SUGAR-NUTS INVOLVED IN PHILIPPINES

Two Commodities Feature Consideration For Independence of the Islands

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Two fixtures in the Philippine independence picture are the coconut and the sugar cane.

Their presence might easily have been in the mind of President Hoover yesterday when he said independence now would mean an economic collapse for the islands.

He wants the Philippines to get their financial affairs in better shape before they strike out for themselves.

The coconut and the sugar cane have been a factor in the apparently growing sentiment who feel that the competition of Filipino vegetable oils, made largely from the meat of the coconut, and sugar make it harder for farmers in this country to scale economic obstacles.

They have not been convinced by arguments that there is little competition between Filipino oils and American butter and oleomargarine and that sugar from the islands makes slight difference one way or the other.

Philippine products enter the United States duty free. In 1930, 72 per cent of their total of $133,000,000 in exports and $123,000,000 in imports came to this country.

The far away islands had a favorable trade balance with this country last year of $27,659,000.

Not all of that balance was sugar and copra derivatives but those who, from economic motives, want the Philippines let loose are not concerned with goods America would import anyhow.

If the islands were freed, most of their products, sugar and vegetable oils included, would probably find a tariff wall to hurdle before they were placed on the shelves of American stores. That, at least, is the plan of most congressional exponents of independence.

Dwight Davis, governor general of the Philippines, said frankly last year that a United States duty on Philippine sugar would mean the ruin of that industry.

Among the Filipino political leaders, even those loudest in their demands for independence—and that includes the majority—admit that immediate independence would give the islands severe financial aches and pains.

Proposals only yesterday by Manuel Quezon, president of the Insular Senate, were that the islands be given immediate freedom but that free trade be continued for 10 years.

LEAF PRICES ADVANCE HERE

Competitive Bidding Described As Keen On Better Grades of Tobacco

With competitive bidding probably keener than any other time this season, prices for better grades of tobacco continue to advance on the Greenville tobacco market, according to the report of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales.

The report showed that the market yesterday displayed of 1,217,042 pounds of tobacco for $143,456.94 at a general average of $11.76 per hundred pounds.

The Greenville market continued to lead all other markets of the belt from the standpoint of volume, and indications were that the lead would be definitely increased with the heavy sales this week.

The block resulting from the offering of approximately two and half million pounds of leaf here Monday was definitely cleared up yesterday afternoon, and the market started out with a clean slate this morning.

Sales were expected to be completed this afternoon.

JAPAN SENDS RUSSIA NOTE

Warns Against Demonstrations on Manchurian Border; Treaties to League

Tokyo, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Concerned because of a "possible misinterpretation" of Russian military operations, the Japanese foreign minister, Baron Shidehara, dispatched a "friendly note of warning" to Moscow today requesting the discontinuance of troop demonstrations along the Manchurian-Siberian border.

The Russian demonstrations, the note said, were causing an unpleasant effect upon Japanese as well as Chinese troops in Manchuria.

The Japanese consul at Tschishin Western Manchuria, reported that between 20,000 and 30,000 Russian soldiers were concentrated west of Manchuria and in the vicinity of Pogranichnaya. These two cities are on the borders of Manchuria at each end of the Chinese Eastern Railway, which runs through Manchuria and provides a short cut for the Russian trans-Siberian Railway between Chita and Vladivostok.

Japan decided today to lay before the League of Nations council as part of her case in the unsettled Manchurian controversy, a list of treaties which she contends China has failed to respect.

This was understood to be her reply to the statement by Dr. Alfred Soe, Chinese spokesman, in a letter to Aristide Briand, chairman of the council, that China recognizes she is bound under the League covenant to respect treaty obligations.

The list is to be handed to the council when it reconvenes next month at Geneva to resume consideration of the Manchurian dispute and with it, the foreign office intimated, would go the Japanese views on the treaty question.

Capone Awaits Lawyers' Action

Chicago, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Al Capone remained in the county jail today while his attorneys decided what to do next.

Granted a supersedeas that allowed him to stay out of the penitentiary during appeal to the Supreme court, but denied bail, the gangster was ordered kept in custody with no credit toward his eleven years sentence in Leavenworth for tax evasion. No deduction will be allowed for the time he spends in jail.

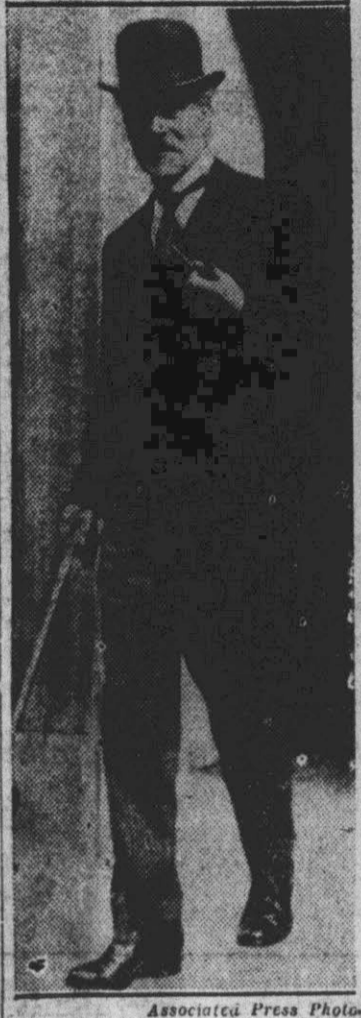

Defense Attorney Michael Ahern said he might go to Washington to apply for bail to Justice Van Devanter.

The Supreme Court member assigned to the Seventh Judicial circuit. If he were refused bail there, Ahern indicated that he might ask to have the writ of supersedeas varied, so Capone could be taken to Leavenworth to start serving his sentence, pending further legal action.

While Capone's lawyers were working for him, the gang leader remained in a hospital ward on the fifth floor of the jail. He eats the jail's communal mush of oatmeal with his morning coffee and stewed fruit, but has his lunch sent in by his family.

SHIPWRECKED MEN RESCUED

Three Americans Are Picked Up On Lonely Pacific Isle After Six Months' Stay

Balboa, Canal Zone, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Three Americans, steaming toward this port aboard the gunboat Sacramento today after their rescue from six months of shipwreck existence on a lonely Pacific isle, were trying to make up for constant smoking.

The castaways, clad only in loin cloths, were found by the gunboat yesterday afternoon on the beach of the island of Coos, 850 miles southwest of Panama. Their presence there was discovered Saturday by Julius Fleischmann, son of a former mayor of Cincinnati, who is cruising to the South Seas in the yacht Camargo. His party found the remains of the yawl "West Wind," which wrecked last April, and a note signed by the three men which indicated they had been on the spot 48 hours before.

The note said the castaways had exhausted the supply of coconuts on that side of the island and that they had struck inland to look for more. Search of the island by the Camargo company was hampered by rain and the dense jungle growth with which it is matted.

The rescued men are Paul Stachwick of Huron, S. D.; Gordon Branner of Springfield, Ill., and Elmer J. Pailiser of San Diego, Cal.

Guns and fishing tackle, salvaged along with a few other articles from their yawl, aided them in their six-months' struggle to keep supplied from food.

For the first few days they found fish easy to catch in the mountain streams, but later the fish became wary of their bait. They built a dug-out canoe and attempted to fish in the ocean with not much success.

Their shelter was a rude hut made of trees and tightly thatched to keep out an almost constant heavy rain. The island is only 13 miles in circumference. It was once a rendezvous for pirates.

LADY ASTOR WINS AGAIN

Returned To British Parliament With Big Vote; Nine Women Elected In All

By EDWARD STANLEY (Associated Press-Staff Writer) London, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Lady Nancy Astor, the first woman ever to be elected to the House of Commons, will cut a greater figure than ever when the House reassembles in December.

Thus far, as a result of yesterday's voting, nine women members have been elected, all of them Conservatives and it seems probable that they will be captained by the Virginia girl, who has made a distinguished place for herself in British politics.

At the last election, in 1929, Lady Astor only squeezed into the House with a majority of 211 votes over her Labor opponent. This time, in a straight fight, her majority was 10,204.

All three Socialist women members of Parliament met defeat yesterday. They were Margaret Bondfield, first woman to achieve a cabinet place; Ellen Wilkinson and Mrs. Mary Hamilton. Five other Socialist women candidates, one National Liberal and one Communist also were defeated.

One of the new Conservative women members, Mrs. Ida Copleland, defeated Sir Oswald Mosley, founder of the "new party."

She is no newcomer to politics, for she was chairman of the stock-on-trent women's unionist association for ten years. Her husband is a pottery manufacturer, and she is actively interested in the work of the Pioneer Girl Guides.

Miss Irene Ward, who defeated Margaret Bondfield, toured Canada at one time lecturing on British industrial policies.

The honorable Mary Pickford, daughter of Lord Sterndale, was a factory inspector during the war. Miss F. M. Graves worked with the peace conference as liaison officer between the war office and the League of Nations.

Foil Attempt To Break Jail

Smithfield, Oct. 28.—(AP)—The negro has found another use for singing at his work.

Sunday afternoon 17 prisoners in the Johnson county jail formed a plan to walk away. Later a juvenile prisoner brought them an axe.

They began singing and chopping a hole in the wall, their song drowning out the axe's blows.

Wilson Doctor Arrested For Being Drunk

Raleigh, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Dr. Chas. Swindell of Wilson, is charged with public drunkenness and carrying a concealed weapon in a warrant sworn out here by a State Highway patrolman.

With Less Than Half of Returns Still to Come, Conservative Party Has 308 of the 615 Seats in House, With Predicted Increase Before Count Is Over; David Lloyd George Left Only Handful of Liberals in the House of Commons

London, Oct. 28.—(AP)—On the basis of returns from the 587 constituencies, the party standing in the House of Commons is as follows:

Conservatives, 463; National Labor, 13; National Liberal, 65; Lloyd George Liberals, 4; Opposition Labor, 49; Independents, 3; Communists, 0; New Party, 0.

Thus the government can count on 541 votes and the opposition only 49. The Lloyd George Liberals are expected to support the government except on a tariff proposal and the Independents must be listed as doubtful.

London, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Twenty-seven million British voters swept Ramsay MacDonald's National Government back into office in yesterday's voting, giving the Conservatives a clear party majority, wrecking the old Labor Party and leaving David Lloyd George only a handful of the old line Liberals in the House of Commons.

With something less than half of the returns still to come the Conservatives had 308 of the 615 seats in the House and it was freely predicted that before the count was over they would have more than 400.

So large a majority has not gone to a party since 1832—just a century ago—when the Liberals had 307 seats in the House.

The top-heavy Conservative margin is highly significant and as a sensational development as any other aspect of the election.

The party's sensational gains probably will throw a new set of problems into Mr. MacDonald's lap, and he indicated as much today when he headed his first returns clearly showing the sweeping Conservative victory. His first statement was to the effect that the victory was to the National government and not to individual parties.

The Prime Minister's own constituency at Seaham Harbor had not computed its vote, but in view of the government's smashing success everywhere else in the country the possibility of an upset in Seaham appeared remote.

Arthur Henderson's Labor party was crushed, and "Uncle Arthur" himself was defeated in his own district. Before the election it was predicted that Labor might lose 109 seats at most. With half the returns in today the party had dropped 140 and the tide was still set against it.

Without Mr. Henderson the party was leaderless but several of its outstanding spokesmen issued statements to the effect that the party would keep its powder dry and be ready for what the future might bring.

Mr. MacDonald, contrary to custom, left Seaham in the morning and flew down to London to take personal charge as Prime Minister. He expected to see the King this afternoon or tomorrow and he summoned the cabinet for a meeting tomorrow morning.

With the exception of Mr. Henderson and possibly Mr. MacDonald, all the party leaders were elected. David Lloyd George, who's Liberals polled a disappointingly small vote, came through with a substantial majority in his own Welsh district.

Stanley Baldwin, the Conservative chief, was elected without opposition before the general balloting.

Sir John Simon, leader of the Liberal wing which broke away from Lloyd George, was elected.

Nancy Lady Astor, the American-born M. P. got a majority of 10,000 votes running as a Conservative. Eight other women were elected, but Margaret "Our Maggie" Bondfield, a cabinet minister in the Labor government, was defeated.

Negro Distillers Remanded to Jail Following Arrest By Federal Officers

John Grumwelle and Jesse Heath colored, were held in the county jail in this city today awaiting trial in Federal court on a charge of violating the prohibition law.

The still had just been fired up and placed in operation when the officers arrived and so complete was the surprise of the two men that they were captured without trouble.

They were brought to town and given preliminary hearing before U. S. Marshal T. E. Beaman and remanded to jail in default of $500 bond each.

Officers said the mule and cart were the property of Don Lewis, owner of the farm.

MRS. HOOKER HOSTESS TO SANS SOUCI CLUB

On Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock, the Sans Souci Book Club was delightfully entertained by Mrs. Will Hooker at her home on Fifth street. All but two members were present and a vigorous, delightful program was given.

The club is studying George Washington—besides the papers including his personality, character and achievements, others bring out the sources of talents and qualities contributing to the harmonious union of intellectual and moral powers which George Washington possessed and show step by step the development of these powers.

Beginning with his birthplace, his various homes have been brought into an interesting and informative paper by Mrs. Frank Wooten who talked delightfully on the subject.

Those who delight in discussing what part environment plays in the building of character would do well to reflect on these homes.

She charmingly talked particularly of his birthplace on the large plantation—between Bridges Creek and Pope's Creek—the lower Potomac—where three generations of the Washington family had made their home, prior to the birth of our Washington whose name was so famous as to lend fame to all things and places connected with his active life and career. Mrs. Wooten carried her discussion well into the early history of Wakefield, Mount Vernon; Washington Homestead on Rappahannock river, into his numerous migratory abiding places, military headquarters, and the presidential mansions—the first in New York City, now Franklin Square—leaving us to linger and dwell lovingly around our present national shrine—beautiful Mount Vernon—whose gilded dome is but the "love and gratitude of all America settled upon it in one eternal sunshine."

Mrs. Carey Warren ably presented current events—discussing at length the Manchurian situation, after which the meeting was in charge of the hostess, who served a delicious barbecue luncheon.

Entertains For Bride-Elect.

Mrs. Robert B. Darden entertained Monday evening at the home of Mrs. William B. Herring on Chestnut street in honor of Miss Athlene Edwards, bride-elect of December. Members of her church circle were the invited guests. The home was beautifully decorated with dahlias and fall roses. The dining table was lovely with a lace cover, a silver basket of dahlias formed the centerpiece.

The guests were met at the door by Mrs. Darden and Mrs. W. S. Dail. They were first asked to register in the bride's book and make a wish for her. The reading of these wishes afforded much laughter. After this an enjoyable game was played.

Mrs. John Karsnak and Mrs. J. E. Kirkpatrick in their usual charming manner, rendered a very delightful musical program, accompanied at the piano by Miss Ona Shindler. At the sound of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus the miniature bridal party entered. Little Miss Marjorie Dean Allen, maid of honor, in a dress of yellow, carrying pink and white dahlias, entered first, followed by the bride and groom. The bride, little Miss Mary Barden Taylor, was never more lovely than in her bridal costume. Her bouquet which she presented to Miss Edwards, the bride-elect, proved to be a shower of handkerchiefs. The groom, Mitchell White Jr., in a dress-suit, bore a message for the bride-elect.

Later in the evening a delectable salad course was served by Messdames Darden, Herring, Dail and Miss Ella Sockwell. Miniature shoulder corsages of yellow chrysanthemums were the favors used on the plates.

and is looking forward to a genuine spiritual awakening.

The Legion several weeks ago extended an invitation to Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, to deliver the address, but he was forced to decline because of pressing business in connection with the state budget.

The committee then decided to obtain some other main of national prominence and choice centered on Mr. Smith. His acceptance was received with gratification by members of the Legion today, and belief was expressed that he would prove as big a drawing card for the celebration as any other person to be obtained.

In addition to the address, to feature the main exercises, the Legion observance will consist of the annual barbecue dinner to former service men, and football game at the Third street stadium in the afternoon, and a picture show.

Greenville has always made it a point to make the observance of the ending of the war as significant as possible, and members of the committee on arrangements expressed opinion the forthcoming celebration would be one of the best in years.

CAPONE BODYGUARD SENT TO JAIL FOR SIX MONTHS

day for carrying his loaded pistol into Federal court.

Judge Wilkerson said the presence of an armed man during the trial of Capone's income tax evasion case was a direct menace to the court itself and adjudged D'Andrea guilty of contempt of court.

A two weeks' stay of execution was granted and D'Andrea was paroled to Michael Ahern, his and Capone's lawyer.

D'Andrea had been in the county jail since October 10 when he was found carrying a loaded pistol in the courtroom. He had been sitting directly behind Capone every day of the trial until his arrest. Yesterday, throwing himself on the mercy of the court, the bodyguard admitted he had carried the weapon daily.

Before sentencing D'Andrea, Judge Wilkerson said it was clear he was a member of an "outlaw gang" which not only tried to intimidate government witnesses in the Capone trial, but also caused defense witnesses to perjure themselves.

"This gang," the court said, "exercised a control over people with whom it came in contact that resembled nothing less than insurrection against the laws of the United States."

"I could have been totally blind had I not noticed the intimidation of witnesses. Time and again I noticed witnesses faltering on the stand."

TO ADVANCE THE PRICE OF FURNITURE

Sixteen Manufacturers Announce New Scale Will Be Made Effective

High Point, Oct. 28.—The first step in a movement aimed at a general increase in wholesale furniture prices, was taken today by a group of 16 Dixie manufacturers.

The High Point Enterprise says that notices were sent to the salesmen for these companies that a new price scale would become effective with the opening of the mid-season markets at Chicago and Grand Rapids, Mich.

The paper adds that with this step the South is taking the lead in a campaign to re-establish furniture making on a profitable basis.

Similar steps are contemplated by manufacturers in other parts of the country, it was said.

The notices sent the salesmen by the 16 Southern manufacturers said that price list withdrawals had been ordered effective November 2. The new scale of prices will be issued prior to that date.

It was said by manufacturers here that prices should advance 25 per cent if they are to yield a profit to the producer.

Present prices, the paper said, are 65 per cent under the 1921 scale and 20 per cent under 1917 prices.

TOM ABOUT

The special subscription offer inaugurated by the Reflector several weeks ago will come to a close Saturday of this week and those who haven't taken advantage of it are urged to do so immediately.
 By reducing the subscription price slightly over one cent a day the circulation department of the Reflector has placed the paper within reach of men and women in every walk of life. It enables the public to obtain a complete leased weekly newspaper at a rate of $1.50 less than the regular subscription price of $5.00 annually.
 The Reflector, in addition to the leased wire, furnishes splendid local news, pictures and fiction, and provides entertainment for every member of the family, from the school child to the oldest of parents. This is the last time such a reduction will be offered in years, and those who fail to take advantage of it will let a splendid opportunity slip through their hands.
 Don't wait until the last minute. Mail a check to the circulation department while you think of it and insure yourself of keeping in intimate touch with local, state, national and world events during the next year.

Governor Gardner is not ready to call a special session of the legislature to consider reduction of cotton and tobacco acreage, although he is not definitely said he would do so.
 However, with the considerable amount of pressure being brought to bear upon him from different parts of the state, it is believed he will act favorably in the near future.
 "There is no pressure and no power that can force me to call a special session of the North Carolina General Assembly unless I am convinced that it would be in the best interest of the public good," the governor declared in a statement to the press yesterday. "By the same token there is no power and pressure that can prevent me from calling it if my sense of duty and conscientious conviction direct that it should be called. At no time during this critical period have I lost sight of the fact that I am a servant of the North Carolina people."
 It is difficult to understand the governor's line of reasoning when repeated requests for a special session of the legislature to deal with the cotton and tobacco situation, the people evidently constitute the state of North Carolina, and their pressure should certainly have some weight in the decision whether the governor feels like they are right or not.
 Some of the people behind the movement probably are as well acquainted with economic conditions confronting the state at this time as the best of thought, and officials could certainly be guided by sentiment when it represents large groups of persons instead of individuals.

The United States is in favor of a League of Nations proposal for a one-year arms holiday, and plans to inform that body at an early date.
 The government, however, is not going into the movement without having first considered the question from every angle. Officials seem convinced that the nation's program defense will in no wise be affected and that other participating nations would fare no differently than ourselves.
 The movement was precipitated by the idea of trying to improve the economic situation of the world by reducing armament expenses. Millions of dollars are spent annually by the nations as they attempt to carry out their programs of defense, and it is believed if they could go a year without such preparation they would be able to save money which under ordinary circumstances would go into pre-war business purposes.
 The League of Nations has undertaken a tremendous task, but if it is successful it will have accomplished a definite stroke leading to

LADY with a PAST
 By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: For a long carefree week, Venice Muir has roamed about Paris, happy that her social failures in New York are left behind her. Her mother has brought her to Paris to make a fresh start in the struggle for popularity. Mrs. Muir has had a severe cold, which prevents her from looking up her friends, and gives Venice freedom to be herself and do what she wants. Venice is fond of reading and analyzing people. If it were not for her mother's passion for society, she would try to write. On the boat she has met a young man, Johnny Maple, who promises to look her up in Paris. She meets a girl in the hotel lounge, and they fall into conversation. The girl says that she is over alone, that she broke loose from her family because it is partly mad, and she hates parties. "So do I," Venice says. "Why do you?"

Chapter 15
A CAMEL AT ZELLI'S
 "Men don't care about me. I have three beautiful sisters and I'm famed in Philadelphia as the family's ugly duckling."
 "How unfair," Venice exclaimed. "Well, it doesn't matter anyway," the other girl said. "What are parties?"
 Venice stared. "Why, everything?"
 "How do you figure that?"
 "What else is there for a girl well brought-up but popularity?" The girl suddenly regarded Venice as if she must be exceedingly stupid.
 "Books and plays and travelling. Interesting people here and there who don't care whether you're pretty or not."
 "Don't you miss attention?" Venice asked. "You never feel lonely?"
 "Certainly not. I think I'm happier than my sisters who are forever worrying about one man or another. Nothing can worry me outside myself."
 This last statement was made with a certain triumph. There was a pause. Venice's mind was racing over this new viewpoint. She was trying to adjust it to herself.
 The girl looked at her watch. "I'm off to bed," she said.
 They parted in the elevator.
 "Good night," said the girl.
 "Good night," Venice echoed, walking towards her room.
 She must model herself along the lines of this girl.
 "Venice, Venice," it was Mrs. Muir's fretful voice.
 "Yes, Mother. How are you feeling?"
 "A little better, I think. I was just wondering. Have you heard from that Johnny Maple?"
 "Something that the girl with the big eyes had left with Venice evaporated."
 "No," she said sullenly.
 "Well, it would be too bad if you didn't glean a single invitation from your crossing."
 "Yes," Venice agreed wearily.
 "Good night, Mother. I do hope you'll feel better in the morning."
 "Good night, dear."
 Mrs. Muir felt better the following day but stayed in bed.
 In the afternoon Venice took a taxi to out-of-the-way corners of the city. She was lifted to acute happiness on the high hills of Sacre-Coeur where she left the cab and sat on a wall to stare down at the mass of huddled roofs below. So many indigents crowded together, shoulder to shoulder, warm and human beneath a yellow shawl of sunshine.
 She tried to give her mother some idea of her impressions but Mrs. Muir's only reception was, "My dear, I was in Paris before you were born."
 The telephone rang. They both started.
 Venice lifted the receiver. "Hello!"
 "Hello, Venice?"
 "Yes."
 "It's Johnny Maple. How are you?"
 "Splendid. When did you get to town?"
 "Last night. How about Zelli's tonight? Would you like to go?"
 "I'd love to. Come for me around eleven."
 "As you command, mademoiselle. The Westminister's in the Rue de la Paix, isn't it?"
 "Yes. Until tonight. Good-bye, Johnny."
 "How lovely," cried Mrs. Muir. "What did he invite you to do?"
 "To dance at Zelli's."
 "You must wear your new turquoise chiffon, Venice."
 Mrs. Muir's face was alight. She had forgotten her troublesome to function actively in its task of helping banks turn their gilt-edge, but frozen assets, into ready cash for trade channels.

CREDIT POOL TO FUNCTION IN FEW DAYS

 Hopeful of buoyant results from the plan, the administration has dropped from the time being its contemplated action for strengthening railroad bonds.
 One reason for this is the belief of officials that no such move should be made while the railroads are still considering Interstate Commerce Commission's proposal that they pool revenue from specific rate increases to aid weaker roads.
 The administration tackled the problem in the belief that generally beneficial results would be attained, since many savings banks and insurance companies are heavy holders of railroad securities. Strengthening of railroad bonds would inevitably improve the position of these institutions.
 One idea considered proposed mobilization of a special pool by private bankers and others, out of which financial aid could be extended to carriers needing help. This was found, however, to present many difficulties.
 Mr. Hoover has kept in close touch with the formation of the general $500,000,000 credit pool by private bankers. He was told Sunday by a group of financiers that almost unanimous support from the plan was indicated as it neared completion.
 Through it banks will be able to discount securities now ineligible for such action by the Federal Reserve system. Solvent, as well as many insolvent institutions, are expected to find ready cash available on paper heretofore unnegotiable and listed as frozen assets.

Later, at Deoghur, Bengal, she did evangelistic work, among the pilgrims who throng to the great shrine. Mrs. Madsen's rich and various experiences on the missionary fields make interesting material for her talks.

THAD MOORE STORE DESTROYED BY FIRE AT HOUSES STATION

Thad Moore's store at House Station was completely destroyed by fire last night about 12 o'clock, but the loss and origin of the blaze had not been determined today.
 The Greenville fire department responded to an alarm sent in by telephone but the building was doomed when the firemen arrived and they confined their attention to the saving of nearby buildings.
 The firemen used extinguishers and an emergency water supply carried on the truck to combat the blaze.
 The building was a single-story wooden structure and was a complete loss as was the stock of good consisting of general merchandise and groceries.

Market Report

Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 5 to 8 points on a moderate demand from the trade, Liverpool and local sources which appeared to be influenced by the relatively higher Liverpool cables. A few minutes after the call the market eased off slightly.

December eased off to 6.65 and March to 6.88 with the market showing net losses of about 6 to 10 points by the end of the first half hour.

Liverpool cables said that hedging had been taken by continental buying and calling in that market and reported fair sales of cotton cloths to the British home trade and China.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Wheat scored a rapid late advance today to fresh high prices for the season. Word that 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been brought for shipment to France was a stimulative factor, together with a jump of more than 4 cents a bushel in wheat quotations at Buenos Aires. Heavy profit taking sales of wheat future deliveries developed here, however, and led to wide fluctuations before the close.

Wheat closed irregular at 1-6 cent decline to 3-8 advance compared with yesterday's finish. Corn 1-8-5-8 up, oats unchanged to 1-8 off, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to a rise of 12 cents.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Securities markets again drifted downward today, as Wall street was unable to make up its mind whether the news should be interpreted bullish or bearish.

While some banking quarters interpreted the overwhelming conservative victory in England as distinctly constructive, the prospect of a high British tariff was less pleasing. Maintenance of the common dividend by U. S. Steel was counterbalanced by its extremely poor earnings statement.

Foreign bonds showed strength, in response to the British elections, but markets generally manifested a heavy undertone. Stocks lost about 1 to 6 points during the morning, but had a slight and uneven rally during the early afternoon. Pennsylvania declined 1 1/4 to a new low, then recovered partially, after the dividend announcement. Union Pacific lost 6 points, and New York Central, Illinois Central and Atlantic Coast Line declined 2 to 3 pts. to new bottom prices. Other shares declining about 2 to 3 points included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, North American, Bethlehem, International Harvester, American Can, Woolworth and others.

The ready absorption of profit-taking in the wheat market, on details that France had made a substantial purchase of the American grain, was a somewhat encouraging development in the financial markets.

Announcement of a 50-cent quarterly dividend by Pennsylvania R. R., in contrast to 75 cents previously paid, was about as expected, and prompted some short covering. The maintenance of 81 common dividend by U. S. Steel, announced after the close of yesterday's market, had been too generally anticipated to provide a stimulus to the market.

FIVE HELD IN HICKORY CASE

Face Trial For Attempting To Obstruct Justice In Mortgage Receivership

Wilmington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Five persons today faced arrest and trial in federal court here after being indicted for perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice in obtaining a temporary receivership for the Home Mortgage Company of Hickory last year.

Mrs. Margaret M. Ramsey of Norfolk, Va., plaintiff in the original receivership proceedings, headed the list of defendants, being indicted, along with her attorney, Alton L. Jordan of Norfolk, in two bills alleging perjury and conspiracy.

Also indicted are W. Shepherd Drewery, a member of a widely known Norfolk law firm; R. Clarence Dooler of South Mills, N. C., who formerly practiced law in Norfolk but left Virginia when the bar association there began an inquiry into his practices; and Andrew J. Davis, member of the Norfolk brokerage firm of Davis and West, Mrs. Ramsey's employers.

The bills of indictment alleged that Mrs. Ramsey, testifying before Special Master Charles B. Calvert of Baltimore, claimed to own $3,500 worth of bonds of the $17,000,000 mortgage company on which she had not received interest payments. It is now alleged that she never owned any such bonds. She, with the other defendants, are also alleged to have held numerous conferences and made many trips in an effort to secure the receivership by means of false evidence.

Judge I. M. Meekins, in U. S. District Court, finally granted the receivership, but the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed him, and held the company sound and properly operated. Mrs. Ramsey had charged mismanagement.

The receivership action was begun in September, 1930, and was fought through the courts until last April, when the company was returned to its original management.

LADY with a PAST

By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: Venice Muir hopes to find the talisman of social success in Paris. She has spent most of her time in New York watching the popularity of other girls. Since childhood her mother has told Venice always to be attractive, to smile and talk brightly at all times. But Venice has been hampered by diffidence and a shy ignorance of the tricks of flirtation. In despair her mother takes her to Paris, in the hope that new scenes and new people will give her confidence. While Mrs. Muir is confined to her room with a severe cold, Venice wanders about the city. She goes to Zelli's to dance with Johnny Maple, a boy whom she met on the boat. Returning, she finds a light in her mother's room. Doctor Hawks blocks her way, saying that her mother is worse.

Chapter 16
DYED DRESSES
"Let me go to her," Venice cried tensely, pushing at his chest with nervous hands.

"Sh-sh, don't be upset, my dear. She telephoned me about twelve. Her chest had suddenly become painfully congested. I came right down. Pneumonia. It—"

"Please, please," cried Venice, "let me in."

She gave a sudden push and shoved him to one side. In the room she walked slowly so as not to disturb her mother.

Mrs. Muir lay flat on her back, covers up to her chin, her eyes shut. On her face was a horrible pallor, eerie, bloodless. Her expression was peculiarly closed and strange.

"Is—she asleep?" whispered Venice. She looked from her mother's chalky face to the doctor. His eyes terrified her with their solicitude.

"She's—er—"

Venice had suddenly stooped and touched her mother's cheek with a plying hand.

"She's dead," she shrieked. "She's dead."

Doctor Hawks came quietly and drew her away.

Venice sank down in a chair and gazed at nothing with a queer, dazed, uncomprehending feeling. She couldn't look at her mother again, ever. Her eyes fixed themselves on the red plush drapes of the French window.

"What'll I do?" she finally asked.

"I'll help you with everything," said Doctor Hawks. "You must try not to worry. I was with her at the end. It was very peaceful. She must have had a bad heart muscle."

"Yes," said Venice stupidly and continued to stare at the red curtains.

They're the color of rubies, she thought.

"Have you any friends I could telephone for you?" she heard the doctor asking.

"No. No one. Mother knew some people, but we hadn't looked them up yet. I don't know who they are."

"Wouldn't you try to sleep a little? I'll stay here."

"Yes," she said. She got slowly to her feet and went into her own room. She undressed in the dark. In bed she suddenly remembered her mother's enthusiasm at the invitation to Zelli's. She would never see her mother any more. Never. She was away some place. Or perhaps that was all there was, that muted, alabaster figure in the bed.

She began to cry slowly, bitterly. The ensuing two or three days were a haze to Venice. Certain scenes stood forth.

There was her walking in the late morning. With the opening of her eyes tragedy rushed in upon her. Mother's dead, mother's dead, went her mind in dulled reiteration.

She got out of bed, put on slippers and negligee. The door was closed between the adjoining rooms. Venice approached it reluctantly. Doctor Hawks started from his chair.

"Good morning," he said gently. "I have to go to the hospital, but I'll be back in an hour or two. Would you like me to make embalming arrangements and attend to things for you?"

"Embalming arrangements?" echoed Venice.

"Here," he suggested, taking hold of her arm and piloting her to her own room. "Let's make ourselves comfortable and talk a moment."

She gave him a small smile. He was so good. She must show him that she appreciated it.

"I suppose you want to hurry back for the burial in America?"

"No. We—we had a conversation about it. It seemed funny at the time. Mother wanted to be buried here."

"Well, I'll talk to the American consul. You mustn't worry."

"No," said Venice.

The remainder of the day Venice alternated between pacing her own room and going into the next to stand at the bedside and gaze dully down at the stilled face. She could not bear these periodic visits to what had once been her mother, but she felt that it wasn't daughterly to let that form be taken away without her small parting attentions.

There followed the confusion of Doctor Hawks' return with a black coated, black bearded man. Venice in her own room when they took her mother away. Hearing the footsteps in the hall, something within her welled and broke. She flung herself on her bed in a paroxysm of grief. The funeral service, the cemetery, nothing could be so final and separating as this. Desolation swept her.

The telephone rang.

She slowly forced herself to rise from the bed, pushed strands of limp copper hair back from her eyes and picked up the receiver.

"H-hello."

"Hi, Venice; it's Johnny. A hang-over?"

"No. My mother has died suddenly."

It was like a nightmare conversation. Silly yet dreadful.

"What!"

"Yes."

"Oh, Venice, I'm so sorry. I—er—is there anything I can do for you?"

"No, thank you. Goodbye, Johnny."

She put down the receiver on his tumbled words of pity. She never thought of him again. But this touch from the sane, untroubled world without gave here a sudden equilibrium.

I must have black clothes, she thought, and rose to don hat and coat. There was a knock.

"Qui est la?"

"Doctor Hawks."

"Come in." She turned to smile wanly at him. "You've been so kind."

"That's all right, my dear. Why, where are you going?"

"To buy some black things."

"Yes, I see. Are—are you going to stay on here?"

"I—I hadn't thought."

"Of course. Perhaps after the funeral you might change to another hotel."

"I would like to move afterwards. When—when will the funeral be?"

"Whenever you like. Do you think the day after tomorrow?"

"Yes."

"The American Church and any cemetery that the consul thinks suitable?"

"Yes, please."

"And are there people at home you'd like to cable?"

Mrs. Spalding, of course. And uncle Livingston and aunt Rutledge in Richmond and her father's sister, aunt Lura in Boston. She found pencil and paper.

"What about money, by the way?"

"Mother and I have—had a joint letter of credit on the Bankers Trust."

"I see. But must you really go out now?"

"Yes." She couldn't stay here by herself. She needed black clothes.

Nothing really lived in her recollection of the next twenty-four hours. Buying the black clothes and leaving dresses at the dyers she might as well have been an automaton.

And then the American Church in the Rue de Berri. She and Doctor Hawks sat in a front pew and the coffin was before them piled with flowers that she had bought. And under that mass of living green and gardenia white her mother lay dead. It seemed unbelievable. It seemed only a minute ago that her mother was saying with her face alight, "You must wear your new turquoise chiffon." Would the turquoise chiffon dye? But one didn't wear decollete dresses in mourning. No, of course not. But her mother had said that Venice must not mope. Zelli's seemed years ago. That absurd camel. Those men in the legs. They would die, too, some day. Everything died. Oh, God, how short and terrifying life was.

"Come, my dear."

She started. Doctor Hawks' hand on her arm and they were walking out of the church.

The cemetery presented a battalion of meaningless stones, their harsh outlines blurred through her tears.

Dear God, she prayed, be good to her. Make me not mind.

Two days later Venice moved to the Louis-Le-Grand.

BIG FIVE ALL SET FOR PLAY ON SATURDAY

Charlotte, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Big Five football teams wound up their training today for the week-end games.

The last minute decision of Wake Forest officials to move the Deacons' game with Erskine up a day, playing it tomorrow instead of Saturday, caused Pat Miller, Deacon coach, to taper off his squad's training yesterday.

After a final light workout this afternoon, the Deacons will be set for the South Carolinians.

N. C. State and North Carolina will have only the lightest sort of drills tomorrow after this afternoon's practice sessions for their game at Raleigh Saturday. Duke's Blue Devils virtually completed work for the Tennessee game yesterday.

The Blue Devils will board a train for Knoxville late this afternoon after a short workout. Davidson is set for V. M. I.'s invasion of Richardson Field.

Pat Miller is making no secret of the fact he expects Erskine to give his squad a tough afternoon. The South Carolinians last week played Davidson to a scoreless tie and the week before held Furman, a club that overwhelmed Wake Forest, to a 0-0 score.

In addition, the Deacons will go into the fray minus the services of Tom Cornwell, center, and Ed Shinn, fullback, who are injured.

Yesterday's drill at Chapel Hill gave indications Coach Chuck Collins may start Smoky Ferebee, 145-pound quarterback, against the Wolfpack. The youngster was running on the first string for the second day straight in practice and continued to look up.

The Wolfpack divided its time between offense and defense. The freshman club, equipped with Carolina plays, could make no headway against the varsity and in turn was overrun by the Wolfpack with Phil Kinken, fullback, playing the star role in a ground-gaining exhibition.

Kid Brewer, big fullback, and the man the Blue Devils are counting on to crack the Tennessee line, starred in Duke's workout. Lowell Mason, halfback, was kept out of scrimmage because of injuries and may not get into the game with Tennessee.

It was a day of experimenting at Davidson as Coach Monk Younger tried out several new combinations and gave various second stringers a chance to work with the first line.

FEAR MASON CANNOT PLAY AGAINST VOLS

Durham, Oct. 23.—Lowell Mason, Duke's star field general, has not rounded into condition as rapidly this week as was expected and when the Blue Devils left here today, it was extremely doubtful if he would be able to play against the Vols.

His loss at a time when the Blue Devils need all their strength to pit against one of the strongest teams in the southern conference, comes as a hard blow to Duke. Duke coaches have much confidence in his general ability and think highly of him.

In case Mason does not play, the signal calling duties will be turned over to Captain Kid Brewer, who called them after Mason was injured in the Wake Forest game and who has been doing that work this week in practices.

Who will take his place in the backfield is uncertain. John Brownlee and Joe Sink have both been doing the running this week in the injured man's absence.

The Devils completed the fourth day of practice this afternoon. Most

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adr.)

GOOD GAMES EXPECTED FOR THE WEEK-END

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23.—(AP)—The Southern Conference teams that have lagged behind in the 1931 title chase have recaptured the attention of football fans for at least this week-end.

Alabama and Kentucky probably will offer one of the best battles in the south Saturday in their Tuscaloosa engagement. Alabama is out of the conference race because of its defeat by Tennessee and Kentucky has been tied by Maryland, but both teams are strong and willing.

The Alabama-Kentucky engagement is the tenth between the two teams since 1923. Alabama has triumphed eight times and Kentucky is out for revenge.

In Atlanta, Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt, both smarting from conference defeats, will meet. This game, though involving no conference honors, is attracting interest as a likely battle. Fans expect to see both teams open up spectacular attacks since neither is risking conference chances.

Meanwhile, the Big Three of the of it has been defensive work with the coaches especially striving to build up a wall against passes which has been a Duke weakness in other games this season.

The remaining members of the Duke crew were in good condition. Moon Mullen, blocking back, and Pop Werner, veteran guard, have about recovered from recent injuries and are slated to return to action against the Vols.

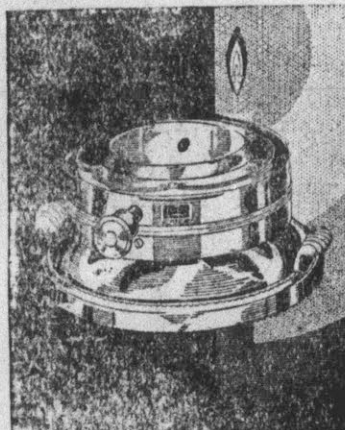

As the team left town today they were in good spirits although slated by all the experts to go down before the onslaught of the undefeated Volunteers.

NEXT time you are out of fix as the result of irregular or faulty bowel movement, try Thedford's Black-Draught for the refreshing relief it gives thousands who take it. Mr. E. W. Cecil, a construction superintendent in Pulaski, Va., says: "When I get constipated, my head aches, and I have that dull, tired feeling—just not equal to my work. I don't feel hungry and I know that I need something to cleanse my system, so I take Black-Draught. Can sure say we have found it a great help."
