This is an excellent way to advertise the city, as the fact that Greenville is the hub of this section is actually kept before the public eye all the time. Numbers of the automobiles carrying these covers bring results in the way of trying to get the outside world know something about Greenville.
"The more money we have for advertising purposes the more we can advertise effectively and it is hoped the business men will give liberally when we canvass for funds next Tuesday."
"Pitt county people are elated in the splendid record which we have established in the poultry and cattle field," declared a prominent agriculturalist today, speaking of the recent report of the State Department of Agriculture in which it was stated that the county ranked ninth in the poultry and live stock field.
"We knew we were putting out lots of hogs and chickens but we didn't have the slightest idea in the world that we would take such a high rank when an actual comparison of the sales of the various counties was made.

"This will encourage our farmers to greater activity in the future and cause them to endeavor to produce more hogs and chickens than ever. The additional revenue derived from the sales of the extra crops this season helped the planters pass over the lean season of the year better than ever before. Times have been hard this summer—harder than in months—but the farmer, especially those who raised hogs and chickens, haven't been complaining to any extent. In fact, they are on the road to financial independence and will get there when the industry develops as it should."

"I have been informed that the National Jewish Hospital will open the Louis Heinman Building for tuberculosis children about September 1st, 1929," Dr. A. M. Schultz, local dentist told the writer of this column today.
"This building has been erected and equipped at a cost of $150,000 through the legacy of the late Louis Heinman, of Jamestown, N. Y. This latest extension of the life-saving service of the National Jewish Hospital will specialize in the treatment of bone, joint and glandular tuberculosis in children, suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis will also be treated.

"The success which they have heretofore secured in treating tuberculosis of the bones and joints in children, the increasing recognition of the value of sun-treatment in such cases, and the unexcelled opportunity Colorado offers for sun-treatment, has made necessary an extension of its facilities for children.
"It is the opinion of the medical profession that the ultimate solution of the problem of tuberculosis lies in the successful treatment of the disease as it manifests itself in various forms in children. With the addition of the Heinman Building, the National Jewish Hospital will have beds for eighty children and complete facilities for treatment all forms of tuberculosis in children.
"It is the hope and desire of the officers of the National Jewish Hospital that their enlarged children's facilities will be used by this community when the need arises. If there is a child in this community who might be helped through this branch of life saving service,

Death Treasure

by R. A. J. WALLING

SYNOPSIS: Buried treasures—archeological gems—found beneath Newplace Abbey, attract Roger Pell to Blackwater and into a circle of vicious hatred. Bertram Fotherbury, new owner of the ancient abbey, is friendly but the parson Marling is especially bitter in his animosity toward Pell and spreads a story that Pell is an e-convict. Tom Grenofen discredits Marling's claims, likes Pell but is more concerned with Veronica Seabroke's captivating charm. Veronica mysteriously is being drawn into the baffling tangle. Late one night, Grenofen and two friends, Royle and Somerfield, hear a woman cry out. They run to the road and find Veronica, badly frightened but unharmed.

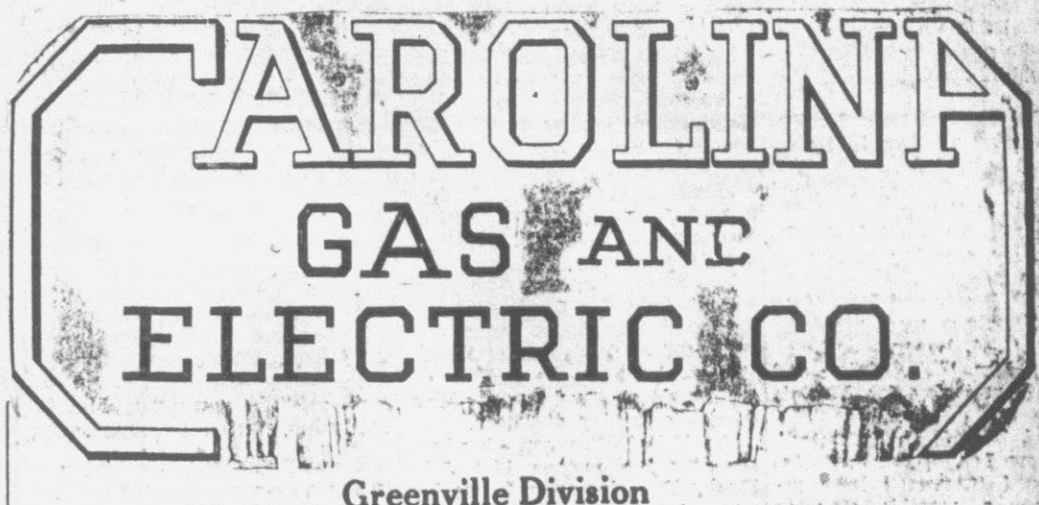

Chapter 4
A MIDNIGHT SURPRISE
Royle and I dashed to Veronica's side.
"Hullo, Andy, is it you?" she said, puffing. "And Mr. Grenofen?"
"Veronica," Royle was insisting. "What is it?"
"Nothing, Andy, only a little game of hide-and-seek."
"Veronica! You cried out. Something's up!"
"Steady, Royle," said I. "Always accept a lady's word."
"Thanks," said Veronica. "That's the most sensible thing I've heard since we met."
Before anybody spoke again, Somerfield came across the road. "Missed him," he said. "What's up, Veronica?"
"Nohing, Martin. Tell you tomorrow. Mr. Grenofen—see me as far as Sandypoint, will you?"
Royle seemed on the verge of another outburst, but Somerfield caught him arm, both lingered a moment to say good-night and then walked toward their punt.
Veronica leaned back against the bank again.
"Better now," she said after a few moments.
"That's fine," said I. "Is there anything you want to say to me?"
"Nothing tonight, I think," she replied. "I'm rather tired; I've walked from Hollam Bay station."
We moved away towards her house, I by her side, wondering why she had told me that tara-diddle. Hollam Bay was four miles and the station swarmed with taxis.
Suddenly Veronica said: "You're an understanding person, Mr. Grenofen, you know when to keep your thoughts to yourself."
And that was all that passed between us before I left her at the gate of Seabroke's house.
With my mind full of the chance that Laxton might have arrived at Woodcot while I was absent, I hurried back.
But not far. Just round the bend where the three of us had started running down, I staggered back, struck by the dazzling light of a torch shot at me from a distance of two or three yards.
Instantly the light vanished, leaving me groping. I heard a sound of rapid footsteps. Then silence. Having hesitated a second or two, I moved upwards, nerves a little frayed.
"Don't be alarmed, Mr. Grenofen," said a voice, and a figure dimly moved out from the hedge. But I recognized the voice. It was Professor Laxton.
"Did you show that light?" I said angrily.
"Certainly not, Mr. Grenofen. I couldn't see the man who did—My car broke down at Brimpton, three miles away, and I was trying to find Woodcot. Fortunately for me, he lit up your face."
My anger subsided and we walked on to my home. Mother greeted us, set out supper for Laxton and retired. Afterwards, Laxton and I sat in the den smoking.
"You know," said he. "This Newplace Abbey is queer business. There were never any Romans at Blackwater."
"Then how—"
"How did the stuff get there? Had Pell anything to do with it?" Mr. Fotherbury made the discovery," I replied.
"Tell you what, we'll go to Newplace Abbey now and see a few things for ourselves."
He seemed amused by my amazement but I assented. Thus while the clock in Marling's tower was striking twelve, we were vaulting over the walls of Newplace and found a path leading to the cloisters.
These were ruins. Hardly a vestige of the big church remained except three of the external walls, pierced at short intervals by pointed windows. We entered the bay so formed, and here Laxton took the lead, sinking by the wall that

THE modern, high-compression, high-speed motor demands an oil that will stand up under the excessive heat generated and will function as near perfectly as is humanly possible under the conditions prevalent in today's motors. The problem has been to secure in one oil the best qualities of the finest paraffine and naphthene crude oils. In our laboratories we have perfected a blend of lubricating oil made from two crude oils. It has advantages only to be found in a two-base oil. If you regard your motor with the affection you have for a favorite dog (as some of us do) you should at least try
