STAGE ALL SET FOR TOBACCO MARKET OPENING

Tobacco Rolling Into This City Today For Opening Sale Tomorrow

FARMERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Opening Sale Tomorrow Will Be As Large As Any Ever Offered Here

With the stage all set for the opening of the tobacco market here tomorrow, residents of this community went about their tasks today with an air of expectancy and optimism broken only in a few instances by those who express the pessimistic attitude.

Since the arrival of the first few loads early last week the trek to the market has gained momentum and since late Saturday has grown tremendously.

Crops in the section and county this year are far ahead of last season from the standpoint of quantity while from a quality standpoint the crop is one of the best ever produced in this section.

In view of last year's shortage and this year's extra good quality growers are optimistic as to the price situation. Last season on the opening day the local market sold slightly less than 700,000 pounds at an average price of $8.95 per hundred pounds.

It is expected that thousands of visitors from this section and distant points will be on hand to witness the sales tomorrow.

START DRIVE GET ALL UNDER BLUE EAGLE

Start Nationwide Canvass in Behalf of National Recovery Program

Washington, Aug. 28.—(AP)—NRA volunteers—1,500,000 strong—opened today under Hugh S. Johnson's mandate. "We cannot afford to fail" campaign to implant the Blue Eagle over every business house and millions of homes.

Leading the greatest voluntary cause in the country's history, the door to door canvass, Johnson told the workers that either through codes or agreements, they were entering upon a job with between 70 and 80 per cent of the employers in trades and industry already under the Blue Eagle.

The Recovery Administrator describes the drive as "A milestone in human progress," explaining "for the first time the American people have a chance to test in business, the principles long ago proved in government. That principle is the old slogan, 'In Union There Is Strength'."

Buy under the Blue Eagle, was the watchword set by Johnson for the volunteers after warning that even a shadow of a boycott, intimidation or violence would spoil the whole endeavor.

OPEN COASTAL PLAIN SERIES HERE TUESDAY

Ayden and Greenville Will Begin Battle For Championship And Loving Cup

With Greenville leading the Coastal Plain League, and Ayden coming out in second place, the series for the pennant will get under way at the Third Street school stadium tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in a seven game series.

The games will alternate between the two towns until one or the other have won four games. Ayden, with its Stankus, and Greenville, with its Dean, promises to give local fans a great game should these two ever clash on the diamond together. Just when this will take place is problematical.

Lowe and Campbell, sports house of St. Louis, have announced that they will give the winners of the series a handsome loving cup. This is indeed a trophy well worth working for.

Officials of the club have announced that officials for the series will be Connelly of the Piedmont league and Bennett, who has been with the league for sometime.

Don't forget game time is 4:30 o'clock.

13 PRISONERS ESCAPE DURING SUNDAY NIGHT

Four Long Termers Among Those Who Gain Their Freedom From Wake Camp

Raleigh, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Thirteen state prisoners, all negroes, four of whom were serving long terms for killings, escaped from the Raleigh prison camp in Wake county Sunday night, state prison officials reported today. Warden H. H. Honeycutt of the central prison here, said the prisoners cut a hole through the floor of the prison camp and went out through it during the night. Central prison officials rushed to the camp, which is about 14 miles from Raleigh, to make an investigation.

Edgar Wiggins and Nathan Blake each serving a 30-year term for murder in Durham county, were two of the long-termers who made their way to freedom. Two others were Eugene Mebane of Durham, serving 20 to 25 years for murder, and Daniel Brown of Mecklenburg, serving 15 to 20 years for manslaughter.

Two Auto Fires During Sunday

The local fire department answered two alarms yesterday each caused by burning automobiles.

Early yesterday morning an alarm carried the firemen to the home of M. D. Adams on Glenarthur Avenue, where his automobile and garage were destroyed by a fire believed to have been caused by a short circuit in the car wiring.

Yesterday afternoon the firemen were called to extinguish an automobile on Third Street opposite the court house. By the time the firemen arrived the defective wiring had been pulled out and the fire thereby extinguished with but little damage having been done.

TENNESSEE TOWN OBSERVES OWN CENTURY OF PROGRESS

Livingston, Tenn., Aug. 28.—(AP)—Livingston and Overton counties have celebrated a century of progress all their own.

U. S. Golf Ball Imports Drop. Washington, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The United States is using fewer foreign golf balls. In the first six months of 1933 only 636,398 balls were imported as compared with 1,147,137 in the same months of 1932. Most golf ball imports come from the United Kingdom.

Calm Down, Mississippi, Here're Your Dams

By D. R. MacKENZIE. Minneapolis, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The upper Mississippi river, wild and turbulent at times, is to be put in a strait-jacket of locks and dams—and made for pay for its existence.

Agriculture, industry and consumers of the vast inland domain expect to line their pockets with the resultant revenue—representing a saving in transportation costs.

A. C. Wiprud, general counsel of the Upper Mississippi Waterway Association, has estimated this saving at $10,630,000 annually.

First, however, the Father of Waters must undergo a major operation—having its 6-foot channel deepened to 9 feet from the mouth of the Illinois river north to Minneapolis, and submitting to construction of 23 more dams and locks. Four already have been completed.

The federal government is to foot the bill. For work this year $33,000,000 has been allotted from the $33,000,000,000 public works program.

Senator Schall of Minnesota has announced that the President advised him he was authorizing immediate use of $12,000,000 to provide a 9-foot channel in the upper Mississippi, indicating also that he favored eventual deepening to 12 feet. Altogether it is estimated the 9-foot project will cost more than $100,000,000.

It will be a two and one-half year job, on which some 20,000 men will be given employment.

BRIGHT LEAF BELT OPENS TOMORROW

Mass Meeting of Tobacco Farmers to Discuss Price Situation Next Thursday

Raleigh, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Simultaneously with a state-wide movement to increase prices, Eastern North Carolina tobacco growers will start their crop to market tomorrow when the new bright belt warehouses open the season's sales. The belt includes four of the state's leading markets, Greenville, Wilson, Kinston and Rocky Mount, to vie with each other for the leadership position. Greenville, the leader last year, has installed a radio station to boost their position and broadcast market reports.

The movement to increase prices will crystallize here Thursday in a mass demonstration at the Memorial Auditorium, when tobacco growers from all over the state are expected to be in attendance.

Dean I. O. Schaub of State College, announced this afternoon that county agents in the five cured tobacco counties were calling meetings this week to elect three delegates from each county to a business convention.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Protest Labor Code. Washington, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Labor provisions in the automobile competitive code just promulgated by President Roosevelt bids fair to be tested in the courts. While he was unwilling to be quoted official of the inner council of organized labor informed reporters today that the position of the American Federation of Labor remained that certain stipulations on the relations between employee and employer should not have been left in the code.

He described the victory of the automobile manufacturers as probably the first step by industrialists to have the same wording inserted in all the codes. The labor speaker intimated that as soon as cases believed to be violations of the law are found, court action would be begun.

FINAL UNION SERVICE HELD LAST NIGHT

Rev. W. A. Lillycrop Delivered Strong Sermon In Last Of Summer Services

A large crowd attended the last of the Union Services held on the court house lawn Sunday night. The Rev. W. A. Lillycrop, pastor of the Memorial Baptist church presided over the service. The choir of St. Paul's Episcopal church led the singing and rendered as an offering "Fairest Lord Jesus". Miss Elizabeth Andrews played for the service. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. A. Lillycrop, rector of St. Paul's church.

In the course of his sermon Mr. Lillycrop pointed out that the holding of the union services indicated that there was in Greenville a splendid group of people who recognize that God is the Creator, owner and giver of all things material and spiritual; and that we have a sense of responsibility to God. He then stated that the greatest thing that the church people of Greenville could do through the coming year would be to accept the Lordship of Jesus Christ that this Lordship would be recognized in every area of life: the use of time, ability, personality, character, and spiritual resources.

With great earnestness and apt illustration the preacher pleaded for the church people of Greenville to be their best and to do their best to make Greenville a splendid Christian community throughout the coming year.

Among the outstanding cases to be heard during the week are that "Railroad" Ray and others on charges of engineering a series of robberies in this community. The case against Thomas Taylor, Jones and against on a charge of highway robbery, in connection with the robbery of Collins' filling station and an assault upon him and his wife will likewise draw interest. The same parties are under indictment in connection with the robbery of Paramore's filling station in Craven county at which time the assault upon Mr. Paramore proved almost fatal. The same parties are also wanted in Martin and other counties for trial and will probably be turned over to authorities from some of those counties just as soon as the hearing here is completed.

The murder case to be heard is that against Jasper Reddick, negro, of this city, for the slaying of another negro here sometime ago.

In presenting his charge to the new grand jury this morning Judge Frizzelle declared that to serve upon the grand jury of a county was a great privilege as well as a duty of a citizen and he outlined briefly and in general terms the duties of the members of that body. Declaring that times like those through which we have just passed brought about numerous crimes that otherwise would not have been committed and he stated that the task ahead of the grand jurors was a challenge to their ability. Warning them against any indication to extend favoritism to their friends or an opposite attitude toward their enemies or those with whom they were not friendly, he urged the men to hear those matters to come before them.

LONE STAR STATE VOTES FOR REPEAL

Texas Votes Over Hundred Thousand For Repeal of Prohibition Amendment

(By The Associated Press) Anti-prohibitionists having tucked Texas away in their fold, turned today their attention to the state of Washington which votes on repeal tomorrow.

Texas, the home of Senator Morris Sheppard, who is often called the father of the 18th Amendment, voted a majority of about 114,000 on Saturday to wipe the amendment from the Constitution. The Lone Star State was the 23rd in a row to approve the repeal. If Washington follows this example the repeal job will be two-thirds of the way to its goal.

J. C. Heilsman, Seattle, head of the state association for the repeal said, however, that there was grave danger of a prohibition victory in Washington unless the repealists recorded a heavy vote. He charged that the legislature in requiring a referendum in each of the 26 legislative districts rather than in the state at large, failed to provide for an expression of the will of the majority. Prohibitionists praised the arrangement as fair.

There are 18 uncompleted reclamation projects in 13 western states.

SLOT MACHINE WARRANTS CAN NOT BE FOUND

Solicitor Clark Urges That They be Returned To Clerk's Office At Once

Lost, strayed or stolen, seems to be the status of about thirty or more slot machine warrants issued at a recent term of criminal court here and Solicitor D. M. Clark is urging that they be returned to the Clerk's office at once so as to be placed upon the docket of the present term of court. Unless the warrants can be found it will be necessary for the solicitor to draw new warrants for these cases before calling them up for court action.

In commenting upon the matter Saturday, Solicitor Clark stated that of course the records in the county clerk's office were open to public inspection and that apparently some one had taken these warrants out of the clerk's office for study and had failed to return them. He requested that this matter be made public at once so the person or persons responsible for these warrants not being in their proper place could see to getting them back at once.

ECONOMIC WOES BANISHED FROM PORTUGUESE VILLAGE

Lisbon, Aug. 28.—(AP)—A village in which every man owns his house and land and into which problems of capital and labor never come is hidden in the thickly wooded district between the provinces of Alentejo and Beira Baixa.

In the communal spinning factory yarns are made from the wool of mountain sheep. Every cottage has its hand-loom, where cloth is woven into shawls, handkerchiefs and carpets. About 150,000 pounds of wool are turned into the finished product.

Restraining Order to Be Signed by Judge Frizzelle This Afternoon

Delinquent taxes in Pitt county will not be advertised this year until the second Monday in December as a result of a restraining order to be signed this afternoon by Judge Paul Frizzelle, presiding over Superior court here. The order is a continuation of a temporary restraining order signed by Judge Frizzelle on July 27 delaying the advertising of the county delinquent tax list until the farmers of the county could have opportunity to realize from their crops in order to be in position to pay their taxes.

The temporary order was brought before Judge Frizzelle at noon recess of today's court and he ordered the original order to be made permanent the dates of advertising and sale to be agreed upon between the counsel representing the county and the Tax Relief Association under whose auspices the restraining action was brought.

Following this announcement by Judge Frizzelle the counsel agreed upon November 10th as the date for advertising the taxes with the sale to be held on December 11th, the second Monday in December.

Similar orders delaying the advertising of delinquent taxes for the town of Grifton and Farmville were likewise heard and granted this morning.

THE JUDGE IS RIGHT

Judge Frizzelle in his charge to the grand jury this morning struck one note that should resound all over the county and be taken to heart by our citizens. No community is any better and no law enforcement than the majority of its citizens want, the judge declared.

There is a great truth in this terse statement by the judge and the sooner our average citizen realizes that he as an individual has a solemn duty to perform along this line, the sooner all our communities will be free from immorality and crime. If our citizens want better conditions and are willing to perform their part of the duties by reporting crime and upholding the hands of the law enforcement men they can have better conditions. The judge has certainly laid down a challenge to our citizens.

FARMERS ENTITLED TO LIVING PRICES

Just how things will look by this time tomorrow after the tobacco sales have been in progress for a day of the new season we cannot say but up to the present time our people are most optimistic over the new season and certainly they are entitled to hope for a new deal in the way of tobacco prices. As we have said time and time again, every indication is that there should be a good demand for this year's tobacco crop and at prices that will put the farmer on an equal footing with other lines of business. Last year's short crop, together with increased consumption, and better quality of this year's crop should certainly mean better prices.

If they don't get better prices this year, and by that we mean not just better than the past few low years, but a real living price, they have a just kick coming and it is our opinion that if the opening prices are disappointing there is going to be plenty of kicking. The tobacco farmers have suffered long and certainly now they are entitled to a break.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By FRANK L. PACKARD

Synopsis: Colin Hewitt, mystery writer is scouring New York disguised as Clarke Lunn, a crook, for a trace of the Mask. The Mask is one of the underworld and besides has threatened Colin's life. Butch Counsel has tipped Colin off to the fact that Captain Dollaire, rum runner who raised the Mask's counter-fitting plant on the St. Lawrence river, is in New York, at Spinelli's night club. A supposedly drunk man at Spinelli's bar has described Dollaire and Helme Schwarm, to whom Dollaire hopes to sell a cargo of rum. The "drunk" is one of Butch's mob.

Chapter 31 ENTER HELMIE

The barkeeper was back. He grinned at Colin as the "drunk" lurched away.

"What's his name?" asked Colin. "Peter K. MacBride." The barkeeper's grin broadened. "Didn't he wish a card on you?"

Colin shook his head. "No. Have I been neglected?"

"We sweep 'em up off the floor in the morning," confided the barkeeper with a laugh. "He carries a pocket-full around with him. But he's all right when he's sober. Got a bit of money, so they say—retired—or something."

"Well, I think I'll blow," smiled Colin. "When he comes back tell him I had a telephone call."

He swung away from the bar, left the room, and began to make his way downstairs. Peter K. MacBride, whatever his real name might be, was obviously one of Butch's inside men—a "feeder" for the gang. And MacBride's warning was ringing in his ears.

How much or how little, MacBride already knew, or whether the man had only "sensed" something in the air, mattered little. That, in MacBride's words, he would just lose here before the night was over, was exactly what he, Colin, was expecting—and he was quite sure in his own mind that he could have told MacBride why!

His own plans? He had none—except to watch Dollaire and be guided by circumstances. Dollaire was the bait. His Colin's job was to see who snatched at it!

Colin reached the entrance to the dance hall and paused for a moment in the doorway amongst what seemed the ever-present knot of people who stood there peering in. A "turn" was on. He had seen it before. A girl was covering her floor with prodigious leaps and bounds—but very little covered the girl. Spinelli called it his psychic dance.

Colin's eyes roamed around the room—and came to rest almost immediately on Helme Schwarm, whom he identified without hesitation from MacBride's description. At the table beside the booze baron was a stocky, powerful built black-haired man—Dollaire, of course.

They were sitting, as MacBride had said, in one of the "stalls" near the door, a bottle of champagne between them. Colin smiled cryptically. Spinelli never overlooked a bet that meant a little extra profit.

The "stalls" were nothing more than raised-off spaces on a slightly raised platform that was built around three sides of the room, but they possessed comfortable lounge chairs and he viewed was better, so why should not a small fee be charged for the use? Spinelli charged if. But they were popular. Most of them were occupied tonight. Colin moved forward into the room. He contented himself with a table on the floor level not far from the booze baron's stall—he could watch Dollaire, not only unobtrusively, but much better from here than from a stall.

Again his eyes roamed around the room. The tables, three deep, that separated the space reserved for dancing from the stalls were fairly well occupied too. Spinelli would be able to declare a dividend tonight!

He ordered a bottle of wine, and slipped it leisurely. Applause greeted several suggestive numbers on Spinelli's programme. Colin saw little of the minutes and the quarter-hours slipped by. Helme Schwarm and Dollaire had become a little uproarious, though not offensively so.

Had the deal been perfected? Had Helme Schwarm become the owner of a choice cargo from St. Pierre and Miquelon? It mattered little. They were attacking another bottle of champagne. Helme Schwarm had paid for it from a huge wad of bills that he had wrenched, because of its bulk, with no little difficulty from his pocket.

The Dutchman's combination of straw hair, brilliant red tie, and inch-square checked suit of light fawn as a color scheme struck a distinctly bluish note. Dollaire warily, beetle-browed, narrowed, with thin hard lips and protruding jaw, was the reverse of being prepossessing.

And then, as he watched the two, a fine point of ethics arose in Colin's mind to trouble him. Believing that Dollaire was in immediate danger had he any right to sit here and not warn the man? Mentally he began to debate the pros and cons.

What could he say to Dollaire? Nothing definite—but enough, say to cause Dollaire to take alarm and leave the place. Well, what then? If the Mask had Dollaire under surveillance here, Dollaire would be no better off outside than in.

Dollaire had gratuitously thrown his hat into the ring. He had destroyed one of the Mask's pet schemes, and had murdered at least two—for Lazare might still be alive—of the Mask's men. If Colin knew the Mask at all, Dollaire, whether he were put on the spot here or elsewhere, was a doomed man from the night he had raided the club on the Cascade River.

Dollaire was a callous, cold-blooded murderer—boasting his prowess. One's finer instincts revolted even at the thought of his existence. Warn Dollaire? If the Mask or any of his men were here to see then Clarke Lunn might as well never have been created. He had not come here to warn Dollaire; he had come here to watch the Mask play his hand.

There were Germaine, himself, and his future, his own life at stake. Ethics! His lips tightened. Was it ethical to fling all that aside on the chance of being able to accomplish what, at the utmost, could be no more than a postponement of the inevitable showdown between the Mask and Dollaire?

Suppose he were writing it? Angrily he sought to fling the sudden intrusion aside—but it persisted. One always had to justify the hero's actions. Would the hero be justified in the readers' eyes if he stood pat under these circumstances? "By God," Colin stated fiercely to himself. "I'd write it that way, anyhow!"

A waiter stood at his elbow. "Pardon me, sir. There's a couple of gentlemen over there that would like you to join them."

The Promise

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
Christopher Columbus Crow had discovered Rip in the dog pound. "I'll hurry back and tell Willy Nilly so you will be saved in time," the Crow cawed.

"Ob, please hurry," Rip urged. "I don't know what is going to happen to me. Some people are coming around to pick out a few of these dogs as pets, but I don't want to live anywhere else. And a number of the other dogs who haven't any homes will be painlessly put out of the way so that their troubles will be over.

"But I want to live as I'm anything but a homeless dog. Only I do want my home."

"There are some other dogs who will be claimed by their owners if their licenses are paid. Please hurry, hurry, hurry. I don't know what may happen."

"I won't waste another moment," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow. "but will fly in a straight line right back to Puddle Middle."

The dogs in the pound all told their life histories to one another. Rip had become a great favorite and they did hope that help would reach him before anything happened.

Christopher reached Puddle Middle cawing at the top of his Crow voice. "I have found Rip. He is in the dog pound, but if we're to get him out we must pay for his license."

"There is no time to waste!" cried Willy Nilly, the little gnome-like man. And at once he hurried into his automobile Two-Ways and all the animals piled in too. "We'll have to get the dog catcher's promise to wait until we can pay. We must get that promise!"

RED OAK NEWS

So much has happened within our community recently that we have quite a lot to write about this week. Of course the biggest thing was our party at the Woman's Club building in Greenville, on account of which is carried in this paper.

Then, too, we are very proud of the large attendance at Sunday school Sunday. The Sunshine class had 46 present and there were 129 present in all. We think this does well for after a contest the crowd usually drops off. We hope that we have awakened enthusiasm enough that everybody will try to attend Sunday school somewhere.

We were glad to have Mr. Gerkins of Bath, as a visitor Sunday and our lesson was taught by our pastor, Rev. Harold Tyer. Practically everyone in the class joined in the discussion and we enjoyed the lesson very much.

Please take special notice that every member of Red Oak is expected to come or else send someone to work in his place on Wednesday morning, Aug. 30th, good an early, at the church to give a fall cleaning to the church and the grounds. Please come with something to work with and don't stay home and let the other fellow do the work. Be on hand!

We wish you to also take special notice that everyone who wishes to do so (you do not have to be a member at Red Oak) is invited to go with us on our annual outing at Public Landing Thursday, August 31st. We will spread supper together about 6:30 or 7 o'clock. Everybody bring a basket and come—young and old—married and single.

It was the writer's good fortune to attend the opening service of the revival at Reedy Branch last night. They are looking forward to and planning for a good revival and from the start they made last night we feel sure they will succeed. The singing was splendid.

Our revival at Piney Grove will commence next Sunday night. Rev. Hinnant will do the preaching and we hope to have a good revival there also.

We are sorry to learn that one of the members of our Sunshine class is confined to her home with diphtheria. This is Miss Lizzie Manning, and we hope she will soon be well and come back to Sunday school.

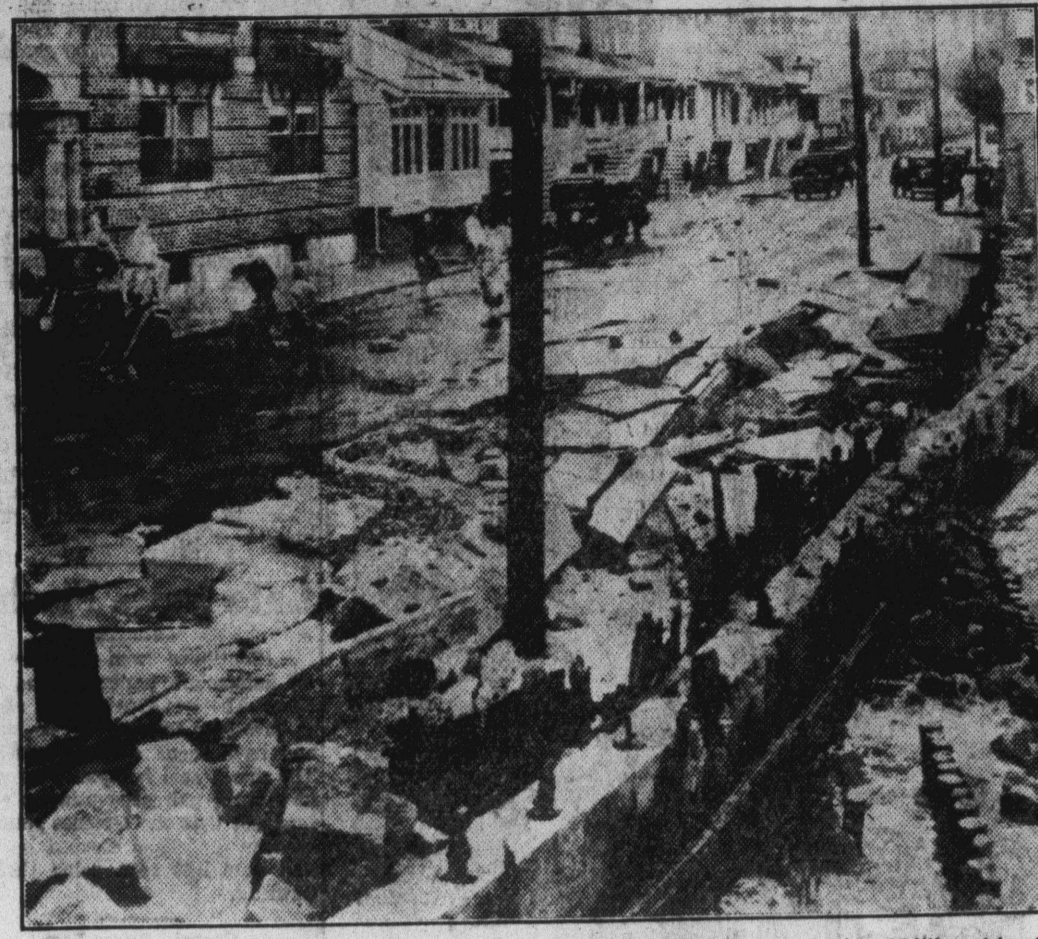

Little Miss Mabel Glenn Manning has also been confined with diphtheria.

Burke Raspberries

Morgantau, Aug. 28—Eight hundred raspberry plants on the farm of the Glenn Alpine rural school in Burke county produced 1,800 quarts of berries this year which sold for an average of 20 cents a quart, reports County Agent R. L. Sloan. The plants were put in three years ago and this is the first crop harvested. Less than one acre of ground was used in planting with the plants set six feet apart each way. Net shoots have not grown up and the stalks that bore this season's crop will be cut out.

HAROLD DYER RESIGNS FROM U. MUSIC DEPT.

SETTLEMENT REACHED IN KELLY WILL CASE

Kinston, Aug. 28—The Thomas J. Kelly will case has been settled. Attorneys today announced a "compromise settlement" between the proponents and caveators. Kelly was an elderly eccentric bachelor residing at Kennesville. He died several years ago, leaving his $40,000 estate to two cousins, Dr. J. W. Farrior and H. D. Farrior, of Warsaw. Scores of other cousins, residing in several states, sought to break the will.

The caveators' suit was heard in Superior Court here some weeks ago. It was transferred from the court at Kennesville. The proponents won. The caveators appealed. Under the settlement the caveators will get $20,000 in cash and the amount of court costs, it was stated.

Talks to Parents

Synthetic Life

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

It is during holidays and especially during the long summer vacations that the extraordinary importance given to children in the present social scheme is most apparent. The world seems populated by children, and yet the size of families is smaller than ever before. In our effort to make the world for children, many of us have sold our adult birthright and reduced ourselves to ciphers only to be regarded as providers. So often these young lords of creation expect to be supported on a far more elaborate scale and for a longer period of careless youth than was usual in any previous generation.

Sometimes it looks as if this reign of youth would last, for these same pampered children are in danger of never growing up. Of course, the business depression may have had some effect upon them. In some cases already they have been compelled by straitened circumstances to try to provide for themselves, and have begun to realize their own unpreparedness. But even force of circumstance cannot make them grow up suddenly or give their unexercised backbones the stamina to face the hardships and privations which life inevitably offers.

The life they have seen has been so denatured by loving parents and educators that they have had no conception of reality, but have looked forward to a fool's paradise based on hearsay and their own idle dreams. After all, they have a right to consideration first and foremost as human beings who must some day take part in the world's work, rather than as a race apart, to be carefully guarded and excluded from the actualities they must some day face.

Parents should realize that their children are not little adults, but are children who need to be trained to face the world as it is, not as they wish it to be.

State Theatre Gets Ready For The Fall Season

According to Manager T. Y. Walker, the State theatre is in readiness for the anticipated fall business and beginning today have put into effect the fall schedule of continuous shows from one o'clock in the afternoon until 11 P. M., without an intermission at the supper hour. On Saturdays the performances will begin at 11 A. M., and run continuously until 11 P. M.

Mr. Walker stated that operating under the government code the theatre was now employing eight full time workers instead of five used heretofore. He further stated that should the increased fall business justify it the company would also re-open the Capitol Theatre on Evans street and operate it through the fall and winter season. Should this be done it would mean the employment of several additional workers. Mr. Walker, like other business men of this section is every optimistic over the outlook for fall business here.

AYDEN TRIMS GREENVILLE IN TIGHT GAME

Greenville journeyed over to Ayden Saturday afternoon and were defeated by the score of 1-0 in one of the best exhibitions of baseball seen in this section in many a day.

It was a regular mound battle between Doug Johnson of Ayden and Roger Taylor of Greenville. Taylor held the Ayden lads hitless until the fatal ninth inning when they got their only two hits of the game, one of these a homer by Stephenson which won the game.

"Doug" Johnson also pitched a beautiful game for Ayden and did not allow but four hits, two of these being obtained by "Runt" Bostic. Taylor struck out a total of four men and walked five. Johnson struck out six men and walked two.

Both teams missed opportunities to score but it was a case of not being able to hit when a hit would mean a run. Greenville missed its opportunity to score in the first and eighth inning and Ayden missed its chances to run up its score in the third and fifth frames.

Both teams gave their pitchers splendid support especially in tight pinches and only one error was chalked up against the two clubs and this being on the Greenville side.

Fielding honors go to the two catchers of the team, "Sat" Curry of Greenville and Stephenson of Ayden. Both men made some mighty fine throws to catch men stealing second base, especially when their side had only one out against them.

All in all it was one of the prettiest exhibitions of baseball seen in this section this season and it was a case of who would get the breaks and Ayden it seemed, got that break in the ninth inning.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

It now appears that Francis X. Shields, rather than the somewhat tennis-weary Ellsworth Vines, will be the Horatio at the Bridge when American singles prestige is defended against the invading hosts in the national championships at Forest Hills this September.

The tall, dynamic New Yorker's return to top form late this summer is little short of amazing. Nearly two years ago the Davis Cup committee discarded him as an international team prospect. They admitted he had the ability to become a champion but decided he was too erratic and uncertain to waste any more Davis Cup funds on him.

As if to justify this opinion of him, Shields left Paris early this season with a party of friends to say good-bye to them at Cherbourg, enjoyed himself so much that he decided to accompany them right back to the United States, leaving his baggage and a long array of tennis engagements behind. That, everyone promptly remarked, was just like good old Frank Shields. Just a big, good-natured playboy. A good thing, of course, he wasn't engaged in the serious Davis Cup business of the year.

On his come-back form, however the fact is that Shields would have been a vital, if not deciding figure in this year's Davis Cup competition. He was good enough two years ago to get an even break with Perry and Austin, the British aces. He has whipped every rival in sight, including Vines, on home courts within the past few weeks.

Only young Mr. Shields can explain the reasons for this consistency, suddenly acquired again and convincingly demonstrated. Your guess may be as good as mine, as to how long it will last, but if he should come through to win the national singles, the Davis Cup committee no doubt will forgive, forget and invite him right back into the fold for 1934.

Speaking of come-backs it will be interesting to watch what happens when Tom Canzoneri tries to belt his way to the top of the lightweight class against Chicago's Barney Ross at the Polo Grounds during the same week that Messrs. Shields, Vines, Crawford, Perry et al. are battling for tennis honors. Ross, only four years out of amateur ranks and a product of the Golden Gloves tournaments, took the lightweight crown from Canzoneri in Chicago two months ago. In less than three months he is staking it against a fighter generally regarded as one of the finest in the business, for his weight and inches. Perhaps Ross wasn't so surprised as the Eastern critics when the Chicagoan took the decision and Chicagoan took the decision and willingness to fight in defense of the championship at a time when most title holders are emulating the artful dodger, is refreshing.

BEGINS TERM OF CRIMINAL COURT HERE

fore them with open minds and a determination to consider the welfare and happiness of the citizens of the county as a whole. He says that the criminal laws of the state make no provision for exceptions because of provisions like those of the recent past and therefore the jurors' duty was a hard one. Most striking was the judge's assertion that the laws of any community would be enforced just to the extent to which the citizens wanted them enforced and he urged upon his hearers and all law-abiding citizens of the county a determination to see to it that lawlessness of every kind was reported to the grand jury and proper authorities in order that conditions could be improved for the common good of all.

Referring to the report of the past grand jury Judge Frizzelle stated that he was giving careful study to the recommendations of that report and would probably before the end of this term bring certain phases of it to the attention of the present grand jury.

Specifically he urged a continuation of careful study of all the insurance companies and bonding companies with whom the county was doing business in order that the interests of the taxpayers of the county might be protected at all times.

Commenting upon the recent report from the State Health Department that there was great danger surrounding many schools of the state because of lack of adequate water supply and sewerage facilities, he urged that the grand jury study carefully how these matters pertain to schools in this county and make such recommendations as are deemed necessary to protect the health and lives of the school children of the county.

COTTON MILL DOUBLES NUMBER OF WORKERS

Sanford, Aug. 28.—The Sanford Cotton Mill is entering heartily into the spirit of the recovery movement. It is employing twice the number of people it was employing prior to adopting the recovery code. Its payroll is three times what it was previous to joining the recovery drive. It assures its operatives full time work through the third week of September. The policy of the Sanford Cotton Mill, as expressed by a gentleman familiar with its management, is to co-operate to the fullest extent in the President's recovery undertaking in the hope and belief that other enterprises will follow the same policy. "We are all in the same boat," says this observer, "and must go forward or take a tremendous slide backward." This mill was in a difficult position some months ago, but a thoroughgoing campaign for business was started and it is now forging ahead and having a big part in restoring prosperity in this section.
