SENATE COMMITTEE RESUMES PRIVATE PROBE

Giant New York Bank Will Be Asked To Give Facts On Its Operation

OTTO H. KAHN APPEARS FOR QUESTIONING

Senior Partner of Kuhn, Loeb and Company Appears in Committee Room With His Associates; Only Small Crowd On Hand to Witness Beginning of Hearing; Kahn Not to Present Prepared Statement

Washington, June 27.—(AP)—Resuming its probe of private banking the Senate committee today sought intimate details of the operations of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, giant New York concern. Otto H. Kahn, senior partner, appeared before the committee where he left off ten days ago with J. P. Morgan and Company. In contrast to the huge crowd that formed the door of the Morgan investigation, only a handful of spectators showed up ahead of time today. Kahn, small and well-dressed, walked into the committee room, accompanied by his associates. Kahn told newspapermen that he would not have a prepared statement, as did J. P. Morgan.

WIDOW OF COLL IS HELD FOR SLAYING New York, June 27.—(AP)—Lotus Coll, widow of the slain gangster, Vincent Coll, was ordered held on a first degree murder charge last night in connection with the slaying last Wednesday of a 22-year-old Bronx girl. Two men held with Mrs. Coll since last Friday, when they were arrested in a midtown hotel of a charge of unlawful possession of firearms, also were ordered arrested for murder. The order was issued by District Attorney Samuel Foley of the Bronx, after one of Mrs. Coll's companions, allegedly confessed the Bronx girl, Molly Schwartz, was struck by a bullet intended for a jewelry salesman.

Happier Capital Reflects Better Feeling In Nation With 'Fear of Fear' Waning

By BRYON PRICE "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself," said President Roosevelt in his inaugural address. Since then many things have taken place, but the question still uppermost in Washington is to what degree fear has been expelled from the national philosophy and replaced by returning confidence. No one ever believed the depression could be ended merely by the writing of laws. All along it has been recognized that the real vital element was that intangible thing called "public psychology." How far has the government been able to go in reviving the spirit of the people themselves, reawakening and revitalizing national life, and encouraging society to resume confidently the management of its own affairs?

Markers of Progress If statistics alone are consulted it would appear that much progress has been made. Markets are rising—which means that more people are willing to buy at higher prices. Such recognized indices of activity as car loading and steel production are increasing. Building construction, always basic, is on the upgrade. Federation of labor figures show unemployment decreasing. There is a non-statistical side of the picture, however, which many regard as even more important. From widely separated sources comes word of a better feeling, of a new urge toward recovery. Washington itself is a reawakened capital. There is activity, hope and enthusiasm today where there was weariness bordering on despair a year ago. In gayer atmosphere, hundreds of thousands of Americans are gathering at Chicago for a world's fair celebration which at one time promised to be a dismal failure. A bonus army has marched to the Potomac, but the incident was singularly devoid of rancor or tragic consequences. Farm and food riots are fewer. The great railroads have cancelled wage reduction proposals. Focused on Washington Whatever it may mean in terms of a new national awakening, newspaper editors report to the Associated Press that not in many years have readers been so interested in what their federal government is doing. And, surely, something has happened to the colleges, which in former years celebrated the June commencement season with many a dry academic lecture. Read a collection of commencement headlines from The New York Times for two days of this June, and note the emphasis on public affairs. "Liberty is for all, says Dr. Barbour." "Brain trust held liberating forces." "Perils of control stated at Smith." "McConaught lauds Roosevelt daring." "Williams honors Justice Roberts." "Assails nationalism as foe of education." These evidences of a revitalized civic conscience and a quickening national pulse may not be conclusive, but at least they are impressive.

J. H. Rose Tells Clubmen of Movement to Re-open Westbrook Pool This Year

The Rotary club decided last night to lend both its financial and moral support to the plan to re-open Westbrook swimming pool this summer, and donated generously to the undertaking. The action came after J. H. Rose, secretary-treasurer of the Greenville Recreational Corporation, operators of the pool, told of the work now in progress for re-opening the pool and of the necessity of public support if the movement is to be the success desired. He said the sanitary condition of the pool had already been improved and that arrangements were being made to afford better drainage to insure improved sanitary conditions throughout the summer, in addition to plans for making one end of the place shallow for children to wade in. The donations from the club, it was said, would be used in defraying the expense of children whose parents are not financially able to permit them to enjoy this kind of recreation. Mr. Rose said they hoped to be able to open the pool within the next day or so and urged that as much financial support as possible be given the corporation. The speaker was presented by S. L. Bridges. Rev. A. W. Fleischmann presided over the session and the program was in charge of J. H. Waldrop. Mr. Waldrop made a brief talk on banking after which Mrs. Waldrop rendered two solo numbers. She was accompanied by Mrs. R. A. Tyson, Jr. One of the songs was dedicated to Mr. Fleischmann who will retire as presiding officer the next (Continued On Page Two)

TWO STATES IN REPEAL TILT

West Virginia and California in Throes Of Battle Against 18th Amendment San Francisco, June 27.—(AP)—Proposed repeal of the 18th Amendment came before the voters of California today with dry leaders conceding defeat. Governor James Rolfe, Jr., who has pictured industry as shackled by prohibition, is among those calling on the people of California to join fourteen other states which have already favored repeal. Charleston, W. Va., June 27.—(AP)—West Virginia, dry for seven years before national prohibition, votes today on repeal of the 18th Amendment with conflicting assurance of the dry and wet campaigners the only thing on which to base sentiment. Repeal forces claimed 48 of the 56 counties certain for ratification and the dry were hopeful. In the last referendum in 1921 the state gave 92,000 majority for prohibition. Today is a statewide holiday.

REVIVAL HERE PUSHES AHEAD

Considerable Headway Made At Series Of Services At F. W. B. Church In a most appealing manner Evangelist Tyson, in his message last evening, explained the revival that Paul and Silas were instrumental in bringing about while confined in jail. He referred to this revival as "a revival behind the bars." Mr. Tyson asserted that during his personal experience, he had known of revivals in churches, court houses, school houses, warehouses, etc., but he had never known of a revival behind the prison doors. In order for Paul and Silas to have this revival (Continued On Page Three)

REDDICK TO FACE HEARING HERE TODAY

Slayer of Dave Gorham Will Be Given Preliminary Hearing This Afternoon

Because he is alleged to have used his gun instead of his head in a card game here last February, Jasper Reddick, colored, will face preliminary hearing here this afternoon for the slaying of Dave Gorham, colored, during a card game. The negro escaped after the shooting and nothing was heard of him until about two weeks ago when officers discovered he was in Washington City. District of Columbia officers were requested to take the negro in custody and a few days later authorities there granted his extradition to this community to face trial. Reddick and Gorham were members of a party playing cards. Some thing went wrong with the game and Reddick was said to have pulled his gun and fired at Gorham. Gorham rushed from the house mortally wounded and dropped dead in the street. Reddick has been held in the county jail since his return here and probably will go back behind the bars when he is given preliminary hearing this afternoon at three o'clock. He has remained quiet concerning the shooting since his incarceration refusing to talk concerning the affair only when asked casual questions by jail attendants.

THIEF TAKES GOLD FROM DENTISTS HERE

Unknown Intruder Prowls Into Offices Today and Makes Off With $85 in Gold

The gold in one's teeth isn't safe these days with light-fingered gentlemen prowling about ready to pick it out while one is enjoying a refreshing snooze. An unidentified man entered offices of local dentists here early this morning and obtained gold valued at $85.00 or more it was revealed by police today. The offices robbed were those occupied by Dr. Johnson and Dr. Massey in the National Bank building. The thief also prowled around Dr. A. M. Schultz's office, but the (Continued On Page Three)

GOVERNMENT TO OPEN POOL GIVES EAR TO AT WESTBROOK TEXTILE MEN ON TOMORROW

Policy of Industrial Control Aired at Meeting at Washington City

Washington, June 27.—(AP)—The federal government started out formally today on its policy of industrial control to raise wages and decrease working hours through a hearing of one of fair competition—this one embracing the textile industry. (Applauded by a crowd that jammed the huge Department of Commerce auditorium, Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the law, declared "We want to see to it that this law attains its end and at the same time it does no injustice." The end the law had in mind was to restore buying power and press employment to rebound to the benefit of national business as a whole. The immediate subject was the arrangement agreed to by more than two-thirds of the cotton textile operators which if approved will give force to the plan for a minimum wage of $11 a week in the north and $10 in the south for a forty hour week. In a quiet manner somewhat surprising to many industrialists and labor leaders on hand who know him as an aggressive speaker, Johnson explained the new law and presented Donald Rineberg, as counsel for the industrial recovery administration. He defined the idea of the hearing. The eager audience seemed to represent the cross section of American life with the laborer in shirt sleeves side by side with brightly dressed women of wealth who accompanied business men on hand. RING THIEVES WILL BE GIVEN HEARING HERE

Four Members Of Band of Robbers to Face Preliminary Trial Tomorrow

Four members of an alleged ring of freight car, filling station and wholesale house robbers recently rounded up in this section of the state, will be given preliminary hearing in Greenville tomorrow. It was announced today by Chief of Police George Clark. They are Jimmie Hill, Dewey Williams, Martin Bryant and "Railroad" Ray. Hill is being held at Goldsboro and Williams at Durham where they also face charges of robbery. Several other members of the ring are held in other towns. Some of them have been given preliminary hearing and remanded to jail to await hearing in Superior court. The four men to be given hearing here are alleged to have robbed Bilbro and Duncan Wholesale house about two months ago of $300 worth of cigarettes. Part of the stolen property was recovered when the men were captured. The capture of the ring was one of the most extensive drives put on by the law enforcement officers in this section in years. They were assisted by railroad detectives who were told to stay on the case until they had broken up the ring. The preliminary hearing was to have been held the past Monday but was deferred to give the defendants a chance to obtain proper legal representation. EUROPE WILL DEFEND GOLD TO LAST DITCH

Observers Say Scheme is a Challenge to President Roosevelt's Price-Raising Program; British Sitting Tight Regarding Their Attitude; Success Depends on Position of Great Britain

London, June 27.—(AP)—The world economic conference was in the throes of a fresh dramatic development today precipitated by the unexpected action of the gold bloc countries in trying to force European monetary stabilization irrespective of the American desire or what happens to the American dollar. Representatives of the central banks of France, Switzerland, Holland and Belgium met secretly to enforce perfection of plans which involved forcing Great Britain to stabilize along with continental countries. From this meeting came a declaration by one of the conferees that gold would be defended to the last ditch. Many observers expressed opinion that this scheme is in effect a challenge to President Roosevelt's new price-raising program which the gold bloc membership maintains would force depreciation of their currencies and would be disastrous too. The bankers decided this morning to ask the Bank of England to make a declaration to the effect that it would not be in Britain's interest to see continental currencies depreciated. Meanwhile, the British were sitting tight regarding their attitude but it was learned representatives of the Bank of England were in conference with Leon Frazier of the Bank of International Settlement. The situation simmered down to this, according to well informed conference circles, the success of the failure of the gold bloc program depended on the British decision. (Continued On Page Four)

The cotton sign-up for acreage reduction under the government plan is progressing nicely according to reports and it is to be hoped that the good work will continue. To those farmers who have not yet decided to sign we repeat that this plan is one with all the benefits for the farmers and if the farmers don't take advantage of it they have but themselves to blame. Realizing that smaller production of cotton is the only way to bring that commodity up to a living price for the growers, the government is not only urging the farmers to cut their crop but is paying them real money to do so. Under this plan a farmer can make more money off his cotton this year by cutting his acreage and getting pay for it than he can if he goes ahead producing a bumper crop and then gets a low price for it and a low price is what he will get if this year's crop is large.

A PRAYER FOR ALL OF US

(Southern Tobacco Journal)

An old Scotch clergyman, in a day of great need, got on his knees and prayed: "Please, Lord, keep me alive as long as I live."

Sound foolish? Read it again. It is a simple prayer, but one that many of us needs repeat day in and day out—and mean it—and back it up with faith and hard work.

We need to be alive today more than at any time, possibly, in our life. The world about us has toppled and we must needs be about the business of reconstructing it.

The world cannot be reconstructed by those who sit under trees in the shade and contemplate the future. We must work—and work hard.

And once the job of reconstruction is completed we must not lie down and expect it to continue its progress. We must continue our work or the universe will topple again.

"Lord, keep us alive as long as we live."

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayre

SYNOPSIS: George Bancroft has lunch with Clifford Asher in London, who plans further good times for her. But that does not efface the memory of Nicholas Boyd, the former film star who has told her that he is about to leave for Germany, where he hopes to have removed the scar that has cost him his career. Home again, George finds a cablegram saying that her mother and stepfather will arrive next Friday from New York. The uncle with whom she lives is furious, and to escape him she goes out doors. Boyd passes by; they walk together down the lane.

Chapter 26 ABOUT LIFE

It was Nicholas who broke the silence, bringing George down from her seventh heaven with a faint shock.

"So you had a good time this afternoon, Robin," he said.

"I had a good lunch," she admitted. "I've never had such a lunch in my life. We started with melon, and cold soup, and we finished up with ice pudding with hot chocolate sauce all over it."

"It all sounds a bit chilly," Nicholas said.

"It wasn't," George answered. "We had hot things in between. I should like to have a lunch like that every day."

"You'd soon get tired of it. One gets tired of everything."

"Do they?" George sounded doubtful. "I've never had very much to get tired of."

"That's where you are fortunate," he told her. "It's when people have a surfeit of everything that they get bored and weary and begin to look round for something which they can't have."

"What things they can't have?" "Things which belong to other people."

"Like other people's husbands," George thought. She felt rather than saw that he turned to look at her.

"I envy you," he said suddenly. "You know so little of life—and you will have such fun finding out all about it."

"Did you find it fun?" "Did I? Well, I found it out very differently from the way you will. I found it out artificially, among people who don't really count a great deal."

"I think film people count enormously, if you mean them," George said. "Look at the pleasure they give people like me. Why, before I ever knew you, you'd given me so much to think about—" she broke off.

"And since you've known me, the great disillusion has set in, I suppose," Boyd said cynically. "It's a mistake for people like me ever to appear in the flesh. Not that I count one iota now."

"You count a lot of 'em," George said quaintly. "More lots to me now than you did before."

There was a little silence, then Boyd said:

"Some day, Robin, you will make a man very happy."

She laughed a little tremulously.

"I would much rather that some man made me happy," she told him.

"I think it must be wonderful to have someone all your very own, to know that when he comes to the house, he comes to see you; to know that you can write to him and tell him how much you love him without it being thought perfectly awful; to know that if you're unhappy you can rush to him and tell him all about it and be sure that he'll understand and be kind."

Boyd said: "I am afraid there are not many men in the world who would come to your ideals, Robin."

George sighed. "And if there were, they'd all be married, I expect," she said unthinkingly.

They had reached the five-barred gate now, where they had stopped and talked the first morning after Nicholas came to the Fair's Head, and unconsciously they stopped now.

George leaned her arms on the gate and stared up at the moon.

"It seems funny that everyone in the world looks at the same moon, doesn't it?" she said suddenly. "We here, and Mother in America, and tomorrow you in Germany. By the way, Mother is coming home. She arrives next Friday, the 22nd," she added with sudden remembrance of that cable.

"Does she? Are you glad?" "I don't know. I suppose I ought to be."

There was a little silence, then Boyd said abruptly: "Your friend Asher—is his father a doctor by any chance?"

George did some swift thinking. If she said yes, Nicholas might think she had been discussing him with Clifford, and she knew he would hate that.

"He hasn't got as far as telling me about his family," she said, not quite truthfully.

"I only asked," Boyd answered, "because I know a Dr. Asher. He lives in London too."

The silence fell again, which she presently broke.

"Shall you go back to America, afterwards?"

He laughed. "The more I think of America the further it seems to recede," he said with a touch of bitterness. "I shall certainly never go back unless—" he did not finish his sentence, but George understood.

"It will be a success," she said quickly, and then: "But if it isn't what will you do then?"

It seemed a long time until he answered.

"I suppose I shall pass into the land of forgotten men."

"You will never be forgotten."

George said almost angrily. "I shan't forget you, anyway."

"Then no doubt you will be the solitary exception," he answered with grim mirth.

"There's your wife," George said impulsively, then caught her breath.

"Yes," Nicholas echoed. "There is certainly my wife."

"And will she come and settle down here with you?"

Boyd thought suddenly of his parties from Bernie and of her repeated parrot-cry: "I can't live in England—I can't live in England!"

"She does not like England," he said quietly.

"Doesn't like it!" George was indignant. "What does that matter?" she demanded. "If you're here, it ought not to matter whether she likes it or not—"

She broke off, wondering if once again she had said too much.

Boyd turned suddenly, so that his back was to the gate.

"Do you know, Robin," he said, in a curiously soft voice. "You are a very dear little girl?"

"Am I?" Her eyes were like stars in the pale moonlight. "Then do you like me a little?"

"More than a little, perhaps," he admitted reluctantly.

Her eyes met his for a moment, then she broke out—

"And yet you said you didn't want to be friends with me any more?"

"Perhaps that is the reason. My friendship is no use to you. If they make me—less hideous again, I shall go back to my old life, and if not"

"If not," George said quickly, "you can still be friends with me. I shouldn't care if you were as hideous as—as the Hunchback of Notre Dame," she said eagerly, casting about in her mind for the most vivid symbol she knew. "As a matter of fact I didn't think he was so hideous. He was so pathetic."

"And do you think I am pathetic?"

There was a little silence, then George said very gently:

"I think you're just a darling."

Nicholas turned his head sharply away, and George went on: "I don't suppose I ought to say things like this though I really can't see why. If you see a flower nobody minds if you say how beautiful it is, or a tree, a great, strong beautiful tree—"

She stopped, a little ashamed of her eloquence.

"And if the tree is blasted and falling?" Nicholas said.

George crept a little nearer to him.

"It's still the same tree," she said. She hesitated a moment, then slipped a hand into his.

"It seems such a pity that you won't let me be as nice to you as I want to be," she said simply.

Boyd took his hand away.

"Do you know that you are saying all the things to me that I ought to be saying to you?" he asked.

She made a helpless little gesture, and after a moment Boyd said: "My wife also arrives next Friday, Robin."

"Oh, but I thought you said—"

"She has changed her mind and is coming sooner."

George stared down at the short grass at her feet; it looked silvery in the pale moonlight.

"Well," she said at last, "I suppose it's only natural she should want to be with you as soon as possible."

"As you would want to be, if you were my wife," he said.

"I should never have left you if I had been your wife," George answered.

In the following silence a clock struck ten; George counted each stroke mechanically.

TO OPEN POOL AT WESTBROOK ON THURSDAY

The pool will be operated this year with the full approval of city doctors who drafted a resolution several weeks ago urging that something be done to reduce swimming in children in the treacherous waters of Tar river.

The water at Westbrook has been tested repeatedly to insure proper sanitation, and doctors have reported it rates high compared with other pools of the state.

Under present plans water will be changed three times a week with the pool being left open sufficient time to permit sunshine to dry it out.

Every precaution will be thrown around people enjoying recreation at Westbrook. Life guards will be saged at vantage points to be ready to render immediate assistance in time of need. C. W. Porter and Junior Rivers will be in charge of the pool.

It was thought last week opening of the pool would have to be abandoned because of lack of financial support but since that time the two clubs have rallied to the call, making enough tickets available to assure children financially unable to do so to enjoy the popular pastime. Small admission will be charged those able to pay as in recent years.

Reach for a Lucky

- for always Luckies Please!

My husband introduced me to Luckies

He had no objection to my brand of cigarettes. But, one day he asked me to try his. Well, I did—and I've been saying "Luckies Please" ever since. And it's not merely because Luckies taste fine and are ever so mild. Let me tell you the real reason.

My cigarette is a personal, intimate thing with me. After all, it touches my lips—and I do take pride in my sense of daintiness. Naturally, "Toasting" means to me even more than it does to a man—for purity is something very precious to a fastidious woman.

Christian Science Services.

"Christian Science" was the subject of the lesson-lesson in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 25.

The golden text was from Isaiah 9:2: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death upon them that the light shined."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following passage from the Bible: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, It is that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." (John 14:12).

The lesson-sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In healing the sick and sinning, Jesus elaborated the fact that the healing effect followed the understanding of the divine Principle and the Christ-spirit which governed the corporeal Jesus."

THANKS CITY FOR ITS HOSPITALITY

On my recent visit to Greenville was given such royal treatment that I can not allow this opportunity to pass without expressing my most heartfelt thanks to my many friends in that splendid city for their generous acts of courtesy to me. Forty years ago I began studying dentistry in Greenville and I shall never forget the gracious acts of friends at that time. I appreciate more than I can express in cold words the kindness of the people of Greenville to me.

May peace, happiness and prosperity forever abide with the splendid people of Greenville.

Sincerely,
DR. CLIFF WHITEHEAD,
Woodville, N. C.
Bertie County.

MY PRAYER

O quicken me that I may see
The vision splendid found in Thee
Of Truth and Goodness ringing true
With tender beauty shining through.

And kindle me with holy zeal
For all that's Good and True and Real;
That more and more my soul may be Attuned to Life eternally.

Thus radiantly, O Lord, I'll live,
And seek each day truly to give.
To thee I find in darkened ways,
Thyself, through Christ—th' human rays.

Frederick Turner,
Greenville, U. S. A.

The above poem appeared in a publication printed in London, England, last week. Mr. Turner is attending East Carolina Teachers College through this summer in preparation for entering the Episcopal ministry. While in Greenville he is assisting in the work of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He has made many friends since coming to Greenville who will appreciate the beauty of the above poem.

THIEF TAKES GOLD FROM DENTISTS HERE

gold there was locked tightly in an iron safe and not accessible to the intruder.

Gold taken from the office of Dr. Johnson was valued at around $60 and Dr. Massey said his was worth $25. Part of that taken from Dr. Johnson's office had been made into bridges and was on the work stand awaiting further attention today. The safe in Dr. Massey's office was said to have not been locked and the thief had little trouble. Instead of taking anything from Dr. Schultz, the thief left behind a bridge inlaid with gold. This had not been identified as part of the loot taken from the other offices here and it was supposed to have been removed from an office outside the city.

The robber used a skeleton key to enter Dr. Massey's office and prized the door open to Dr. Johnson's. Dr. Schultz's office had been opened by the janitor to clean up and the thief had little trouble getting in there.

Herman Emmett, negro elevator boy, said he saw a man in the building early this morning, but could not give police much information that would aid in establishing identity of the early morning visitor.

Chamber Will Ask Paving Of Two Highways

President Stroud has called a meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce for Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Several matters of importance are to be taken before the directors for their action. Among them is to have a highway committee appointed to see if they can get the state to hard-surface No. 11 from Oak City to Bethel, and also to have the Falkland highway paved to Pinetops.

J. J. White, chairman of the new industry committee, is to report on a manufacturer that wants to open a plant in Greenville. The directors will also set the date for the next trade event. The Carolina Shippers Association is considering transferring their office from Wilson to Greenville and the matter will be put before the directors. The directors will also discuss some plan whereby the merchants and business houses can assist the Tobacco Board of Trade in boosting our market. Several other matters of minor importance will be handled by the directors.

MAY BECOME HEAD OF COMMITTEE ON ROADS

Washington, June 27.—Due to the death of Representative E. B. Almon of Alabama, chairman of the roads committee of the House, Representative Lindsay Warren of North Carolina will in January advance to the chairmanship of this important committee if he desires. It is not known if Mr. Warren would desire to give up the chairmanship of the accounts committee, which he would have to do if he accepted the roads chairmanship. Representatives Almon and Kemp of Louisiana the two Democrats ahead of Warren on the roads committee, both dropped dead within three days.

By reason of the death of Judge Almon, Congressman Kerr advances to the second place on public buildings and grounds.

When the 74th Congress convenes Representative Loring Black of New York will not be a member as he has announced his candidacy for Mayor of New York City. That will make Representative J. Bayard Clark chairman of the claims committee.

lived, there had to be a cause and a sacrifice as Mr. Tyson stated.

The "revival behind the bars" was brought about by the means of submission, prayer and the singing of gospel songs. Paul and Silas were so submissive to God that they were willing to go behind the prison bars as prisoners. While they were there, they did not forget to talk to God through prayer. Through their praying and singing of gospel songs, God came to their rescue at midnight and set them free. Mr. Tyson declared that men and women who have made the greatest contribution to the world have been praying men and women. As a result of prayer many have been saved.

This great revival of Paul and Silas was successful in converting the jailer when the jailer was saved, and he was anxious that his wife and whole family know about the true God. So the whole family became acquainted with God as their Savior.

The same means that Paul and Silas used in bringing about their revival can be used today in bringing about revivals right here among us. The same God that saved the jailer over nineteen hundred years ago can save you today.
