HEALTH OFFICE BEGINS FIGHT ON DIPHTHERIA

Call attention to Law Requiring Compulsory inoculation of school children.

With the opening of public schools of Greenville only a few days off, Dr. Clem Ham, director of public health of this county, called attention of the public today to the necessity of safeguarding children against smallpox and diphtheria.

While there is no evidence of an epidemic either of diphtheria or smallpox, the health officer said, the children should be inoculated to guarantee their immunization. Records of the health department showed that there were only seven widely scattered cases of diphtheria in the county, and not any small-pox.

An ordinance passed by the County Board of Health on April 3, 1929, required all children entering school in Pitt county during 1929-30 to be immunized against diphtheria. Dr. Ham said, "This is done by three successive inoculations at weekly intervals of diphtheria toxin-antitoxin. The reaction experienced is practically nil and renders the child little or no inconvenience, but confers a lifetime immunity to diphtheria."

Dr. Ham stated that inoculation would be given at the health department offices at the court house until the opening of the school when various representatives of the department would visit the schools and give the treatment. He said school superintendents and principals should familiarize themselves with the health laws and be in position to render the most intelligent service possible. Regarding the diphtheria situation, the health official has the following to say:

"We are now at the beginning of the season in which diphtheria usually begins to spread among the children of the State. It would seem that by this time parents would realize that, when their children have diphtheria, that are fully responsible for such a calamity. It has been thoughtfully demonstrated that immunization through the use of toxin-antitoxin is almost totally safe and free from complications when given to children, and it has been equally as well demonstrated that it guarantees protection from attacks of diphtheria in fully ninety five out of every one hundred children to which it is given. Even when it does not fully prevent an attack in the few cases that do have it after the immunization from toxin-antitoxin is given, accompanied by gangrenous complications.

New York City has been making a city-wide effort to control the disease for the last year or two. They have as their objective the immunization of every child in New York City between the ages of nine months and ten years. They have established stations about over the city for free administration to people who are unable to have it done by their family physician. About two thousand physicians in the city have readily agreed to designate certain hours in which they remain in their office for the purpose of administering the toxin-antitoxin at a considerable reduction price over the average fee charged.

This is a co-operative effort that of North Carolina. In this state all of the city and county health departments, serving about half the population of the state, offer this protective treatment free of charge to any children. In the remaining half of the state it would be easy for the physicians themselves to make the arrangements at a normal cost to their patrons. Even in the cities and counties being served with whole-time health officers there are many thousands of people who prefer having their own family physician to give this treatment. In such cases a little co-operative effort brought about between the health department and physicians would, it seems to us, give this movement a fine impetus. It is time all of us were about it. There should be Carolina.

BAMBER GIVES UP WORK WITH LOCAL CHURCH

Pastor of Christian Church to End Service Here the First of January

Rev. R. J. Bamber, pastor of the Fifth Street Church of Christ, has announced that he will close his ministry in this city the first of January.

The announcement was made from the pulpit yesterday morning. The minister did not go into details regarding his action, merely stating that "I will close my ministry with you the first of January. This needs no action either by the Board or the church."

Mr. Bamber has been pastor of the local church over a period of three years. During his stay here he has taken an important part in the activities of the Ministerial Association, having one time served as president, and later as secretary, of the organization.

No information regarding the minister's future plans was divulged today, but it was stated that this would be given out later on during the year.

Propose Plan To Create United States Of Europe At Hague Confab Today

Geneva, Sept. 8.—(AP)—A Conference of the leaders of European states, meeting after luncheon under the chairmanship of Premier Briand of France, this afternoon decided that it was wise to create ties of cordiality among themselves such as might be described as a European Confederation, or "United States of Europe."

The statesmen, representatives of their nations at the tenth assembly of the League of Nations, appointed Premier Briand, who is the author of the project for the so-called "United States of Europe," to draft a memorandum on the subject. The memorandum will be sent to all European governments for study.

Upon receipt of replies from the different governments, the French Premier will make a new report incorporating them and submit it to a new conference of European Nations, this conference probably will be called to take place simultaneously with a league assembly at Geneva next year.

OPPORTUNITY DAYS OFFER BIG CHANCE

Last Extra Bonus Votes to be Given on Subscriptions in Auto Contest

The provisions for extra votes during "Opportunity Days" constitute the very last week of the entire campaign during which time there will not be any special extra votes given on any kind of subscriptions. Inasmuch as votes win the big cars and cash awards, it is up to hustling candidates to take full advantage of it.

"Opportunity Days" present an unparalleled opportunity for new candidates to enter and start in the campaign. As also provided in the rules, each candidate receives extra vote value on the first week he is in the campaign and by doubling up that first week with "Opportunity Days" extra votes on all new subscriptions and first week extras. It is merely a matter of fact that a new candidate entering or starting now can very quickly make themselves a real factor in the election with any kind of success whatever.

Extra effort must be put forth on the part of all workers to obtain the new subscribers to The Reflector this week in order to hold whatever advantage they may have been able to build up for themselves so far in the race and they are also armed with something of an added reason to urge their friends to give that subscription now instead of holding off until later. Remember well that there will never again be any special vote provision throughout the campaign for no provision is made for such in the opening rules and regulations. This is the very last chance to get the biggest votes possible.

Attention of those many people who have held off acting upon a desire to enter this campaign is called to this last chance to get started on the double quick in votes. This goes also for the many folks who have not yet had a chance to get acquainted with this great opportunity The Reflector is presenting to the people of this section. There are still many towns and sections of the country unrepresented in the list of workers and a real chance to own any of the prizes exists for any and all ambitious workers.

Any requests for campaign information, especially on "Opportunity Days," will be gladly answered by The Reflector and it will be well to fully understand the meaning of all angles of the election while there is yet time to win and win big. A telephone call to 444 will bring any information wanted.

New Orleans, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Cotton prices soared from $2.50 to $3.50 a bale today under an active demand stimulated by the government's crop estimate of 14,823,000 bales which was smaller than expected. Immediately on resumption of trading following the usual 15 minute suspension for reception of the report, October contracts sold up from 18.62 to 19.20; Dec. from 18.92 to 19.40 or 58 and 48 points respectively, well above the lows. January scored the maximum gain of 82 points trading up to 19.81.

Juror Goes Insane and Mistrial Is Ordered In Charlotte Strike Case

Charlotte, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Trial of sixteen Gastonia textile mill strikers and strike leaders on charges of murder growing out of the death of O. F. Aderholt, chief of police of Gastonia, was halted here today and a mistrial ordered when one of the jurors became insane. The juror, J. C. Campbell, Charlotte News Vendor, was placed in the county jail where it was said he was violent.

The jury, selection of which took up nine of the twelve days the trial had been in progress, was dismissed and Judge M. V. Barnhill, presiding, recessed court until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when it was expected some announcement as to future procedure would be made.

Campbell first showed signs of being unbalanced on Saturday and suffered several attacks between the time court adjourned Saturday afternoon for the week-end and this morning. While enroute to court this morning he became violent and the combined efforts of three men were necessary to subdue him and four were required to put him into a cell at the jail to prevent him doing injury to himself or others.

Judge Barnhill after hearing Dr. John S. Myers state that Campbell was suffering from emotional insanity, ordered a mistrial but a few minutes later vacated the order when the defense said that another juror be selected and the trial proceed. Defense attorneys conferred and after returning to the court, Judge Barnhill decided that under the law the jury would have to be discharged as the two weeks for which the special term of court had been called, expired last Saturday.

The defense, after the mistrial had been ordered, sought the release of all of the prisoners on the ground that they "have been placed in jeopardy once." This motion was denied as was one to grant bail to the thirteen men defendants who are charged with first degree murder.

The prisoners were ordered held in the Mecklenburg county jail. Just when the case can be resumed today appeared doubtful and it was thought that the reason Judge Barnhill decided to hold a session this afternoon was that he wanted to ascertain whether or not selection of another jury could start immediately. Attorneys said it was their belief that another term of court would have to be called, which would require at least 20 days.

The Judge's order follows: "The court, from the evidence which appears of record, finds as a fact that, pending the trial of this cause, one of the jurors, J. C. Campbell, has suffered a mental and physical collapse and is now suffering from an acute attack of emotional insanity, from which there is no probability that he will sufficiently recover to enable the court to proceed with the trial and he is wholly incapacitated, for further jury duty by reason of which the jury is not now constituted, for further jury duty by reason of which the jury is not now constituted of twelve men of sound mind as contemplated by the statute.

"Whereupon it is directed by the court that a juror be withdrawn and a mistrial is ordered and the cause is continued. The prisoners at the bar are remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Mecklenburg county."

A moment after the order was entered it was discovered that one of the defendants was not in the courtroom when his order was issued and ordered all the prisoners returned. Sheriff John R. Erwin said he had taken him out of court because he was sick.

A few minutes later the 13 prisoners charged with first degree murder were returned to the courtroom and a roll was called. The order was re-entered. Attorney Hayes then said he thought a record should be made that during the absence of the prisoner's there were some court proceedings. This Judge Barnhill allowed.

Raleigh, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Governor O. Max Gardner this morning ordered a third special term of court for the trial of the Gastonia strikers and strike sympathizers charged with the shooting of police chief Aderholt to convene in Mecklenburg county September 30. The order of the governor followed receipt of word from Judge M. V. Barnhill, presiding at the special term in Charlotte, that a mistrial had been ordered this morning. The trial which ended this morning was the second special term ordered to try the case, the first at Gastonia having resulted in a change of venue being granted to Mecklenburg.

Judge M. V. Barnhill will also preside at the third term of court. The Rocky Mount jurist was ordered by Governor Gardner to preside at the first two special terms.

Find Wreckage Of Missing Air Liner In New Mexico; Eight Occupants Dead

By ROBERT W. REDWINE (Eye Witness at T. A. T. Plane Wreckage)

Grant, N. M., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Funeral preparations today marked the final chapters in a story of eight lives snuffed out in the crash of a giant air liner against a mountainside as a pilot battled blindly for a haven of safety against a raging storm.

With five passengers, one a woman, and a crew of three dead, the cause of the crash of the City of San Francisco, Transcontinental air transport, Inc. plane on Mount Taylor, 20 miles from here, may never be known. A searching party of 150 men, including an Associated Press correspondent, was led by Sheriff Bob Roberts up the precipitous sides of Mount Taylor which thrusts its jagged peak nearly 12,000 feet into the sky that was once the lane of the "mistress of the air."

In a little canyon, heavily wooded with giant pine trees, the party of 50 suddenly came upon the scene where charred wreckage are marked the final resting place of the huge ship. Over a space of 150 yards the plane was strewn in bits, the largest piece a wing section about ten feet long. Three motors that roared their challenge to the elements when the City of San Francisco left Albuquerque N. M. last Tuesday morning at 10:22 o'clock, were shattered and strung along a patch cut by the plane as its journey was suddenly and disastrously ended.

What was once the luxurious cabin of the plane lay before the searchers a mass of melted and twisted metal, and within were the pitifully broken bodies of the passengers and crew—beyond beyond recognition.

On one arm of one of the pilots, a wrist watch loomed as a single telling remnant of the wreckage. His hands were stopped at 11:01. Sheriff Roberts examined a watch of one of the passengers. It showed 11:04. It was grim, but certain proof the plane was winging its way westward on time on its correct course to the next stop, when tragedy intervened.

COFFEE SHOP OPERATORS IN LIQUOR CASE

Carlos Prey and wife, operators of the Coffee Shop, Dickinson avenue eating establishment, arrested early today on a charge of possessing whiskey, were given preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner T. E. Beaman shortly before the noon hour and bound over to Federal court under bond of $500.

The case had been set for 3 o'clock this afternoon, but owing to the difficulty of the defendants in providing temporary bond of $300 each Commissioner Beaman decided to move the hearing up somewhat.

Carlos Prey and wife, operators of the Coffee Shop, eating establishment on Dickinson avenue, near Five Points, were being held under $300 bond each today for their appearance in a magistrate's court; this afternoon to answer to a charge of possessing liquor.

The two were arrested by Sheriff Sam Whitehurst following a raid on the Coffee Shop this morning. Officers said they found five pints of whiskey in the place and this will be used as evidence when the case comes up for hearing this afternoon.

Officers are said to have had their eyes on the operators of the cafe for some time, but they were not able to secure any evidence until this morning when the five pints of liquor were taken in a quickly planned raid.

District Attorney Fred Nichols represented the state. The jury examined the wreckage and the bodies, and solemnly and briefly reported to the victims came to their death, "as the result of an airplane accident."

No opinion was given as to the cause of the crash. Then the slow, teacherous trek deep canyons and thick underbrush making the trip difficult. Eight bodies on stretchers were borne save miles by the party. They were taken by ambulance to Grange.

(By The Associated Press) Seven North and South Carolinians met violent deaths in three states Sunday, as a result of three automobile accidents, a murder and suicide.

The shooting occurred in Charlotte, in the home of a relative of Bartlett's wife. The man and woman were said to have been separated for six weeks, the husband coming from home at Mint Hill.

The shooting followed a quarrel. Theauma Long, 7, and Robert Long, 6, of Lumberton lost their lives and Mrs. C. H. Long, parents of the children, were injured when an Atlantic Coast Line train, near Sandbourne, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Long, who were taken to a Wilmington hospital, are said to be in a serious condition.

Mrs. Olga Rock Rhodes, 29, and her son, Floyd Rhodes, Jr., were killed in another crash between a train and an automobile, near Woodruff, S. C. Rhodes, Sr., husband of the woman suffered serious injuries. The car was struck by a Charleston and Western Carolina passenger train.

C. an enlisted man, attached to the battleship New York, was killed in a collision between an automobile and a bus on a highway near Norfolk, Va.

HUSTON TAKES WORK'S PLACE WITH G. O. P.

Tennessee Man Elected Chairman of Republican National Committee Today

Washington, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Claudius H. Huston of Tennessee was elected chairman of the Republican national committee, succeeding Dr. Hubert Work of Colorado, who retired on his own motion.

In accepting the chairmanship, to which he was elected by unanimous vote, and without opposition, Mr. Huston announced he was severing all his active business connections, and would in the near future be able to give the work his undivided effort.

"My program as chairman will be that of seeking to build up, with your help and that of all other Republican workers throughout the country," he said, "an organization which will insure full expression of that public opinion which stands with and by the Republican party and the administration program."

Huston said his task was made easier because "of the harmonious conditions prevailing in the Republican National organization at the close of administration of my friend Dr. Work under whose chairmanship the Republican party gained one of the most remarkable victories in all the long history of our party."

Chairman Work after calling the meeting to order. Said 97 members were present. The first business was to accept the resignation of T. Coleman DuPont, as committee member from Delaware, and designate C. Douglas Buck, governor of that state to fill the vacancy.

It then formally elected Representative Ruth Barker Frazer of the National Committee from New York, this filling a vacancy that has existed for some time.

Work announced the committee was gratified over selection by the Vermont state committee of Mrs. Margaret M. Tucker as committee woman for that state.

Work then made a brief address of farewell. He said he regarded every member of the committee as a friend and that during "the trials and tribulations and finally the joy" of the last campaign, not a single member had given cause for any moment of apprehension.

"I look upon this not as a goodbye, but as adieu," he said. "It is not necessary, he added, to review the work of the Republican party, saying the committee held itself responsible for keeping the party in power in order that "We may have the best government."

There was a large attendance of members—women as well as men—when Dr. Work called the session to order. Both of the Southern National committee men—Perry W. Howard, a Negro, of Mississippi, and Joseph Tolbert of South Carolina, whom President Hoover recently appointed to the cabinet, were in the audience of party affairs in their state.

Ellenburg Twins Open Revival Here

The Ellenburg Twins of Ninety Six, South Carolina conducted the first service of a series of evangelistic services at the Pentecostal Holiness church on Reade Street Sunday night.

The real spirit of evangelism was felt as one of the brethren spoke to the large congregation on II Kings 2:14: "Where is the God of Elijah." The young minister answered the question by saying that this same God is in Greenville, and that the reason His power is not felt now as it was in Elijah's day, is that the sins of the people have separated between them and God.

"Moral apostasy," said the young man "is the cause of God's departure." He pointed out how this church and community can have the power of Elijah's God through consecration and prayer.

The Twin Ministers are characterized by unusual earnestness, unre-served consecration to the cause they represent, and by optimistic enthusiasm.

MILT TOLBERT'S SHOWS TO START IN CITY TONIGHT

The "Y Girl" Title Of Presentation To Be Produced In Tent Theatre.

Milt Tolbert's Tent Theatre, the most famous of the companies depicting the latest in comedies and dramas, will open in Greenville tonight, at their location next to the post office for a week's stay.

Tolbert's show is known as the World's Greatest Tent Theatre and the chautauqua with a million friends. This company has appeared in Greenville each summer for a number of seasons and in popularity has always seemed to be unsurpassed.

Boyd Holloway, the leading man, and Miss Edwards, who carried the woman's leads, are well known to theatre-goers of this city. In addition to each performance the famous Civilian orchestra of St. Petersburg, Fla., will play before the start of the shows and between the acts.

Milt Tolbert's show is the only organization that does not adhere to the tradition of presenting short acts between scenes of the featured plays. Mr. Holloway asserts that the short acts detract from the continuity of the play and as a result only orchestral selections are played in order that those attending can get the most out of the attractions. The "Y Girl" is the title of the play.

Help your church or your church society make some money by attending the fuel saving demonstration at our store tomorrow night, from 8 to 10 o'clock. It costs you nothing. We pay 25 cents to your church for each member present. Quinn-Miller & Co.

LITERARY CLUB BEGINS FALL PROGRAM

Farmville, Sept. 9.—After adjournment in June, the Farmville Literary Club held the first meeting of the fall on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Askew on North Main street. The home was most attractive with flowers from the garden of the hostess. The most important features of the business session presided over by the newly elected president, Mrs. J. W. Parker, were: the appointment of a new tuberculosis Christmas seal chairman, Miss Annie Perkins, to succeed Mrs. R. A. Fields, who has served so efficiently for the past two years, and the selection of twenty highly recommended books of fiction to be passed in rotation during the club year.

Isben was the subject of the afternoon program commencing a study course in Modern Drama as outlined by Elizabeth Lay Green, with two papers: "Isben's Life and Works" by Mrs. E. C. Beaman; "Isben's Place in Modern Drama," by Mrs. A. S. Bynum, and a review of his play, "A Doll's House," given by Mrs. J. W. Joyner. A salad course was served.

Tomorrow night, from 8 to 10 o'clock, fuel saving demonstration at our store. Everybody invited. Nice comfortable seat for everyone. Quinn-Miller & Co.

THE WAY OUT

The Newbernian has struck at the right source in declaring that there is a way out for the farmers of this section but that the farmer's salvation rests in his own hands and it is for him to decide whether his future will be one of financial independence and freedom or slavery to the money-crop system. We agree heartily with the editor of the Newbernian and pass on what he has to say to our readers for the advice he gives the farmers of his county would prove equally advantageous to farmers in this and every other county in the agricultural section of the south.

Under the heading, "There is a Way Out," the Newbernian says: With the first week of the tobacco market behind us, and ample time has elapsed to calmly reflect on the outcome of the week, as regards the sale of leaf tobacco, we are of the opinion that there is absolutely no hope for the farmer under the present system of pricing and price manipulation. We would like to ask every farmer that reads this, if he would not do just about the same way as the big companies are doing, if the same power was placed in his hands. If you had six years ration in the house, a healthy bank balance and a nice brace of automobiles to ride around in, tickets to Europe and a summer home in Atlantic City and a winter home in Florida, and everything that the heart could wish for, would you raise any tobacco for a few years? We answer you, "No." Well, that's the position that the big tobacco manufacturer is in. He has plenty of tobacco, and is doing perhaps more than you would under the same circumstances, because he is buying your weed at some price.

What for a solution of the present problem. There is only one course for our farmers to take. Raise little more, and we say our farmers, we mean all of the tobacco farmers of America. All will admit that this is a hard thing to do or get done, but the only way to get it done is to organize and be governed by the rules of the organization. We don't think this will be done, however, to be frank, but that's one solution to the perplexing problem that is confronting us at the present moment. The tobacco farmer that raises nothing but tobacco will say that he cannot do anything else, but we say he can. There are a dozen avenues for the farmer to take to make an independent living. We will just cite you one example that we know of. There is a farmer in Pamlico county that raises plenty of food for hogs and chickens and raises hogs and chickens, and sells them for a good profit. Does he sacrifice on any kind of market that is brought near him? No, he has a fast truck and he carries his produce to the best market, even if that market is Richmond, Virginia. He loads up his truck and trailer and leaves home about 2 a. m. for Richmond, and he is there in time for the same morning market and he carries whatever he produces on the farm and gets a good price for it. Sweet potatoes, green vegetables, hogs, chickens, etc., and they go into the market green and fresh, and they command good prices.

This is only one thing. There are dozens of other things he can do, but the successful farmer does not put all of his eggs in one basket. He sells something of many kinds of farm products and he is having something to sell all the year around. The farmer that is a slave to one crop will be a slave all of his life because there are men and agencies that are laying for him all of the time. Farmers of Craven county, if you would make yourselves rich; if you would get out of the rut that you are in, seriously consider something other than simply raising tobacco and cotton. Raise plenty of food and feed, live at home all that is possible, and this old county will step out into a class by itself. We ate glad to say that many farmers in this county are seeing the light and are not as bad off as those that are still groping in the dark, raising nothing but tobacco and cotton, and buying their hay and grain from the west. There is a way out, will the intelligence of the men and women of this section predominate and take this way or will they keep on and be slaves all of their lives?

ABOUT TOWN

I understand there was twice as much business done by the Greenville police department during the month of August as during July, said a citizen today. "This information will be received with more than passing interest by the majority of people, because it shows that the law enforcement body is right on its toes when it comes to looking after the criminal element. "No community can expect to be what it should without proper policing, and now that the Greenville department has shown such a splendid increase of business we may expect to see quite an improvement in the situation. "People of this section are going to have to give more attention to the growing of hogs and chickens in the future in order to get by when the main crops fail to bring good prices," observed one of the leading planters today.

"With the raising of things we consume at home, it wouldn't make so much difference how cotton, tobacco and corn sold, we would have enough to live on until the next planting season without finding ourselves heels over head in debt. "Diversification of crops and more attention to hogs and cows and chickens should mean the salvation of this great farming section. "Yes Sirree, we expect to have one of the greatest fairs in history," Haywood Daily, secretary of the Pitt county fair said today. "We have already made arrangements for plenty of exhibits from various sections of the county, and the thousands of people to attend the annual attraction will have the opportunity of actually seeing what is being accomplished by their neighbors in other parts of the country. "Midway, as usual will be ablaze with more attractions than one can shake a stick at and both old and young will always find something of interest. "Bear in mind that the fair opens on Monday night this year instead of Tuesday morning as customary. This is done in order to give people more time to enjoy the hundreds of entertainments offered them at this season of the year. "It is absolutely necessary for you to have hunting licenses when you start out with your gun this season," declared an official today. "Some people think that if they hunt in the county they do not need license, but this is not so. Every hunter must obtain license from the proper channels before he has the legal right to shoot game anywhere, and if he does not he lays himself open to prosecution. "Keep this important matter in mind, Mr. Hunter, and be sure you are armed with your license before you hit away to the fields and woods this season. You will save yourself the inconvenience of being summoned into court to answer to charges for violation of the game laws."

"Greenville and Pitt county people should begin now to prepare for 'Pay Up Period' to be staged in Greenville from October 1st to 15th," said a member of the Merchants association today. "By doing this everybody should be in position to meet his honest obligations and put himself in line for receiving good credit rating when the lists are compiled after the 'Pay Up Period' comes to a conclusion."

"The fall of the year, the big season for news is here," said the circulation manager of this paper today "and you should make it a point to see about the subscription to your paper."

"If you think you are behind the slightest bit, get busy and renew your subscription immediately. Unless you do this you will be cut off the lists and may be put to the inconvenience of missing a few copies before the paper is started to you again."

"Bear this important matter in mind, look over your label today, and if the date of expiration is near at hand, get busy and renew at once."

Help your church or your church society make some money by attending the fuel saving demonstration at our store tomorrow night, from 8 to 10 o'clock. It costs you nothing. We pay 25 cents to your church for each member present. Quinn-Miller & Co.

JOYNER'S On Tobacco Market Conditions The Eastern North Carolina tobacco markets have all opened, and while prices were disappointing to all the people of this great and best bright tobacco growing region in the world, we would say to the growers, do not be discouraged. Tobacco is going to sell higher, we believe, on the average, than in many years, and while the opening prices were lower than most of us expected, in the end, we believe, this will turn out to be a blessing to all. We are no prophets, but we assert our belief that this crop will prove to be the lightest yield per acre that has been produced in 20 years. It will not require very long for the tobacco trade to find this out and then farmers will realize satisfactory prices. Market Average on Opening—$11.85. Our Average on Opening—$12.45. WE HAVE— First Sale—Monday, Sept. 9. Second Sale—Tuesday, Sept. 10. First Sale—Wednesday, Sept. 11. Third Sale—Thursday, Sept. 12. Second Sale—Friday, Sept. 13. Death Treasure

By R. A. J. WALLING

SYNOPSIS: Veronica's clever scheme to account for the night's adventure does not delude Somerfield, who tells Tom Grenofen the next day that he knows the truth. Further, he brings the information that Professor Laxton—in reality a Scotland Yard sleuth—is on Tom's trail and is particularly anxious to recover a certain ancient book stolen from the Potherbury library on the day of Pell's murder. They ponder on the possible connection between Pell and the Seabrocks, the puzzling crime, Laxton's peculiar actions and Somerfield's latest discovery—that Pell's murderer could not have seen his victim through the keyhole, that the fatal bullet was intended for someone else in the room and the only man sitting in a position where he could have been seen through the keyhole, was—Parson Marling.

Chapter 25 COUSIN JOHN HIMSELF

It was Marling who should have been shot, not Pell. Somerfield had perceived the fact during Wayne's experiments with the keyhole. Looking through when the door was closed he could see the chest by the chimney corner where Marling sat and that was all. The probable truth dawned upon him at that moment. "Strange," said I, "that Laxton should miss it."

"How do we know he does?" asked Somerfield. "I'm pretty sure he doesn't, Grenofen. Have you noticed that though Wayne called in Scotland Yard we don't hear anything about the Scotland Yard men? There are two of 'em standing at the Lord Nelson. But Laxton's doing all the work; they're just camouflage. You said just now Laxton began late in the story. It's Marling can take him back. And

"Oh, I'm the man who ought to apologize. Seeing off your cousin, Mr. Merryweather, weren't you? I'd hoped to meet him again." "Again?" I said, starting back. "Yes, I think it must have been Mr. Merryweather I met on Sunday. Rather tall man, exceedingly gentlemanly but rather—indifferent to his appearance? Carrying a black bag." "I turned hot and felt as near fainting as ever in my life. I simply babbled." "Where—how did you meet him?" I stammered. "Oh, Sunday—on my way here." "But it couldn't have been Cousin John. He didn't come till Tuesday." "Why, of course! Must have been somebody else. Rotten luck for Mr. Merryweather, though, being ill all the time he was here, and then having to rush away. Had to go far?" "To London," said I. "He went by the 9:40 train to Hollam Bay and caught the express." Laxton smiled at me. "It would be hard to describe all the meaning in that smile. "You must have been back here almost as soon as I left. What time did you get home?" "The way of the liar—how stony! Somerfield came to my rescue. "Haven't you got the news, professor?" said he. "On the way back from seeing his cousin off, he met Miss Seabroke—" Somerfield paused and Laxton looked at me. "She'd seen something suspicious happening to Rowle's boat. Mrs. Seabroke got out her husband's car and we drove down the coast road after the boat." "You don't say!" "You don't say!" said Somerfield. "Andy Royle got a telephone message from them this morning from Silworthy, and we ran down there and found them keeping guard over the boat." "Extraordinary luck, you meeting Miss Seabroke, just in the nick of time!" Laxton paused. "On the way back from the station, too." This remark flummoxed both of us. For the station was some little distance up the river beyond Blackwater Church, and it would have been truly astonishing if I had met Veronica anywhere on that road. But Laxton did not pursue the point. "How did you manage all night?" said he. "They had to stay in the cove," Somerfield explained. "Grenofen strained his foot going down the cliff (and the ladies couldn't get up in the dark alone." "You don't say!" Laxton's phrase had become a curse. "A rather nasty experience," I observed. "Oh, I don't know, Mr. Grenofen," said Laxton. "If either you or Miss Seabroke had been able to manage a motor-boat you could have brought her back to Blackwater. Fine night, nice girl—" The offensive devil knew I could not answer back. "Miss Seabroke—" I began. "Oh, Mr. Grenofen, don't explain."

He turned, hearing voices in the hall. We walked out together. My mother was greeting John Merryweather, the bachelor cousin. The maid was in the act of taking from him a bag—and it was black. Fortunately, John Merryweather was tall. Unfortunately he wore a beard. My mother introduced the men. Laxton said a word of greeting and took a quick departure. I had recovered enough aplomb to walk down to the gate with Laxton. "You hadn't seen him before, had you?" I ventured rashly. "No," said Laxton, "unless his beard grows exceptionally fast. Au revoir, Mr. Grenofen." (Copyright, 1929, Wm. Morrow Co.)

The real Cousin John lives Laxton a new puzzle. Continue the story tomorrow.

OUR VISIT TO THE ATWATER KENT FACTORY

(By A. S. Gaskins and William Proctor, of the Home Furniture Company, who Returned Friday, Sept. 6.)

We can truthfully say that whatever expectations we entertained—and they were great expectations—prior to our recent tour through the Atwater Kent radio factory in Philadelphia, were immensely overshadowed by the actual event itself. Never in our lives have the amazing magnitude and efficiency of modern manufacturing methods struck us half so forcibly. From the time we walked through the imposing entrance, with its beautifully kept lawn and trimmed hedges and shrubbery, until the time, hours later, when we had completed our tour of the world's largest radio factory, we were constantly greeted by wonder after wonder—things fascinating and almost incredible to the average lay mind—but merely one more day's work in the lives of the men who have made the name of Atwater Kent famous throughout the world.

The two large brick and stone buildings, comprising the main plant, are mammoth—breath-taking in their vast expanses. They cover 32 acres of floor space in all and are the latest word in modern, improved industrial architecture. Together they form the largest radio manufacturing plant in the world, as well as one of the largest industrial institutions. Both buildings are skylighted in saw-tooth design, in tier after tier, literally daylight factories, designed to give the maximum amount of natural light. As we walked through department after department, all built along parallel lines and located in logical relationship to one another, we could not help noticing the ideal conditions under which these men and women were working—great sun-flooded floors, excellent ventilation systems, electric-iced water coolers, great numbers of sanitary washrooms and lavatories—luncheon cafeterias strategically placed throughout, serving the finest of wholesome food. A far cry from the sweatshops and dark, dismal, air-fetid factories of a past generation!

Our guide, an intelligent and well-informed young man, explained the various operations to us as we walked along—showed us exactly how they punched out the bases, wound the coils, assembled the condensers, baked the coils, polished the screws, sprayed the cabinets, finished the cabinets by hand, tested the dials and tested the loud speakers in sound-proof rooms. Every single operation was deftly accomplished with clock-like precision. We discovered that one employee in every ten is an inspector or tester, and that every receiving set has to pass 752 tests before it receives the final O. K. The last test is a comparison with a master set, and unless the set being tested is just as good as the "master," it is summarily rejected.

We walked through huge departments where giant machines were grinding out thousands of individual parts every hour of the day. We passed by gigantic tubs and vats—great pitch baths—shining, whirling motors—all fulfilling their indispensable job in the building of the radio. One little machine we passed was turning out a small steel nut every ten seconds. It seemed almost human the way it caught up the materials and swiftly worked them into the finished article.

A flash of the romance of radio manufacturing was given us as the guide, in explaining the different operations, would now and again tell us something about the raw materials that went into each separate part and whence they had come. The market-places and far-flung industries of the whole world, it seems, were combed to provide the material that is quickly and amazingly turned into a thing of wonder and delight to the human ear—the finished radio. Iron from the mines of Minnesota, tin from the mines of England, zinc from Jersey and some from Italy, lead from Spain and Australia, all come to the Kent factory to be made into cabinets, speaker housings, wires for soldering, brass tubes and screws and knurled nuts. From Belgium comes the fur of hares used in the manufacture of felt; India sends a beautiful shellac for sat-like finishing; from Singapore comes the finest grades of rubber.

British Guiana furnishes the clay from which aluminum is reduced to make washers and condenser plates; the sunny South sends her snowy cotton, which is used in the insulation of wires. The romance of radio begins in many parts of the world, long before the vast Atwater Kent factory receives the raw materials. We learned there are 1,705 separate pieces of material in each Atwater Kent Model 55 Table Set.

We also learned from our guide that thousands of men and women are employed in this great factory every working day. Just think—a whole town roofed under the guiding genius of radio's outstanding personality—A. Atwater Kent! The capacity production of the entire plant is over 12,000 receiving sets and loud speakers a day—and almost as many sets and speakers are shipped from railroad sidings along the factory every day to all corners of the globe. The magnitude of such an undertaking and accomplishment left us a trifle breathless.

We also learned that hundreds of men and women were needed just to clean and keep the plant in apple-pie order—and how thoroughly they do their work! Everything is cleanliness itself—another example of what far-seeing and humane captains of industry are doing for their employees—giving them pleasant and healthy surroundings and up-to-date working conditions. We noticed one long moving overhead belt carrying parts to various departments and upon asking the guide about it, was told that this one belt was two miles long. That gives us some idea of the stupendous size of the plant. For purposes of conveying parts from one section to another, electric trucks are constantly used. The huge factory is a beehive of activity, humming with the broad overtones of life and work.

On our way back through the older building, we came across a section devoted to a corps of artists and scenic designers, busily engaged in planning and executing window cutouts and displays. The vivid splashes of color on their sketching blocks and easels were in marked contrast to the drab aspect of the machinery across the way. A little farther on we peered into the laboratory, where a group of men, many of them well-known figures in their field, were experimenting with new electrical ideas in connection with the Atwater Kent radio.

Unfortunately, we've only had room enough to give the barest outline and highlight flashes of our trip through this wonderful, awe-inspiring place. It was an experience we shall never forget. The immensity, the vastness of this great 32-acre plant, filled with thousands of men and women, working with almost unbelievable accuracy and speed to turn out over 12,000 radio sets per day, has left us a memory that the years cannot erase.

The Atwater Kent plant is a great and glowing tribute to an industry young in years, and to a man in the forefront of that industry, whose untiring efforts and brilliant foresight and vision have made a dream come true.

BOSTON TAKES SLUGFEST OFF STORMY CUBS

A dark and rainy week-end on the Major league front saw the coming champions in the respective circuits march somewhat closer to the armistice which will precede the world series, but not so much closer as they might have marched with better luck. This advance and Babe Ruth's assault upon Detroit pitchers for his forty-first and forty-second home runs held the attention of such customers as appeared before the turnstiles.

No fault could be found with the attendances at Chicago where the Cubs too two from the Braves on Saturday by 13 to 6 and 9 to 2 only to see the Bostonese grab a Sunday slugfest by 13 to 11.

The week-end campaign left the Cubs in need of eight victories and the Athletics in need of nine to clinch their respective flags every defeat for the Yankees or the Pirates, of course, lessens by an equal number of victories required by the Athletics or the Cubs. At the present clip, both should gain the mathematical certainty early in the week beginning next Sunday, and the Cubs may be able to do it sooner.

Rogers Hornsby entertained the big crowds at Wrigley Field with a home run on each afternoon, bringing his total for the season to thirty-five—one behind Wilson and Ott and two behind Klein, the league leader.

After bowing in Pittsburgh on Saturday by 6 to 2, the Robins on the Sabbath brought the Pirates back to Ebbets Field where Dazzy Vance outpointed Ray French by 2 to 1 in a most game attended by a handful of fans. The Phillies nipped the Cardinals by 4 to 1 on Saturday and gained an even break yesterday, the game scheduled for today being advanced as fan-bait. The Phils took the opener by 8 to 6, but bowe by 4 to 3 in the six-inning nightcap which saw Chick Hafey hit a very useful home run. The second game was charged to Harry Smythe, his second defeat.

Three Circuits Playing the Final Series of Year

(By Associated Press)

Baseball seasons, involving three circuits in which North Carolina cities are represented, have reached the post-season stage, and today will find diamonds of the Old North State the scenes of pennant clashes.

Finishing their season earlier than the Sally and Piedmont loops, Wilmington and Rocky Mount, first and second half pennant winners, respectively, in the Eastern Carolina, stage their fifth game today in Rocky Mount. Each club has won two of the four contests played.

Asheville, pennant winner of the Sally last year, and holding to half of the 1929 bunting, by virtue of winning the initial half of the flag, takes on Knoxville in the first of the post-season clashes in the class B circuit. The series opens this afternoon, in Asheville.

Durham and Greensboro, winner and runner-up, respectively, in the Piedmont league open a series today in Greensboro. Directors of the class C circuit early in the year voted to have the first and second place clubs engage in a series for the flag. The plan was tried out last year in the Eastern Carolina league.

Pennants will be awarded the teams registering four victories.
