SUMMON MANY WITNESSES IN LOBBY PROBEJ. A. Arnold Appears Before Investigating Committee
Today

Washington, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The Senate lobby committee today began inquiry into reported plans to organize a southern Republican council "to hold in line" the southern states and among other exhibits placed in the records was a letter under the name of J. A. Arnold, manager of the Southern Traffic Association, discussing the place of the negro in southern politics.

In addition a document introduced into the record, which purported to give plans of the southern Republican council said, "the negroes in southern politics can best be eliminated through the election of negro Democrats to Congress from St. Louis, Chicago, Harlem and other colored districts." It added that "this matter is in capable hands."

The letter under Arnold's name was addressed to Vance Muse, a field man for the Tariff Association.

Before presentation of this letter Chairman Caraway had asked Arnold if he had assisted in the organization of the Republican council which was projected, the chairman added, "to hold in line" southern states. Arnold testified he had nothing to do with the formation of the council.

The letter as placed in the record read:

"I went with the darkey today to see Vice-President Curtis and he thought well of our negro congressman idea, but said it was a matter that should be taken up with Mr. Hoover and that he would talk with Hoover about it. They all seemed to want to get Hoover's idea about it first. Curtis said the thought of getting a better grade of negroes to lead in the south but I told him that would be the complete remedy."

"Our line of approach is much more acceptable to politicians and to negroes of equalizing by blackening the Democratic party than by whitening the Republican party, the negroes will go in revolt over the plan of kicking them out of the party or of leadership; they will have to take themselves out of the way for the present."

"Our talk is down the race problem line, they all see that the race problem must be solved first before anything further can be done, we have the best solution yet."

"Think you should get Dr. Lewis here on the path and start something; we will never get anywhere talking around in circles; if necessary to see Hoover before it starts off then go see him and get his decision."

Dr. Lewis was identified by Caraway as Dr. Burdette E. Lewis of Jacksonville, but Arnold asserted he did not recall whom he was.

Washington, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The Caraway lobby inquiry committee will resume tomorrow its efforts to determine whether the extensive and bitter controversy over the duty on sugar to be incorporated in the pending tariff bill has been accomplished by any objectionable attempts to influence the voting of members of Congress.

A long list of witnesses has been summoned, including government officials of trade organizations of the sugar industry and of individual sugar companies as well. Chairman Caraway regards the officials of trade organizations of the sugar industry and of individual sugar companies as well. Chairman Caraway regards the sugar dispute as one of the most important phases of the committee's inquiry and it is determined that the investigation will be vigorous and complete.

Witnesses were summoned today in an effort to dispose of odds and ends of the committee's work thus far before going into the sugar question. J. C. Bolton, commissioner of agriculture for the state of Mississippi, Thomas A. Hill, of Pine Bluff, Ark., treasurer of the National Council of State Legislators, and J. A. Arnold, of the Southern Traffic Association, were the witnesses.

The committee was anxious to question Bolton about a sum of money, $500, reported to have been given him by the Southern Traffic Association to bring a group of Mississippians to Washington last June for a meeting of commissioners of agriculture. Questions regarding the finances of the legislators' organization confronted Hill, and there was no announcement of the purpose of calling Arnold, who previously had spent the greater part of six days on the committee witness stand.

Probe Case of Jury Drinking
The Evidence

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 12.—(AP)—The South Carolina Supreme Court is considering a case in which a jury drank up the evidence against a man charged with violation of the prohibition laws. The question is whether the jury could rightfully return a verdict of guilty of possession of intoxicating liquors.

A jury in a lower court convicted George Buckhalter of possessing intoxicating liquors after it had spent three hours in deliberation and consumed 47 bottles of homebrew which was allegedly his.

Attorneys for Buckhalter argued today that consumption of the fluid served to make the jurors witnesses and deprived them of the title of jurors.

WILL OUTLINE
FARM PROGRAM
IN PITT COUNTYPublic Meeting Called at Court House
Tomorrow at 10:00
O'clock

The Pitt County Board of Agriculture and the county farm agent in co-operation with the Agricultural Extension Division of State College are calling a meeting of farmers, bankers, merchants and professional men at the court house tomorrow at 10 a. m., for the purpose of outlining an agricultural program for Pitt county.

This is an open meeting and any citizen of Pitt county interested in the future welfare of Pitt county's greatest industry—farming—is not only invited, but urged to attend this meeting.

Troy Ferguson, district agent for the northeastern district, will discuss the needs of such a program based on the present cropping system of this county. C. F. Harvey, Sr., of Kinston, has been invited to discuss the relationship of the business interests to such a program. After which a round of table discussion as to methods and means of putting such a program into practice will be held. Constructive suggestions will be welcome from anyone attending this meeting.

We hope to be able to interest the farmers of Pitt county in a program that will help to prevent financial depressions such as we are going through at the present time.

CONTINUES INVESTIGATION OF FARMER'S DEATH

Marshall, N. C., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Sheriff Ramsey of Madison county today continued his investigation into the killing of Ambrose Randall, Madison county farmer, Herman Anderson, 20, who is alleged to have quarreled with Randall about attentions the young man had been paying to Randall's daughter is held in the county jail. Anderson has made no statement.

Prices Of Leading Stocks
Break to New Low Levels
On N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The stock market closed at a new bottom today after a fresh flood of liquidation had carried prices of scores of leading issues down $1 to $12 a share. Larger declines were recorded in a few ordinarily inactive specialties. One hundred stocks sold at new low prices for the year. The ticker was running more than an hour late when the closing gong sounded.

New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Prices of leading stocks broke sharply to new low levels for the year on the New York stock exchange today when the brief rally which followed an opening decline quickly petered out. Scores of issues were carried down $2 to $20 a share while American Express, making its first appearance since January 1, dropped $106 a share below the previous quotation at $205.

Total sales in the first two hours were 4,234,000 shares as contrasted with 1,644,100 in the same period yesterday, with the ticker running nearly an hour behind the market. New low records for the year were established by nearly a hundred stocks. The list included U. S. Steel common, American Can, General Electric, International Harvester, National Business Machines, International Business Machines, Western Union, May Department Stores, Gillette Safety Razor, Commercial Solvents, Air

MURDER CASE POSTPONED TO
NOVEMBER 18Illness of Witness
Causes Delay in Hearing of Alleged Killer of Rothstein

Criminal Courts Building, New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The trial of George A. McManus, for the murder of his gambler associate, Arnold Rothstein, was adjourned today until November 18, because of the illness of an important state witness.

The ill witness is Alvin Thomas, better known as "Titanic" Thompson, and alleged to be one of the men with whom McManus and Rothstein played cards a few days before the shooting and where, it is said, Rothstein lost heavily to McManus.

One juror was sworn on motion of defense counsel. Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., then announced adjournment until 10:30 a. m., next Monday.

Court had hardly opened before Assistant District Attorney George Broderick arose and read an affidavit from Milwaukee, Wis., physician that Thomas was a patient in the Milwaukee hospital there and probably would not be in fit physical condition to come to New York for a week or ten days.

State and defense counsel then retired and agreed to the adjournment of six days.

McManus, a large florid faced man, sat smiling inside the bar rail during the day's short session. He was dressed in a blue suit, white shirt and blue tie. He appeared to be in good health.

McManus has been free on $50,000 bail since last March after he had spent four months in Tombs prison. Gilbert E. Taylor was the juror chosen to be sworn. Immediately after he had taken the oath Judge Nott declared an adjournment.

Only the telegrams and the battery of newspaper reporters assigned to the trial, were allowed in the court room today, the public being barred by rows of blue-coated police who guarded all the corridors leading to the court room where the trial had begun.

Indiana Man Held
for Looting Banks

Jeffersonville, Ind., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Accused of looting five central Indiana banks since his release on parole from the state reformatory last May, Gene Oliver, 25 year old former college student, was held in the Clark county jail here today.

Oliver was captured by Sheriff Hal K. Hughes late yesterday in the state forest preserve near Henry, Ind., after an automobile chase in which several shots were fired. With him were his wife, Josephine, 23; his brother, Gail, 17, and Gail's wife, Burnette, 17.

The chase started when the four were recognized on the street here. Mrs. Gene Oliver, red headed daughter of a Jeffersonville police sergeant, explained they had come to this city because she was "sick to see her mother."

Commander Dave Moore paid tribute to the spirit of patriotism that caused the people of Greenville and Pitt county to join the Legionnaires so wholeheartedly in celebrating the signing of the Armistice, and at the suggestion of A. B. Corey, chairman of the program committee of the celebration, a rising vote of thanks was extended to the Tobacco Board of Trade and the Greenville Merchants Association for the influence which they had used in bringing about a general cessation of business for the day.

Attention was called to the fact that Greenville and Kinston were the only two markets in Eastern Carolina that suspended sales in observance of the day, Greenville having taken the lead in the closing movement at a meeting of the Tobacco Board of Trade a few days prior to the celebration.

Judge W. A. Darden introduced the speaker of the day, declaring that he really needed no introduction to a people among whom he had labored years ago as pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church of Greenville and commander of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion.

Mr. Darden told of the brave spirit of Dr. Turner during his long service as chaplain in the American Expeditionary Forces overseas, and of the courage and

Greenville Stages Biggest Armistice Day Celebration
Since Ending of World War

Paying splendid tribute to the men who served in the World War, Rev. J. B. Turner, of Raleigh, pastor of Hayes-Barton Baptist church, delivered the principal address of the Armistice Day celebration conducted in this city yesterday under the auspices of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion.

The speaker graphically recounted the closing days of the titanic struggle on foreign battlefields and declared that the flower of young American manhood had not died in vain. He appealed to his hearers to continue to bear the "flaming torch" which the heroes had flung to them when they laid down their arms, and urged them to carry on that the ideals of America might live forever.

The address came as a climax to one of the greatest celebrations staged here since the ending of the war. A general closing of the tobacco market, banks, courthouses and stores marked the observance, and hundreds of people attended the various exercises that had been provided for the day. Although the day was cloudy and leaden skies at times gave forth threat of rain that never came, it failed to dampen the ardor of the populace and the program was carried out without the slightest interruption.

Flags dotted the main business streets of the city, and from each end of Tar river bridge, which several months ago was dedicated to Pitt county men who served during the World War, a single flag floated in the breeze conveying the spirit of patriotism that fired the hearts and souls of the entire citizenship.

The program opened with a magnificent parade at 10:30 o'clock from the Atlantic Coast Line depot to the Eastern Carolina Teachers College where the principal exercises were held. The pageant was headed by members of the district highway patrol and the local police department who were followed by all war veterans of the local military unit, and the artillery trucks and guns. After the exercises at the college, a football game between Greenville and Tarboro was provided at the West Greenville stadium and a picture was shown at White's theatre both afternoon and night.

The exercises at the college were inspirational and the large auditorium was comfortably filled with people from various parts of the county. The high school band gave a brief concert, after which the exercises opened with a song by the college girls. Rev. E. I. Hixman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, delivered the opening prayer during which "taps" was sounded by a lone bugler stationed in the far end of the auditorium.

Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, known throughout the county as the "Sweetheart of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion," rendered two solos, numbers that gripped the heart strings of the entire audience, and elicited deafening applause. She sang "The Long, Long Trail," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Eugenia Thomas, director of public school music of the college.

Commander Dave Moore paid tribute to the spirit of patriotism that caused the people of Greenville and Pitt county to join the Legionnaires so wholeheartedly in celebrating the signing of the Armistice, and at the suggestion of A. B. HAROLD HALL
TESTIFIES IN LA VARRE CASEFormer Associate
Tells of Operation of Newspaper Chain in Georgia

Macon, Ga., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Cross-examination of Harold Hall by counsel for his former associate, William La Varre, today opened the hearing in which a Varre is rendering to Pope F. Brock, special master, an accounting of $875,000 he received from the International Paper and Power Company to purchase four Georgia and South Carolina newspapers.

Repeating statements made at a previous hearing, Hall said he had received only a little more than $21,000 of the total fund, and that approximately $11,000 of this amount was not fully accounted for in his records. La Varre's account, according to counsel for Hall, also fails to show disposition of the entire amount of the balance of the $875,000 and Brock is endeavoring to adjust the apparent difference.

Under questioning by Charles J. Bloch, of counsel for La Varre, Hall denied that his only duties in connection with the newspaper enterprises consisted of managing the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle. In explanation of some of his expense items, he told of numerous business trips in Georgia and South Carolina, and also to New York and Washington at the time of the Federal Trade Commission inquiry into the activities of the International Paper and Power Company.

On direct examination, Hall testified that he had never charged his household expenses in Augusta to the partnership account, and he said there had been no agreement with La Varre that the latter could make similar charges against the account. La Varre testified yesterday that he had paid his personal and household expenses out of the paper company's funds, but denied the existence of any partnership account with Hall. Controversy over the partnership issue was the basis of Hall's recent suit against La Varre, in which Hall was declared an equal partner in the newspaper transactions.

Hall stated also that he had drawn no salary since last June. He said he had financed himself through sale of personal property. La Varre then took the stand to continue his detailed explanation of disbursements during operation of the Columbia, S. C. Record and the Spartanburg, S. C. Herald and Journal. Accounts of the Augusta Chronicle were received at the opening session of the hearing yesterday.

FORMER POLITICAL FIGURE
PASSES AT CAPITAL CITY

Raleigh, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Hill E. King, 82, Confederate veteran and well-known political figure in North Carolina years ago, died at his home on Lassiter Mill road late yesterday. Mr. King was a member of the 67th Company of the Third North Carolina regiment.

Back in 1885 and 1887 he represented Onslow county in the State Legislature. He served as door keeper for the House of Representatives in 1889, served as principal clerk in the Senate in 1893 and 1897 and from 1897 to 1899 was clerk on the board of agriculture.

Trial of Strikers Delayed
At Marion as Judge Cowper
Makes Grand Jury Charge

Marion, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Trial of the six men charged with rebellion against the State and conspiracy to riot was delayed this morning as Judge G. Vernon Cowper, presiding, charged the grand jury regarding charges against eight deputy sheriffs, accused of murder, and thirty-seven strikers, held for rioting and rebellion against the State.

The six to go on trial today are Alfred Hoffman, organizer for United Textile Workers of America; Will Russell, W. L. Hogan, Fred Fowler, Del Lewis, all strikers and J. Hugh Hall, resident of Marion. Hall was he a union member. He is not an employee of the mill nor was represented by counsel.

The charges against the deputy sheriffs and the 37 strikers grew out of the shooting of six union members on Oct. 2.

A special venire of 100 men, called from Rutherford, an adjoining county, was in the McDowell Superior court this morning ready to be summoned.

The labor disturbances here followed strikes called in the two Cincinfield mills and Marion Manufacturing company's plant by the United Textile Workers of America, a branch of the American Federation of Labor.

Judge Cowper charged the grand

German Novelist
Wins Nobel Prize

Stockholm, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Thomas Mann, widely known German novelist, whose best known work is "The Magic Mountain," has been awarded this year's Nobel prize for literature.

Among those whose names have been mentioned as possible candidates for the prize were Sinclair Lewis and Thornton Wilder, American writers; Gilbert K. Chesterton and John Galsworthy, of Great Britain; Maxim Gorky, the Russian; Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian; and Erich Remarque, German writer.

OUTLINE PLANS FOR SERVICES
THANKSGIVINGAnnual Services of City Churches Will Be Held at Christian Church

The annual Thanksgiving services of all churches of the city will be held at the Eighth Street Church of Christ, November 28, at 10:30 o'clock. It was decided at a recent meeting of the local Ministerial Association.

The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Thomas E. Beaman, pastor of the Free Will Baptist church, and an elaborate musical program will be rendered by members of the Christian church choir.

The Ministerial Association also decided to join the Memorial Baptist church in an invitation to the Baptist Assembly to hold its 1930 convention in Greenville in celebrating the founding of the convention in the local church one hundred years ago.

The Association also considered an evangelistic visitation campaign to be conducted in this city during the month of January. An experienced man will be in charge of the campaign, and a personal house canvass will be made throughout the city.

Much interest is centered about the annual Thanksgiving service, and it is hoped to have one of the largest congregations of years to participate in returning thanks for the manifold blessings bestowed upon the community during the year. The service last year was well attended and the program was very inspirational.

Twenty Ton Stone
Crashes Thru New Building in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—A 20-ton stone crashed through seven floors to the basement of the new 70-story Bank of America building in Wall Street today when a lifting cable broke under the strain of the heavy load. It could not be learned immediately if any one had been killed or injured.

The stone fell with a series of terrific crashes as it broke through floor after floor.

Some workers in the financial district were panic-stricken as they thought at first the noise was caused by bomb explosions.

Girl Suicides
By Jumping
From Plane

Valley Stream, N. Y., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Miss Ruth Rockwell, 18, of Philadelphia, committed suicide by leaping 2,000 feet from an airplane which she hired at the Curtiss Airport yesterday.

She explained her act in a note which was found in her purse in the cabin of the plane. The note read:

"Most people end their lives because something sad has happened to them. I end mine because it seems not only futile, but wrong to go on existing. I blame no one and feel I have no enemies. I will probably be considered insane as any one taking his life is supposed to be slightly insane."

"I would like to send my regards to Miss Sheers in Drexel Seminary at Carmel, N. Y., my check for $175 in the suitcase in the closet at home may help pay my burial expenses. I am very happy now."

"I am wondering if the newspapers will decide to devote any space to me. I am wondering if I will find time to think of the past as I whirl through space as it is said that a drowning man does when struggling in the water. I am wondering if I will find anything in death. If so, what?"

"Everything has been discord when I long for harmony. Maybe yet I will find it, maybe sweet music."

"If I find any sort of life or corresponding time after death, I will try to communicate with my immediate relatives at 9 o'clock some evening for a while."

"During my life time, I think my one fault was deception. I have lied repeatedly about small things but unfortunately I forgot what these small things were. I have no guilty conscience whatever. I feel free."

Miss Rockwell went to the airport from the home of her brother, Donald Rockwell, in Yonkers, N. Y., with whom she has been living recently.

"During my life time, I think my one fault was deception. I have lied repeatedly about small things but unfortunately I forgot what these small things were. I have no guilty conscience whatever. I feel free."

Miss Rockwell went to the airport from the home of her brother, Donald Rockwell, in Yonkers, N. Y., with whom she has been living recently.

In the operations office of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service she told William B. White, traffic manager that she wanted to fly high.

"I asked her how high," he said, "and she only replied 'real high.'"

"I asked her if 20,000 feet would be high enough and she answered in the affirmative. I told her the charge for such a flight would be high."

"Well, she said, 'I just wanted to go for a $5 flight, that is all I have.'"

Edward F. Booth, the pilot who was assigned to fly the small cabin monoplane placed at the girl's disposal, in a statement told how she questioned him regarding the operation of the doors before they took off and said he assured her that the doors operated as ordinary doors. He said she also asked if he would lose his head if anything unusual occurred in the air, to which he shook his head negatively.

"I took off in a large circle and made altitude," said Booth, "when at about 1,500 feet I looked back and saw that the passenger had her eyes tightly closed. Thinking that possibly she was frightened by a first flight, I again tried to speak to her and reassure her that everything was all right. As I turned the second time she opened her eyes and asked for our altitude. I said we were about 1,500 feet. She indicated that she wished to go higher, so I continued a gentle climb, turning back over the Curtiss Airport from the north."

"At about 2,000 feet I felt the ship rise as if caused by rough air. That surprised me as the air was smooth. It then occurred to me that when a door is opened the ship will rise slightly and veer. I then looked back to see the open door, caught a glimpse of the passenger falling through space about 30 feet away."

Booth led airport officials to the spot where the body was found about a mile north of the airport.

Miss Rockwell graduated from Drexel Seminary last June. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean W. Rockwell, of Philadelphia.

Her brother said his sister had done some writing. He said she was fond of reading and had done some writing. He said she "rarely lost for social activities, was very moody at times and her spirits vacillated from one extreme to the other."

Make Rockefeller Dines
Lakewood, N. J.—The wealth of two members of the police force has been increased by eleven shiny Rockefeller dimes. John D. Sr., arriving for a three-weeks stay before going to Florida, ran into two officers outside church. Upon inquiry one revealed that he was childless but that his parents lived with himself and wife. The other had five children.

TO OBSERVE EDUCATION WEEK HERE

Parents Are Invited to Visit Schools to See What Children Are Doing

This is Education Week—a time in the history of our schools when every parent should have his main interest in the education of the boys and girls. Some time during this week every parent should make an effort to visit the school which his children are attending. It is a matter of national concern that homes should function successfully. Success or failure lies in the hands of fathers and mothers who are the partners in developing family life. Visit your school, find out for yourself that your child is in the right kind of a school.

Home and School Day:
Education: For worthy home membership.

Slogan: Every teacher in North Carolina in a pupils home for the evening.

Purpose: To bring school and home together by giving a mutual understanding and appreciation of one another to fathers and mothers and teachers and pupils.

"Surely there is no period on which the influence of home or school is more significant than the years 4-6. The kindergarten breaks the abruptness of the entrance upon school life. It reduces retardation and secures regular progress in later school life.

"The life of the individual after the childhood days is but a reorganization of the child life, a reinterpretation of the child experience, are building of the child world, and his later experiences are unalterably affected by his earlier. I believe we have not fully realized the importance of the kindergarten as an instrument of education, mainly because we have not recognized the importance of child training."

Definitions of education which indicate from time to time, a shifting emphasis on first one and then another phase of the subjects have made little or no impression on parents. Education is now generally understood as something more than what is gained by spending a few hours daily in school. Parents have the actual or nominal supervision of children between birth and 18 years of age, 151,360 hours, while teachers have them during the same period only 6,300 hours.

Education begins with a mother's look; with a father's nod of approbation, or sign of reproach; with a sister's gentle pressure of the hand; a brother's noble act of forbearance; with handful of flowers in green dells, or hills, and daisy meadows; with bird's nest admired, but not touched; with humming bees and glass beehives; with pleasant walks in shady lanes and with thoughts devoted, in sweet and kindly tones and words, to nature, to beauty, to acts of benevolence, to deeds of virtue, and to the source of all good—to God himself.

J. S. FICKLEN IS SPEAKER AT ROTARY CLUB

President of Tobacco Board of Trade Discusses International Relations

J. S. Ficklen, president of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, was the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Rotary club last night. He spoke on the subject of "International Relations" and brought out many facts in this connection.

Mr. Ficklen confined his remarks principally to a discussion of international relations as they affect the tobacco industry. He pointed out that 75 per cent of the tobacco sold on the Greenville market was shipped to foreign countries, and said that friendly relations was absolutely necessary in the exchange of business with the foreign nations. He also showed how other products produced in the United States were affected by foreign buying and urged that more attention be given to increasing the spirit of friendship between this government and those across the Atlantic.

The program last night was in charge of the Foreign Relations committee. President F. C. Harding presided. The usual supper and many numbers were enjoyed.

The club adopted a resolution petitioning the State Highway Commission not to destroy the pavement at present laid from the Farmville road near Lang's Cross Roads after the new bar" curve which will be built in the near future is completed. It was pointed out that by leaving a portion of the present concrete road, instead of completely destroying it would facilitate travel and shorten the distance between Greenville county and this locality.

E. F. Arnold, director of the Pitt County Farm Department, spoke on the subject of carrying. He read an invitation to attend the formal opening of the Foremost Dairy Products Company at Charlotte Thursday. This dairy concern, he explained, is one of the branches headed by J. C. Penny, and the first to be opened in North Carolina. Mr. Penny, he said, is contemplating the establishment of a similar plant in Eastern North Carolina, and Pitt county has been invited to the Charlotte meeting in order that they may have the opportunity of stressing the possibilities of this locality for a plant of this kind.

The club appointed a committee

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE AIR TAXI
By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Here we are!" said John. He and Peggy had come to meet the Little Black Clock.

"That means we must be starting," the Little Black Clock said. "Just wait half a jiffy."

They waited half a jiffy. Peggy time because she started to say "half a jiffy" and before she was half through saying it the Little Black Clock was ready.

He was standing on his short legs, little white face looking so eagerly about him.

"Oh, how glad I am," he said, as they started off, "that I accepted the magic offered to me so that I have the power to turn the time backward or forward to any time at all."

"I don't mind it at all if the rest of the world or the household sees that I am always 7 o'clock and that I don't appear to go."

"Of course not," John agreed. "It was certainly lucky for us that you said you'd choose the magic rather than just keeping the ordinary time."

"Here it comes."

"What?" the children asked.

"The taxi. I hailed one."

"But it looks like an airplane," John insisted.

"It is," grinned the Little Black Clock. "It's an air taxi."

"I've turned the time ahead a few years. Jump it!"

THE TAXI RIDE

"It's the quickest way," the Little Black Clock said. "Particularly," he added, "if one wants to go to some place in a hurry."

They were seated in the airplane. The pilot was going up now.

"They have taxis for one passenger, too," the Little Black Clock said. "But of course, such a taxi would not do for us—there are three of us."

How quickly the air taxi traveled! Now and again they bumped quite badly over the air bumps.

"They're a bit careless sometimes, these taxi drivers," the Little Black Clock said. "But they know how to drive well. They don't always slow down for the bumps as some people think they should."

The air taxi was going down to earth again. They had landed, and in what a small space the taxi was able to land!

Just as the driver was pulling down his meter along came some other people.

They didn't seem to notice John or Peggy or the Little Black Clock.

"Their one idea seemed to be to get the taxi. 'You're not engaged, are you?' one of the people asked the taxi driver."

"Not now," he answered, "though I have to go for a call several hundred miles away in a couple of hours."

"That's all right. We only have to go to the next town," the person answered. In they go and the air taxi was soon up in the air with them.

"What a funny world it's becoming," Peggy said.

"Think so?" questioned the Little Black Clock.

Women Have Something to Say! AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has ridiculed into oblivion that ancient prejudice which excluded women from a voice in council. Today, in millions of homes, the delicious flavor of LUCKY STRIKE fills the room as the family group respects the opinion of its women folk.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

16c Per Pound Advance Basis Middling 7-8 Inch, On COTTON

THIS IS MADE POSSIBLE THROUGH THE ASSISTANCE OF THE FEDERAL FARM BOARD IN EXTENDING US A LOAN OF $2,500,000 AT A RATE OF INTEREST OF 3-5 PER CENT.

Mr. Cotton Producer, will you continue to dump your cotton on an already badly depressed market or will you place your cotton in our reasonable pool and cooperate with us in our effort to obtain better prices for you through orderly marketing?

Members can draw twelve cents per pound the day cotton is delivered, and as soon as samples are received and cotton is classified a check will be sent to members bringing the advance to sixteen cents, basis middling 7-8 inch.

The differences you are entitled to for grades above middling will be included in your check, also one-half of the premiums for staple, based on the daily Memphis market.

Today (Nov. 6) this 16c basis would mean we would (25 pts. up for strict middling advance 16.75 for strict (50 pts. (1-2 of premium) for inch staple. Middling, one inch (16.75 staple.

These differences and premiums are subject to change.

Our contract carries a withdrawal clause. Any member not satisfied can withdraw after delivering one year's crop.

We also have the optional pool in which the member can sell any day that he desires. Advance at present on optional pool cotton is 12c a pound.

Former members may rejoin without paying a membership fee; new members $4.00.

For further information see our nearest Receiving Agent, Warehouseman, or Field Representative; or write the Raleigh office.

BALL CHANGED TO BAWL.

Par said, "Git to work, Sam." Ma said I didn't have to. So what in the world was I gwine to do?

Here's what I did To get out of it all, I just slipped away to play a game of ball.

Oh, boy! we had joy. I knocked me a home run, And I made it, too. Ge whizz, we had fun.

Until—yes, until, Something grabbed me, yes, sah! I didn't know what 'twas, But I soon found 'twas Pa.

He led me to the shed. My britches sang a tune, And I had more "bawl" Than I wanted that noon.

COUSIN, LATE R. J. REYNOLDS, LAUDS SARGON

"I wish I could tell every one of my friends over the South how much I've been benefitted by Sargon."

"I was in a street car wreck eighteen months ago and the shock completely undermined my nervous system. It was impossible for me to get a good night's rest, there was such a ringing noise in my head, and my legs ached so bad. I was losing weight and strength steadily when I started Sargon.

"Five bottles built me up from 130 pounds to 145 and every pain I had disappeared! That ringing noise in my head cleared up. I sleep fine and my strength and vitality have been completely restored. I used the Sargon Pills along with the tonic and the two medicines together are the finest I ever took in my life."

The above statement was made by William Reynolds, of Clarkson, Ga., who is Atlantic District Sales Manager for the Texas Oil Company, and a cousin to the late R. J. Reynolds, Tobacco magnate.

GOOD CROWD AT UNION PRAYER MEETING LAST SATURDAY EVENING

"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" Christ's question to Simon Peter, after His death and resurrection, was the scripture back ground for the message delivered by Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the Presbyterian church, to a good sized crowd at the union prayer meeting last Saturday night in the Woodmen Hall on Evans street, sponsored by the laymen of the various local churches.

Mr. Harden said that the best way for a Christian to show that he loves Jesus Christ, is to do something for him. "Jesus said to Simon Peter, 'Feed my sheep.' Jesus says to us today 'work.' There are many people who have taken a stand for Christ, who have been converted from a sinful life to a spiritual life, who have gone back into sin; some only a short ways; others deeper. We should realize that even though we have gotten off on the wrong path, that Jesus loves us still. Just because we forget Him for a while is no reason that he has forgotten us."

Mr. Harden made a plea to those present to not let Satan keep them from Jesus, if they had gone astray. "We'll all fall short of doing what our Lord would have us do; but let

WOULD BRING PROSPERITY.

The announcement that a branch of the Foremost Dairy Products Co., a national concern headed by J. C. Penney, might be located in eastern North Carolina, should spur citizens of this county to action in behalf of securing this establishment for our county. Mr. Penney, in addition to his various interests in the mercantile field, has long been interested in greater milk production as a health measure in the various sections of the country and has been a great help in aiding communities to accomplish this goal by making the dairying business profitable for them by establishing ready markets for their surplus supply. On next Thursday Mr. Penney's organization will hold a formal opening of its plant in Charlotte, the first to be located in this state, and at that time representatives of this city will confer with the company officials present in behalf of a survey of our county with the idea of establishment of the eastern branch here.

Such a movement should have the heartiest support of every person in our community, for surely the bringing of such an industry to our county would prove a great benefit to all of us. Once the officials of the organization are persuaded to make a survey of our county we have little doubt that we can get the plant, for our section is most suitable for the dairying business and if there ever was a community that needed to follow this line of activity our community does. We have reached the time when we must quit depending entirely upon our tobacco and cotton crops for our living and, in our opinion, dairying is our most promising venture.

Just a few days ago a resident of one of the counties of eastern Tennessee advised us that the farmers of his county were receiving approximately $100,000 a month from their dairying, in addition to the money they receive during harvest time from their other money crops, and with such conditions, he said, "we don't hear much about the prices of tobacco."

Your section is equally suitable for the dairying business," he said, "and I hope that you put it over, for it will mean prosperity for everyone in your section."

We repeat this conversation just to enlighten our people as to what dairying means to other sections and to impress upon them the necessity of such an industry in our county. With recent announcements of establishment of cream routes in our county, followed by announcement of the possibility of a creamery products establishment here, it appears that our opportunity to get into the dairying business is at hand, and if we fail to grasp this opportunity we have but ourselves to blame for our future financial stress.

ABOUT

Greenville observed Armistice Day yesterday with the greatest celebration since the signing of the armistice eleven years ago that brought to an end the most gigantic struggle in history of the world. The exercises were very appropriate and reminded one most vividly of the days when American soldiers came marching from foreign battlefields after conquering the German hosts and making the world safe for democracy.

It was only fitting and proper that the town should observe the day as it did. It showed the former service men that we are truly grateful of the sacrifices which they made when they left their businesses to enter the military field. It emphatically expressed our appreciation of the supreme sacrifices which countless thousands of men made—men whose graves now dot the landscape on Flanders Field. We may continue to observe Armistice Day until the end of time, but we shall never be able to repay the debt we owe those men who gave their all that civilization might not perish from the earth through the domination of German hosts. It was a monumental task these men took upon themselves in helping the crushed forces of England and France turn defeat into victory, and their deeds of heroism will live until everything else has faded into oblivion.

So we say that it matters not how much we celebrate in observance of Armistice Day, we shall never be able to do more than show our gratitude to the men who fought and suffered, and who will continue to suffer until the grim reaper calls them to join the hosts who fill lonely graves on Flanders Field.

Let us not be forgetful of the significance of Armistice Day, and each year strive to make it truly representative of the nations which have bled to bring us peace.

It is gratifying to note that plans have been tentatively accepted for the Sheppard Memorial library, and that construction work will actually get under way within the next several weeks. The building will fill a long-felt need of the community, and should meet requirements of the city for years to come. It will be among the most handsome structures in the state, and should be the pride of the entire citizenship.

The building is the gift of Mr. Harper D. Sheppard, of Hanover, Pa., as a memorial to his father, a native of Pitt county. It is an appropriate memorial and will shed glory over the name of him to whom it is dedicated.

The structure will not only fill the needs of a library, but will contain different departments that will serve the city in many ways. The space set aside for boys activities will in itself prove of unsurpassing help in providing for entertainment of the youth and always give him a place to carry on the work of his organizations.

Then there will also be comfortable assembly and lecture rooms for the grown-ups who should be able to spend many a restful evening attending conferences of small groups in which they are interested.

Greenville has needed a building of this kind for many years, and after the commission had floundered about in a hopeless effort to provide it, Mr. Sheppard came along and helped them realize an ambition of a lifetime.

The Greenville tobacco market has had three "million dollar" weeks since the opening day in September, and this has been a source of much gratification to farmers and tobaccoists alike.

in our county, followed by announcement of the possibility of a creamery products establishment here, it appears that our opportunity to get into the dairying business is at hand, and if we fail to grasp this opportunity we have but ourselves to blame for our future financial stress.

GREENVILLE STAGES
BIGGEST ARMISTICE DAY
CELEBRATION IN HISTORY

rend was started on April 6th, 1917, when America announced she was going "over there." It was audibly interpreted by Pershing at the tomb of Lafayette. The commander-in-chief of our A. E. F. is reported to have said, "Lafayette, we are here." In other words, he saluted France, and said in substance, "You sent us to help you, and we are here to help you." But this is not all. Many, many things might be said by way of fortifying this beginning, let me remind you of just one other. Nine years after the smoke of battle had cleared, a group of representative men met in Washington, at the invitation of Secretary of State, Kellogg. A pact was agreed on, which later was signed by every responsible nation on earth, which looks to the outlawry of war.

A week or two after I came back from France, a mother at Wake Forest asked me to come to see her. She had lost a boy in France, who belonged to same regiment I did. Her first question was, "What was the use of the war anyway?" I was utterly unable to give her an adequate answer. In fact, as I recall it now, I did not attempt it. The sun is brighter this morning, the results a bit more definite. Whereof we are all glad. The great German statesman, Stresemann, who died a few weeks ago, labored in season and out of season, to bring about amicable relations among nations of the earth. Troops have been taken out of Germany, familiarly known to us as The Army of Occupation, the repatriation settlement, and best of all, the countries that opposed each other on the Western Front are friends; the lamb and the lion lie down together and sleep, and they work together for the common good.

I remind you, finally, that civilization apart from another factor is mere hollowess, and it may be even hypocrisy. Dedication should follow, a noble part of every American citizen. And it will, for to be an American citizen in fact as well as in name, carries just this tremendous virtue. Atlanta Gordon wounded near Bellecourt, France, on a high hill overlooking the once supposedly impregnable canal, a part of the Hindenburg Line, is a cemetery, where one day 259 boys of the 20th Infantry, North Carolina's own, were buried.

In my mind's eye I see the whole scene once again. Yonder are the stretcher bearers coming from all directions bringing the dead. Without coffin, or individual graves, the fear fellows were put to rest. One accident warns my heart, as it has done time and time again. The captain of Co. H from Warren county, had been killed in the early morning, so Lieut. Limer, the ranking officer left, took charge of the company. He, too, was killed a short distance from the tap, the jumping place. When he fell a few of the boys grouped about him. They realized he was dead and hastily prepared a place for burial. This noble deed preformed, they ran after the advancing company. When the chaplain had pronounced the last sad rites late that afternoon, one of the boys who figured in the ceremony, Limer's temporary grave, spoke of the incident. He requested that he and a few of his fellows be permitted to bring the remains of the beloved officer to rest there with the others. Permission was granted of course. Meanwhile, a grave was dug at the head of the trench, hard by one that contained the remains of Capt. Ben Dixon of Raleigh, and when this slow-moving company arrived, the solemn rites were spoken all over again. Angles must have bowed their heads at such devotion. Certainly tears flowed down the war-torn cheeks of hardy soldiers. In the light of that incident, by the flaming torch of the meaning of Dedication, which each of us should see plainly this morning, I repeat some words from the heart and lips of a great American. He was standing on a battle field, where the sons of our common country had fallen in grim conflict.

"We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who have here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember, what we may say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here thus far so nobly advanced us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain."

Some one replied to Lieut. Col. Marace's famous words. It spells out the word Dedication, as surely as the heroic lives of the dead soldiers spelled out sacrifice and devotion. Hear the words calling to you and me:

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders dead. The night that ye so bravely led. We've taken up. And we shall keep True faith with you who lie asleep. With each a cross to mark his bed. And poppies blowing overhead. Where once his own life blood ran red. So let your rest be sweet and deep In Flanders Fields.

Fear not that ye have died for naught, The torch ye threw to us we caught. Ten million hands will hold it high. Add Freedom's light shall never die; We've learned the lesson that ye taught In Flanders Fields.

SAYS HER HEAD
HURT ALL NIGHT

Georgia Lady Was Thin, Pale, Suffering, When She Began To Take Cardui.

Valdosta, Ga.—Mrs. F. A. Mikell, 515 West Magnolia Street, this city, says:

"About five years ago, my health wasn't good. I was pale and thin. I had a tired feeling—about as tired when I would get up as when I went to bed.

"I found I was getting weaker instead of stronger. Lots of nights I would have headache all night, and when I would get up in the morning (when I was able to get up), my eyes would look hollow and I would be very pale.

"I knew that I must do something."

"My mother told me she believed Cardui would help me. I was willing to try it. I felt much better by the time I had taken one bottle. Since then, when I needed a tonic, I would take Cardui."

Many other women have reported that they began taking Cardui on their mothers' advice, for this medicine has been in use so long its real worth is known by several generations of women.

Get a bottle, today.

TAKE CARDUI Helps Women to Health

Theford's Black-Draught should also be used in connection with Cardui, as a laxative. 25c.

Farmers Sell Your
TOBACCO IN GREENVILLE

Sales continue heavy with prices holding up well. Last week over four million pounds were sold for an average price of $23.40 per hundred.

We are selling tobacco daily from practically every county in Eastern Carolina and the farmers say it is paying them to sell in Greenville, even though some of them travel at least 125 miles.

Those in position to absolutely know, say we are highest market and have keener buying competition than any market in the East.

Since Last Season—

Three of the warehouses have made large additions, which gives the market increased floor space of about two acres. Some of the factories have made enlargements to their buildings, installing additional redrying facilities and other equipment. The Greenville tobacco market is decidedly in better position to handle, daily, larger quantities of tobacco than ever before.

Tobacco Warehouses—

Greenville tobacco market has nine (9) large and modern brick warehouses with close to 14 acres floor space, sufficient to accommodate 2,225,000 lbs. of tobacco daily. These warehouses are managed by men of years of experience.

Buyers and Factories—

Greenville tobacco market has four (4) sets of buyers, representing all the important companies in the world, using bright tobacco. Nine (9) larger and modern tobacco factories are located here, additions having been made to several of them since last season, while one new plant has been built.

Roads and Locations—

Greenville tobacco market is located in the heart of Eastern North Carolina. Seven fine hard surfaced roads lead into Greenville. Tobacco growers living 125 miles from Greenville to tobacco market sell their tobacco in Greenville and return home same day.

PITT SUNDAY SCHOOLS WILL HOLD MEETING

Annual Convention to Open at St. Paul's Episcopal Church Wednesday

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the opening session of the Pitt County Sunday School Convention will be held at the Episcopal Church, Greenville, N. C. Another session of the convention will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The opening address of the convention will be given by Miss Flora Davis, Raleigh, general superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, the subject being "The Sunday School at Work."

Other well-known speakers who will be on the program will be Miss Daisy Magee, Raleigh, Children's division superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. A. Lillycrop, rector, Episcopal Church, and Rev. R. J. Bamber, pastor, Christian Church.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the convention feels that with these speakers in the meeting a storehouse of up-to-date and useful information on Sunday School work will be open to the Sunday School workers.

While special invitations to attend have been sent to pastors, superintendents, teachers, and other Sunday School workers, all who are interested in the development of Sunday School work are asked to attend.

The full program is as follows:
Wednesday Afternoon
 2:30—Devotional, Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor First Presbyterian Church, Greenville.
 2:45—The Sunday School at Work, Miss Flora Davis, Raleigh, General Superintendent of North Carolina Sunday School Association.
 3:15—Song.
 3:25—The Child and His World, Miss Daisy Magee, Raleigh, Children's Division Superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association.
 3:55—Announcements.
 4:00—Adjourn.

Wednesday Night
 7:30—Devotional, Rev. W. A. Lillycrop, rector, Episcopal Church, of Greenville.
 7:45—The Young People; Their Needs and How to Meet Them, Miss Daisy Magee.
 8:15—Song.
 Appointment of Committees.
 8:20—Sunday School Objectives, Miss Flora Davis.
 8:50—Offering for Support of the County and State Sunday School Associations.
 9:00—Adjourn.

Thursday Afternoon
 2:30—Devotional, Rev. R. J. Bamber, pastor Christian Church, Greenville.
 2:45—Teaching the Child, Miss Daisy Magee.
 3:15—Song.
 3:20—The Adult Class at Its Best, Miss Flora Davis.
 3:50—Reports of Committees and Election of Officers.
 Presentation of Attendance Pennant.
 4:00—Adjourn.
 Committee on arrangements: J. C. Galloway, acting county president; W. A. Johnson, county secretary; G. E. Hooker, president of Greenville Township; Charles O'H. Horne, Vice-President of Greenville Township.

An attendance pennant will be awarded to the Sunday School having in the sessions of the convention the largest average attendance of representatives, sixteen years of age and over, according to miles traveled. Attendance records will be taken at each session of the convention. The average number of representatives in each session from a given Sunday School will be multiplied by the number of miles from that church to the convention church, and the Sunday School having the largest number of points will receive the pennant.

PRESIDENT IS PREPARING HIS NEXT MESSAGE

Many Questions to Be Discussed in Next Message to Congress

Washington, Nov. 12.—(AP)—President Hoover is giving thought to his first annual report on the state of the union which will be made to Congress three weeks from today, or the day after the opening of the regular session on December 2.

Aside from that which usually attaches to the first regular message to Congress of a new chief executive, in this one is heightened by the bitter political situation in the Senate which has arisen out of the tariff legislation.

What the President will have to say on the tariff must necessarily depend largely upon the circumstances at the end of this special session. Should the measure have failed by then some of his friends would expect him to make no further recommendation on the subject as this might result in prolonging an unsettled economic situation accompanying general tariff revision.

On the other hand, should the bill then be in conference Mr. Hoover might refrain from any other than a general statement on the tariff. He has stated it as a policy of his administration to refrain from interference by the executive branch into the affairs of the legislative department of the government.

Despite the wide spread between the ideas of the Senate and the House on the form of tariff legislation, Mr. Hoover has by no means abandoned hope of a bill emerging which will square with the Republican party's promise of relief to agriculture and these industries which are lagging because of changing conditions since the last import measure was written.

Fulfillment of his hope would mean extensive compromises in the conference between the committees of the two houses but in the past decade wide gulfs between the bodies have been bridged both on tariff and tax legislation.

Next to the tariff, the subject carrying an appeal to the country is that of taxation and Mr. Hoover's views on the possibilities of tax reductions in the near future will be closely scanned. Such reductions are dependent upon a number of factors not all of which have yet been completely assessed.

Promise Smarter Army in Summer

Washington, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The promise of a smarter looking army in the summertime was held out today in an order issued by the War Department for extensive service tests of a new khaki colored cotton cloth.

The cotton uniforms now used by soldiers in warm weather and in the tropics have proved unsatisfactory because of the wide variety of shades the cloth takes on after a little wear.

The new cloth, developed to retain its shape without starch and mercerized for the sake of appearance, together with a new dye that is considered permanent, have demonstrated in laboratory tests that they overcome the old objections.

Major General William Lassiter, commanding the Eighth Corps Area, has been directed to designate four units serving in different parts of his command to receive uniforms of the new material for a year of constant wear. If it stands up under that test, it is expected to be adopted throughout the army.

Lumber Dealer Takes His Life At Capital City

Raleigh, Nov. 12.—(AP)—J. F. Makepeace, 55, proprietor of a lumber company in this city bearing his name, was found dead in bed at a local hotel this morning, and an empty bottle, said by Coroner L. M. Waring to have contained an anesthetic, was found under the pillow on which the man's head was lying.

A member of Mr. Makepeace's family attributed his self-destruction to financial worries. Coroner Waring, after a thorough investigation, said that apparently the man took his own life after making special preparations, which included leaving a note of instructions to his son how to handle his estate and holding a conference with his attorneys yesterday.

Mr. Makepeace registered at the hotel yesterday afternoon under the name "J. F. Wilson of Wilson," and retired early, leaving instructions to be called at 7:30 this morning. Efforts to get a response at that hour and at intervals thereafter failed and shortly before noon the room was forced open and the body found.

Meets Wife Again.
 New York—Just because a man takes a lady to lunch, in the words of Kenneth Harlan, film star, it doesn't mean that he is planning to marry her. Quite by accident he bumped into Flo Hart, formerly Mrs. Harlan. He invited her to eat. She accepted. It was just a friendly, casual meeting. He doesn't even know where she lives.

AYDEN DEFEATS HERTFORD FOR SEMI-FINALS PLACE IN CLASS B CHAMP RACE

Ayden high school stepped into the ranks of eastern semi-finalists in Class B play Saturday by defeating the strong Hertford high eleven, 6 to 0, in a game at Hertford. Representatives of Ayden, Smithfield, Dunn and Oxford, survivors from among the 12 teams beginning play in the eastern eliminations, will meet tonight to arrange a schedule play for the semi-finals and finals.

The coming fortnight will see both eastern and western championships decided, not only in the Class B elimination, but in the Class A conference groups of the two sectors.

The current leaders in Class A circles are Goldsboro in the east, and Charlotte and High Point, tied for western leadership with three wins and no losses each. This week's card for eastern Class A teams has Durham scheduled at Raleigh and Goldsboro at Wilmington, while the western slate cards are Salisbury at High Point and Winston-Salem at Gastonia. All games are set for Friday.

Class A Standings

The standing of Class A teams in the east follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Goldsboro	2	0	1.000
Wilmington	2	1	.667
Raleigh	1	1	.500
Fayetteville	1	2	.333
Durham	0	2	.000

In the western sector six teams are entered in Class A play, with the standing shaping up in this fashion:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Charlotte	3	0	1.000
High Point	3	0	1.000
Greensboro	1	2	.333
Salisbury	1	2	.333
Winston-Salem	0	2	.000
Gastonia	0	2	.000

Winston-Salem and Greensboro played to a tie in their meet. Thus it may be seen that six of the ten games on the eastern card have been run off, while nine of the 14 contests entered in the western Class A play have been completed.

Class B Survivors. In the west are Reidsville, Mount Airy, Concord and Forest City, and representatives of those teams met in Salisbury last night to arrange semi-finals and final schedules. The west also began the eliminations with a dozen teams entered.

The current grid campaign is the first athletic program to be conducted under auspices of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association with the schools permitted to play on the conference or elimination system. The Class B teams chose to play on the old style.

Ayden Shows Power. In racking up its 6-0 victory over Hertford, the Ayden team was forced to display its full power. Hertford presented strong opposition, a line that fought gamely and a backfield which worked effectively with a deceptive attack. However, the Ayden forwards more than matched the strong opposition line-men and succeeded in checking Hertford's attack at critical times. Edwards, Ayden fullback, was the big star of the game. The lad is quite a speed demon and his ability to gain ground around the ends, running behind splendid interference, featured Ayden's play. The touchdown came on a line plunge by Ed Maddy after a 30 yard sprint by Edwards had put the Ayden team in scoring position. The tally came late in the second quarter. Ayden

GRID TEAMS WORKED HARD ARMISTICE DAY

Atlanta, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Armistice Day was no holiday in southern football training camps. Practically every team in the conference went through a lively workout in preparation for Saturday's games.

Although the Tennessee-Vandy duel will be the only encounter likely to have a bearing on the championship, several teams will play engagements in which their hopes of state or sectional titles will rise or fall.

The Volunteers will have a comparatively fresh team to hurl against the Commodores at Knoxville. Last week Sophomores and Reserves piled up a large score to win from Carson-Newman while Coach Bob Neyland, Gene McEver, Bobby Dodd and other Volunteer regulars scouted Vandy in its battle with Georgia Tech.

Besides the fact that his team will be more or less fatigued as a result of the Tornado tilt, Coach Dan McGugin will have to slip his proteges a bagful of new tricks. The plays that stopped Tech probably won't be so potent against Tennessee with Neyland and his arch collaborators having first hand information as to their intricacies.

With four squad members ruled off, the Georgia Tech roster because of scholastic difficulties Coach Bill Alexander plans a rearrangement of battle lines for the Alabama set Saturday. Vance Maree, the huge tackle who was shifted to fullback early in the season, will face the Crimson line at his old post. Numerous other changes are forecast by Alexander.

Kentucky, with "Shipwreck" Kelly back in harness will endeavor to atone for its whaling at the hands of Alabama by crushing the Cadets of Virginia Military academy. Kelly was absent Saturday as the Tide drowned out the Wildcat's championship dreams.

Coach Harry Mehre sent his Georgia Bulldogs through only a light session at Athens yesterday, believing they needed a rest after their terrific battle with New York university last week. The Georgians expect little trouble from Auburn.

Duke, which made its debut into Conference ranks with a smashing victory over Louisiana State Saturday, plans to continue its march against North Carolina State, while Tulane, another undefeated eleven,

OLD RIVALRIES TO BE RENEWED DURING WEEK

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 12.—With only one inter-sectional game of any consequence on the program, eastern football fans, looking for some fun on Saturday, will turn to the renewal of a half dozen ancient rivalries.

New York University's clash with Missouri of the big six heads the inter-sectional slate on the Atlantic Seaboard but there will be more interest in such games as those involving Yale and Princeton; Cornell and Dartmouth; Penn and Columbia; Colgate and Syracuse, and Williams and Amherst. All of them rivalries of 30 years or more.

Yale, with Abbie Booth for a sparkplug, will be a decided favorite over a Princeton Tiger able to win only two games this year. In this rivalry going back to 1873, Yale has won 27, Princeton 16, with nine ties.

Penn's 20th meeting with Columbia looks like another triumph for the Red and Blue warriors from Philadelphia who have beaten the Lions 15 times since 1878. Columbia has won three games and one was a tie.

Unbeaten Cornell may not be that way after the 13th meeting with Dartmouth which has won 7 of the 12 previous meetings. The other five going to Cornell.

These old grudge fights by no means overshadow a number of other games. Pittsburgh's unconquered Panthers take on a hardy rival in Carnegie Tech; Harvard battles Holy Cross, and LaFayette and Temple appear evenly matched.

Tarboro Defeats Greenville High

Tarboro highs defeated Greenville high football team, 13 to 6 here yesterday, in a game which featured the Armistice Day program.

Tarboro registered the first score in the second period when a 25 yard end run which placed the ball on Greenville's half yard line and a line plunge put it over. A forward pass was good for the extra point. Their second touchdown was made on a pass for 30 yards.

In the last period Greenville missed a wonderful opportunity to score after completing a twenty-yard pass to their opponents' one-yard line, but the locals lost the ball on a fumble.

THE LUXURY HUSBAND

SYNOPSIS: Barbara dismisses Henderson immediately upon her uncle's revelation that Henderson has been borrowing money, intending to repay it from Barbara's fortune after he had married her. Obsessed by a desperate longing to see Ray again, Barbara drifts into the habit of occupying a secluded table in the Golden Dollar. When she sees Rita Gilmore for the first time, she is amazed because Rita is not the sort of girl Barbara expected, and Barbara reluctantly admits to herself that Ray and Rita may be in love with each other. A friendly waiter, unknowingly supplies the answer to Barbara's question when he tells her that Rita has been an important factor in the success of Ray's turns.

To Barbara came the sudden realization that unlike herself, Rita was evidently interested in Ray as a musician as well as a man. Probably she inspired him, even assisted him, even assisted him at times! As her mind swept back over the past she recalled, with painful vividness, many times when Ray had pleaded with her to take some interest in his work. Invariably she had treated it jestingly, even slightly. "What was it Ray had said to Bill Foster that night at the Savoy?"

"Barbara isn't interested in my composing, Bill." It had been true. She had not attempted to interest herself in it. In fact, she had even resented it, jealous as she had been of anything that took Ray's attention from herself.

Sitting there, absentmindedly chasing a piece of lobster around with her fork, it occurred to her that, even while she had loved Ray, she had failed hopelessly to understand him. Her love for him had been fatally tainted with selfishness.

She had tried to remake him into what she had wanted him to be, instead of accepting him as he was, with all his dreams and ambitions, and his absurd—as she saw it—reverence for jazz.

Through her own egotism she had lost him. Had she thrown herself heart and soul into it, work then, she suddenly became convinced, this—this pending divorce need never have happened.

A prey to these thoughts—strange and disturbing—emanating from a soul shocked to life, Barbara reached blindly for her cloak. Without glancing again in the direction of the orchestra, she paid her check and passed out into the street.

Yet she was back at the Golden Dollar club the following night and for many nights afterward. She was unable to stay away. So simple it became to slip into the little booth, secure from prying eyes where, by the hour, she could see Ray and watch his every movement. At times it was a torture, at times a delight.

Always she sat in the same place. Luckily it was a table few seemed to fancy. Invariably she was waited upon by the same smiling Italian youth—Ricardo, she learnt to call him. After several nights a strange sort of friendship sprang up between these two, between the girl who had too much money and the young Italian who had none.

Forgetting his place, one night, I think it was sad. Has she not a lover, ze sweetheart?"

"She had once, Ricardo. She hasn't any more."

"He has perhaps gone away—to another country?"

"No, he's right here in New York, Ricardo."

It was absurd, but she seemed to derive a queer sort of comfort from talking of her lover to this sympathetic young waiter.

"But, madam does not see him?"

"She sees him, Ricardo, but she does not speak to him."

"It ees sad. I too, know ze unhappiness of being separated from some one I love."

"Why, Ricardo?"

Barbara found herself looking at him with new eyes. So Ricardo, too, had loved! She and this waiter—poles apart socially, yet each with the same capacity for suffering when an affair of the heart had gone awry.

Her eyes softened as she looked at him.

"Tell me, Ricardo."

He fidgeted with the napkin over his arm.

"It eez ze girl I left behind me in Italy. She promise me to wait until I had money to send for her. At first she write me every few days, but now, it ees sometime zat I have not heard."

He shrugged his shoulders in a half-humorous, half-desolate manner.

In time Barbara came to know Ray's own compositions at the end of the first few bars. In time, too, she came, unconsciously, to wait for them. Gradually her attitude towards his music changed. Its rhythm, its undeniable charm laid hold of her.

Finally she had to admit to herself that her former sense of taste for his work had given place to one of pride in his artistic ability. Some people at a neighboring table were applauding at the conclusion of a number of Ray's. Barbara overheard one of them remark:

"He's a genius, that saxophone fellow. I hear the best tunes we have been dancing to tonight are his own work. Do you know who he is?"

And Barbara at that moment was filled with a sudden desire to get up and shout back, "Yes, he's Ray Lowther... my husband."

The words on the tip of her tongue, she stopped herself, amazed. Could it actually be that she wanted to acknowledge it?

She knew that such was the case. But, with the realization, came a crushing sense of the futility of acknowledging this, now.

They were still talking of Ray at the nearby table.

"I hear the fellow is leaving the orchestra next week. He's written the score for this new revue, 'The Knave of Jazz.' A fellow I know in the cast tells me that the cuts dark girl who danced a few minutes ago is to do some high stepping in the same show."

That same night, Barbara wrote to Ray acquainting him with her decision to divorce him.

The note, brief and to the point, was the result of what she had heard that night at the club. Yet the motive that had dictated her writing was not the outcome of jealousy or pique. Perhaps it was the most unselfish thing Barbara had ever done.

She had written it for Ray's sake so that, should he sincerely love this girl, whose interests seemed identical with his own, he would be able to marry her.

She crept out in the wee hours for herself. Dawn, she was afraid, might bring once again a desire to postpone the issue.

Chapter 28 AN UNDERSTANDING

Barbara's note reached Ray the same morning and that afternoon he was late in keeping an appointment with Rita.

The moment she saw him, she knew instinctively that something untoward had occurred. But she did not question him, and for the moment he volunteered no information.

After a few perfunctory remarks he seated himself at the piano and commenced to play. But jazz was not in his heart. After he had bungled a couple of tunes he swung around abruptly on the piano stool.

"I'm going to be free soon, Rita. A bachelor once more."

She glanced towards him quickly. "You've heard from your wife?"

Her voice was unusually sharp. "This morning. She intends divorcing me somewhere in Mexico. I believe it takes no time down there."

A pause. Rita had no means of telling from his face what he was thinking.

"You're—you're not going to contest it?"

There was a hint of breathlessness in her voice. "Of course not," sharply. "It was agreed when we parted that she was at perfect liberty to do this should she want to."

"But you didn't want her to, Ray?"

He stared down at the butt of his cigar.

"No, frankly I didn't."

"I'm—I'm sorry."

He fidgeted with the piano keys, rubbing a knuckle along the yellow-tinted ivory. Then, abruptly, without warning, he started to play, improvising as he went along, breaking finally into the "Grievin' Blues," the song he had written the night he and Barbara had separated.

He was playing it harshly and crudely, making those jazz notes vibrate through the little sitting room with its basket furniture and its faded cretonne covers. Thumping down on the closing notes, he remarked:

"Some memories, that song, eh?"

Sitting on the day bed, she nodded. Her eyes softened, thinking of the night she had first sung it at the Golden Dollar. Through it she had started Ray on the high road to fame.

"Sort of introduced us, that song, didn't it?" she said aloud.

"Yes," absentmindedly. Not of Rita but of Barbara he was thinking—Barbara, months back, sitting alone in the drawing room, while in the little room above her, he had improvised that song.

"Is there another man in the case, Ray?"

"Most likely. If there is it's my own fault. Still, as she's waited so long! It seems sort of ironic that this should have come now, when I'm about to get my chance."

Suddenly bent his head and beat one closed hand on his forehead. "There's no sense in wishing."

Silently she came over to him and put one arm around his shoulder.

"Way did you leave her when you love her, Ray?"

Irritably he threw his fist down hard on the piano keys.

"Because it was impossible living with her in the degrading, dependent way I did. Her friends used to regard me as a luxury. I wanted to prove to them I was something more than just the man Barbara Landon had bought to amuse her."

I guest things are best as they are. She didn't understand my point of view, and I suppose I didn't get hers. We loved each other but we made each other miserable. Funny how you can go on loving a person whom you fall hopelessly to understand."

Rita nodded. She was too wise to attempt to argue with him. That, she knew, to be one of the insoluble mysteries of life.

He worked solidly for the remainder of the afternoon, doggedly and persistently. Yet, at the end of several hours, he had accomplished little. Presently, when twilight had faded to silver dark, she went out into the kitchen to make him a cup of tea before he set out for the club. She set the little tray on a wicker table beside the piano. Ray, noticing it suddenly, pulled her towards him.

"Rita, you dear sport, you. You've been waiting for me, haven't you? Rita pays a visit to the wife of her fiance tomorrow.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (ad.)

a heart about the size of a pumpkin. If it hadn't been for you I'd never have put those tunes across at the club. In fact, I'd still be tooting a sax without a hope in the world of doing anything better for years and years—And I'm surely certain I'd never have written this score without your help. You've been a wonderful pal."

He broke off abruptly, his voice grown husky.

She wasn't looking at him. Presently, hearing a suspicious sniffle, Ray crossed over to her and, putting a hand under her chin, he raised her face to his.

"Why the tears, Rita? I haven't said anything that's hurt you?"

"Of course you haven't said anything that's hurt me, you old silly."

"Then why...?"

"Nothing... It's just..."

A sort of tentative pause. He drew her closer.

"Rita, you like me, don't you?"

She tried to smile, to think of some wise remark, but it would not come.

"Sure."

"You like me a whole heap?"

She nodded, one hand playing with the lapel of his coat. She knew she could not speak without making a fool of herself, so she did not.

"Well enough to marry, once I'm free? I know this is a stupid time to ask you dear, but I've thought lately you cared."

The hand that had been fingering his lapel, crept up around his neck, crept up and held him to her tightly. She clung to him for many minutes without saying a word.

He looked down at her tenderly, affectionately, knowingly by the trembling of her body close to his, the short convulsive sobbing that shook her, what she had been sport enough to keep from him all these months. That she loved him.

Tenderly, his own arms went about her. He told himself he loved her, but with a love fundamentally different from his love for Barbara. A saner love, maybe, the outgrowth of friendship, of mutual interests.

"That's settled, eh, Rita? Directly I'm free," he said aloud.

She nodded, but she continued to cling to him closely, as though, even in those moments, some inner sense warned her to take full measure of this happiness of hers.

Market Report

Cotton--Stocks--Grain

COTTON MARKET

New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—A continuation of yesterday's selling movement appeared in the cotton market at the opening today. The initial tone was steady but prices were 3 to 14 points lower an active months soon showed net losses of 13 to 18 points with December breaking through the 17c level and into new low ground for the season. That delivery sold off to 16.91 while March declined to 17.33 under further liquidation of old long accounts combined with some local and southern selling. The trade was credited with buying on the decline but otherwise the market seemed without much support and prices were within a point or two of the lowest at the end of the first half hour.

The New York Cotton Exchange service estimated domestic consumption for October at 635,000 bales against 616,238 last year, but the bullish effect of these figures seemed to be offset by the standard cloth statistics showing an increase of 5.1 per cent in stocks on hand during October and a decrease of 9.9 per cent in unfilled orders.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Overwhelmed by a selling stampede, the wheat market today suffered huge losses, plunging decidedly below levels at which government loans to farm organizations are available. A material decrease of 2,394,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply today failed to have more than a transient effect as a counterbalance. European demand for North American wheat continued to be virtually at a standstill, and the market for wheat future deliveries here was apparently dominated to an unusual extent by the influence of stock market smashes.

Lowest prices of the day for wheat were reached just before the close, the maximum break being 7c a bushel. Wheat closed excited 63-8 to 7c under Saturday's finish.

Corn closed 21-4c to 31-8c down. Oats 31-4c to 31-2c off. Provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

STOCK MARKET

By STANLEY W. PRENOSOL.
New York, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Further distress selling developed in today's stock market, and prices of leading issues crashed to new low levels for the year after a mid-session rally failed to hold. Extreme declines in the active shares ranged from 2 to 10 points. With Jersey Central breaking 20, Peoples Gas 29 1-2 and American Express 106 on small transactions.

Trading showed an enormous increase in volume, with the ticker running more than an hour late in the last hour.

In the absence of any adverse business or financial news, Wall street was forced to the conclusion that numerous weak spots still existed, and that no general recovery would be hoped for until they had been cleaned out. Short selling also was increased measurably in volume.

The New York banking group, organized when the first bad break occurred on October 24, to secure an orderly market, apparently is making no effort to stem the decline at this stage no meetings of the group have been held for 10 days.

U. S. Steel common, which sold as high as 26 1-2 in September, broke to 15 1-2, off 6, in the heavy wave of selling which swept over the market in the last hour, but made partial recovery from the low level. American Can, General Elec. Sears Roebuck, National Biscuit, New York Central and Northern Pacific were among the many other issues to reach new low levels for the year.

Call money renewed unchanged at 6 per cent, and time money rates held steady at the same figure.
