PEACE LOOMS IN THE PENNSYLVANIA COAL FIELDS

Marketing Agreement For Flue-Cured Tobacco Crop Effective As Of Sept. 25

AVERAGE OF 17 CENTS TO BE PAID OUT

Domestic Concerns Agree to Buy at Least 250,000,000 Pounds of Leaf Under Agreement; Government Reserves Right to Examine Records of Tobacco Companies; Licensing Power not to be Invoked; Estimated Growers Will Get Over $12,000,000 More For Crop

Washington, Oct. 13.—(AP)—A flue-cured tobacco marketing agreement retroactively in effect at 6 a. m. September 25, carried the signature today of Secretary Wallace and the approval of representatives of the larger domestic tobacco companies.

The Farm Administration said the voluntary agreement should increase the income of producers by $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 and officials pointed out that licensing powers of the Farm Adjustment Administration act will not be used.

Officials said the government retained power to examine records of the tobacco companies to ascertain whether they are abiding by the agreement while an important provision of the contract calls for an assessment among tobacco companies if necessary to raise the minimum average price of the weed to 17 cents.

Tobacco companies would agree to pay a minimum price that would buy at least 250,000,000 pounds of the year's crop which remains unsold on September 25. The companies would pay an average price for all flue cured tobacco purchased from September 25 to March 31

CLUBMEN MEET IN CITY TODAY

Divisional Meeting of Kiwanians to be Held at Woman's Club at 7 o'Clock

Kiwanians from a half dozen other towns in this immediate section of the state gathered here today to attend the divisional meeting of the organization with the local club as host.

The general session was scheduled for the Woman's club tonight at 7 o'clock when Governor Bill Montgomery of Wilmington will speak. Lt. Gov. Claude Chamberlain of Kinston will preside.

The meeting will actually get under way this afternoon at four o'clock with a conference of presidents. This will be followed by a conference of secretaries at 5 o'clock. J. W. Dailley, president of the Wilson Kiwanian club, will preside over the meeting of presidents, and Leslie Gossard of New Bern, will direct the conference of secretaries.

The district is composed of Greenville, Wilmington, Goldsboro, Wilson, Kinston and New Bern, and scores of members of the clubs were expected to be in attendance.

The high lights of the meeting will be the banquet at which Governor Montgomery is scheduled to speak at 7 o'clock. Judge Dink James and Rev. E. L. Hillman, heads of the program committee, said today they had arranged an interesting program, and hoped to make the gathering one of the outstanding of years.

This is the first divisional meeting held here in years and members of the club were prepared today to make the visit of the Kiwanians one of the most enjoyable of the year.

TWO COUNTIES WERE HOSTS TO MEETING HERE

Pitt and Beaufort Baptists Entertaining Roanoke Asso.

The Roanoke Baptist Association which closed a two-day session here Wednesday was entertained by the churches of Pitt and Beaufort counties as well as the churches in Greenville, it was stated by members of the entertainment committee today.

It had previously been stated that the two Greenville churches were hosts to the association, but wishing to also give the other churches credit for their part in the success of the gathering, described as one of the best in years, members of the committee asked today that they be mentioned.

The association, composed of six counties in this immediate section of the state, brought between six and seven hundred delegates to the city, and all sessions were held in Jarvis Memorial Methodist church because of the inadequate seating accommodations of the Baptist churches here.

In addition to discussing the objectives of the church in the community, state, nation and world, the conference also heard prominent ministers of the denomination speak on important matters, in addition to electing officers for the new year.

Delegates expressed themselves as highly pleased with the hospitality shown them on every side while here, and commented on the success of the gathering.

TWO JAILED IN LEAF CASE

Heber Stepp and Aunt Held on Charge of Embezzlement in Tobacco Sale

Heber Stepp and his aunt, Mrs. Mattie Stepp, were being held in jail here today for trial in County court next Tuesday on a charge of embezzlement growing out of the sale of tobacco belonging to C. T. Munford.

The couple was taken into custody by Sheriff Sam Whit-hurst yesterday and were bound over to county court under bond of $200 each. They were unable to give bond and were remanded to jail.

Stepp and his aunt, it was said, attempted to embezzle Mr. Munford out of approximately $40 growing out of the sale of tobacco on the Farmville market. They were immediately reported to authorities and taken into custody.

Officers today reported widespread theft of tobacco in various parts of the county. A dozen or more complaints were made known this week and this week. Officers arrested made in connection with such cases. Two negroes were jailed here this week after stealing leaf in Winterville township. Officers recovered the money derived from the sale, and the prisoners confessed the crime.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Lanier Gives Tobacco Facts. Washington, Oct. 13.—(AP)—J. C. Lanier, an administration tobacco specialist, said the minimum average of 17 cents a pound domestic buyers have contracted to pay will be computed on the entire amount sold between Sept. 25 and March 31, the end of the season.

The average since Sept. 25 has been considerably below 17 cents, but if the average between now and March 31 is sufficiently high to bring the general average for the whole period up to 17 cents no assessment will be made against the companies.

If payments between now and March 31 should make a general average of 17 cents, individual farmers who have sold all their tobacco at lower prices will receive no benefits.

Lanier said he doubted if in North Carolina there was any con- (Continued on Page Six)

LEAF SALES HEAVIER HERE

About a Million and A Half Pounds of Tobacco Offered For Sale Today

With higher prices in evidence the past week, sales picked up sharply on the local tobacco market today and indications were that a million and a half pounds would be disposed of when the market closes for the week this afternoon.

With the government marketing agreement signed last night, growers who have been holding back their leaf the last several days, were expected to market the remainder of their crop rapidly from now on, and indications pointed to heavy sales on the Greenville market next week.

The past week saw Greenville forge ahead of all other markets of the belt in prices, and farmers who sold here from day to day were hearty in their praise of the improvement. Monday saw the market average nearly 16 cents per pound, not only the highest average for the season here but for the entire belt.

Since the time prices have ranged close to that figure with very little variation during the latter part of the week.

Incidentally, by selling around a million pounds daily the past week Greenville total sales were drawing near the 23 million pound mark with today's sales.

Farmers have been assured by the government agreement made public today that the 17 cents parity price will be retroactive from September 25 and that they will enjoy this protection it matters not how rapidly they market the crop.

Yesterday's sales, according to official figures made public today by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, amounted to $42,300 pounds at an average of $14.52 per hundred. For (Continued on page six)

FAIR EXHIBITS ON INCREASE

Indications Point to Bumper Crop of Pitt County Products Here Next Week

Judging from the interest taken by Pitt county exhibitors the New Deal Fair will have more agricultural exhibits than it can take care of. Thirteen more signified their willingness to exhibit their home-made products yesterday. Among them was Mrs. R. A. Fountain of Fountain, who is known for her high-class exhibits in canned fruit and other home products. Others who will exhibit their wares at the New Deal Fair are: Prom Bethel, W. S. Brown, Van Taylor, J. J. Gurganus, J. R. Carson, F. C. Martin, Mrs. W. T. Carson, Stokes, Mrs. Joe Tyson, Falkland, C. H. Mayo.

Among the local exhibitors are Mrs. P. E. Randolph, Mrs. C. A. Langley, Mrs. Chas. Parker and J. W. Martin.

Practically every merchant in Greenville is cooperating by erecting booths in the agricultural building to make the fair a success.

Six working men have spent the entire week digging a hole 20x36 feet which will be filled next Monday with 30,000 gallons of water so that Carver's high diving horse can do his stuff for the fair patrons.

This is only one of 16 acts that have been engaged by the fair to entertain and thrill the patrons all next week twice daily.

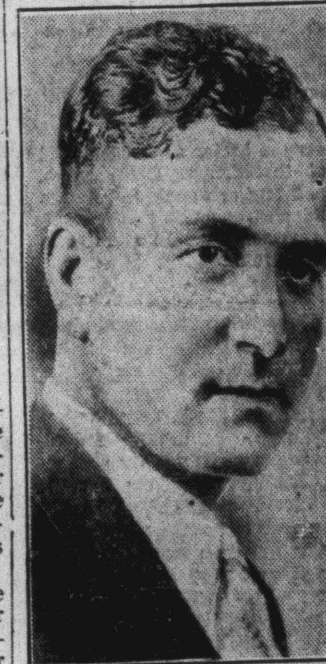

Many couples are making their application to be married next Saturday night in front of the grandstand. But no couple has been selected as yet. This wedding will be the concluding feature of the fair.

Captain John M. Sheesley who is featuring his mile long midway advises that his 40 big attractions are being painted and readied especially for this engagement and promises to bring to Greenville the biggest and best show of his long career.

Over 11,000 tickets have been distributed to the school children of the city and county. They will be the guests of the management next Tuesday when a special program will be given absolutely free to the children. All schools will let out at noon to give the kiddies an opportunity to enjoy the fair as only a child can. Capt. Sheesley advises that all show and rides will be five cents that day for the children. All in all it looks like a gala day for the kiddies of Pitt county.

COAL MINERS WILL AGREE ON CHECK OFF

Tell President They Are Ready to Recognize Unions; Strikers in California Increased to 25,000 as 7,000 Garment Workers Walk Out; Strikers in Other Fields of Labor Continue

(By The Associated Press) Hopes of peace in the strike ridden coal fields of western Pennsylvania were more encouraging today than in California, the strike movement spread.

Bituminous coal miners were reported to have told President Roosevelt they would give conditional recognition to the check off under which union dues are deducted from miners' wages and some labor leaders believe this would be accepted as recognition of the union.

The number of strikers in California increased to 25,000 when 7,000 garment workers in Los Angeles left their jobs to protest low wages.

Strikes among cotton pickers, sardine fishermen, tomato pickers, great foresters and stevedores continued.

Sullivan, Indiana, was under curfew orders by the national guards. Three Sullivan county miners workers locals voted to return to work.

Threats of strikes in the Republic steel plant in Buffalo collapsed when workers' representatives walked out of a strike meeting.

Strike of Eastern silk workers was augmented by the walkout of 1,000 silk and rayon operatives in Rhode Island.

Steel workers in West Virginia and Ohio and tool makers in Detroit, continued on strike.

TWO SCHOOL GIRLS LOSE EYE IN BLAST

Third Student at Apex High School Injured in Biology Experiment

Apex, N. C., Oct. 13.—(AP)—An explosion which sent flying glass into their eyes during a biology experiment in the Apex high school this morning may cost two students Lucille Collins and Marie Finch, the sight of their right eyes.

The girls' teacher, Miss Kate Allen, and seven other pupils were hurt by the spray of glass. Another girl, Dorothy Wilkerson, also was cut about the eyes but doctors expressed opinion the wound would not affect her vision.

At Raleigh, Dr. Z. M. Hicks, eye specialist, said, "we have little hope for the sight of their right eyes," after an examination of the injuries suffered by Lucille Allen and Marie Finch. Both girls also suffered a number of superficial cuts on their faces and necks.

Principal B. D. Brunna, of the school, said the explosion occurred as the class was preparing oxygen. Miss Allen, the teacher was quoted by Dr. O. S. Goodwin as saying a test of the chemical being used indicated that a bottle thought to contain Potassium chlorate was in reality filled with some other chemical.

The explosion did no property damage.

New Books

By JOHN SELBY
New York.—The week's literary comestibles range from John Strachey's "The Menace of Fascism" to "Dolly Gann's Book," a range to satisfy the most varied audience.

Mr. Strachey defests Fascism with great and implacable hatred. And he goes out for its scalp with a ruthless knife. He begins with a section devoted to Hitler's alleged atrocities which is by no means pleasant reading, but which at least is not quite so detailed or so horrible as in "The Brown Book of the Hitler Terror," published last week by the committee of which Lord Marley is chairman.

Yet it furnishes a rostrum from which Mr. Strachey speaks in very cool, logical prose. He traces the destruction of the hope of progress through democracy, which hope still lives, although feebly, in this country, he believes.

The something Mr. Strachey wishes to succeed this hope is the "socialist path to the abolition of our present social system of our present social system." And fascism is the greatest threat to that solution, he believes.

Reflecting Washington
Mrs. Gann's book is more cheerful fare, and naturally the most cheerful chapter for the reader is that dealing with the lady's famous "precedence fight." Only Mrs. Gann says there really never was a fight, that at the worst all there ever had been from the so-called Longworth camp was a letter from the late speaker, and that Alice Roosevelt Longworth and Dolly Gann never were anything but friends.

In addition, there is a good deal of backstage gossip of Washington, colored by the personality of the teller.

Equally out of the ordinary is Virginia Woolf's "Flush, a Biography." Flush was, of course, Elizabeth Barrett Browning's spaniel, already a canine immortal if ever there was one, and now all the more so. Mrs. Woolf manages to penetrate the movement of a dog's mind, even at so great a distance. It is not an easy job to do close up.

The sights that made up Flush's life furnish surprisingly good material for a biographer; better yet, Mrs. Woolf's instinct or intellect, one or the other, has kept her from making the dog merely a foil against which to show his mistress. One sees the invalid poet and her circle, but as background for Flush.

Novels
There are so many important novels that even a bare list is hardly practicable. The late John Galsworthy's "One More River," which closes what some call the Charwell saga; it is good that this last Galsworthy novel should be of the stature it is.

William McFee's "No Castle in Spain" is less representative of his author than "One More River." Mr. McFee, whether he like it or not, seems best when on, or at least close beside the sea. There is an occasional feeling of strain in this story of a New York girl dropped suddenly into the midst of a feudal empire in South America, although there is also a good deal of brilliant writing.

And Catherine Brody, whose proletarian "Nobody Starves" was both bitter and striking, is again telling the story of the submerged half in "Cash Item."

Repeat Possibility Spurs U. S. Plans

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Washington (AP)—Should national prohibition be repealed this year, government officials would have the benefit of preliminary arrangements for the collection of liquor revenues which they hope would reach the grand total of $700,000,000 yearly.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate finance committee, assuming repeal, expects the government to derive annually $200,000,000 from beer taxes and $500,000,000 from levies on whiskey and other liquors, a total sum which, if realized, would be expected to assure elimination of certain special taxes levied at the last session of Congress.

In the National Industrial Recovery act it is provided specifically that if repeal of the eighteenth amendment is proclaimed before December 31 there will be relief in 1934 from certain taxes designed to help finance the public works program.

These taxes, calculated to provide some $277,000,000, include the increased levy of one-half cent per gallon on gasoline, the 5 cent tax on stock dividends, the one-tenth of 1 per cent tax on the capital stock of corporations, and 5 per cent tax on corporation profits in excess of $12 1/2 per cent of the capital stock value.

Congress, with the expert counsel of treasury tax authorities, would fix the levies on newly legalized liquors with a view to obtaining the largest possible returns. With the states as well as the federal government taxing liquor, the treasury is recommending schedules would consider the danger of fixing levies so high as to tend to reduce revenue by encouraging the illicit distilling and selling of whiskey.

The present tax on medicinal whiskey is $1.10 a gallon, while there is a levy of $6.40 a gallon on whiskey "diverted for beverage use."

The latter is in the nature of a penalty tax on liquor sold in violation of national prohibition and, according to some legal experts, would cease to be effective after repeal.

But in order to assure the expected revenue of $500,000,000 from hard liquors and wine, it has been figured that either consumption would be in excess of pre-voistead demand or the tax about as high as the current penalty levy.

In 1919 when 83,881,000 gallons of whiskey, rum, gin, brandy and alcohol were withdrawn from warehouses, the revenue from distilled spirits totaled $353,737,000. For five months of that fiscal year the tax was $6.40 a gallon and for seven months it was $9.20 a gallon.

In 1917 when withdrawals reached the pre-prohibition peak of 164,291,000 gallons, the liquor taxes, including wines and cordials, but not beer, amounted to only $192,111,000. The whiskey tax in that year was $1.10 a gallon, the same as the present rate on medicinal liquor.

In the 23-year period from 1894 to October, 1917, the rate stood at $1.10 with the trend of both revenues and consumption quite steadily upward. Wartime need for funds brought about a boost in the rate to $8.20 a gallon, which was increased to $6.40 midway in the fiscal year 1919 when the revenues from distilled spirits reached the high mark of $353,737,000. Consumption, however, was only a little more than one-half that of 1917.

Some experts in the bureau of industrial alcohol and others here familiar with the liquor situation believe that consumption of hard liquors after national prohibition will exceed that of 1919 owing to the increase in population and the fact that only 15 states were wet in the year immediately prior to adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

GOVERNMENT SIGNS TOBACCO PACT

The long negotiated agreement is retroactive and goes into effect immediately as of 6 a. m. September 25.

Chief Provisions.
The tobacco companies would pay an average minimum price of 17 cents a pound for all flue-cured tobacco bought from September 25 to March 31, provided this tobacco is for use in this country.

The tobacco companies would purchase at least 250,000,000 pounds of this year's crop which remained unsold on September 15. They would agree also to pay the average minimum price for the tobacco.

Officials said the government retained the power to examine the records of tobacco companies to ascertain whether they were living up to the agreement.

Another important provision called for an assessment among the tobacco companies, if necessary, to raise the average minimum price to 17 cents.

The agreement was voluntary and officials said the licensing power of the farm adjustment act would not be used.

The concerns which signed the agreement, officials said, were the American Tobacco Company, Liggett and Myers, R. J. Reynolds, P. Lorillard and Company, Philip Morris and Company, Larus and Bros., Continental Tobacco Company and Brown & Williamson Tobacco Company.

The farm administration said that the tobacco marketing agreement should raise the income of producer by ten to twelve million dollars.

The agreement, the farm adjustment administration said, is "supplemented by a production adjustment program with the payments of benefits to farmers who sign contract to reduce flue-cured tobacco production in 1934 and 1935.

To Reduce Crop.
"The administration," it added, "propose to assist the growers to reduce the 1934 crop to around 500,000,000 pounds."

There was a question as to whether the government retained the power to license the companies which signed the pact. J. B. Hutson, chief of the administration's tobacco section said:

"Licensing will not be necessary. It is a voluntary agreement."

Hutson added, however, that the government would have the power to force companies that failed or refused to abide by the pact to comply with its terms. He indicated that any move along this line would be done through a legal action for breach of contract.

In return for agreements to reduce production next year, the farm administration virtually promised higher prices to growers of flue-cured.

Breaking precedent, the administration prepared a marketing agreement and offered it to the tobacco concerns. It would have licensed both domestic and exporting companies.

Representatives of the domestic companies, through S. Clay Williams, president of R. J. Reynolds, offered a substitute pact. The spokesmen for the exporters said they doubted that a marketing agreement could be made applicable to them, and no further attempt to bring them into the pact was made.

Signed by Williams.
The agreement signed yesterday followed closely the terms of the original proposal by Williams who signed it only a little while before Secretary Wallace made it effective.

The section relating to consumer price increases said:

"During the period of this agreement, the contracting buyers will use all reasonable effort to protect the consumers of their products against profiteering and agree that the price of any merchandise sold by them after the date hereof shall not be increased over the price on January 3, 1933, by more than is made necessary by actual increase in production, replacement and invoice costs of merchandise, or by taxes or other cost resulting from action taken pursuant to the act, since July 1, 1933, and, in setting such price increases, to give full weight to probable increases in sales volume."

Hutson said that if the price of export grades rose in proportion to the increase in the price of domestic grades, "the total increase in returns to farmers would exceed $20,000,000."

The analysis of the agreement said that buyers, in making purchases, agreed to buy "in the usual and ordinary manner, and agree not to buy unduly of the high grades, nor to concentrate buying in any geographical region."

Included in the agreement is a provision that the signatory companies would purchase between last September 25 and March 31 at least as much of the 1933 flue-cured crop as they used in their manufacturing the year before.

Regulatory reports would be made to the secretary from each market showing the price average there. At the end of the season if the total amount paid for all tobacco bought by the signatory companies is less than an average of 17 cents a pound the deficiency would be made up by proportionate levies on the companies.

Funds for this amount, if the average is not maintained, would be paid to farmers who received less than a 17 cents average.

No definite plan for carrying out this feature has been worked out yet although it is possible they will be paid benefits from the 42 cents a pound processing tax levied on all tobacco domestically manufactured.

This processing tax, however, is chiefly to make rental payments to growers who have agreed to reduce their acreage in 1934 and 1935 as much as 30 per cent, if necessary.

By taking the land out of production, the administration plans to cut down the surplus so that farmers will receive parity prices for the crop produced.

Exporters, who handle 60 per cent of the flue-cured crop, have refused to sign a marketing agreement, but have promised to "co-operate" in any plan adopted. The administration feels, however, that if the price is forced up by domestic buyers, exporters will have to meet it to stay on the market.

MAKE A CONTEST OF IT WHEN CHILDREN DRESS

Much worry will be eliminated if the children are taught to dress themselves when very young. A good idea, too, is to have a chart with days of the week and let the children mark down with a red pencil if they have brushed their teeth, washed their faces, hands, ears, and generally made themselves neat. At the end of the week a perfect record could gain some special treat.

Physical Handicaps

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
Many children go through life definitely handicapped by some physical defect. Often this is so slight as to be scarcely noticeable. But children are thoughtless and uncannily observant, and give no peace to the youngster who is in any way different from the herd.

There is the child with protruding teeth who may become "chicken mouth" or "henry"; the child with adenoids who sits with his mouth open until his classmates declare that he catches flies; the child with a cast in one eye, or an eye turned slightly inward. All of them through no fault of their own are branded by their companions and run the danger of becoming self-conscious and shy and eventually morbidly sensitive.

Most of these physical defects can be overcome with proper attention and at comparatively little cost. Even parents who are not able to pay large dentists' and surgeons' fees generally can find a clinic where the child can be treated for little or no charge.

And putting aside the direct improvement in health which such treatment produces, there is a far more important improvement in the child's mental attitude which makes it imperative if it can possibly be obtained.

The child who constantly is conscious of himself and trying to hide his defects cannot meet other half-way, and finally he often becomes embittered. The child with prominent or mal-formed teeth tends to stop smiling, or to keep his mouth shut if he does. The child with crooked eyes tries not to look at people, and in the end may develop a shy expression.

The child with adenoids has such a handicap that the actual physical disabilities themselves cannot be distinguished from the mental.

New York's "Big Show" On Full Blast

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York (AP)—It's a three-ring circus sure enough—this New York majority campaign.

Now Joseph V. McKee, briefly an acting mayor after the abdication of James J. Walker, enters the political big top on a prancing steed supplied by Edward J. Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader and erstwhile teammate of Boss John F. Curry of Tammany Hall.

Already a snarling Tammany Tiger was clawing at the fusion whip of Ficoles H. LaGuardia, independent Republican. The Tiger fights the battle of Mayor John P. O'Brien, sorely beset by the colossal financial difficulties of the city.

As McKee, after much hesitation, levels his lance for the charge, the great strains of New York city voters straine its necks. Which two will get thumbs down?

Joe McKee is a former Tammany "regular," president of the board of aldermen in the Walker regime, who last April announced his "complete elimination" from "politics and governmental office" to become a banker.

Despite that, there were strong evidences that the fusion of independent Democrats and Republicans wanted him to be their candidate against Tammany, and LaGuardia then said he would support McKee "if he will run on the anti-Tammany ticket."

McKee did not battle then, holding back as he had done last October when Boss Curry seeking to candidate for the remainder of Walker's unexpired term, put McKee aside and selected O'Brien.

Fusion finally turned to LaGuardia, and its leaders claimed they had Tammany on the run. Then came McKee's dramatic return to politics.

Some political theorists attributed McKee's about-face to the planning of Postmaster General James A. Farley, state and national Democratic chairman. They said Farley sought to build up a Democratic organization in the city in complete sympathy with the administration in Washington and Albany.

Farley was quoted as denying this, and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, called upon to keep Farley out, gave assurances that he had nothing to do with the campaign.

Tammany, all the while hoping that LaGuardia and McKee will slay each other, politically, over its finances. The city debt, approximately $240,000,000, 1933 budget (comptroller's figure) was $518,427,972.16 (some-what under the 1932 budget. But only 10 years ago the budget for New York city and county was only $350,516,525. Professor Joseph Goldrick of Columbia University, figured the per capita indebtedness for 1932 at $312.

The city has borrowed and borrowed until, when it went to the banks for money to meet its October payroll of $18,000,000 and $7,000,000 interest on bonded debt and to take care of other year-end obligations amounting to $29,000,000, the loan was granted only on condition that the administration effect genuine economies in government and re-establish its credit.

It is in such a setting that lances are drawn for combat in a field that has seen many a colorful political joust.

TITLES REWARD PATRIOTIC COLLECTORS IN ARABIA

Jiddah, Arabia (AP)—From the desert kingdom of Saudi-Arabia, over which rules King Ibn Saud, comes a new idea for worried treasury officials.

They are trying to raise money in Arabia for "constructive state enterprises" and every Arab has been asked to give at least five cents.

But to encourage more substantial returns, the semi-official returns, semi-official journal "Sawt AlHejaz" suggests that titles should be conferred for large individual collections.

Thus, any Arab who collects $5.00 would be given the title of "patriot"; $7.50 would earn him "active patriot"; $10 "great patriot"; and $20, "super patriot."

Life Secrets Sought In Sea Urchins That Have Fathers--But No Mothers

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor)
Woods Hole, Mass.—(AP)—Sea urchins which are the children of "virgin fathers," create without benefit of "mothers," have been produced in the Marine biological laboratory here.

They are the converse of "virgin births," their only parent a father, in the form of the made fertilization material of sea urchins, which are small, spiny shellfish.

"Virgin birth," known as parthenogenesis, whereby unmated females give rise to offspring is common among low forms of animals. But the "virgin father," or ephebo-genesis is a rarity.

The Machine's Children
These young sea urchins are quite literally children of the centrifuge, an instrument which whirls their eggs around at the rate of about 8,500 revolutions a minute. They are surprising by-products of an investigation into the minute substances comprising sea urchin egg. The investigation is conducted by Dr. Ethel Browne Harvey.

The eggs, when spun about in the centrifuge, pull into two halves. These in turn can be each centrifuged to separate again, making four eggs from one. But the contents of these divided eggs are not the same.

Only One is Female
Only one of the quartet contains the female nucleus, which is the essential "mother" substance supplied by the female. Two of the divided eggs contain only yolk and red pigment, with no female nucleus whatever. Yet when fertilized by sperm, young sea urchins develop into young sea urchins. So likewise do the other two divided parts, if male fertilization is supplied.

Undivided sea urchin eggs gave the first famous example of "virgin birth." Treatment by various substances could be substituted for the "father" and eggs so treated would develop into young. But they all had the female nucleus.

Five Elements in Eggs
The centrifuge shows clearly five elements in the eggs. One is oil, second is a clear substance in which lives the nucleus. Third is represented by some barely visible particles not previously known. Fourth, yellow yolk, and fifth, red pigment particles. These substances separate when whirled with a centrifugal force which equals about 8,000 times the pull of gravitation.

The sea urchin eggs are believed to be essentially similar to all eggs. Study of their contents is expected to give valuable information about the mechanisms of development in all animals, including human beings.

The oil and the yolk are believed to be food, the yolk probably protein. The red pigment appears to function in respiration. The clear fluid in protoplasm and the fine granules are mitochondria, a substance allied to fats.

Ancient Mayas Traveled In Style; Had Concrete Highways in 410 A. D.

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Science Writer)
Washington, D. C.—(AP)—If an American motorist could be transported back 1,500 years to the time when the mighty loof empire of the Maya is believed to have flourished in southern Mexico, he could easily have toured it in his care over first-class concrete roads.

These roads, better than any built in modern America until the coming of the automobile, still criss-cross the region which is now deserted. One of them, running more than 60 miles straight across country, has been surveyed and exposed for the first time by an expedition of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Roads Easily Traced
Though built about the time when Alaric the Goth was sacking Rome with his barbarian hordes, in 410 A. D., the roads still can be easily traced through the jungle that covers them and the ruins of the cities that they connected.

Experts say the Myra roads are fully as good as the famous highways of the ancient Romans. The one explored by the Carnegie Institution expedition, headed by Alfonso Villa, runs in practically a straight line 62 1-2 miles from Yaxuna to Coba.

Thirty-Foot Road
This road is from 30 to 34 feet wide, raised from two to eight feet above the level of the surrounding country. The old Maya engineers dug down to hardpan along the road's route, and built retaining walls of large limestone blocks set in mortar on either side to the height to which they wished to bring the road surface.

Between the walls was first laid a layer of huge boulders, two to three feet long and weighing hundreds of pounds, with the spaces chinked with smaller stone. Successively smaller layers of stones were laid on top of the boulders, then a layer of fine broken stone rolled or pounded into a hard level surface, and finally a smooth coating of mortar cement.

Along this road Villa's expedition found what is probably America's first road roller, a tone cylinder 13 feet long, weighing five tons, and antedating by 1,500 years the steamroller of today. It probably was rolled about by slaves or war captives of the Maya in road surfacing.

The roads must have been built for human foot-traffic only, scientists believe, for the Maya had no wheeled vehicles as did the Romans, or burden-carrying animals as did the Incas who built roads in South America.

did what he thought was best for Ireland. The resultant civil war saw him in the south of Ireland as a lieutenant general in the National camp. Organizers were needed to lick raw material into shape and he was made inspector-general. Then he was transferred to take charge of the newly formed civil guards.

At the close of the civil war, despite many difficulties, he had a fine well-disciplined unarmed police force. In this he was in what he considered his real work, the building up of a police force of which the country could be proud.

The greatest wrench in General O'Duffy's life was when President deValera, for reasons which he considered adequate, removed him from his post as commissioner. No charge was made against O'Duffy.

Dictatorship Not Aim, Says O'Duffy
By MICHAEL ROONEY
Dublin.—(AP)—"Do I look like a man who wants to be a dictator?" asked General Eoin O'Duffy, smiling as he posed the question across his paper-laden desk in the headquarters of the national guard.

His desk was in disarray. The police had just paid him a visit looking, the warrant said, for seditious documents and arms.

The question needed consideration. Studying him, one sees first a pair of keen, steady eyes. They can be imperious and soft but often are wishful. His auburn hair is thinning on the brows and inclines to grayness. He has a plump face but with a lean jaw; a sturdy body and a flashing smile that shows white, even teeth.

His caller answered: "A successful business man, yes; a dictator, no," and the general laughed heartily.

'Business-Like Politician'
"Ireland needs some business men in politics," he said. "If I am to be a politician, and it seems a strange role, I want to be a business-like politician."

As a student he thought much of Ireland. The wave of nationalism that swept over the country in 1916 caught him in full current. He then was 23. In 1917 he joined the republication movement. When he graduated as an engineer he was already known among the nationalists.

As district surveyor in his native Monaghan he was a useful man in the volunteers. Soon he was an invaluable one. The Anglo-Irish conflict found him in the thick of the struggle. In 1921-22 he was chief of staff of the Irish Republican Army.

A leader on the hills he still was a leader when jail doors closed behind him. He helped to smash the British prison system in Ireland.

Elected a deputy he followed Collins in accepting the treaty established the Irish Free State. He saw many of his best friends take the opposite view but his convictions were unshaken. He said he straw hat cleaning fluid instead of boric acid may cost the victim. June McMahon her sight, attaches of the Children's Memorial hospital said today.

The error was discovered last night by Mrs. James McMahon, the mother while in the midst of bathing the infant's swollen eyes. The father called police and June was rushed to the hospital where it was said the final outcome would not be known for three days.

Mrs. McMahon told police the two boxes, one of boric acid and the other of the cleaning fluid were kept in the bathroom and that she picked up the wrong one. She was hysterical when she discovered her error.

LOST IN MINE FOR SEVEN WEARY DAYS

Fairmont, W. V., Oct. 13.—(AP)—For seven days and seven nights, without food or water and groping in utter darkness, Charlie Montgomery, 54, wandered helplessly through the labyrinthine maze of an abandoned section of a coal mine nearby Downs.

"Give me a drink of water," was his first cry after two members of the rescue party found him tramping aimlessly in search of the main shaft.

Outrageous Fortune by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Caroline Leigh has found, quite by accident, the cousin she had feared was drowned. He is Jim Randall—but he has lost his memory. Gradually they piece together bits from the past. And Caroline learns that Jim is claimed by Nesta Riddell as her husband, and that Nesta says Jim has stolen the Van Berg emeralds and shot Elmer Van Berg. Jim can remember nothing about it, excepting drinking with Van Berg and seeing the emeralds. He fears the police may have his fingerprints—linking him with the crime.

Chapter 23 HOUSEBREAKERS

CAROLINE came nearer, pressing against him as if she could protect him from this something which threatened. Whatever it was, he was Jim, and hers. She had a passionate conviction that she could keep him safe whatever happened.

"There's another bit about the emeralds. I can see them under the light. I can't see Elmer—only his hand under the light and the emeralds hanging from it—eight of them, with little pearl chains between them—like a kid's green beads."

Caroline put her arms round him. "Don't, darling!" "Do you think I shot him?" "No!" said Caroline, in a quick, fierce voice.

"She said I did—to get the emeralds." "That woman?" "Yes, Nesta. She said Jim Riddell shot him and took the emeralds. She was in it too. And he hid the emeralds and went off up to Glasgow by the Alice Arden—only he never got there, because she was wrecked."

"What has that got to do with you?" said Caroline, still in that new fierce voice. "She says I'm Jim Riddell." "You're not! Why should you be?" "I don't know—Caroline, I don't know." She felt a shudder pass over him. "If I could remember—but I can't remember."

"You will." He was silent. Her words went echoing through the empty spaces of his mind: "Remember—remember—you will remember." They repeated themselves endlessly and died away. Suppose he didn't remember. There was a six weeks gap in his life. Suppose he never remembered what had happened in those six weeks. Suppose he did remember. Suppose he had really shot Elmer Van Berg.

"You didn't!" said Caroline. She pressed against him and laid her cheek to his. "Jim—darling—don't go all away by yourself. Talk to me. We'll find a way out." He put her arms away from him. "Suppose there's no way out. Suppose I did it."

Caroline sat back a little. She put her hands in her lap and lifted her face to the sky. She had a clear, untroubled look that was very comforting. She spoke softly and steadily, as if she were reasoning with a child.

"Why should you have shot him, darling?" "I don't know—I was there—I remember drinking with him—" "You wouldn't have shot him without reason. You don't just go about shooting people for nothing—nobody does."

"The emeralds are not exactly nothing." "That's rubbish!" The words were touched with a light scorn. "Is it?" "Yes, it is—you know it is, really, Jim. Do you remember anything at all about that Nesta woman?" "No."

"Well, wouldn't you have, if you had married her?" "I don't know." His voice sounded hopeless. "She didn't touch a chord? I mean, sometimes you meet a total stranger and you don't know where they come from or who they are, but something goes click inside you and you feel as if you knew them. You didn't feel anything like that?"

HE laughed grimly. "I loathed her," he said. "So did I," said Caroline happily. "Well, there you are—if you loathed her, you wouldn't have married her." There was rather a horrid pause. Then he said, "Perhaps I loathed her because I married her."

Caroline cried out quickly. "Oh, you didn't!" The silence fell again. She had to break it herself. "Jim, listen—I've got an idea. You can look up your signature in that registry office. No, it's not your signature—it can't be! It's Jim Riddell's signature. You can look it up."

Caroline turned detective, tomorrow.

RODGERS IS NAMED ASSISTANT TO O'NEAL Salisbury, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Alan S. O'Neal of this city, state manager of the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation, with headquarters here, last night announced the appointment of Eris W. Rodgers of Greensboro, as assistant manager of the corporation. Mr. Rodgers will have his headquarters here and will take over the assignment of the latter part of October.

Mr. Rodgers is now a member of the news staff of the Greensboro Daily News. For the past 11 years he has been associated with newspapers of North Carolina, having served for four years with the Associated Press at Charlotte and Raleigh, and the Greensboro News and Greensboro Record in recent years.

and then you'll know that it isn't yours.

"Or that it is." "It isn't! You can take the first train tomorrow—" "That's just what I can't do." "Why can't you?" "Because I gather that the police are looking for me."

"You?" "Jim Riddell—or Jim Randall—I don't know which." "Why should it be you?" said Caroline.

"My dear, I was there—we've got to face that. I was there, and I saw the emeralds. I don't think I'm in a position to walk into that registry office and ask to see the entry of Jim Riddell's marriage."

"I could," said Caroline quickly. "You mustn't get mixed up in it." "There won't be anything to mix me—the registrar won't know me from Adam."

He put his hand in his hands for a minute, trying to get through the dull fatigue which clogged his thoughts. "I don't want you to have anything to do with it. I'm too tired to think properly—but you're not to get mixed up with this—you oughtn't to be here."

She put her arms round him again. "You'll come home with me—I'll make you a lovely bed on the sofa." "No—I can't." "Because of us, or because of you?"

"Both. I'll get in here somehow. I shall be all right." Caroline laughed. "The back door key is under a loose stone in the yard—Mrs. Ledger always puts it there. She comes up once a week to light fires and air the house. Robert said she'd better when he heard you were coming home. She says the key is too dirtied heavy to trudge up and down with. This was one of her days, so the kitchen will be nice and warm."

Jim felt a curious thrill of anticipation as they skirted the house and came into the dark yard behind it. There was no moonlight here. The shadow of the house lay across it like a fold of black cloth.

Caroline caught his hand and drew him lightly on. Presently she was feeling with her foot. A stone lifted. She stooped, and came up with the key. She put it in his hand, cold and heavy, and he opened the door.

WHATEVER else he had forgotten, when he had not forgotten the ways of the house in which he had grown up. He took Caroline by the arm and walked along the pitch dark passage to the kitchen without so much as a false step.

Caroline found matches and lit a candle end. Mrs. Ledger had stuck it into one of the old brass candlesticks. The yellow light showed the brass turned bronze with streaks of verdigris. The kitchen was warm and pleasant. There was ash still hot in the range, and a line full of blouses had been wound up on a pulley and hung just clear of their heads.

"They look like ghosts," said Caroline under her breath—"sheeted ghosts. I don't think I like them very much." But Jim was pulling them down. "They'll make a good bed," he said.

Caroline gave a faint shriek. "I saw two cockroaches! You can't sleep here!" "I'll go into the study."

"There's nothing for you to eat. I'll run home and get you something." "I bought things in Ledlington. I've got plenty left."

"Oh—" said Caroline. She stood a minute; then she said, speaking rather fast, "Could you get along till tomorrow evening?" "Oh yes."

"Because I don't think I'd better come up in the daytime—someone might see me. People have most awfully sharp eyes when you don't want them to. Will you be all right till then?" "Of course I shall."

"All right, then I'd better go." She came up to him and leaned towards him across the blankets. "Jim—you'll be here? You won't go away—will you? Swear?" "All right."

"You won't go without seeing me? You won't just vanish? Because I couldn't bear it. You won't?" He shook his head.

Top Notch's Alarm

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER There was great excitement in Puddle Muddle. It was the day when Mr. Quacko was to hold the first swimming class in connection with the Puddle Muddle school, but hardly any one except Rip and the Ducks answered "Present" to the roll call.

"Of course I rather imagined the Chickens would play hokey today," grinned Rip, the Dog, who insisted on swimming in his paw-over-paw dog fashion instead of the Duck swimming glide stroke Mr. Quacko wanted every one to learn.

"But I did think," Rip continued, as he came out of the pond and shook himself in the bank, "that the Bears would show up. They like to swim."

"Quack, quack," answered the little Ducks. "Jelly Bear did not feel well while leading the nature class, and he told us to go on with Honey Bear. After we had gone a little distance with her, she said she wanted to rest and would catch up with us later."

"But we wandered on and on and she never came and then it began to grow dark and we were frightened. It was then that Christopher Columbus Crow saw us and showed us the way home."

"What has happened to Jelly and Honey Bear?" asked Rip. "Did they look ill? Couldn't they walk? What was the matter?" "Quack, quack, they did not look ill at all," answered the little Ducks. But at that moment Top Notch, the Rooter, came hurrying along.

"The most dreadful thing has happened," he said, his wings shaking nervously.

AIR DEFENSE INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN BERLIN SCHOOLS Berlin.—AP—A plan to give a thousand unemployed teachers jobs coaching pupils in local schools how to meet attacks from the air was announced at a meeting of the Berlin unit of the Reich's Air Defense League.

Major Emil von Loeper, chief of the organization, said that for purposes of aerial defense, the capital had been divided into twenty districts and 173 groups.

Another speaker said that the national socialists' teachers union had appointed a teacher at each school to supervise defense activity among the pupils, but hoped for the appointment of unemployed teachers for the work.

According to Major von Loeper, a school of train teachers of aerial defense is to be established in Berlin.

GREENVILLE TOBACCO MARKET REPORT

Sales Heavies Today

Bidding strong and Prices are considerably higher this afternoon.

Prices on better grades have advanced, reaching up to 42c No market excels Greenville, grade for grade at anytime.

You will not find the tobacco buyers on any market cooperating in every way more splendidly than the buying forces on the Greenville Tobacco Market. This fact alone is more responsible for Greenville being the world's largest Bright Tobacco market than any one factor. When such conditions as this exist on a tobacco market, better prices for the growers is always the result.

Everybody has observed that an overwhelming per cent of the offerings have been common tips, which of course brings down the general average. Notwithstanding this, Greenville market this week is averaging more than any Eastern Carolina market according to published figures. When the market begins to sell a larger per cent of the better grades, we believe that more than parity average will be realized.

Let us suggest that every one preserve warehouse bills of sales and see that they are dated.

Tune in on Greenville's Radio Station WEED every day (except Sunday) at 9:45 A. M., 12:45 P. M. and 4:45 P. M. for latest tobacco market reports. Will find it on your dial around 142 or 1420.

DUKE READY FOR BIG GRID BATTLE

Durham, Oct. 13.—With fan interest at the highest pitch in the history of this state and Duke student enthusiasm breaking all the bounds, North Carolina today await the "battle of the south" to be staged when Duke and Tennessee, the favorites of Dixie's two big conferences, clash in Duke stadium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 as the feature of alumni home-coming day at Duke.

The gates of the massive Duke stadium will be opened at 12:30 and through them is expected to pour one of the largest, if not the largest, crowds ever to see a game in this state. The contest is a "national" from every angle, bringing together two undefeated, untied teams with a record of having played last year one of the greatest gridiron battles in the south with the possibility of this year's struggle turning into another such engagement.

Some of the greatest football players in the country will be seen in action in Duke stadium tomorrow. Headed by Duke Brackett and Seattle Feathers, who can "lug and leather" on any gridiron, Tennessee will offer a team that has been compared with all the great southern teams of the past and with the great Pitt eleven of 1929. The Vols this year are said to be "perfect."

A fighting band of Blue Devils, although figured to take a licking, are ready to give the Vols the hardest struggle on the gridiron they have ever had. Led by the Great Freddie Crawford, one of the nation's best tackles, it will be up to the Blue Devil line to "bottle up" Feathers and Brackett if the Blue Devils are to make any showing. The hard charging, hard tackling, hard blocking Blue Devil forwards are determined to do the trick, although impossible it may seem.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

An international race, an event foreign to the American turf since the Zev-Papyrus affair ten years ago, is in the process of formation between Equipoise, king of the American champions, and Winooka, Australian sprint titleholder.

C. V. Whitney, youthful master of Equipoise, has agreed to the race with the proviso that Winooka first get himself a reputation against some good Eastern horse. The tentative place and date is Belmont Park, November 7, at the United Hunts meeting.

Rufe Naylor, manager of Winooka, may find difficulty meeting Whitney's requirement, however, as so far he has refused to let the five-year colt from Down Under run in open competition. A match race on the winner-take-all basis is the only proposition that Naylor will entertain.

Winooka's proposed test match against Jamestown at Laurel appears to have fallen through, as Andrew Cummings, president of the Maryland State Fair, has stated the association did not see its way clear to stage such a race during the meeting, which closes October 1.

A Bearcat At Home

Although he has beaten only two horses in this country, in what amounted to little more than exhibition races, Winooka has quite a record on his home tracks. He started twenty-four times in Australia, winning eleven races, finishing second in five and third in three for total winnings of more than $25,000.

As a yearling, the five-year-old son of Windbag-Kaanooka, was bought for $1,000 by H. G. Taylor, of Queensboro and he raced in his colors as a two-year-old, winning one race. Then the colt attracted the attention of his present owners, McDonald and Mathews, and they purchased him for $5,000.

Winooka's best year was as a four-year-old, when he won eight races in twelve trips to the post, carrying the heavy impost of 135 pounds on several occasions.

He is a big, powerful looking fellow, standing sixteen and one-half hands high and weighing about 1,000 pounds.

His trainer is Michael Poisson, who has had the colt under his wing ever since he joined the stable of McDonald and Mathews. Edgar Britt, one of Australia's best jockeys, was brought along to ride the colt.

Brokers Tip Working 6

Another interesting bit of news from the tracks is the way Brokers Tip and Head Play, famous for their duel in the Kentucky Derby, are rounding into shape in preparation for a return to the races before snow falls. Brokers Tip, which has not faced the barrier since finishing last in the Preakness, won by Head Play, has been coming along swiftly during recent days. In his first extended trial at Laurel, Md., he tried a mile in 1:40 and, barring some training mishap, is a certain starter in the mile and a quarter of the Maryland Handicap, October 14.

Records Hint Of Milder Winter

Washington (AP)—When Grandpa tells how the winters were colder and the snows deeper in his day, it's more than just hazy memory. It's a fact.

Winters now aren't as cold as they used to be says J. B. Kincer, climatologist and expert of the winter bureau. In fact they've been growing less upon us gradually for years.

Mid Winter Probable
We are now in the midst of a period of abnormal warmth. Mr. Kincer goes on, "which has been coming upon us gradually for years." Judging from the warm trend, he sees another mild winter as probable.

Though winters have been growing warmer for many years, they are the most fluky of the four seasons. A cold winter may pop up unexpectedly in the midst of several warm ones. For example, whereas last winter was mild in accordance with the trend, the coldest officially recorded temperature in United States history was registered in February in Yellowstone National Park—66 degrees below zero.

But, regardless of reports of wild fowl flying south early, of squirrels laying up unusually large stores of nuts and the hair growing thick on rabbits, the Weather Bureau pins its faith to pendulum-like swings of climate recorded during the past one hundred years, moving first in the warm direction, then in the cold.

Swings Like Pendulum

For example, here's how the trends have swung, first to warm, then to cold, at New Haven, Conn., where weather records go back to 1801:

- Rising temperatures 12 years 1801-1812.
 - Falling temperatures 37 years 1813-1849.
 - Rising temperatures 15 years 1850-1864.
 - Falling temperatures 9 years 1865-1873.
 - Rising temperatures 19 years 1874-1892.
 - Falling temperatures 20 years 1893-1912.
 - Rising temperatures, 1912-?
- There is no evidence yet of a swing back toward cold weather.
- Eighteen of the past twenty-one winters at Washington, D. C., have been warmer than normal. All of the last thirteen there have been mild. The warmest winter in more than one hundred years was that of ample, with nineteen typical winters of "Grandpa's day"—1854-1873—all of which were colder than normal. That of 1855-1856 was the coldest in one hundred years of weather bureau records.
- All four seasons have been growing warmer for a long period, records show.

The work tab from Belmont Park also shows that Head Play is moving up. The big colt from Silas B. Mason's stable, like his arch rival in the Derby, is pointing for both the Maryland and Washington handicaps. Both also are likely stars in the $25,000 Latonia championship, which will be run for the first time November 4.

BIDS FROM FRATS ACCEPTED BY 196

Chapel Hill, Oct. 13.—A two weeks' period of intensive fraternity rushing has been brought to a close at the University with 193 members of the freshman class accepting bids from men's local and national social Greek letter groups.

The number of pledges was slightly lower than a year ago but many other freshmen will be pledged during the fall.

Louis and Ed Skinner of Greenville, were among those accepted and were pledged to Delta Kappa Epsilon.

GETS FOUR MONTHS FOR DRIVING WHILE DRUNK

Laurinburg, Oct. 13.—Charlie McDuffie, 25 year old East Laurinburg textile mill operative, was sentenced to four months on the roads by Scotland county recorder as result of a collision of his automobile and one driven by Miss Helen Nelson of Sumner, S. C., in which both Miss Nelson and her companion, Miss Evelyn Morton of Epindale, were injured.

The Nelson car was demolished and McDuffie was jailed by police who said he was intoxicated.

Miss Nelson said she was representative of an Ohio hosiery concern.

MANY STARS WILL APPEAR IN GA.-N.C. GAME

Chapel Hill, Oct. 12.—(AP)—The headline battle between Carolina and Georgia here Saturday afternoon at 2:30 will match a long list of stars on both sides, including seven Bulldogs and seven Tar Heels who started in the 6-6 tie at the end of last year.

Georgia looms as one of the most dangerous teams in the Southeastern Conference since its 26-13 defeat of King Tulane. But the Tar Heels made a brilliant showing against Vanderbilt, and with the improvement shown in practice this week by the passers and punters and by several of the reserves, are expected to give the Bulldogs a battle of the same proportions as last year.

Coach B. Shepard, who is in charge of ticket sales, said today the demand for reserved tickets had been the heaviest of the year. Many applications are coming from other states, he said.

This will be the only appearance to the vaunted Georgia grid machine on Tar Heel soil, and a great crowd is expected to turn out to see them renew their 38-year rivalry with their intensive rivals at Carolina.

The Tar Heels should be even stronger than last week, Alan McDonald and Mac Bell, two rookies of whom much has been expected, hit their stride against Vandy. Ray Thompson, litter fullback and star in several of last year's games, fell in line this week. Bill Collins, regular right tackle, is back in top shape to start his first game. Everybody is expected to be in condition except possibly Frankel at end, and the Tar Heels have a good substitute there in the sophomore Barwick.

The Tar Heel punters, Martin MacCoshen, Woolen, and Burnett, have also been attaining more and more distance, practicing overtime in an effort to get ready to meet Georgia's brilliant kicking. Cy Grant and the passers McDonald and Burnett, have been displaying much more speed and accuracy. If they can hit the ball as they have been doing in practice, the Carolina attack may match the daring and versatile attacks of the Bulldog machine.

Coach Collins is grooming three spare quarterbacks to offset Georgia's brilliant backfield corps. Holding the spot are in his preparations are Crawford, Woolen, Burnett and Thompson, the four veterans who led last year's fight; Don Jackson and George Moore, who featured against Davidson; and McDonald and Bell, who joined the ranks of the backfield leaders with their fine play against Vanderbilt.

Heading the Georgia stars are Cy Grant, the 70-year punter; Jack Griffith, brilliant blocker and field general; Buck Chapman, 200-pound pile-driving fullback; Homer Key and Sam Brown, broken-field runners; Hank Ludwig, giant center; Charlie Tubbs, star end who played the whole of the Tulane game; and the bulky lineman Charles Cooper and Harold.

"The Time to test Fertilizers is NOW -not in the Spring"

F. S. Royster
PRESIDENT,
F. S. ROYSTER GUANO COMPANY

If YOU want to make a real test of tobacco fertilizers, make it after the tobacco is on the warehouse floor. Look at the quality of tobacco raised with Royster Fertilizer. Compare the price it brings with the price paid for tobacco made with any other fertilizer. Then decide which fertilizer gives the best results.

I am confident you'll choose Royster—and there are plenty of reasons why. Royster experts are constantly studying the fertilizer needs of tobacco, from the time the plant beds are sown until the tobacco is put in the barn. These men spend their entire time locating, testing and refining materials, to make sure that Royster Fertilizers contain only the best that can be obtained. And their continuous field tests make sure that our fertilizers give the finest practical results.

Because Royster makes only one quality of tobacco fertilizer—the best it is possible to make—you buy it with the assurance that it is the best fertilizer you can get, regardless of the price you pay.

But don't take our word for all this. Make your own test. Compare the quality of the tobacco on the warehouse floor. It speaks for itself.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Cotton opened fairly steady today higher to two lower with steeper Liverpool cables offset by southern selling.

Orders were fairly well divided at the start with trade buying just about sufficient to absorb southern selling but hedging increased after the call and prices worked off several points.

At the end of the first half hour December was around 9.31 and May 9.70 making losses of 9 to 10 points on the more active months.

Trading continued quiet and prices sagged under comparatively small offerings. At midday December was around 9.31 and May 9.70 or about 9 to 10 lower.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Stocks and staples tapered nervously today under the sound money implication of the administration liberty loan conversion proposal involving the issuance of a lower yield term bonds totalling some $2,000,000,000.

While there was no great selling rush in those equities and commodities whose substantial spring and summer rise was based on the belief that there would be drastic inflation of the currency, prices sagged generally in spiritless trading.

Some of the highest grade issues which might benefit from an inflationary program showed resistance.

Banking and brokerage circles for the most part were agreed that speculative inflation hopes had been decidedly lowered by the treasury's refunding plan.

Weakness in grains inspired fresh selling of the list after it had absorbed a trickle of liquidation during the forenoon. Late losses ranged from one to three or more and was especially pronounced in the mining division.

Transfers were 1,100,000 shares.

Strikers Riot in New York. New York, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Mounted police rode their horses through crowds of rioters today at NRA headquarters at the Hotel Pennsylvania in mid-town New York.

Police said radicals numbering about 3,500 were responsible for the disorders.

More than 30 arrests were made. Groups of demonstrators bearing placards and banners were pushed back to the sidewalks as police attempted to chase them out of the neighborhood.

More than 2,000 strikers in the cleaning, dyeing and tanning industries assembled at the hotel at 10:30 a. m.

NRA officials charged the demonstration was inspired by communist factions which refused to be taken into the right wing union following NRA mediation in the threatened strike of 25,000 workers of neighborhood shops.

Under the terms of the mediation right wing unions were to be recognized and cut prices in the industry were to be abolished. Banners carried by the demonstrators proclaimed the right to select their own labor organization.
