H. C. HUNTER TESTIFIES IN SHEARER CASE

Counsel for American Shipbuilders Tells of Shearer's Activity at Capital

Washington, Sept. 25.—(AP)—H. C. Hunter, counsel for the national council of American shipbuilders, said today before a senate investigating committee that William B. Shearer had been sent to Washington in 1926 by American shipbuilders to "cooperate" with the shipping board in the formulation of a merchant marine legislative program.

This was the year preceding Shearer's assignment to Europe by three shipbuilding corporations to act as "observer and reporter" at the 1927 Geneva Naval Limitations conference.

Appearing as the first witness, Hunter testified that Shearer, who has described himself as a big navy advocate, received $7,500 for his Washington services from the three firms which paid him $25,000 for his work at Geneva.

These three firms were the New York Shipbuilding corporation, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock corporation.

Hunter said for the Washington assignment Shearer was to receive $2,500 a month.

At the time of the Shearer-Geneva transaction, the witness said, he was counsel for an organization developed into the national council of American shipbuilders.

Hunter said he first met Shearer in December, 1926. Shearer, he added, proposed to undertake a publicity campaign on behalf of Merchant Marine, the campaign to consist of a series of addresses and the preparation of articles.

He testified Shearer had represented himself as a member of the staff of the New York Chamber of Commerce and had told him that the "columns" of that paper would be open to his work.

Hunter said he declined to enter into an agreement then with Mr. Shearer.

Continuing, Hunter said he had been called to the March 1927 meeting at which Shearer was hired to go to Geneva. He explained the national council had been organized two months later.

The witness listed the following companies as members of the council: Newport News shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation, New York Shipbuilding corporation, Sun Shipbuilding company, Norfolk Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, Great Lakes Engineering works and several manufacturers of Marine equipment.

Hunter said he was the pay-off man for Shearer in behalf of the shipbuilders for the Washington transaction. Shearer, he added, carried no credentials as an employee of the shipbuilders at Washington where his assignment coincided a short session of congress.

The witness said he also had been pay-off man for Shearer's work at Geneva. Just before Shearer left for Europe, he added, a letter of credit for $7,500 was given him by the shipbuilders. Dec. 10, 1927 Hunter said he deposited $4,968.63 in cash in the Empiro Trust company of New York to the credit of Margaret Shearer, at the request of her husband. This was part of the $25,000 payment.

Hunter said he also paid Shearer $25,000, put up by three shipbuilders, for not publishing in December, 1927 a pamphlet entitled "The clock of Berckel Arnold."

"It was considered inadvisable that the book should be published," the witness explained.

Returning to a discussion of the Geneva assignment, Hunter said he understood the purpose of Shearer's visit was to attend the conference and report proceedings to the three companies.

"That's all," he added.

Later, on October 10, 1927, he said the "observer" had given an oral report.

Chairman Shortridge inquired whether Shearer claimed to have broken up the conference.

"He did not," responded Hunter. The witness testified he had been pay-off man between the shipbuilders and Shearer "merely as a matter of convenience," and his service had been unofficial and without remuneration.

"What prompted you, then to go all this trouble?" asked Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas.

Federal Officer Injured in Fight With Bootleggers

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Charles Stevens, federal prohibition agent, was shot and seriously wounded early today in a gun battle with several alleged bootleggers on a highway near here.

Stevens and two other federal prohibition agents, Pat Murphy and R. H. Hirtzel, had raided a still in Atascosa county, and were returning to San Antonio when they were attacked.

According to Murphy, and Mr. Hirtzel, the third agent in the raid, the operators of the still escaped.

The officers were within eight miles of the city. Murphy said, when they came upon a woman who had blocked the road with her motor car and was flashing a spotlight. The woman was arrested and Hirtzel was instructed to bring her here.

There was about 600,000 pounds of tobacco on the floors of the nine warehouse today, with indications that sales would be completed during the early afternoon hours.

A considerable amount of good tobacco was in evidence today, and the price situation took a bound upward. Prices on all grades, however, were described as stronger.

Farmers were urged to keep their tobacco as dry as possible during the rainy period and to see that it was marketed in the very best condition.

One Killed in Whiskey Raid

Greensboro, Sept. 25.—(AP)—D. Holt, 26, was killed and Mark Floyd, a policeman, was shot in the abdomen when Floyd and another policeman went to Holt's home here last night to investigate reports that liquor was being sold there.

Extent of Floyd's injury had not been determined at a late hour last night.

Sergeant J. M. Church, the other officer, said he was standing in the front door of Holt's home when he heard a shot. Running to the rear of the house he found Holt dead and Floyd seriously wounded.

EXPECT STORM TO HIT FLORIDA DURING NIGHT

Tropical Disturbance Reported Off the Bahamas Islands This Afternoon

An eighty mile stretch of the Florida east coast between Jupiter above West Palm Beach, southward to near Miami, hastily prepared itself today for the possible advent of a tropical disturbance, now lasting the Bahamas off shore.

The Washington weather bureau advised at 10 a. m. that the disturbance was apparently moving westward from the Bahamas with increasing intensity, and that it probably would come inland late tonight between Miami and Jupiter.

The British steamer Domira, around near the center of the storm off Great Abaco Island in the Bahamas, sent out an S O S telegraphically requesting a rescue craft to fetch a breeches buoy to take off its crew of about 30 men.

Fears were expressed by the ship's officers that the crew could not be saved unless the buoy was forthcoming.

Winds of hurricane force prevailed in the vicinity of the vessel, the radio report said, with tumultuous seas raging. Other points in the Bahamas group reported winds of gale or near-gale force. Nassau, the capital, after seeing the storm apparently pass to the eastward last night experienced a rise in the wind today, but with velocities of 40 to 50 miles an hour and rain squalls felt no undue alarm.

The weather bureau report indicated that the storm center, reported last night as moving west-northwest, had changed its trend during the early morning hours to take a straight westward line from the Bahamas last night the advisory had the center about 150 miles northeast of Nassau, which indicated it might move virtually between West Palm Beach and Daytona Beach. Today, however, radio advices from Nassau indicated the storm was passing through the new Providence channel to the north-west of Nassau between New Providence Island and Great Abaco.

West Palm Beach Red Cross officials met today and made arrangements for handling any emergency. Committees were appointed to look after public safety, food, clothing, purchasing, medical care, water, shelter, communications, boats, trucks and passenger cars. Mrs. Nancy Lawler, chairman of the disaster relief nurse committee of Palm Beach county, called a meeting of nurses for 3 p. m.

Situation on Greenville Tobacco Market Reflects Big Improvement

Sales on the Greenville tobacco market during the present week have reflected quite an improvement according to information given out this morning by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales.

There was about 600,000 pounds of tobacco on the floors of the nine warehouse today, with indications that sales would be completed during the early afternoon hours.

A considerable amount of good tobacco was in evidence today, and the price situation took a bound upward. Prices on all grades, however, were described as stronger.

Identify Man Who Shot Woman During Disorder Adjoin Inquest Today

Gastonia, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Naming of individuals whom they saw firing shots at fleeing strikers and identification of the man who shot Mrs. Ella May Wiggins as a "red-headed man with a Panama hat" marked resumption of the inquest here today into the death of Mrs. Wiggins at the hands of a mob on September 14.

After hearing the testimony of three persons who were riding on a truck loaded with Bessemer City members of the National Textile Workers union, en route to a meeting in Gastonia, and which was turned back on the outskirts of Gastonia by a mob, Coroner J. P. Wallace adjourned the inquest until Saturday, October 19.

He ordered the arrest of "Old Man" Borders, a former watchman at the Lory Cotton mills, who D. L. Case, a witness, testified, was firing at fleeing men with a pistol. Several other persons were named as being present at the time of the shooting but witnesses said they did not know.

Solicitor John G. Carpenter announced that George Lingerfelt, driver of the truck, who had been held in $1,000 bail had been released. Six other men arrested at the time of the first session of the inquest on September 15, still are under bonds of $1,000 each.

Gastonia, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, Bessemer City cotton mill striker, who was killed when a mob chased a group of strikers away from Gastonia on September 14, was shot by a "red-headed man with a Panama hat," J. W. Fowler, a union member, testified at resumption of the inquest.

"I wish you would find him," the solicitor told Fowler.

Fowler has only one leg, explained how a hole was made in the window glass back of the driver's seat on the truck. This hole had led to a theory that the shot that killed Mrs. Wiggins came from the front.

"I did the shot hit anybody," Solicitor John G. Carpenter asked.

"Yes, I think that was the shot that killed Mrs. Wiggins," Fowler replied.

The witness said he had seen the red-headed man "around Gastonia somewhere."

JONAS READY TO HELP AID LEAF GROWERS

Congressman From 9th District Says He is In Sympathy With People of Section

"I assure you that my sympathies are with these people and with the farmers generally, and that I shall be glad to use my efforts to cooperate in every way I can with the North Carolina delegation looking to possible relief for the tobacco growers of the state."

So said Charles A. Jonas, member of the House of Representatives of the United States Congress from the ninth district of North Carolina, in a reply to a letter from Judge F. M. Wooten, of Greenville, asking for aid in bringing relief to the distressed farmers of this community.

The letter in its entirety follows: "I thank you for your letter enclosing copy of resolution adopted by producers of bright leaf tobacco in your section in which the aid of the State government and Federal government is invoked in securing a proper marketing of that produce."

"I assure you that my sympathies are with these people and with the farmers generally, and that I shall be glad to use my efforts to cooperate in every way I can with the North Carolina delegation looking to possible relief for the tobacco growers of the State."

Those of us who voted despairingly for an expeditious passage of the Federal Farm Bill spring were especially anxious to get the machinery going in time to be able to do something for the benefit of the farmers in marketing this year's crop.

But as usual, instead of fighting a united battle for the farmers, members of congress—too many of them—look up practically all of the summer making political speeches to be pranked out over the country for partisan purposes and the farmers are really almost forgotten, just as the interests of this section and of other sections of the country are going to suffer because of the politics that are being played by politicians over the present tariff bill.

I do not agree that a protective tariff does not benefit the farmer. I think it benefits him as much as or more than any other class of people if the schedules are properly fixed. I believe in a protective tariff for every American industry and I believe if we would quit playing partisan politics with this economic governmental policy and if our representatives from the south would unite, as the representatives from other sections unite, without regard to party affiliation, in an effort to get equitable protection for the industries and products of the south, this section would not continue to suffer on account of lack of proper consideration from the government.

"Again assuring you that it shall be my pleasure to do what I can now and at all times toward helping the serious conditions confronting the tobacco growers of this south, I am

Sincerely yours,

Charles A. Jonas

Two Drown When Car Leaves Ferry

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 25.—(AP)—When their automobile ran off the Newport News-Norfolk ferry at Newport News late yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings of this city were drowned. Mr. Cummings was a native of Kingston, N. C., and Mrs. Cummings of Trenton, N. C.

John W. Smith, deck hand, dived overboard in a vain attempt to rescue the couple. A diver and a derrick brought the car and bodies up an hour later and efforts were made to revive them.

SENATE FAVORS BROWN NOMINATION

Washington, Sept. 25.—(AP)—A favorable report on the nomination of Brigadier General Lytle Brown as chief of army engineers with the rank of Major General was voted today by the Senate Military committee.

John W. Smith, deck hand, dived overboard in a vain attempt to rescue the couple. A diver and a derrick brought the car and bodies up an hour later and efforts were made to revive them.

SENATE FAVORS BROWN NOMINATION

Washington, Sept. 25.—(AP)—President Hoover's statement advocating retention in the tariff bill of the flexible provisions was attacked in the Senate today by Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, who with other republican independents, is expected to join with many democrats in opposition to the principle.

Contending it was difficult to reason why the president had not "broken his silence" on the tariff before in view of his action in "throwing the great weight of his office against the debenture plan" during the debate on the farm bill LaFollette said Mr. Hoover had not spoken to indicate whether he approved the pending bill.

"He has not indicated whether the bill complies with his ambiguous statement in his message to the special session" The Wisconsin senator averred.

The Wisconsin senator said it was not difficult to understand why the executive desires to keep the "enormous power conferred upon him by the act of 1922." He added that the people had seen the "continual absorption of power by the president until today the framers of the constitution would not recognize that great document."

The flexible clause, LaFollette said, constituted the "power of life or death over the institutions of business and agriculture in this country."

Borglum Indicted In Connection With Mountain Memorial

Decatur, Ga., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Indictment of Gutzon Borglum, for the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association on charges of malicious mischief and larceny, was the latest of a long series of difficulties which have kept step with the effort to carve a monument to the heroes of the Confederacy on the side of the granite mountain here.

Word of the indictment of Borglum, who was indicted for the destruction of his original models for the equestrian figures of the memorial, and was indicted jointly with J. G. Tucker, on two counts of larceny and simple larceny, the removal of models from a building owned by the association, which he was relieved of his commission as sculptor.

Tucker was superintendent in charge of construction of the memorial during Borglum's retention as sculptor.

The indictments which are similar to charges brought against Borglum in 1925, and note passed in June this year, set forth that the models destroyed by Borglum and Tucker were valued at $700.

Claude C. Smith, solicitor for the Stone Mountain drive, announced the former indictments had been dismissed when he had been persuaded that the completion of the memorial depended on the amicable adjustment of differences, but when it became apparent that that all litigation had not been dropped, he again had presented the case to the grand jury.

G. F. Willis, president of the association, professed surprise at the indictments while S. H. Venable, owner of the mountain, denounced the charges as "persecution of Borglum."

Borglum, who gave way to Augustus Lukeman as sculptor when differences between him and the association failed of an amicable settlement at present is believed to be in the Black Hills of South Dakota where he has been retained as sculptor of a series of historic figures on the "Needles" near Rapid City.

SAYS HOOVER REQUEST FOR FACTS UNFAIR

Senator Howell Makes Statement Regarding Washington Dope Charges

Washington, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Senator Howell, Republican, Nebraska, holds that it was "unfair" of President Hoover to call on him to furnish the department of justice "definite facts with time and place" to back up his statements in his scrap last week that the dry law is being violated in Washington.

His assertion that the prohibition law was being violated here but could be enforced if The Chief Executive insisted on it brought a prompt statement from the White House expressing the president's assumption that he "would not make these charges unless they were based upon definite facts" and his desire to have the capital made "model in the country" for enforcement.

Asserting he was not able to give such facts and that he felt they should not be demanded of a senator, the Nebraska senator, who supported President Hoover's prohibition views during the pre-election campaign, took his first opportunity to reply in the senate.

"I spoke from what is common knowledge," he said, "and what is believed outside of Washington to be the conditions inside Washington, the repository of our constitution and the seal of our government."

"I believe conditions here are vastly better than in other cities, but that the fact remains that bootlegging thrives in Washington."

He suggested that Major General Smedley Butler, commander of the marine post at Quantico, Va., who is now engaged in drying up the village which it surrounds, be brought to Washington for that purpose on the strength of his record as head of the police clean-up campaign in Philadelphia several years ago.

He read from reports of prohibition agents which disclosed, he said, that prohibition was disregarded in some of the leading hotels in Washington.

"If you close one of these great hotels," he predicted, "you will see real enforcement."

That and a remark by Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, reminding Senator Brookhart, Republican, of Idaho, of an incident in which "a prominent Wall Street gentleman served liquor at a dinner he gave for senators in the Willard hotel."

Smoot, protesting against Howell's interruption of the tariff debate, had expressed the opinion that there was little bootlegging in Washington.

"I saw it," the senator has ever seen any signs of bootleggers around the dinner given by a prominent Wall Street gentleman for the purpose of greeting newly elected senators," Brookhart asked.

"I will see it," the senator I have not, but I ask the senator if he has?" Smoot retorted.

"Yes," I have, and the senator I don't, the same night," the Iowa replied.

"I don't know what night it was," Smoot went on. "I will say to the senator that I have never been in any place where I have seen any drinking—any club or anything else, Wall Street or otherwise."

Brookhart mentioned the Willard hotel dinner, insisting Smoot was present, although the latter did not recall it.

"The flasks, as I remember," said Brookhart, "were under the table with a curtain around it and all on hand to do was to reach down and get his flask and put it in his hip pocket."

John Coolidge and Bride Visit Coolidge Home

Plymouth, Vt., Sept. 25.—(AP)—One of the first places visited by Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge on their honeymoon was the plain white farm house where six years ago his grandfather, now dead, swore in his father as the thirtieth President of the United States.

The presence of a Coolidge was no novelty to this little hamlet in the hills, but the neighbors were frankly interested in the new Mrs. Coolidge and, with the freedom of old acquaintances, they flocked to the homestead to pay their respects to the daughter of Connecticut's governor.

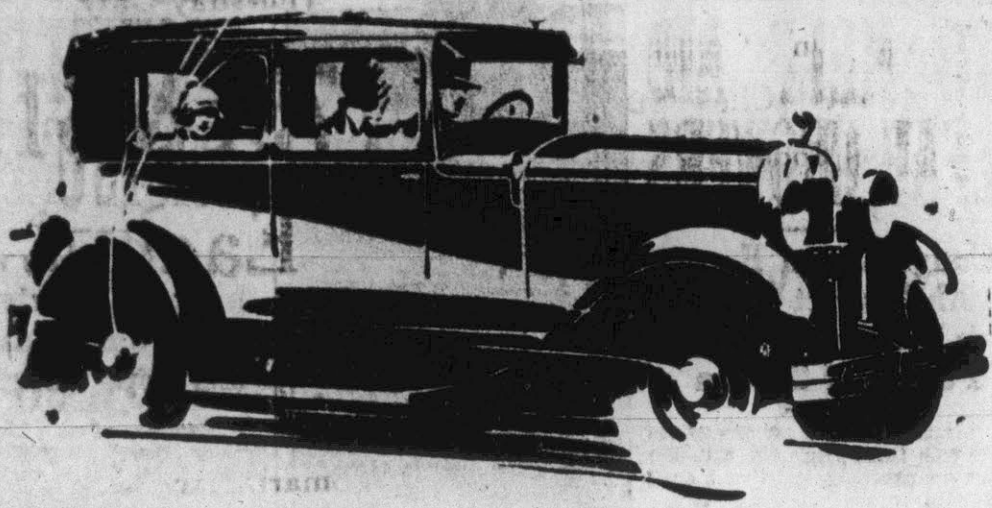

John and his bride met them in the very room where, on the morning of August 3, 1923, his father took the oath of office in succession to Warren G. Harding. Between visitors, Mrs. Coolidge made friends with Miss Aurora Pierce, who for many years kept house for Colonel John C. Coolidge, grandfather of her husband, and as they sat in the old-fashioned kitchen, they talked of the wedding and other things.

The bridal couple reached here at nightfall after a long motor trip from Windsor, Mass.

HANDKERCHIEF SHOWER FOR MISS MOYE

Mrs. W. L. Harrington was a charming hostess Tuesday afternoon, complimenting Miss Martha Moye, bride-elect. Masses of autumn flowers in shades of orchid and yellow formed a pleasing effect in the room where the party was held. The table appointments were in yellow. There were six tables of players.

Miss Marie Roof was awarded chignon handkerchiefs for making high score. Low score was made by Miss Martha Moye, who was given an evening handkerchief. Miss Eliza Grimes, of Washington, and Miss Sue Fountain, of Tarboro, were remembered with linen handkerchiefs.

Miss Jean Harrington, daughter of the hostess, presented Miss Moye with a chignon, which contained a shower of lovely handkerchiefs. Miss Moye, in her usual gracious manner, thanked each of the guests.

Mrs. Harrington also presented the honor guest with a piece of silver. A tempting frozen salad course was served by the hostess, with Mrs. Person Nicholson and little Miss Jean Harrington assisting.

NORFOLK COTTON EXCHANGE GIVES ADVICE TO GROWERS

In the interest of growers and those who merchandise cotton grown in eastern North Carolina and Virginia, we are writing to advise that there has been much more complaint this season than usual with regard to green, damp and gin-cut cotton. This is especially true of cotton handled in the states farther south, where it has been refused by mills, and subject to heavy damage claims when shipped to foreign countries.

With a view of saving the loss in value and confusion in handling this green, damp and gin-cut cotton, we are urging you to be very careful and make sure your cotton is in good condition before it is ginned.

No Error in Nelson Case. No error was found in the divorce case of Nelson vs. Nelson in an opinion handed down by the North Carolina Supreme Court today. This was the only decision returned in a case from this county.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE ANNOUNCEMENT

The Moose regular monthly entertainment for Tuesday evening, October 8, is cancelled, for regular business meeting instead, looking to preparation of and perfecting arrangements for the Legion Frolic to be held in Greenville, October 23rd, 1929. All members of local lodge are requested to be present, or you will miss something.

REGULAR PRAYER SERVICES PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Increased attendance at our last week's prayer services, gives us the hope that it will be better this evening. Let every regular, remind someone else of this service, and bring as many as you can. Our studies are in the Psalms, and the 86th this evening. Read it over before coming. Remember the hour, 7:30.

Mrs. Blount Club Hostess.

The Sans Souci Book club enjoyed a very interesting meeting on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. H. Blount, having a full attendance of members.

Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, the president, presided over a short business session. The roll was called and minutes of last meeting were read and corrected.

The new books of the year were distributed by the librarian and received much favorable comment. The librarian also made an effort to locate a few of last year's books, which have not been sent to the library.

Mrs. J. H. Waldrop had charge of the program for the afternoon and delighted all with her presentation of her subject, "Indian Folklore and Indian Songs." A splendid idea of Indian music was given in a summary of different facts—relating many songs and customs used by Indians in different stages of life—also informing us of the formation of different musical instruments which they use in producing their music.

After this she delighted the club with her rendition of three Indian songs—"By the Waters of Minnetonka," "Indian Love Call," from Rose Marie, and "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water."

In her usual manner, she sang sweetly, and the songs were immensely enjoyed.

The club was delighted to have two visitors, Mrs. W. C. Jones and Mrs. Arthur Ruffin.

While current events were being given, the hostess, assisted by her three daughters, served a delightful salad course.

Merry Matrons Club Meeting.

Farmville, Sept. 24.—Mrs. G. A. Rouse was hostess to the Merry Matrons on Tuesday afternoon. The home was lovely with its arrangement of dahlias, snapdragons and roses. The topic for the afternoon was "Principles of Decoration." Mrs. G. M. Holden read an interesting paper on "Color Harmony," followed by a paper on "Other Principles of Decoration," written by Mrs. Marvin Horton and read by Mrs. H. W. Turnage. After the program, an attractive contest was engaged in and table prizes which were lovely framed mottos on Home, were given to Mrs. J. M. Hoggood, Mrs. W. R. Willis, Mrs. Marvin Jones and Mrs. Roland Lang, for making the most words out of Color Harmony. A delicious salad course was served by the hostess. Special guests for the afternoon were, Mrs. P. M. Davis, Mrs. Hoggood Stark, Mrs. LeRoy Rollins, Mrs. J. I. Rollins and Mrs. J. W. Harrell.

Garden Club Meeting.

Farmville, Sept. 24.—Mrs. D. E. Oglesby was hostess to the Garden club on Monday afternoon at her home on Main street. In answer to the roll call, each member named her favorite flower and gave the reason for her choice. A report on the Year Book being compiled for the coming year, was given and standing committees appointed. Arrangements were made for the Chrysanthemum Show, which will be held the last of October. Mrs. Roccoe Fields read an interesting paper on "The Personality of a Garden." Miss De Visconti gave a short talk on Peonies. Mrs. P. E. Jones was a special guest for the afternoon. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Joyner.

MRS. A. S. BYNUM HOSTESS TO LITERARY CLUB

Farmville, Sept. 24.—The Farmville Literary club was delightfully entertained on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. A. S. Bynum at her home on Lang street. Mrs. J. W. Parker presided over the business session, at which time October 19 was set as the date to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the club, which will be in the form of a reception. New books for the year were distributed. The topic of the program for the afternoon was "Bjornson, a Dramatist of Social Problems." A paper on the life of the dramatist and his works, by Mrs. J. H. Darden, was read by Mrs. G. A. Jones. Miss De Visconti gave an interesting sketch of one of Bjornson's plays "Beyond Human Power." A delightful salad course was served after adjournment. A number of special guests also enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Bynum.

Parent-Teacher Association.

Farmville, Sept. 24.—The Parent-Teacher Association held its first meeting of the school year Friday, in the school auditorium. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Lloyd Smith, followed by reading of minutes last meeting. The president gave an address of welcome to the new teachers and old members of the faculty and to the 150 parents present. The standing committees were then appointed for the ensuing year—Membership, Mrs. Joel Moye, Mrs. J. O. Pollard, Mrs. A. B. Walters, Mrs. P. E. Jones, Mrs. Jack Taylor, Mrs. R. J. Wainwright, Mrs. Ben Carraway. Publicity, Mrs. G. A. Rouse, Mrs. A. C. Monk. Hospitality, Mrs. J. H. Harris, Mrs. Sallie Horton, Mrs. W. M. Willis, Mrs. B. S. Smith, Mrs. Annie Lang. Finance, Mrs. J. Warm Competition Shown In Contestant List Today

Today is Report Day for All Candidates; Office Open Until 8 O'clock

As The Reflector campaign enters the crucial days of the competition for the four automobiles and unlimited number of cash prizes, the famous election is witnessing ever increasing interest and effort among the contestants.

The fact that the first period and biggest vote schedule of the entire campaign will end next Monday night at 9 o'clock is likely responsible for the greater activity being shown. For some time now the published vote scores of candidates have been reflecting new forces forging toward the front in the race for the rich prizes. Today's list brings this factor even more strongly to attention.

It is certainly anybody's race for the four cars and cash awards. Very little margin separates those now in the leading roles from many further down the list.

As a matter of fact, much of the story is going to be told by Monday night, September 30, the end of the first period, for to permit the biggest vote values to pass without having taken full advantage of them will be fatal to the best chances built up in the early days of the campaign.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of trying to get the most of the available business when the vote credits are given in the greatest numbers. One subscription now means votes which are the equivalent of many of them later on in the campaign. A comparative table of such vote decrease is depicted in a full page advertisement today.

A full appreciation of the value of subscriptions by Monday night is essential and then automobile winners are bound to develop from those candidates who are able to do big things for themselves during this first period.

Home Agents to Meet at Ry Mt.

The agents of the Northeastern District will meet in the Presbyterian Sunday School Building at Rocky Mount, Friday and Saturday, September 27 and 28, when the year's plans will be discussed. This meeting, which is held annually, is in charge of Miss Pauline Smith, supervisor of this district.

Administrative problems will feature the discussions. Plans for the year will be checked and plans for the winter will be worked out by the agents and the specialists from State College, who will be present. These tentative plans are to be made by the County Councils in the various counties. Councils are composed of representative women from the clubs of the counties who have voted on the projects needed and wanted by the local clubs. The county plans will be approved in full by the councils before they are completed.

It is expected that the district slogan, "Make Half the Income Do the Work of the Whole," will be adopted again. Greater emphasis on "Make a Living First and Make Money Afterwards," correlated with a program for improved living conditions, both aesthetic and health, will feature the district plans, thus tying up the extension program with the governor's agricultural program. A special feature of the conference will be a talk, "Farm Home Standards," by Miss Rokahrn, National Home Management Specialist of the extension service, United States Department of Agriculture.

Agents who are expected to attend are: Miss Rokahrn, Washington, D. C.; Miss Helen N. Estabrook, State College; Miss Willie N. Hunter, State College; Miss Mary E. Thomas, State College; Miss Pauline Smith, State College; Miss Violet Alexander, Washington; Miss Laura Hazelbaker, Edenton; Miss Virginia Edwards, Currituck; Miss Alice M. QUINN MAY BE BIG LIGHT OF WORLD SERIES

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—(AP)—John Pius Quinn, the grand old man of the Athletics pitching staff whose claim to seniority of this whole team is disputed only by Connie Mack and Kid Gleason, is a pitcher of many curves but few words.

Only Jack knows how old he is and he will not tell. The record shows that he was pitching and getting paid for his efforts the year Gordon Cochrane was born and three years before Jimmy Fox discovered his toes.

Baseball books have to put down a year of birth to complete the record so the statistics list Quinn at 44. Opposing batmen scoff at this. "How?" they ask, "could any man grow as wise as Jack Quinn in a mere 44 years?"

Jack is one of the last of the baseball Mohicans in that with a few of his old cronies who were throwing spitballs before the moist deliver was legislated out of the game, he is permitted to continue the style. One can count them on the fingers of one hand now, Red Faber, Lefty Clarence Mitchell, Burleigh Grimes and the grand old man himself.

Quinn's fast ball of 20 years ago has passed and his change of pace now consists of a slow ball and "medium speed." He knows the spitter in reserve for the "clinchers" and as a constant threat. Players on the other clubs say he does not throw a spitter every time he puts his glove to his mouth, but they never know when the vexing delivery is coming up.

"Do you expect to start a game in the series?" Quinn was asked. "Don't know."

"If you do will you get a big thrill out of it?"

"Just a game."

"You have pitched before in the world's series?"

"Yes."

No other questions seemed likely to provoke more extended answers so Jack was abandoned as a promising subject for an interview.

His last world's series appearance was with the Yankees in 1921. He was defeated then but he is a better pitcher now than he was then. He won only eight games that season and he has already been credited with eleven victories in 1929. Last year he won 18 and he had 15 the year before.

Quinn is only a part of the great pitcher's names. His real name is John Pius Quinn but what is a name to a pitcher who has the curves of the grand old man.

Southern Association and Texas League to Begin Battles Today

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Battle for the 1929 baseball championship of the south gets under way here this afternoon in the tenth annual Dixie series with Birmingham upholding the Southern Association and Dallas representing the Texas League.

Starting hurlers this morning were problematical with both Johnny Dobbie of the Barons and Milton Strick of the Steers having at least three men ready for duty. Whitney Glazner, a former Baron, was regarded as Stock's most probable choice while Dobbie is expected to lead either Ray Francis or Ray Caldwell, both of them veterans, to the firing line. George Connally probably will start for the Steers if Glazner does not appear fit.

Betting odds on the series were virtually even today with most fans believing that Birmingham has more than an even chance to bring the championship to the Association. Only one Southern Association club, Mobile, has ever beaten the Texas champions. Birmingham lost to Houston last year.

The weather outlook this morning was gloomy; cloudy weather and occasional showers being forecast for the day. In event that the weather clears by afternoon, however, a record crowd of between 15,000 and 18,000 is expected to see the opening battle.

The second game of the series will be played here tomorrow with the teams traveling Friday to Dallas, where games are scheduled Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The game is set for Birmingham on Wednesday and the seventh, if necessary, will be decided by toss of a coin. In the event of rain the game will be moved up a day.

Begin Annual Shift of Training Camps

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Although the 1930 major league baseball season and preparations therefor are many months hence, the annual shift in training camps has set in.

The first shift was announced yesterday. Manager Stanley "Buck" Harris will lead his Detroit Tigers to Tampa instead of to Phoenix, Arizona, next February. J. A. Zeiler, field agent for Frank Navin, owner of the club, who made the announcement, said he completed negotiations for the use of Plant Field. He also said the St. Louis Cardinals were negotiating for a field on the west coast and may not return to Avon Park, Fla., next spring.

What effect the change will have on plans of President Clark Griffith of the Senators, was not known here, but it was believed unlikely he would be willing to have his team work out on the same lot as another American League club and that he will seek quarters elsewhere.

ZACHARY AND OTT FEATURE MAJORS PLAY

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

With the attention of fans and players alike centered upon Miller Huggins' fight for his life in a New York hospital, a solemn tone was evident along the big league trail yesterday as the afternoon's program was unveiled. Melvin Ott of the Giants and the veteran Tom Zachary of the Yankees shared such spotlight as there was. Ott with his forty-first and forty-second home runs and Zachary with his twelfth victory in a season which has brought him no defeat.

Ott slashed a ball into the right field seats in each of two games at the Polo grounds, and his drives were instrumental in bringing the Giants home in front of both encounters by 5 to 4 and 6 to 5. The two blows enabled the young New York outfielder to tie the National League record made by Rogers Hornsby in 1922 when the Rajah won the major league crown with 42 home runs.

The Yankees went to Boston yesterday to open a brief and inconsequential series, but their minds were with their stricken manager at St. Vincent's hospital in New York. The fallen champions nevertheless won from the Bostonians by 5 to 3 before a crowd of 8,000 fans celebrating the Hub's annual "Babe Ruth Day." The Babe failed to get a homer, despite a plea from the crowd to Boston pitchers to "Let him hit it." He however, got a single and a double.

When Willis Hudlin faltered against Ted Lyons and the White Sox in the ninth round at Cleveland yesterday Wes Ferrell rushed to the rescue and the Indians won by 7 to 4. Arthur Herring pitched Detroit to a 9 to 4 victory over the Browns at Navin Field. Alvin Crowder was his victim.

The Athletics and the Senators had an open date.

TEMPERATURES DROP AT SAVANNAH, GA.

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 25.—(AP)—A slowly falling barometer this morning heralded the approach of a tropical disturbance, believed centering north east of Nassau, Bahamas, moved toward the coast.

The barometer here at eight o'clock stood at 29.97, a fall of .09 since yesterday, when the reading was 30.06. Rainfall during the past twelve hours amounted to .04 of an inch and a moderate breeze of 14 miles per hour swept the city.

The local weather bureau had received no reports this morning of the progress of the storm, shipping generally held to port awaiting developments.

ALABAMA NOT SO CONFIDENT OF GRID TEAM

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Alabama, the first southern team to go to the Pacific coast and show the boys a thing or two in a football way, is making no plans to do its New Year frolicking in the Rose Bowl this year.

Nineteen lettermen—the largest collection in the southern conference—are back to gladden the heart of Coach Wallace Wade, but that worthy refuses to be cheered about the strength of his 1929 Crimson Tide until he discovers:

1—Whether "Plap" Suther, one of his best ball carriers, has completely recovered from injuries which kept him on the bench most of last season.

2—How a much patched up line is going to behave when the big guns begin popping along the front from Tuscaloosa to Knoxville.

Suther is in there scrimmaging every day just like nothing had happened, but Wade says he will be listed as an uncertainty until he comes through a couple of conference battles with no ill effects.

"You can't tell what will happen when that fellow is hit hard once or twice," he says.

From his assortment of 19 letter men the Alabama coach can find a young giant for every one of the roles caused by the departure of "Dumpy" Hagler, all-southern guard; Pierce and Skidmore, tackles, and Smith, end.

The Tide again will be handicapped by lack of an outstanding passer, but with Suther, functioning regularly, Wade can build a strong running attack around a quartet which includes the Mighty Tony Holm at full; Captain Hicks at quarter and Campbell at the other half.

But even with his woes, both fore and aft, Coach Wade manages to laugh long and loud when the other conference coaches predict in the newspapers that Alabama is a sure bet to win the championship.

"That's good," says Wade. "They pick me to win with the same team that Georgia Tech beat by three touchdowns last year. That is sure a good one. Haw, Haw."

"But maybe Tech is weaker." "Yes, maybe it is. Of course they've only got four all-southern men back—five with Speer, who also manages to make the all-American—but maybe they will be weaker. Five all-southern men isn't many, but it's just five more than I've got."

"And they've got Thomason and Mizell. If I had that pair I'd figure I had one leg on the championship before the season opens."

"Alexander says he's having a lot of trouble finding reserves," persisted the interviewer.

"And while he's doing that the rest of us are having troubles finding eleven men. That's just the difference," came back Wade.

SHARKEY AND LOUGHRAN IN FINE FETTLE

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey moved into New York today for the final outdoor audience to be granted heavyweights here for this season.

Heavier than ever before, the former king of the light heavyweights eagerly sought the opportunity of showing his wares against Sharkey. The Boston Tar was equally anxious to get his gloves on the Deborah Loughran whom he freely confesses is one fighter made to his very order. The entire matter will be thrashed out in fifteen rounds tomorrow night in the Yankee Stadium.

Victory will have more than ordinary significance to both battlers since Phil Scott, the massive Briton silenced for the time being at least the powerful guns of Victorio Campolo. The stage is now set for a three-cornered series, ending next winter on the sandy shores of Miami, between Scott, Max Schmeling, and the winner of tomorrow night's rumput with the ultimate victor the successor to the retired Gene Tunney as heavyweight champion.

Betting odds favor Sharkey to accomplish the downfall of the adonis of the Quaker city at a ratio of about 6 to 7 to 5. Indications were that these odds would hold at ringtime. Having watched Loughran box a victorious swathe through the 175-pound division the experts can't seem to see how the Philadelphia's light punches are going to stand off the rushes of the heavyweights who don't hit so often chiefly because they don't have to.

Turn the light on the Truth!

It's just naturally good tobacco—not "artificial treatment" that makes OLD GOLD gentle to the throat and better to the taste

No one cigarette-maker has any monopoly on the heat-treatment of cigarette tobaccos. For heat-treatment is neither new nor exclusive. It has been used for years by practically all cigarette-makers to "set" and sterilize their tobacco.

But OLD GOLD'S goodness does not depend on artificial treatment. It is the product of naturally good tobaccos . . . carefully selected for mildness, smoothness and flavor. Tobaccos made free of "throat scratch" by Mother Nature herself.

Try a package. You'll immediately get the thrill of this smoother and better cigarette. And you'll know then why OLD GOLD'S sales are ALREADY THREE TIMES GREATER than the combined growth of three leading cigarette brands during a like period of their existence.

Better Tobaccos make them smoother and better . . . with "not a cough in a carload"

SYNOPSIS: Tom Grenofen writes a letter to Veronica but it contains more than Laxton's message to the pseudo Cousin John. For Tom finally mentions a matter that has been in his mind ever since he first saw Veronica's flashing blue eyes. Somerfield and Tom deliver the treasures of the troublesome black bag to Laxton. He makes mysterious business of burying a package amid Potherbury's excavations and places it under a police guard. Three days later Veronica jumps off a train into Tom's arms—no accident this time. Veronica brings a companion, who was Miss Vandenessen, but now is Mrs. Redslade of New place. Veronica postpones her explanations but later that day, she and Tom are alone in the Woodcot garden—a proposal and an acceptance, happiness for two!

REDSLADE'S STORY

Somerfield stood the shock of the new relation between me and Veronica with his usual sangfroid when we told him at dinner that night.

At nine o'clock came an urgent message from Laxton demanding the instant presence of Somerfield and myself at the Lord Nelson. He took us at once to his room.

"Mr. Redslade!" said he.

A tall man rose from a chair at the table. I started back, unable to suppress a cry.

"Cousin John!"

Blind as it may seem, we had not till that moment dreamed of connecting the fugitive with Redslade. The legend of his death had been firmly established in our minds. But now explanations of the inexplicable rushed up in a flood. But also, with them, fresh conundrums.

Why had he masqueraded as Mr. Richard? Spent three years in a prison? Allowed his ancestral estate to be dissipated while he had one fortune lying in a Belgian bank, and another in gold and jewels apparently at his hand?

And above all, what was Veronica's part in the complication?

Laxton was speaking:

"I've arranged with Mr. Potherbury for Eastley to come to New place at half-past nine and meet us there. I think we shall then get to the bottom of Pell's riddle. But Mr. Grenofen and Mr. Somerfield ought to be put wise to the preliminaries, I think, eh?"

"It's a pretty rotten story," Redslade objected.

"Well, we needn't drag it out. This was how it shaped. Mr. Red-slade unexpectedly inherited New place when he was a youth in the army, where he struck up his close friendship with Pell. He did not come of age till the war was over.

Then he found himself the owner of an estate so encumbered that he could not keep it up. He got into the hands of the money-lenders, and finally he fell to the share of the firm of Smithins. They made an arrangement with him to discharge all the mortgages on New place and give him a new one—a real thumper.

"His lawyers were dead against the arrangement, but the sight of 10,000 pounds in cash was too much for him. Very soon he couldn't keep his interest. Then Smithins jumped on him.

"Mr. Redslade was ruined. Not long before he had met Miss Vandenessen and fallen in love with her. And that brings me to Pell and the Seabrokes—because it was Pell who introduced him to the Seabrokes at their apartment in the Rue Rogier, and there that he met Miss Vandenessen.

"You've already got the hang of Pell's identity—Philip Lincoln—an old acquaintance of Mrs. Seabroke in her younger days, a neighbor of Lincoln's mother. Pell, in two holidays in Belgium, had visited Mrs. Seabroke in Brussels and her daughter at Bruges.

"On the third visit, in 1924, he had his friend Redslade with him. Pell was a man of different social rank from Mr. Redslade—an accountant in the city. At various times, he made violent efforts to save Mr. Redslade from his besetting sin of gambling. They all failed.

"Now, you know that Pell and Mr. Redslade were together in Brussels in the summer of 1925. Pell had gone with his to Ostend at the most desperate point in his fortunes, just after the foreclosure on New place. Pell feared what Redslade might do—he tried to commit suicide. You know that the report of his death was accepted as a fact.

"But Pell rescued him that night. He chased his maddened friend along the digue from the Casino to the Quai des Pecheurs, where he went over into the water. Pell followed, dragged him ashore in the darkness of the railway pier, spent two awful days with him in one of the 'back slums' of Ostend, and finally took him off to Bruges in the hope that Miss Vandenessen would cure him of his melancholia.

"Miss Vandenessen was staying in Brussels with the Seabrokes. They went there, and unhappily found that Commander Seabroke, whom they both then met for the first time, had joined his family.

"You know Commander Seabroke. To him, Redslade as owner of New place was a desirable acquaintance. But when Pell brought to his house this ruined man, appearing to claim sympathy and the hand of his daughter's friend, Seabroke saw red. There was a terrific row.

"Pell took him away. But the report of his own death suggested to Redslade the conduct that caused all the trouble afterward. He would have one fling with his last few hundred francs. If he lost, he would stay dead.

"The same night was the night of the seven coups at the Kursaal. Mr. Redslade knew nothing of Marling's presence in the crowd if he was there. Neither did Pell.

"They did meet Marling on the boat next morning. He seemed anxious to avoid them, but they were full of a scheme for employing the windfall to come to some arrangement with Smithins, and they mentioned it to Marling. He would listen to nothing. Again Mr. Redslade made a false step. He told Marling he meant to remain dead till the question was settled, and that he and Pell were going to stop at the Lord Warden that night.

"At Dover they lost sight of him. What Marling did in the few hours between the arrival of the boat and 10 o'clock that night when the seuff took place on the cliffs we can only guess. There's something in the background of that.

"But the actual fact is that Mr. Redslade and Pell were attacked by three men whom they did not know and might have come badly off if Mr. Redslade had not been a bit of a brute and an expert with the upper cut.

"Laxton rubbed his chin and smiled with mock ruefulness.

"He got a bit too much weight behind it that time and laid out his man too permanently. The essential point is that when they chased the other men who ran away, they found three running, not two, and they overtook the third—who was Marling."

I gasped.

"Ah," said Somerfield. "Nasty person, the padre! But why—"

"Why didn't they mangle him? Once more, Mr. Redslade's inability to see that in this country a man can't stay anonymous without great risk to himself. He has to keep Marling out of the picture because Marling knows him. So he lets Marling go.

"After the chase they come and find the man they knocked unconscious. In a fit of mistaken conscientiousness they tell the police—they give their false names. And then the die is cast. That's irrevocable.

"When the man dies they are in the cart, and presently out of the cart into the jug. And all the rest follows as the night the day. I could moralize on it—but if I do we shall keep Mr. Potherbury waiting."

Redslade had fidgeted during the latter part of Laxton's recital. Now he jumped up.

"Shall we go and finish it off?" said he.

"Right away," Laxton replied.

"Pity that the only character missing from the play is Hamlet. Marling won't be there—I'll take the book of the words, Mr. Redslade."

Laxton picked up from the table the volume which had been lying for some days in my bookshelf, and we went out to visit New place Abbey.

Present Tobacco Situation Was Forecast Last Spring

By G. W. FOSTER

Head, Department of Agricultural Economics, North Carolina State College.

Prices being paid for flue-cured tobacco in the North Carolina markets are saying that they are unjustifiably low. In other words, the growers say that tobacco prices are being arbitrarily depressed and if economic forces were allowed to operate freely, the prices would be much higher.

In any attempt to explain the present market situation, the available supplies of flue-cured tobacco and the domestic and foreign demand must be considered. On April 13 of this year, I announced in the press of the State and published in the Progressive Farmer a forecast that prices of flue-cured tobacco would be lower in 1929 than in 1928.

This forecast was based on the following facts: First, production of flue-cured tobacco in the United States during 1928 was 23,436,000 pounds. This was one of the largest crops ever produced in the United States. In addition to this record production, there were very heavy carryovers, the stocks on hand July 1, 1928, being 564,989,000 pounds. The production and carryover giving a supply of 1,288,435,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco. This is probably the largest supply of flue-cured tobacco ever reported. I also estimated that the consumption for the year ending June 30, 1929, would probably not exceed 700,000,000 pounds. This subtracted from the total available supply would leave a probable carryover June 30, 1929, of 588,435,000 pounds. From the "Intentions to Plant" reports, which are available in March, it was evident that the production this year would not be less than 700,000,000 pounds. The carryover on hand June 30, 1929, plus the estimated production would give a supply equivalent to that of the year 1928. Thus a record supply two years in succession would in itself indicate that prices would not be higher than last year and in all probability lower.

We have available now an exact figure on the carryover and production of this year. According to the report of the United States Department of Agriculture, the production of flue-cured tobacco in the United States for 1929 will be approximately 752,325,000 pounds. The carryover will be about 590,000,000, or a supply available for the year 1929-30 of 1,342,325,000 pounds. This is an increase of approximately 54,000,000 pounds over last year.

Demand for Tobacco
Domestic consumption has not greatly changed during the past six years. For the year ending June 30, 1929, domestic consumption of flue-cured tobacco was 274,000,000 pounds. Consumption in 1923 was 1,000,000 less. For the period from 1923 to 1928 the domestic cigarette output increased at a rate of approximately 8 per cent per year. Inasmuch as the total domestic consumption of flue-cured tobacco has not increased during this period, it seems obvious that other types of tobacco have been used in making cigarettes, or less flue-cured tobacco is being used for other products. As indicated above, the supplies of tobacco for this season are definitely known. It is also known that the domestic demand will not be materially changed. From this, it follows, as a logical conclusion, that demand conditions in foreign countries will be the most important factor determining the prices for the remainder of this season.

Conditions in Foreign Countries
China is one of our largest foreign markets for tobacco. It will be recalled that last year conditions in China were such, during the early part of the season, as to depress prices in this country. Later conditions improved and as a result prices also improved. At the present time, the prospects are good for large takings of flue-cured tobacco by China. It appears that there are many factors responsible for the resumption of large shipments to the Chinese market. With the cessation of hostilities, transportation facilities have been greatly improved and the conditions in China have almost reached normal. Large foreign cigarette companies in China have established a very efficient sales organization and are pushing the sales of cigarettes. Increasing activities in factory operation in China will be a bullish factor. In addition, the uncertainty surrounding the policy of the Chinese government in raising taxes on cigarettes, which would materially affect cigarette consumption, has been removed. The tobacco import taxes have been stabilized to the point where they will not affect materially the consumption of cigarettes in China.

The situation is very well stated in the report from Mr. Nyhus, American Agricultural Commissioner located at Shanghai: "American exports of flue-cured tobacco to China, constituting the great bulk of Chinese takings, amounted to 24,656,000 pounds during January-June 1929 compared with 54,593,700 and 31,479,000 pounds respectively for the similar period of 1928 and 1927. The small exports during the first six months of the current year were due to exceptionally heavy shipments to China in 1928, particularly during the latter part of the year, when stocks were being accumulated in anticipation of increased import duties. Exports of cigarettes were 3,929,205,800,000; 4,030,121,000 and 2,828,771,000 pieces for the first six months of 1929, 1928 and 1927 respectively."

Economic conditions in other countries are practically normal. There is no evidence that the demand for flue-cured tobacco in European countries will materially change during the next few months. It should not be overlooked, however, that exports of flue-cured tobacco to the British markets have been declining in recent years. Our exports of flue-cured tobacco for the calendar year 1928 increased by 132,000,000 pounds over that of 1927. The total exports amounted to 435,000,000. However, exports to Great Britain, our principal export market, were about 4,000,000 pounds below 1927. In 1928 American tobacco comprised 78.5 per cent of the British tobacco imports, as compared with approximately 80 per cent in 1927 and 82 per cent in 1926. This decline in the amount of our tobacco taken by the British market is significant. In fact, it is a danger which the American grower may do well to recognize. While the figures should not be considered as alarming, yet they do suggest a readjustment of the production of flue-cured tobacco in this country.

Summary Statement:
There has been an increase in the supply of flue-cured tobacco of approximately 54,000,000 pounds. The depressing effect of this increase will be offset to some extent by more favorable conditions in China. However, the effect of this increase will not be immediate. Looking to the future, it would appear advisable, as emphasized in my report of April 13, that farmers should make drastic readjustment in acreage. It has argued that this is not a very satisfactory method of solving the tobacco problem, however, it is about the only one open to farmers at the present time. There is no reason to plant a large acreage when a smaller acreage will result in a much higher price. An effective cooperative association as has been proposed, might be helpful, but the farmers will still face the problem of adjusting the production to the demands of the market. This adjustment can only be made by farmers following closely the "Intentions to Plant" reports issued prior to planting time and the outlook reports giving the facts relative to supply and demand in this and foreign countries.—News and Observer.

The little black clock was standing on the desk in the back hall when the children were going to bed.

He put out his hands and waved to them.

"Hello, hello, hello," he called. "Remember, my magic never gives out. What about my turning myself way ahead tonight?"

"Gee! That would be great," John said.

"How far ahead?" the little black clock asked.

"Well, maybe a couple of hundred years," John suggested.

"Come along! A couple of hundred years it shall be!" the little black clock said.

He got down from the desk, his short legs managing very well.

"Why, where are we?" Peggy asked.

"I just turned the time ahead a couple of hundred years," the little black clock said, laughing.

"What's below?" John asked. "That little place down below," he repeated. "Don't you see?"

"Do you mean the earth?" the little black clock said.

"I mean the little place with the little houses and the little fences and the little fields. It looks like a tiny village," John explained.

"That's the earth," the little black clock said.

"Is this a hotel?" Peggy asked. "It's so huge."

"Is it at the top of a mountain?" asked John.

"No," said the little black clock, "we're not at the top of a mountain. And, yes, I suppose you would call this a hotel. In fact, it's called a hotel—air hotel, and one of the finest we could have visited."

"An air hotel?" the children repeated. "You wanted to go forward, didn't you? Well, we've come to one of the leading air hotels—and the earth is down below."

Peggy and John were almost beside themselves with excitement. "This is simply marvelous," they said. "Tomorrow—'The Air Hotel'!"

Nothing Newer than Today's Hudson

The greatness of Hudson value is expressed with unparalleled power in the way its NEWNESS stands out among the Newest and Latest models the industry offers. Here we find feature after feature of Hudson's origination, now offered in the new models of the more expensive cars.

Here we find, featured as new, such advantages as radiator shutters—first introduced and for years standard with Hudson.

Here we find Hudson type brakes, Hudson type shock absorbers. Counterbalanced crankshafts are much to the fore, which seek to approximate the efficiency and smoothness of the Super-Six principle.

Nothing has been produced to touch its value and price advantage. It is still the master car in performance and reliability.

And Hudson still is alone in offering the almost individual distinction of such wide color choices, at no extra cost. See and examine the new offerings of other makers by all means. Then come, compare and drive the Greater Hudson. You, too, must feel the spontaneous enthusiasm that has rolled up a landslide approval for its beauty, quality and value—expressed in sales that for the first seven months of 1929 exceed the total of the entire year preceding.

COTTON MARKET

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 3 points on the old October contract but generally 6 to 10 points higher on buying which appeared to be stimulated by reports of rains in the eastern belt and the tropical storm situation.

There was a good deal of near month liquidation largely in the form of switching to later deliveries which was evidently incident to the circulation of notices estimated at about 35,000 bales during the early trading.

After selling at 18.20 at the start, the new October contract advanced to 18.37, however, and the general market was steady with active months showing net gains of 5 to 11 points at the end of the first hour.

Private cables said that trade calling and coverage had reported hedging in Liverpool and reported an improved cloth business with the Continent, Africa, and South Africa.
