Washington, June 24.—(AP)—Road building on a huge scale will get under way early next month to become the first expenditure in President Roosevelt's campaign for re-employment and economic recovery.

WINSLOW SIGNS TO CUT COTTON

Head of County Farm Board Agrees To Plow Up Forty-five Acres or Staple

J. E. Winslow, president of the Pitt county Department of Agriculture, and county chairman of the Federal cotton production committee signed today the first contract of the federal movement to cut cotton acreage and officially set in motion the campaign in this county.

Mr. Winslow, one of the most extensive landowners in this part of the state, signed to plow up 45 acres of cotton in this county. He will receive $12 per acre and a six cent pound option for all cotton destroyed. This will be paid by the government immediately and the option may be disposed of at any time the holder deems advisable regardless of the market price.

Township control committees were named at a meeting at the courthouse here last night and Monday night farmers of each township will attend public meetings to say if they are willing to accept the government production control plan and signify how many acres they are willing to plow up.

Wednesday night a meeting of all township committees will be held at the courthouse here for the purpose of determining how complete has been the Pitt county sign-up. This will be reported immediately to the Secretary of Agriculture, who after all contracts are in will decide whether the government has received sufficient response to justify going through with the plan.

E. F. Arnold, leader of the control campaign in this county, said today growers were manifesting much interest in the proposal and he felt confident Pitt county would do its part to make the movement a success.

RAIN BREAKS DROUGHT IN THIS SECTION

Shower Yesterday Afternoon Worth Over Two Million Dollars to Growers

Rain came yesterday afternoon and broke the drought which caused widespread damage to the crops of Pitt county, especially in this vicinity.

The downpour lasting nearly an hour, proved a boon for crops which had been literally parched by blistering sun's rays the last several weeks, and crop experts estimated today the drenching was worth at least two million dollars to growers.

Although the rain was confined to a radius of ten miles from Greenville in some directions, it visited here.

MACON MOORS AT LAKEHURST

Naval Dirigible Flies From Akron to New Jersey, Her Future Home

Lakehurst, N. J., June 24.—(AP)—The dirigible Macon blinked her lights in the early dawn and slid down out of the sky today to her new home at the naval air station. Officially commissioned as a navy ship-of-the-seas the vast dirigible flew from Akron where she was built at a cost of $2,450,000.

She left Akron at 8:20 (EST) yesterday and arrived over this field at 3:18 a. m. and was made fast to the sub-mooring mast at 4:20, 8 hours after departure from the Ohio city. Rear Admiral Kins, chief of naval bureau of aeronautics arrived in the Macon clad in a flying suit and panama hat. He called her "A grand ship."

Peggy McMath was given into the hands of the jury today at 2:20. Judge Edward Hainey consumed more than an hour in delivering his instructions to the jury. He explained the legal aspects of the case and told jurors that "consequence of your deliberations will be as important to the community as to the defendant."

The jury left the courtroom to make a decision that may result in years behind the bars of state prison for the Bucks.

CHECKING UP ON CONGRESS

By FRANK I. WELLER

Washington.—(AP)—With world military and economic disarmament in the balance, the United States has maneuvered into position for what some observers consider an equally quick swing to international cooperation or considerably greater national self-sufficiency.

No particular act by the special session of the seventy-third congress apparently was aimed in either direction, but the cumulative effect of the legislation seems to give the administration economic and monetary powers which could base the nation's progress either on extensive international trade or more purely domestic business.

Two principal weapons were forged in the congress which, while conceived in accordance with the plans for domestic recovery, nonetheless have tremendous international importance.

First, the President has the power to reduce the gold content of the dollar 50 per cent, other inflationary powers, and more or less arbitrary authority to stabilize the dollar in international exchange.

KILLER FACES TRIAL MONDAY

Jasper Reddick to be Given Preliminary Hearing in Mayor's Court

Jasper Reddick, colored, returned from Washington City this week to face a charge of the slaying of Dave Gorham, colored, in an alleged gambling brawl last February. He will face preliminary hearing in Mayor's court Monday morning. Chief of Police George Clark stated this morning.

The negro was due to receive hearing this morning but no mayor's court was held in view of the absence of Mayor R. C. Flanagan who with other city and county officials is attending the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill. Chief Clark said the Reddick charge was the only case scheduled for hearing today as no other case had been docketed since the session of court the first of the week.

Reddick was arrested at Washington the first of the week at the request of local authorities. He was returned in the custody of Chief Clark Thursday.

He is alleged to have shot Gorham in a dispute over a game of cards on the 19th of last February. Gorham rushed into the street and dropped dead.

Reddick escaped and nothing was heard of his whereabouts until several days ago when officers learned he was in Washington.

TWO SWIMMING POOLS TALKED FOR THIS CITY

B. B. Sugg Tells Kiwanians of Plans to Build Pools For White and Colored

Visions of one of the finest swimming pools in the state for Greenville was dashed before the eyes of members of the Kiwanis club and their guests last night by B. B. Sugg, banker, tobaccoist, and president of the Greenville Recreational Corporation, operators of the Westbrook swimming pool, which will be opened to the public within a few days.

Announcement of consideration of plans by city officials for the erection of a public swimming pool, to be located probably in the ravine near the high school, was made by Mr. Sugg while reporting progress of the movement for the re-opening of Westbrook swimming pool this summer.

In addition to the pool for white people, the speaker said, plans for a second pool, that for colored people, was also under consideration by public officials as they cast about for means to make possible this long felt need for both races.

Although plans are merely in the embryonic stage, Mr. Sugg said, it was hoped they would materialize in time to have the pools ready for service next summer.

In the meantime, he said, work is being pushed for the re-opening of the pool on the Westbrook place in the southern part of the city. He stated a new platform, which has been cleaned out in an effort to improve sanitation, and that it would be opened at an early date.

He asked the Kiwanians to contribute $25 for defraying the fare of children unable to enjoy this pastime as a small admission would be charged swimmers to pay for operation (Continued On Page Three) Devane was returning from Washington where Senator Robert Reynolds and Rep. Clark yesterday recommended his appointment as administrator of the public works program to be carried out in this state with the aid of federal funds.

He was taken to a hospital. His condition was described as serious. Devane was assistant manager for Senator Reynolds' campaign in the last election. He was also Cumberland county manager for Senator J. W. Bailey's campaign when the senior senator defeated Senator F. M. Simmons.

Regimentation Is New Word Dug Up By Politics

By BRYON PRICE

From an obscure corner of the dictionary politics has resurrected a high-flown but unpleasant-sounding word. It is the word "regimentation" and newspaper readers will do well to make its acquaintance.

In the sense attached to it by the republicans who discovered it, "regimentation" means a condition where the government controls everything and men and women and wealth and industry are assigned their respective places and told what to do just as soldiers are organized into regiments.

During the campaign, a year ago, President Hoover repeatedly objected to any such system of government declaring it would smother individual initiative and close the door of free opportunity. Now one of the most astute republican leaders

DELEGATIONS OPTIMISTIC OVER FUTURE

Americans Continuing Drive to Obtain Australian Adherence; French Disturbance Over Stabilization Temporarily Settled; American Delegation Remains Active Over Week-End For Action on Wheat

London, June 24.—(AP)—Considerable uneasiness existed today at headquarters of the American delegation to the world economic conference as to whether fresh instructions to Stanley M. Bruce, Australian minister to London, received last night, might mean his government will not join other great wheat producing countries in the American scheme for the restriction of production.

Mystery surrounded the nature of the communication to Mr. Bruce who declined to discuss the matter with newsmen.

Americans were continuing their drive over the week-end to obtain Australian adherence. Australia is the only nation lacking among the major producers including Canada, Argentina and Russia, which already have given their stamp of approval to the plan.

The week-end found a decidedly more optimistic atmosphere surrounding the conference than existed a few days ago when the stabilization battle was at its height and some gold standard countries including France apparently were prepared to walk out of the parley. If America could not stabilize immediately.

With that question at east temporary solved through a Franco-American rapprochement achieved largely through diplomacy of former Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio gives a firm hand to the American group working for constructive work next week.

With business suspended at conference headquarters today, most of the delegations were taking things easy.

The Americans probably were the most active workers because of their desire to get action on the wheat program.

LARGE CROWD HEARS TYSON

Rain Fails to Cut Down Attendance at F. W. B. Revival Services

Evangelist Tyson, using for his subject—"God's Righteousness", brought a most directing message last evening to a rather large audience in spite of the rain. For a text, he chose the words of David found in Psalm 36-6 which read as follows: "Righteousness is like great mountains." David here has so beautiful compared the righteousness of God to great mountains. Throughout the Bible there's a great deal said about righteousness, but in most cases it's having reference to God not man.

We think of great mountains as being unchangeable. Thrones have tottered, governments have changed and monarchs have been deposed, but in not one instance has the great mountains been removed. God's righteousness like the great mountains can not in any way be shaken and caused to change. Infatuation has even attempted to slatter God's righteousness, and infidelity has tried to impair its foundations, but such efforts have been

Yesterday's rain in this section no doubt did the crops much good but coming as late as it did, already much damage has been done to the tobacco crop and indications now are that the crop will not be as heavy as at first anticipated. Another short crop following behind last year's shortage should cause those farmers who are lucky enough to get a good yield this year to receive an exceptionally good price.

Indications now are that our farmers will readily take to the government plan for a reduction of cotton acreage this year. As previously stated, we believe it is a beneficial proposition for the farmers and the ready cash they can get in this way will help them tremendously in housing their other crops.

NOT A PARTISAN ISSUE

We agree heartily with Carl Goerch, editor of The State, in that the prohibition issue in North Carolina is a matter for the individual to decide according to the dictates of his own conscience rather than as a political issue.

In this week's issue of The State he says:

The question of prohibition is not a partisan issue and has no business in the platform of any of the political parties. It has absolutely nothing to do with politics.

Prohibitionists and anti-Prohibitionists are going to be very much in the limelight during the next few months. North Carolinians will be asked to go to the polls in November to decide the question of whether or not a convention shall be held for the purpose of advocating repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The voters should decide this matter not as Democrats or as Republicans, but as citizens of North Carolina. There is no reason on earth why one party should claim to be wet, or why some other party should claim to be dry. So far as numerical proportion is concerned just as many Republicans drink liquor as there are Democrats who abstain, and just as many Democrats who hold similar views. In campaigns such as the one which now engages our attention, the wets ought to get together, regardless of party affiliation, and the dries ought to do the same thing.

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: In a burst of passion that surprised herself, George Bancroft has told Nicholas Boyd that she loves him. Nicholas is about to leave England for Germany in an effort to find a specialist who will remove the scar from his face—the scar that has cost him his career as a movie star. Just before setting out for London to meet a friend, George learns that her mother and step-father, who live in New York, will shortly be in London, also on their way to Germany.

Chapter 24 NEWS OF NICHOLAS

Clifford Asher met the train. George thought it very clever of him to be standing exactly opposite where her car came to a standstill.

"How did you know?" she asked in amazement.

Asher laughed. "I didn't; it was just luck. I believe in luck!" He looked down at her and smiled. "Well, so you've come."

"Didn't you expect me?" she asked in alarm.

"Of course I did but you're such a funny little girl I should not have been surprised if at the last minute your courage had failed you. Hungry?"

"Not very," George said politely, though she was.

"Well, I've got the car outside," Asher said. "It's not mine, it's the Guv'nor's, but he lent it to me."

"Your father?" George asked.

He nodded; he was busy tucking a rug around her knees.

"He's not a bad old piece," he said.

George giggled; her spirits were rising, and she realized that perhaps after all she was going to have some fun.

They drove away out of the station yard and into the busy thoroughfare. George leaned back with a sense of importance; she had never ridden in such a smart car before, always expecting her mother's big landaulette, and she was sure that people must be looking at her in envy.

Asher was quite smart, too, she decided; she liked his coat—and then she sighed, remembering the big rough coat Boyd had sometimes worn on the boat coming home from America. There was such a difference in men's coats; some of them made you want to snuggle up to them and others—well, she was quite happy to keep a polite distance from Asher's.

She roused herself with an effort, remembering that it was her duty to make herself agreeable.

"What is your father?" she asked.

"A doctor."

"Oh!—It seemed funny how often doctors had come into her life lately.

"That must be very interesting," she said politely.

"As a matter of fact he is what some people call a fashionable West End doctor," he said ironically. "He has a great many society women for patients—actresses and so on."

"And film stars?" George asked.

"Sometimes. He had one the other day—a man named Boyd—"

"Nicholas Boyd?" George asked.

"I forget his other name. Chap that had his face smashed up. I heard the Guv'nor talking about it."

George swallowed nervously.

"What did he say?" she asked.

"Something about sending him out to Broncher, the German face man, to see if they could make a job of him. Boyd wants to go back into the films or something."

"And do you think they will make a job of him?" George asked breathlessly.

"Don't know. Might make him worse. I don't believe in messing about; it seems a favorite trick nowadays. If I were the chap I'd leave it alone."

"You wouldn't if you'd been famous like he was," George said quickly.

"He's got heaps of money, so he's alright."

"Does money make it alright?" George asked.

Asher nodded.

"I should think so. Wouldn't you like a lot of money?" he asked.

George considered the point.

"There are other things I would rather have," she said at last.

"What things?" he persisted, but she would not tell him. Asher turned the car into a quiet side street.

"We'll have to get out here and park the bus," he said. "The restaurant's only just around the corner if you don't mind walking."

It turned out to be quite a smart restaurant. Asher had booked a corner table, and the waiter seemed to know him. George's sense of importance rose once more; surely this was seeing life with a capital letter; she looked around her eagerly.

Not many tables, but most of them were occupied, and there were flowers on all of them.

"Do you always have lunch here?" she asked.

"Not on your life. This is a special occasion. What would you like to eat?"

"Oh, you choose."

He seemed to be choosing a great deal, she thought; he and the waiter spent quite a long time bending over the menu and discussing the dishes; when it was all settled, Asher said anxiously:

"I hope you like Consomme Froid and Sole Menniere?"

"Yes, thank you," George said politely, but she had no idea what he was talking about. She vaguely remembered having seen names like that on the ship's menu coming back from America, but she had never troubled to discover what they meant.

Food did not trouble George as long as there was something to eat when she was hungry; she wondered if Nicholas called food by French names and if he too had long consultations with waiters. Not recently, she supposed, seeing that he had been hiding away in the solitude of the Bear's Head.

She lost herself in thoughts of him, wondering where he was now, and if she would ever see him again.

"A penny for your thoughts," he said suddenly, and she turned with a startled movement of her graceful head which made him laugh.

"You know there's something about you that reminds me of a robin. It's the way you turn your head, I think, and that red frock. Do you mind if I nickname you Robin?"

The hot color rushed to George's face.

"Yes I do," she said sharply, and then with swift apology, "I'm sorry, but that's someone else's name for me, someone very special."

"Oh." There was a little silence.

"A man, I suppose."

"Yes."

"Someone who's in love with you?"

"Oh, no," George smiled rather wistfully. "Nobody has ever been in love with me."

She was glad that the Consomme Froid arrived at that moment and put an end to further questioning and in the excitement of discovering that soup could be icy cold the subject was forgotten, till presently Asher asked:

"What are you going to do with your life?"

"Do with it?"

"Yes, most girls have got an idea what they want to do. Would you like to be married?"

"I don't know. I haven't thought about it."

"Most girls would."

"I've never had much to do with married people," George said very quietly. "My uncle is a bachelor, and things, and I have to return it."

"And this chap who calls you Robin?"

George flushed a little.

"Oh, he's married," she said airily. "But I don't know his wife."

"Don't they live together?"

There was a little silence, then George said: "Just now she's in America, but she's coming home soon," she added defensively, feeling in a vague way that it sounded like a discredit to Nicholas that his wife should be on the other side of the Atlantic.

Clifford Asher twisted the stem of his wine glass.

"Look here," he said suddenly. "Will you come out with me again? Quite often, I mean? I can give you a good time, I'll take you to dances if you like, and down the river; some friends of mine have got a house down the river."

The girl's eyes sparkled.

"But you couldn't take me!" she said.

"Of course I could, I've taken other girls."

"Oh!" This was a little damper. "Do you often take girls out?" she asked a trifle offensively.

"Not often, but sometimes I have to. They ask me to their parties and things, and I have to return it."

"I see. I love the river," George said slowly. "I've only been down it once on a steamer from Hampton Court, but I thought it was divine."

"I'll take you in a punt."

"When?" She leaned toward him like an eager child.

"When you like."

Cotton Blooms in Belvoir. M. P. Tyson of Belvoir township brought a cotton blossom to the Reflector office today. It was the third blossom reported this season, although blooms were reported plentiful at Ballard's Cross Roads.

MISSIE BEAL AND GILBERT VISIT AYDEN LIBRARY. Ayden, June 24.—Miss Marjorie Beal, secretary of the State Library Association, with her assistant, Miss Gilbert, visited the Ayden Public Library Friday afternoon of this week, and seemed very much impressed with what has been accomplished by its sponsors, Mrs. W. D. Johnson and Mrs. Helen Turner, since its opening in March of this year.

Nothing the interest being manifested by the number of books let out each time it is opened, she offered to assist the local librarian in getting more reading matter from the lending library for the summer months, in the form of fiction and juvenile books. Fifty books are loaned by Sheppard Memorial Library, Greenville, and the local unit has 300 books of its own, so with the additional help from the state collection, we will have a large list from which to select summer reading. The majority of the local books are for children and they are making good use of them during the vacation days.

The first real gift to the library came from the Junior Woman's Club in the form of a purse for the purchase of new books. This club has recently been organized but this gift is evidence that a good take off has been made by the organization which also has shown interest in other civic enterprises.

Rains Causes Cotton Crop To Blossom

Following the refreshing shower yesterday afternoon, cotton blossoms in the Ballard's Cross Roads community were reported to have blossomed forth in greater profusion this morning.

The blooms opened their sleepy eyes to a world relieved of the parched atmosphere which hovered like a blanket over the territory the last several weeks, carrying destruction to plant life and causing discomfort to humans.

J. S. Elks, operator of a store at Ballard's, telephoned the Daily Reflector today that many cotton blossoms were in evidence on the Elks and Ballard farms today and that they showed signs of health in spite of the effect of the heat wave.

Farm and Home Convention.

The annual Farm and Home Convention will be held at the State College in Raleigh July 24-29. Plans are being made to bring to Raleigh some of the best speakers of the day. The 13th annual meeting of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs will be held July 27. Each club is allowed one delegate in the business session. The style show will be held the same day. Several women from Pitt County will receive certificates for attending four entire short courses and others will be in attendance during the entire week this year. One day at the convention does not give one much of an idea of what it is all about and as many as can do are urged to attend the entire course. If several will go in one car and share the expense, the trip will be most enjoyable and quite impressive.

4-H Short Course. The annual 4-H Short Course will be held the week following the Farm and Home Convention. 4-H girls and boys who are over four, ten years of age and have done good club work are eligible. Several girls are planning to attend this year and others who are interested should get in touch with the Home Agent at an early date. All who attend the short course wear the club uniform on all occasions, and we must get our material and get the dresses and hats made. The 4-H program consists of morning classes, afternoon recreational programs and evening vespers programs followed by varied programs. A health pageant will be given on Thursday evening. All health contestants who attend will have a part in the pageant. Don't miss this opportunity. It will be an inexpensive vacation and you will have a part in programs that will help you in your club work and in your school work. The new 4-H friends you make will be the best part of it all.

District Meeting. Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker, second vice-president of Home Demonstration clubs, and the Home Demonstration Agent attended the district meeting of the 12th district at Morehead Thursday. Eight hundred club women and their families attended this meeting. Mrs. E. L. Smith, district agent, spoke on "Religion, Rhythm and Mobility." Six county reports were given.

Pressure Cookers.

For the past several years, merchants in Greenville have supported the canning program by buying pressure cookers for persons who pay for them in the fall. This has helped very much as the canning seasons always come when there is less ready cash. Another shipment of cookers will be delivered this week. We appreciate this cooperation on the part of the merchant's very much. Our canning program has been delayed because of the dry weather, but we are ready to bring out the gardens, we hope, if those who want canning help or know of communities that would like canning demonstrations, will notify this office, we may get to you a little sooner than would be possible if we have to find you.

Council Meeting. The third meeting of the council of Home Demonstration Clubs which should have been held the 21st of June was postponed due to the fact that many of the women were working in tobacco and there was no important business to come up just now. This meeting will be held a little later and council members will be notified.

Club Meetings. The regular meeting dates will be used for July meetings of the Home Demonstration Clubs with the exception of those that are during the week of July. "Color" will be the subject. Several clubs have held social meetings and others are planning to have them later.

Start The Fall Garden Now.

The month of July is always a critical time in the making of a year-round garden. Many crops should be started during this month and the job of getting a good stand is always a serious problem. In starting plants which stand transplanting, such as collards and cabbage, it is usually advisable to plant the seeds in a partially shaded seed bed rather than take a chance on planting directly in the field. A lattice-work of slats or a thin layer of pine brush makes a good covering for such a bed. The covering should be high enough above the bed so that watering and weeding may be done and that free circulation of air will be provided.

Seeds sown directly in the garden row should come in contact with moist soil if possible. Plant deeper than in early spring. A better stand of small-seeded crops may often be secured by laying boards or planks on top of the row. When the seedlings begin to come up place a brick under each end of the boards in order to protect the tender seedlings from the heat of the noon-day sun. Harden gradually to the sun by removing the boards in the early morning and late afternoon for the first few days after the plants are up.

Crops To Plant This Month. Plant a fall crop of Irish potatoes during the last half of the month. It is usually difficult to obtain a stand at this time of the year, so many growers prefer to plant seed which has been kept over in cold storage rather than take a chance on seed from the spring crop. The Lookout Mountain is a popular variety for this purpose. If seed from the spring crop is planted, every precaution should be taken to get a good stand. Many growers spread their seeds before planting by spreading the potatoes out on the ground under the shade of a tree and covering with moist hay or straw. On potatoes which show sprouts are planted.

MOLEY SAILS FOR LONDON

Equipped with new facts after a conference with President Roosevelt aboard his vacation schooner, Raymond Moley (left), assistant secretary of state, sailed from New York for London to join the American delegation to the world economic conference. He was accompanied by Herbert Bayard Swope, former executive editor of a New York newspaper. (Associated Press Photo)

Start seeds of cabbage, collards and Italian sprouting broccoli early in the month in a partially shaded bed. Tomato plants for the fall crop should be ready for setting the first week in the month.

Make succession plantings of snap beans and bush limas, and try a planting of beets and carrots during the first seasonable weather. If rutabagas have not already been planted, the seeds should be sown early in the month. Early varieties of sweet corn may also yet be planted in many sections.

AUXILIARY DAY

AT CAMP LEACH

Camp Leach, June 23.—Thursday was Woman's Auxiliary day at Camp Leach and representatives were present from all over Eastern Carolina. The president, Mrs. Fred Outland of Washington, presided at a meeting which was held in the rustic chapel on the river shore. The speakers on the program were: Rt. Rev. Thomas C. Darst, Bishop of the Diocese; Rev. John W. Irwin, publicity chairman of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church; Miss Cornelia Harris, district director of the young people's work; Mrs. Jennie Howard, student worker in Greenville; Mrs. W. S. Carawan, president of the Auxiliary in the Convocation of Edenton, and Rev. J. P. Moseley of Williamston.

After the meeting a picnic lunch was served on the campus. Many of the visitors remained for the afternoon swim and night program of the campers. This begins with the impressive vesper service and continues each evening until 10 o'clock and closes with the campfire on the shore where songs were sung, the camp news is read and reports on camp activities and awards made. Between vespers and campfire there is always a dramatic program. This was in the form of a play, "Henry's Mail Order Wife," put on and exceedingly well done by the Fayetteville group of young people.

AYDEN WILL VISIT LOCAL CLUB MONDAY

The weather man made a clean sweep in the Coastal Plain League yesterday and sent rain that caused all four clubs to remain inactive. The status of the league remains as it was the day before with Greenville at the top of the standing of clubs column, Ayden trailing a half game behind, and Snow Hill and Kinston all set to fight their way out of the region of the cellar.

The game scheduled here yesterday will be played Monday, league officials stated today, and fans who were disappointed over not seeing the league leaders clash, will be treated to that opportunity at the Third street athletic field Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Greenville will play at Snow Hill again on the 28, at Ayden on the 30 and Snow Hill will come here on July 1. No more games will be played by the circuit until the Glorious Fourth of July when double-headers are scheduled in the morning and afternoon with the fans of all towns getting a chance to see one game on their own home grounds.

With the Greenville pitching staff strengthened by the acquisition of three hurlers, Manager Milton Harrington expected to increase his grip on the loop race. He has been short of pitchers until this week but the arrival of three hefty looking youngsters with plenty of elbow ammunition seemed to increase prospects for more victories.

These two sentences contradicted what many leading economists have taught and most people have believed for years.

They threw overboard the old conviction that such natural forces as supply and demand, competition and the law of survival of the fittest are omnipotent, and that all man can do is to help nature work out the ideal solution.

The Roosevelt theory was that the big element was not nature at all, but human management. The special session proceeded from a managed currency to a managed agriculture, managed railroads and banks and finally a completely managed industry.

What The Critics Hold

The critics of these policies say a "managed economics" won't be managed but will obey its own laws. It would be as easy, they argue, to repeal the multiplication table.

The supporters of the Roosevelt policies, in turn, look on such benefits as entirely old-fashioned and discredited.

"Why is it," asked one of them recently, "that when nature decrees a crop failure, reducing the wheat surplus and increasing prices, everyone thinks it's great; but if the same reduction is accomplished by law the same people hold up their hands in horror?"

This is the fundamental difference now developing over the Roosevelt program. The unwieldy word "regimentation" is not fully expressive of the principal involved, but it is made to serve the purpose for the present.

Assaults Like Bull Fights

Townsville, Queensland (AP)—Spanish bull fighting, introduced at a big rodeo here with wild Australian scrub bulls as victims, attracted 14,000 spectators. Three Spanish matadors performed, one being slightly wounded by a bull.

BROTHERS ALL, AND ALL PLAY BALL; EVEN COACH AND MASCOT IN FAMILY

It's scorekeeper's nightmare when the Sibbalds nine goes into action. From left, standing are Theodore, Sr., father and coach; Fred, Ernest, August, Louis and Harold, all brothers; kneeling are Theodore, Jr., Elmer, William and Carlos, still more brothers. Theodore David, son of Theodore, Jr., is the team's mascot.

Houghton, Mich.—(AP)—"Sibbalds" singled, advancing Sibbalds and Sibbalds; Sibbalds up; Sibbalds hit a home run, scoring four Sibbalds.

So might read a play by play account of a baseball game when the Sibbalds nine gets into action here.

There are nine of the Sibbalds brothers and they all play baseball on one team. Moreover, the father of the nine is coach and a son of one of the nine is mascot.

Right now the team is looking for another aggregation of baseball playing brothers so that a sort of "brothers" world series or championship game can be played.

They're Really Good
A year ago the Sibbalds, all brothers ranging from 16 to 31 years whipped every team that crossed their path. They are well ahead again this season, and if the hitting continues as good as it has been, they'll have an even better year than in 1932.

Theodore Sibbalds, Sr., the father coach and manager, has played baseball since he was big enough to swing a bat. Baseball not only is his pet sport; it is his hobby as well.

Here's Real Teamwork
After he was married and the babies came—all nine were boys—he taught them to throw a ball almost as early as they learned to say "daddy" so other folk could understand it. As they matured, each gravitated to some amateur or semi-professional baseball team.

A year ago their father called them in and proposed the family ball club. The idea clicked. They organized and have been winning ball games ever since.

"Brothers having played together all their lives acquire a smoothness of teamwork that a team of strangers can hardly hope to acquire," says Sibbalds, Senior. "Look at those youngsters' field."

But Football Is Out
Theodore, Jr., does most of the pitching. But when he is not in form any of the brothers can take over the job and do it well.

Next winter they may take up hockey. Several of the brothers already are good players and the others think they can learn. But Sibbalds football team is out of the question. There are only nine brothers.

explore without first securing a guide.

Some people have tried to explore without the guidance of God. As a result, they have ended as non believers in Christ Jesus. There are two guides that one may take along to explore God's righteousness. These are: (1) the bible, (2) the Divine spirit of God.

Great mountains serve as a source for protection. This is true of the righteousness of God. Those people who are clothed in God's robe of righteousness need not to fear because God's hand is ever protecting them.

The scenery that great mountains affords is very wonderful indeed. Never-the-less, God's righteousness is even more wonderful than the scenery of any of the great mountains.

The righteousness of God is enduring and everlasting. It has taken the drunkard and made him a desirable person. It can do the same for you if you only will give it a chance.

ARRANGE FOR COTTON DRIVE

M. O. Speight and R. L. Worthington of Winterville township.

A determined effort will be made to reach every cotton grower in the county and give him an opportunity to participate in the benefits offered by the government for the purpose of controlling cotton production. Every farmer in the county is urged to get in touch with one of these men in order that he may understand fully just what the Government is offering to do and further that he may be able to secure a contract if he desires to sign one.

Contracts will be in the hands of each of these workers not later than Monday, June 26, and they will be glad to assist the farmers in making out same.

These farmers, in addition to working their townships by farms, will also be at the meeting scheduled for next week at which time they will be in a position to aid the farmers in filling out contracts.

gions that did not enjoy showers which hit in widely separated areas in recent weeks. Although some of the damage done by the heat is irreparable, it was said: the improvement in the crop situation is such that the anxiety which gripped the hearts of people generally has been converted into expressions of thanks giving.

The precipitation yesterday was believed to have visited all sections around Greenville with the exception of a part of Swift Creek township in the southwest part of the county. The territory around Ayden, Grimesland and other areas in that direction was visited by a heavy rain the day before. Had it come in that district but it was nothing compared with what was being done by the heat.

It has been many a year since rain has been received so joyously in this community. In fact, it had been so long since a shower had visited this immediate section, that people gathered at vantage points and gazed upon the refreshing downpour as if they hadn't ever seen it before. Some gazed heavenward and attempted to determine what other communities were drawing water from the clouds and still others were trying to estimate the value in dollars and cents.

With clouds still holding sway this morning the section not visited by the precipitation yesterday was holding out hope of relief sometime today. The weather man has virtually promised it, and since he ran true to form yesterday it was hoped he would do so today.

Denies Dam Appropriation
Washington, June 24.—(AP)—Sec. Ickes today told newspaper men he had made no commitment to Rep. Clark of N. C. and a delegation yesterday which urged upon him to include in the public work program $1,500,000 allocation for locks and dam on the Cape Fear river.

Ickes Chairman of public work board in charge of the expenditures of the $3,000,000,000 program said he had advised the group that the application for work would have to come up through the state administration yet to be appointed and that this would be the policy through out the handling of such matters.
