'SILENT CAL' URGES SOLID G.O.P. FRONT

Former President Disclaims any Interest in His Return to the Presidency.

By FRANCIS M. STEFFENSON
Washington, Sept. 30.—(AP)—The proposal of Calvin Coolidge for "a solid front in support of the President" is to be the hub about which Republican organization leaders will rally their forces for renomination of Herbert Hoover.

The veteran party pilots for the most part accept Mr. Coolidge's proposal. The Saturday Evening Post disclaiming any interest in his immediate return to the presidency as definitely eliminating him from next year's political race.

But the appeal of the former President for "party loyalty" is viewed with less warmth among Republican independents of the northwest who have opposed some of the major Hoover policies.

Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, called for "a progressive program and a progressive candidate" after reading the Coolidge article. He mentioned as possible candidates Senators Borah of Idaho; Norris of Nebraska; Johnson of California; LaFollette of Wisconsin; and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

Also, there were a few in the Republican Congressional fold of regulars who kept their silence on the Coolidge declaration. They intimated privately their belief that the former President must not yet be counted out of the 1932 contest.

However, Republican stalwarts such as Senator Watson of Indiana, the floor leader; Senator Pess, of Ohio, the national chairman; and Representative Wood of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee, looked back over 50 years of political history and reflected that it was the thing for Mr. Coolidge to do and the thing for the party to do now was to renominate Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Coolidge in his article said, in part:

"Those who are suggesting, under the present disturbed conditions in our own country and in the world, that a former President should use his prestige to attempt to secure a nomination against a President of his own party, probably have not stopped to consider fully what would be implied by such a course.

"It has been my purpose to refrain from doing or saying anything that could be construed as indicating any intention again to seek public office.

"In an emergency like the present the responsible elements of our party should offer a solid front in their support of the President. That is the course I propose to pursue."

Thus, the Republican leaders generally agree that any contest against Mr. Hoover's renomination has narrowed to one from the independent faction. This group is not now united behind any single candidate.

President Hoover himself maintained silence on the Coolidge statement although he was confronted with a batch of questions about it among the written inquiries of the newspaper correspondents at yesterday's press conference.

Baruch Ready to Help South

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Bernard M. Baruch, multimillionaire New York financier and a native of South Carolina, has indicated a desire to aid "in any way possible" the farmers of the south in their cotton price problem.

Calling Governor Blackwood by long distance telephone from New York, Mr. Baruch intimated he would like to confer with Governor Blackwood on the cotton price situation and suggested that governors of other states be invited to the conference.

During the world war, Mr. Baruch was a $1-a-year man, serving as commissioner in charge of raw materials for the war industries board under President Wilson. He is a member of the Natural Resources Commission of South Carolina.

Mr. Baruch went from Camden, S. C., where he was born, to New York in early manhood and amassed his fortune. He owns a large estate near Georgetown.

DEMOCRATS SEE VICTORY

Johnson's Success in Missouri May Enable Party to Control Next Congress.

Sedalia, Mo., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Hopes of the Democrats that they might be able to control the next house of Congress soared today as nearly complete returns from yesterday's special election in the seventh Missouri congressional district showed an overwhelming victory for Robert D. Johnson.

Johnson, a Marshall attorney, known in Missouri as a "Fighting Democrat," won from his Republican opponent, former Rep. John W. Palmer of Sedalia, by approximately 9,000 votes. Johnson's victory gave the Democrats 214 seats in the House, the same number now held by the Republicans. One seat is held by a member of the Farmer-Labor party.

L. L. Collins of Springfield, who ran as an independent anti-prohibition candidate, finished a poor third. Both Johnson and Palmer had the approval of the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U.

The special election was made necessary by the recent death of Rep. Samuel C. Major, Democrat of Fayette.

Democratic leaders of the state and nation today hailed Johnson's decisive victory as an indication of the trend of six other special elections to fill House vacancies, all of which will have been held by the night of Nov. 3 and in the general election in 1932.

Negro Confesses Fatally Injuring Charlotte Youth

Charlotte, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Fred Harvey, negro, said by officials last night to have confessed hurling Fred Pressly, 18, Charlotte boy, from the Hagenback-Wallace circus train here Friday night, inflicting fatal injuries, is to have a preliminary hearing today or tomorrow, police announced.

W. W. McGraw, private detective, announced last night Harvey had also confessed to knocking Hoyt Time, Pressly's companion, from the train with a club. Harvey was arrested in Goldsboro after Willie Caldwell, another negro employe on the circus train, had told of the deed and been jailed as a material witness.

Suit for $50,000 has been filed against the circus and the Southern Railway by Pressly's relatives.

PARLIAMENT TO END SOON

Premier Announces Closing of Eventful Session Next Wednesday.

London, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald informed the House of Commons today that Parliament will adjourn next Wednesday.

He did not reply to a question by Arthur Henderson, new leader of the Labor party, as to whether it would be an adjournment or dissolution, but political observers agreed that a general election is likely to be held.

By Wednesday, Mr. MacDonald said, Parliament will have completed the emergency program laid out by the National government when it took office. Both the economy bill, carrying out retrenchments all along the line of government expenditure, and Chancellor Philip Snowden's supplementary budget will be enacted in the next seven days.

The Prime Minister said also that a short measure will be enacted to deal with food profiteers in view of the fact that prices already are beginning to soar in London.

If the government decides to go to the voters the adjournment will be accompanied by dissolution of Parliament and a call for an immediate election with the polling day in October.

If the House is merely adjourned the government's plan will be to let the country settle down and give the people time to see the effects of the work it has done.

Mr. MacDonald's announcement, while it seemed to increase belief that a general election is impending, also showed that the government has not yet made any definite election plans.

Stevens Pauses To Do Some Fishing

Warsaw, N. C., Sept. 30.—(AP)—After dedicating his "soul on the altar of service" during a celebration which welcomed him home, Henry L. Stevens, Jr., newly-elected American Legion commander, today sought a brief respite to "do a little fishing."

The lawyer who brought this little town into prominence and who brought joy to the hearts of its 1,500 inhabitants by his election to an office, he termed would bring "opportunity of service to his country second only to that of the presidency," was fished here and at Goldsboro yesterday.

Gov. O. Max Gardner, Senators Cameron Morrison and Josiah W. Bailey and many other state notables joined in honoring Stevens, who will receive the state's official welcome at Charlotte on October 9.

COTTON FIGHT STARTS AGAIN IN THE SOUTH

Several States Renew Effort to Restore the Textile King to His Throne.

By the Associated Press
The struggle for a restoration of the cotton industry, burdened by surpluses and a weak market, was renewed throughout the south today.

Mississippi's legislature, called into extraordinary session yesterday on cotton and general financial relief, considered the Texas plan to restrict cotton acreage in 1932 and 1933 to one-third and cultivated area. Bills, embodying the proposal were introduced in the House and Senate shortly after they convened.

Governor Harvey Parnell of Arkansas, who asked legislators to serve without pay at a special cotton session awaited their replies before issuing a call. Last night he urged farmers to join him in a request that Congress abolish the Federal Farm Board's cotton powers.

SEEK SPECIAL LEGISLATURE

Delegation to Visit Raleigh Tomorrow to Ask Solons Consider Cotton.

A delegation of farmers from this section of the state will go to Raleigh tomorrow to confer with Governor Gardner regarding a special session of the legislature to consider the cotton crisis.

The delegation will be headed by N. G. Bartlett, secretary of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce, who was instrumental in the holding of a number of meetings last week to determine public sentiment regarding the special legislative session.

Resolutions were drafted asking the governor to call the solons to Raleigh to consider the question, and at the same time to provide for the protection of tobacco planters.

Mr. Bartlett in a communication to leaders of the movement in this city, expressed the hope that a large delegation from this county would go to Raleigh and lend their influence to the movement looking to the restoration of King Cotton.

It had not been determined how many would attend from this county, but belief was expressed that representation would be in keeping with the seriousness of the situation to be considered.

Child Killed By Youthful Driver

Statesville, Sept. 30.—(AP)—An investigation was being conducted here today by police to determine what blame, if any should be attached to Bristol Ayers, youthful driver of an automobile which struck and killed Glenn Mills, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Mills, here yesterday.

Witnesses, saying the child dashed into the street to meet his father, said Ayers ran off the street in an effort to dodge him and caused the accident as unavoidable.

New York—Mrs. William Hogan is wondering what her 15 year old son will think of his mother as a blonde beauty contestant. She did not know she was entering a contest when she sent in a photograph at the suggestion of her hair-dresser. Now she is one of 12 finalists. She is 63 and says she is just a home woman.

WOMAN WEEPS, INTERRUPTING KANE HEARING

Mother of Drowned Woman Goes Into Hysterics on Stand at Hampton.

Hampton, Va., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Preliminary hearing for Professor Elisha Kent Kane on charges of drowning his wife was interrupted here today when Mrs. W. C. Graham, mother of the dead woman, went into hysterics on the stand and had to be removed for treatment after five minutes of sobbing testimony.

Mrs. Graham, whose illness caused postponement of the hearing a week ago, burst into sobbing and crying "My darling daughter, how can I live without her." A physician was called and she was removed.

She had told of the arrival of Professor Kane at her home two days before the drowning. She said she called to the couple to come to breakfast the morning of the drowning and that her daughter accompanied her to the dining room.

"She told me her husband wanted to go to the beach to swim and she looked at me with appealing eyes as if to say 'Don't let me go, or go with me,'" Mrs. Graham said. "They went and my darling daughter never came back alive."

Her testimony went no further as she broke down in sobs.

Butler Issues Last Command

Quantico, Va., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Major General Smedley D. Butler gave his last command to the Marine Corps today and was placed on the retired list.

"You may haul down my flag, Sir," was the general's last command and was given to Lieut. L. C. Whitaker, his aide.

The general's retirement orders approved by President Hoover Sept. 1, two weeks after the general requested retirement, were read at a full formation in front of marine headquarters.

Butler receives his major general's flag with its red field and two white stars as a memento of his last command.

All of his baggage was marked "Smedley D. Butler, Newtown Square, Pennsylvania," for which place he left this morning by automobile. Although he retains the honorary title of major general in retirement, it has not been placed on his new stationery.

The last honor accorded the general was a salute of 13 guns.

District Attorney Lindberghs Reach After Assistant City of Hankow

Greensboro, Sept. 30.—(AP)—E. L. Gavin, U. S. district attorney for the middle district of North Carolina, will leave today for Washington to lay before Attorney General Mitchell the resignation of his assistant, G. Robert Morton of Albermarle, and to recommend his successor, he announced, but declined to divulge what his recommendation will be.

Word of Morton's resignation was given out here last night, along with advice from Morton's friends in Albermarle that, political rumors to the contrary, the retiring official is not planning to seek Gavin's post at the expiration of the latter's term early next year.

CHILD SLAIN BY ASSAILANT IN GUILFORD

Nine-Year-Old Girl is Believed to Have Been Murdered After Attack.

Greensboro, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Vera Leonard, 9-year-old daughter of a farmer, was found beaten to death in the ruins of her father's burned home today.

Officers expressed belief the child had been attacked and killed and her assailant had then set the house afire to conceal his crime.

The girl's body was wrapped in a heavy quilt. Her head was crushed and the body was charred by the flames.

Approximately 100 yards from the house officers found a bloody coat and there was evidence the little girl's body had been dragged from the point where "the coat was found to the house."

The time of the crime was fixed at between 8:15 a. m., when a school bus driver passed the house and saw no one and 9 a. m. when the house was discovered ablaze.

Tom Leonard, the girl's father, and her small brother, Fred, aged 5, were at a neighbor's home at the time. Her mother is employed in a factory and was at work. The (Continued On Page Three)

KNOTTY CASE IN COURT HERE

Civil Term Wrestles with Note Action of Swift & Co., vs. A. F. Fleming.

The civil term of Superior court continued hearing this morning in one of the most knotty cases that has come up for consideration during the one week term which convened Monday morning with Judge N. A. Sinclair of Fayetteville, presiding.

It was the case of Swift & Company against A. F. Fleming. The suit involves a note for $1,700 given in the purchase of fertilizer from the concern.

The action is complicated by a counter claim of $2,800 filed by the defendant on contention that the fertilizer which he purchased from the company did not measure up to the requirements and resulted in failure of his crops.

The case was begun yesterday and was expected to be completed during the early afternoon, although the jury will likely be out for several hours before finally reaching a decision.

Considerable evidence had been presented on both sides when attorneys started argument this morning, the company trying to establish the fact that the fertilizer was as represented and the defendant attempting to prove that it was not.

Four or five cases were disposed of in the opening session Monday before court recessed until yesterday morning when work on the calendar was continued.

District Attorney Lindberghs Reach City of Hankow

Hankow, China, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Col. and Dr. Borcic, health expert of the League of Nations, arrived here at 3:10 p. m. (2:10 a. m. EST) today, completing a flight from Wuhu, down the Yangtze river from Nanking.

Leaving Nanking yesterday on another volunteer flood survey flight, the Lindberghs and Dr. Borcic landed at Wuhu, where they spent the night. The failure of Nanking authorities to receive direct word of their landing there caused some anxiety this morning, but this was dispelled when a Chinese military plane sighted the Lindbergh craft on the water at Wuhu.

The party left the latter city at 11:30 a. m. (10:30 p. m. Tuesday, EST) and arrived here after three hours and 40 minutes of flying. The plane descended on the Yangtze river near the British aircraft carrier Hermes, opposite the British band.

In flying from Nanking to Hankow the Lindberghs and Dr. Borcic actually travelled only 375 miles as the crow flies, but since they were surveying the damage wrought by the Yangtze river they probably flew much farther than that in following its winding course.

MISSIONARY UNION MEETS

Three Hundred Delegates Attend Gathering of Roanoke Baptist Association.

The twenty-fourth annual session of the Woman's Missionary Union of the Roanoke Baptist Association convened at Memorial Baptist Church here this morning with approximately three hundred delegates from churches of this section in attendance.

The opening session was marked by addresses of welcome, reports, discussion of the year's record and appointment of committees.

At the noon hour the visitors were guests at a luncheon at the Woman's Club given by the Missionary societies of the Pitt and Washington districts. Maxwell House coffee, donated by the General Foods Corporation, was served under the direction of Mr. W. B. King, representative of the corporation.

The afternoon session was confined to reports of county leaders, reports of committees and addresses by Rev. A. W. Felschman, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, and Rev. L. B. Olive of Chinkiang, China.

The morning session opened with the singing of hymns, repeating of the watchword, devotionals by Mrs. W. O. Blount of Wilson, and organization activities.

Mrs. A. W. Felschman extended a cordial welcome to the delegates assuring them Greenville was delighted to have them as guests. The response was made by Mrs. W. M. Moss of Wilson.

Discussion of the record of the year displayed healthy growth in all communities.

The following reports were presented: Sunbeams, Mrs. J. H. Hines; Royal Ambassadors, Miss Irma Dee Coley; Personal Service Chairman, Mrs. E. Y. Lovelace; Mission Study, Mrs. C. M. Smith; Treasurer, Mrs. C. M. Smith; G. A. S., Y. W. A., and W. M. S., Mrs. E. B. Beasley.

Mrs. Edna R. Harris and Mrs. J. E. Bunn of Raleigh, were the principal speakers. Mrs. Harris stressed the importance of going forward, and Mrs. Bunn told of the "Necessity of Keeping the Heck Memorial."

A duet, "Lead Kindly Light," was rendered by Messrs. S. F. Allen and W. W. Lee.

Says Election of Johnson in Missouri is Another Evidence of Discontent of People with Rule of Republican Party; Predicts the Tariff and Farm Board will be Important Issues of Next Campaign.

Washington, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Jonett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, today reiterated his belief that the Democrats would organize the next Congress.

He said in a statement that the result in the seventh Missouri district where Robert D. Johnson was elected yesterday was "but another evidence of the discontent of the people with the rule of the Republican party and of the nationwide determination to rebuke that party which has made so continuously the boast of enduring prosperity under its rule."

He said the tariff and the Farm Board—"two of the policies that will be important in the national campaign next year"—had been brought to the fore.

"The result speaks for itself," he said. "It gives an adequate reflex of the agricultural west toward the Republican party as at present constituted and directed."

Grand Jury To Probe Cannon

Washington, Sept. 30.—(AP)—District Attorney Rover announced today the District of Columbia grand jury would investigate the charges that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and Ada L. Burroughs, former treasurer of the Virginia Anti-Slavery committee, violated the corrupt practices act in the 1928 Presidential campaign.

The attorney said a score of witnesses, including several bankers and officials of the Methodist Episcopal church, South would be subpoenaed before the grand jury.

McDonald Seeks General Election

London, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald decided today to go to Seaham Harbor Friday night to put the question of a general election before a meeting of his constituents.

The Seaham Labor party already has demanded that he resign.

The cabinet went into session before noon to resume its efforts to formulate a program on which an election can be called. Its decision was expected before Mr. MacDonald goes to Seaham Harbor.

In requesting a hearing from his constituents, the Prime Minister has taken the first opportunity to place before them his views regarding the events that led to the downfall of the Labor ministry, the formation of the National government and his own plans for the future.

While the Labor party has taken every means possible to discredit him, he remains the sitting member of the House of Commons for Seaham Harbor and his status is not affected. That he holds the support of many of the voters was indicated by the close vote of 40 to 39 by which the local party delegates repudiated his leadership.

On the other side of the picture was a story by the Daily Herald, Labor organ, to the effect that the National executive of the Labor party had read out of the organization all ministers in the National government and their supporters.

Thomas Edison Losing Ground

West Orange, N. J., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Thomas A. Edison, suffering from a complication of diseases, has lost strength the past few days, his physician, Dr. Hubert S. Howe, said today in a bulletin.

"Mr. Edison seems to have less interest in things and his strength has failed somewhat in the past few days," Dr. Howe said.

New York—Police are seeking a hit and run truck driver who smashed a rare violin, Harry R. Braun, 22, was carrying a guarantee made in 1891, and valued at $25,000, when he had to dodge a truck in Fifth Avenue traffic. In haste to save himself he dropped the violin. The truck smashed it and vanished. The violin was a gift of August Hecksher, philanthropist.

NAVY ASKED TO CUT EXPENSES

President Hoover Requests Sec. Adams to Reduce Cost Operation Next Year.

Washington, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Secretary Adams and his admirals are searching for a method by which they can cut down expenditures for 1932.

Like his colleagues of the cabinet, the naval secretary has been asked by President Hoover to reconsider budgetary estimates submitted for the year. On highest authority it has been made known that the chief executive wishes the navy to cut its $401,000,000 estimates to

Leonard home was about six miles from here on the Randolman road. No arrests had been made early this afternoon.

Pools of blood were also found in an outhouse near the burned home.

Leonard said his wife had gone to work early while he had left the house with the younger child at 7 a. m. Vera was left alone and was expected to go to school at 8:15 o'clock.

Officers reached the theory that the child had gotten ready for school and was awaiting the bus when she was attacked. They surmised her body was dragged from the wooded spot 100 yards from the house where the coat was found to the outhouse and her skull beaten in there and the body then taken in the house and it set afire.

Leonard identified the coat as that of his daughter.

C. C. Pope and a group of men who were on their way to Greensboro discovered the first which was raging fiercely at 9 o'clock. They summoned Leonard and later, upon finding the blood in the outhouse, sent a messenger to the school to learn whether Vera was there.

Upon being informed that she was not, they called officers. The fire was still too hot to permit a agriculture in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia urging special legislative sessions to adopt the Texas acreage reduction plan.

Yesterday, likewise, efforts to revive the Louisiana proposal to prohibit the planting of cotton entirely in 1932 were renewed. At Baton Rouge the State Board of Liquidation adopted resolutions seeking the Louisiana Legislature's approval of a $50,000 loan to continue the campaign in behalf of the cotton holiday plan.

At Shreveport, a committee organized to conduct the "no cotton in 1932" drive, urged a governor's conference on uniform cotton relief legislation and authorized spokesmen to appear before the Mississippi Legislature to speak for the cotton prohibition measure.

Both Louisiana and South Carolina have adopted the cotton holiday law which was sponsored by Gov. Huey P. Long. It becomes effective, however, only upon assent action by states producing three-fourths of the crop.

Texas, producer of a third of the nation's crop, turned down the cotton prohibition plan in favor of the acreage reduction act for which Lieutenant Governor Witt is seeking support from the other cotton-growing states. Texas action killed the cotton holiday plan unless the new Louisiana campaign should bear fruit there and elsewhere.

Mrs. Ballard told the court it was all the money she had in the world, but Whitley and Cox later entered civil suit for $5,000 each, as damages for defamation of character.

A court order was obtained for opening a safety deposit box which Mrs. Ballard rented in a Wilson bank, and this was found to have contained $6,600. Mrs. Ballard vigorously asserted the money did not belong to her, but was a fund which she was keeping for a relative.

The key to the box was placed in the hands of the authorities to be held until the case comes up for hearing. Despite the fact that efforts have been made to arrange bond and obtain possession of the box, authorities were still in possession of the key today, the required bond demanded by the court having been almost twice as much as the funds said to have been represented in the box.

It had not been determined what action attorneys for Whitley and Cox would take following decision of the higher tribunal, but it was believed they would seek a pardon sometime in the near future on the basis of developments in connection with seizure of the safety deposit box.

SEARCH OF THE HOUSE WHEN THE OFFICERS ARRIVED AND IT WAS SOMETIME LATER BEFORE THE CHILD'S BODY WAS DISCOVERED.

Officers reached the theory that the child had gotten ready for school and was awaiting the bus when she was attacked. They surmised her body was dragged from the wooded spot 100 yards from the house where the coat was found to the outhouse and her skull beaten in there and the body then taken in the house and it set afire.

$340,000,000. He does not desire that the decreases be made, however, at the expense of current construction program, which might be slightly increased.

Meanwhile the secretary announced yesterday an immediate slash in expenditures. The projected eleven destroyer program, authorized by Congress, was cut to five ships after approval for the others was withheld by the White House.

Since President Hoover hopes to slash the 1932 naval expenditures to $340,000,000 as compared with 1931 appropriations, while increasing the construction fund from $50,000,000 to $65,000,000, any curtailment must come from other bureaus while general expenditures are expected to bear the $35,000,000 cut.

ABOUT TOWN

Expressing belief that curtailment of the cotton crop in 1932 and 1933 would "again place cotton upon the throne," Governor Theodore Bilbo convened the Mississippi legislature yesterday in an effort to find a solution for the critical economic situation resulting from low cotton prices.

The chief executive asserted that he would not "hold out false hopes to the public that reduction would immediately follow cotton prices," but expressed belief that curtailment over the two year period would effect a satisfactory improvement.

He favors the same plan adopted by the Texas legislature providing for a twenty-five percent reduction over the two-year period instead of the holiday advocated by Governor Long of Louisiana.

The sapience of this plan is not to be questioned. That it will bring about gradual recovery from the low price condition is the belief of those in position to know, and the farmers will not be forced to suffer from lack of revenue derived from the sale of the staple.

Although North Carolina has not acted upon this important question, it is to be presumed that something definite will be decided upon in the near future so the growers will be able to work along some definite line the next planting season.

It is one of the most monumental tasks the southland has shouldered in many years and one no cotton planter can eschew. It is up to everybody to follow the most advisable plan because all of them will ultimately benefit from the movement to place the staple back upon the economic throne of the nation.

Night before last an aged farmer was held up by highwaymen near the city and badly beaten.

The bandits were in quest of money, but fortunately for the victim he had only a small amount of change in his pocket and this was not molested. Had he been in possession of a larger sum he would be short of that amount now in addition to the severe injuries inflicted by the men in knocking out their victim.

This should be a warning to the public not to carry large sums of money around in their pockets. Unprincipled men are roving the countryside trying to derive a livelihood other than from application of their own effort, and persons believed to be carrying large sums of money around with them at once become the object of their attention.

All money should be placed in banks for use when needed. By doing this the owners not only place their possessions beyond the reach of thieves, but decrease the jeopardy surrounding them while in possession of cash.

This is the first time a daring highway robbery has occurred in this section in months, but thefts have increased to an alarming extent and those who practice along this line had much rather obtain money than other property.

It is unthinkable that people will subject themselves to the peril of thieves and highwaymen when they can eliminate the danger to a considerable extent by throwing every safeguard around their property. It is the careless who must suffer from the activities of the criminal parasites, and those who fail to heed the warning have nobody to blame but themselves.

The public generally regretted to learn of the inability of Governor Franklin Roosevelt to visit Greenville to deliver the annual Armistice Day address before the Pitt County Post of the American Legion in November.

Roosevelt by reason of his prominence in the national political field would have been one of the greatest drawing cards the Legion could obtain. He is one of the leaders of his party at this time and is being widely boosted as probable presidential timber.

Preparation of the budget for the state of New York will prevent the distinguished governor from attending the celebration here and he so stated this fact in expressing his declination of the invitation from Congressman Lindsay Warren.

The Legion, however, is planning to observe the anniversary of the ending of the world war with appropriate ceremonies, and while a speaker has not been decided upon, committee members are determined to obtain the services of a man of national prominence.

They do not wish to appear chauvinistic in the general scheme of observing the day, but desire to make it as important as possible to keep afresh the memory of those days when thousands of men laid down their arms and returned to paths of peace. The memory is mingled with both sorrow and joy, but it will always live to immortalize the men who gave their all that civilization might be saved from the heel of a ruthless god of war.

SAM

By Freeman Lincoln

Synopsis: The long struggle of Sam Sherrill between her loyalty to her fiancé, Peak Abbott, and her love for Freddy Munson cannot end until she confesses to Peak. She accepted him, needing his money, before her stepfather, Fourth Aldersea, became wealthy, at the time her half brother Nelson, eloped with their maid.

Chapter 31
CONFLICTING VERSIONS
There was a long pause, and then Sam stirred uneasily. "It won't be easy," she said in a small, muffled voice. "And you're going to hate me when I'm done. Was I have to say isn't very pleasant, Peak."

"Don't worry about that," he was curt. "I'm more prepared than you know. I can also assure you that nothing you can say will make me hate you." "I'm terribly sensible about it all, I said remember," she asked swiftly, "something that you asked me last night in the summer house?" "I remember quite a lot of things I asked you last night in the Holcomb's summer house." He was playing idly with the gear shift lever.

"It was just at the end—just before we came home. Do you remember asking me if there was anybody else?" "Yes," he nodded. "I shouldn't have said it. I'm sorry."

"Please don't!" She was close to tears. "There's nothing for you to be sorry about, Peak, because you see there was somebody else."

"Oh," he was quite calm. "So that's what you wanted to tell me this afternoon. I rather guessed it at the time. I also rather guessed that I could supply his name. His name is Freddy Munson, isn't it, Sam?"

"Yes," her voice was barely audible. "His name is Freddy Munson."

"I see," Peak lit a cigarette. "Well," he said quietly at last, "let's hear about it. Let's hear all about it from the beginning."

"All right," Sam seemed calmer now; as though the heaviest part of her confession had been made. "I'm not ashamed of the beginning of the thing. It began when there was no reason why it should not begin—some time just before Christmas. He and I were sent out on some assignment for the office together, and afterward I brought him back here for supper. Well, I liked him, and after that I saw him a lot. I don't know why I liked him. He was different from anybody I knew."

"Perhaps that explains it," Peak suggested. "Perhaps it was that, and perhaps it was because he accepted me at my face value. He was interested in me as a person. I saw him almost every day. I didn't want to fall in love with him. I fought against it. I knew we could never be happy together. I knew all about everything, and yet—"

Peak actually laughed. "And yet, before you knew it, you were in over your head." "Yes," she agreed quietly, "that was it. I was in over my head. He asked me to marry him, and I said that I wouldn't. I was terribly sensible about it all. I said that when I married it was going to be for money; that love had no part at all in my scheme of life."

"He didn't like that, I imagine." "He merely ignored it altogether. He kept asking me to marry him until, finally, I didn't care any more: I agreed to go to New York with him that very night. I was to meet him at the train. I packed my bag. I was all ready to go, and then—"

"I think I know the sequel," said Peak gently. "You found Nelson's letter saying that he had eloped."

"Yes, I found that letter, and it did something terribly to me. I had a brain storm. You know what happened?" "Yes."

She turned to him swiftly. "Why don't you say what you're thinking?" she demanded fiercely. "Why don't you tell me what I am? Why don't you admit that you hate me and be done with it?"

"I can't," he shook his head. "I can't for the simple reason that I don't hate you. We're equally guilty. You didn't tell me about Freddy Munson, and I didn't tell you that I've known all about him almost from the beginning. We're even."

"You've known, and you've been willing to be engaged to me just the same!" Sam said dully. "I thought perhaps you might learn to forget about Freddy Munson and come to care for me. I gambled on that. Silly, wasn't it?"

"I don't understand," she said. "You will later on when you get used to the idea," Peak said. "In the meantime let's get on with the story. There's more to tell, isn't there?"

"There's a lot more to tell," said Sam vaguely. "Then suppose you let me tell it." He nodded in the darkness. "I think I have the facts fairly in hand."

Mystified, she peered at him, trying to see his face. "How can you have the facts?" "Maybe I'm just a good guesser. At any rate, let me have a try."

"In the beginning," he said calmly, "you were so stunned by the things that had happened that you were practically numb. On one thing, however, you were determined. You were going to stick firmly to the course you had mapped out for yourself. You were going to marry me, and you were going to have nothing more to do with Freddy."

"That brings us to the time when Fourth came into money. Fourth's windfall was a help. You didn't have to work any more and you didn't have to worry about bills. You were having a good time almost in spite of yourself, for the simple reason that you were not allowing yourself to think. Correct me, if I'm wrong."

Sam did not speak, so Peak nodded and continued with his story. "We now come to the Holcomb's summer house on a windy moonlight night. Last night, to be exact, something happened there which startled you from a long dream that hadn't been altogether unpleasant. You kissed me, and that trivial even brought you to yourself. You began to realize where you had been drifting, and to wonder whether you were being altogether fair to yourself, to me, and to Freddy Munson. You decided that things were in a mess and that something would have to be done about them."

"Go on," said Sam in wonder. "Go on, Peak, tell me more." He shrugged. "There isn't much more. Freddy Munson's coming to town was just the lucky break you needed. It gave you your chance to straighten things out. You had lunch with him today and you straightened things out. That's all."

"Is it?" Sam inquired weakly. "Aren't you going to tell me just how I did it?" "It is necessary to go into all the grim details? You undoubtedly said that you had had a brainstorm and in the midst of it had made a terrible mistake. You indicated that you were quite sane again now, and you wanted to remedy the mistake. You asked if it was possible to remedy it? He said, with appropriate gestures, that it was eminently possible. The curtain fell slowly to soft music."

Sam said nothing. She sat motionless. "And now," Peak continued gently, "we are in the midst of the epilogue. You are telling me what has happened and are asking me not to think badly of you. I, in my turn, am saying that I understand perfectly, and that you have nothing to regret. Nothing more remains but for me to wish you all kinds of happiness, and to take myself quietly away."

He sat up and reached into a pocket for his gloves. "And now I think I'd better be saying good night."

"Oh, Peak, you're wonderful!" Sam turned and put her hand on his arm. "You're so beautifully, gorgeously sure of yourself! Do you want me to tell you the true version of what happened this noon?"

"If you like. If it isn't too painful."

"It isn't painful at all. It's rather prosaic. Freddy and I had lunch. We discussed Fourth's invention. We talked about my new dresses and the parties I'd been going to lately. After that Freddy had to

A'S ON WAY TO CARDINAL STRONGHOLD

By EDWARD J. HUBBARD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Aboard the Special Train of the World Champion Athletics, Bound for St. Louis, Sept. 30. (AP) — Champions of the baseball universe — and well aware of it — the Philadelphia Athletics rolled westward today seeking something no other club in the history of the game has ever attained — three straight world series conquests.

As calmly as a big university eleven faces the first shivering opponent of a football season, Connie Mack's champions for the past two years sped on toward St. Louis and the first game with the Cardinals, flag-bearers of the National League. If ever a team was confident — insolently so — it is the Athletics.

For instance there's big Al Simmons, greatest hitter of the day, sitting on top of a pullman seat, leading a half dozen of his mates in song. At the other end of the car Lefty Grove, the lone-voiced lancer, strives desperately to fill an inside straight.

There's Jimmy Foxx, the power house that roams around first base, bidding three diamonds, walling as a fessue goes wrong. Off in a corner Joe Boley, shortstop of two world champion machines, ousted now by a youngster, Dibs Williams, silently nurses an injured leg.

Waite Hoyt, the fashion plate, hurling hero of world series when the New York Yankees were riding the high waves, tries on all the good looking hats in the car and gets into an argument with "Big Jarge" Earnshaw the right handed ace, as he muses the pitcher's carefully oiled hair.

Sleek, blonde Max Bishop, his shoulder entirely healed, browses through a magazine.

Jimmy Dykes and Bing Miller play solitaire and argue. Rube Walberg chafes over a cross-word puzzle.

Mickey Cochrane, perhaps the greatest of modern catchers, is leading chess. "Poppey" Mahaffey, "Robbie" McNeil, Roger Cramer, youngsters and first line substitutes are in the first. Mule Haas, enviable possessor of the loudest "razzberry" in the American League makes the most noise.

Off in a compartment with his family, the 88-year-old Connie Mack, heading hopefully toward his eighth world series and the final crown of his baseball life — three straight world champions — avoids all talk of baseball. For him the series will be played in St. Louis and Philadelphia had not the pullmans eating up the miles between.

SPORTS SLANTS

Add to the latest mystery of baseball life the strange case of Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, comedy team of the Washington Senators.

For years and years — since 1919, in fact — Nick and Al have cavorted before American league crowds each season, their funny stunts never failing to lure chuckles and guffaws from the fanfoll. As a comedy team they were the funniest thing that ever hit baseball.

They were smart enough to keep abreast of major doings in other branches of sport. Gertrude Ederle had scarcely completed her wondrous paddle across the English channel before Nick, with a tiny skirt around his middle to maintain the feminine illusion, was puffing and laboring about in the dirt back of home plate before the start of the Senators' games while Al tenderly gave him aid and sustenance.

As soon as Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills had caught the imaginations of the sports public, Nick and Al appeared with their phantom tennis match, an uproarious spectacle. Plainly Nick stroked an imaginary ball while Al made desperate efforts to return it, finally winding up in a heap on the sod as Nick came to the net and blasted him from the court. Then they did it in slow motion.

The Realistic Altrock
Everything was lovely until they hit upon a burlesque of the "long count" in the second Dempsey-Tunney fight at Chicago. It was one of the funniest acts they ever staged, but apparently it was beyond a possibility of repair.

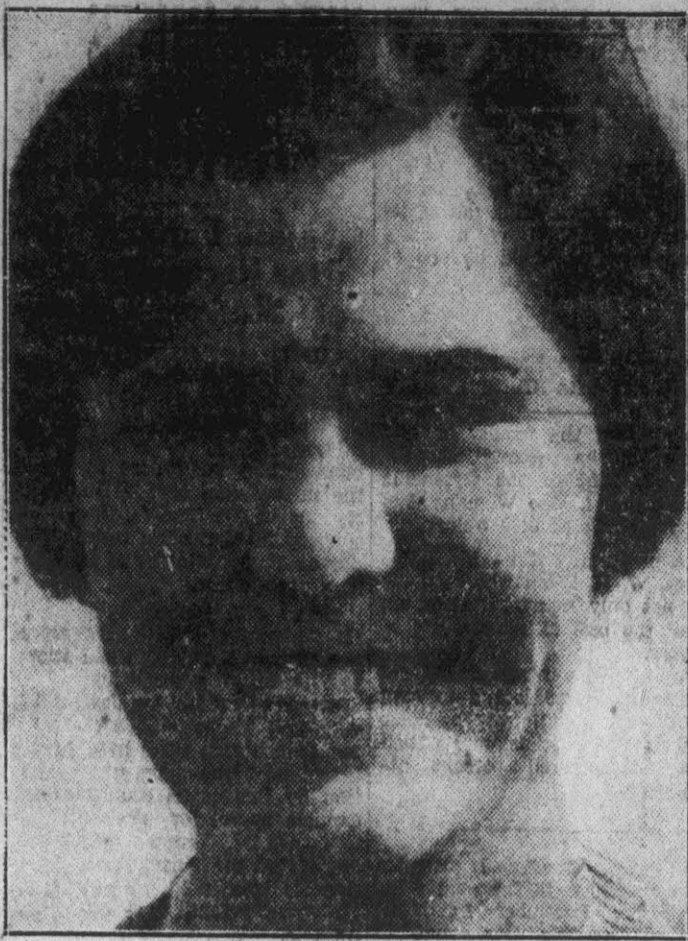

Schacht, who devises the skits and works the mouf, plays the part of Tunney. They set up their tiny ring just off the diamond, draft seconds and all the paraphernalia of the prize ring, and go to work.

When the famous seventh round came along Schacht gets soaked and Nick frantically paces the enclosure while the referee counts up into double numbers.

Beautiful Friendship Ends
Now Nick and Al are not speaking, they no longer do their stunts together, and the boxing bout is to blame. Nick hits too hard, Al claims, and he does not on purpose. Al never gets a chance to hit back.

The gloves are supposed to be tied loosely and the punches are nothing but slaps. But one day in Philadelphia, when the "bad feeling" between the comedians was reaching the peak, one of the Athletics helped Altrock put on his gloves. "The right one good and tight," Nick whispered in his ear. "I want to get in one more good belt at that guy."

The Wall Is Up
Altrock and Schacht still do their funny work before the Senators' games, but they cavort separately. Nick plays first base in the fielding practice and he's very funny. When he departs, Schacht comes rushing out in a cutaway coat and battered pig hat and goes through his routine.

They may not be with the club next season, although Schacht, once the games start, is the Senators' regular third base coach, a shrewd baseball man. Altrock even now does some left-handed pitching in batting practice and once in awhile hits in a regular late season game.

They have played before world's series crowds and are in great demand on barnstorming trips. In the off season they command as high as $300 a performance. But it's all over now. Schacht is studying to be a stage comedian. And Nick has no part in his plans for the future.

Leonard Told To Get Reputation And Then Fight
New York, Sept. 30. (AP) — In effect, it seems, the New York State Athletic commission has told Benny Leonard, one of the greatest fighters in boxing history, to go out and get himself a reputation.

The commission declined to give its sanction to a bout between the retired undefeated lightweight champion and Paul Walker, hard-bitten young middleweight from Trenton, N. J., and informed Leonard that he would have to prove his ability in the smaller fight clubs before appearing again in Madison Square Garden. The Garden had booked the Leonard-Walker battle for October 16 with every indication of a sell-out.

The lead in barring Leonard from the Walker bout was taken by 87-year-old William Muldoon, famed "sold man," who maintained that Leonard's absence from the ring justified the commission's action. He was backed up vigorously by the commission chairman, James A. Farley.

COTTON PICKING NOT STOPPING EDUCATION
Colesville, N. C., Sept. 30. (AP) — In order that cotton picking may not interfere with education, and vice versa, Supt. E. W. Junker, of the Colesville schools is using a new system. Now classes begin at 7:30 a. m. and end at what most people call lunch time, so that the cause of both education and the economics of the rural patrons may be served.

Wanted—Everybody to try the new drink—NEHI Grape-fruit.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has definitely decided to start Dibs Williams at short stop in place of Joe Boley, thus making his first switch in the championship team that clubbed its way to victory over the Cardinals a year ago, and the Cubs in 1929.

COOL WEATHER ADDS ZEST TO GRIDIRON JOBS

Charlotte, Sept. 30. (AP) — Regular football weather today had given added zest to gridiron practices in North Carolina as four of the state's Big Five teams prepared to meet Southern Conference foes and the fifth looked forward to an engagement with one of this section's strongest non-conference members.

Indications that North Carolina would attempt to use the air route as the best means of getting past Vanderbilt were seen at Chapel Hill where Coach Chuck Collins worked his charges overtime on long passes.

The Commodores are listed among the chief bidders for the conference title this season and the North Carolina game will give Dan McGugin's outfit an excellent opportunity to prove its worth.

N. C. State is another team that is devoting considerable time to the passing angle of winning football games. Coach Clipper Smith, however, is losing no time on other phases of practice. He gave his proteges a review in fundamentals yesterday before turning attention toward the aerial game.

Wallace Wade's efforts to get Duke in shape for the V. M. I. game Saturday were somewhat upset by his own freshmen. The yearlings held the varsity scoreless and pushed over three touchdowns of their own in a practice game at Durham.

Davidson's squad is working against Washington and Lee palyas as Coach Monk Younger strives to get the Wildcats in shape for the Generals. The manner in which the "Cats" reserves interpreted the plays failed to impress the varsity as they held the second stringers scoreless and chalked up a pair of markers to their own credit.

Coach Pat Miller, somewhat disappointed at the way in which his big team performed against North Carolina last week, sought a clicking backfield combination to throw against Furman at Gastonia Saturday.

Danny Fleischer, New Jersey third string halfback, was switched to the varsity quarterback berth with good results.
