RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA EXPECTED SOON

Average of $16.58 Hung Up On Leaf Mart Here Friday

SEASON SALES NEAR THIRTY MILLION MARK
High Average Here Yesterday Established on Sale of 1,389,008 Pounds of Bright Leaf; Two Cents Higher Than Former High Mark; Market Has Paid Out Over $4,000,000; Heavy Sales Expected Next Week

Prices moved higher on the local tobacco market yesterday and the best price average of the season was chalked up. It was indicated in the official report of sales made public this morning.

The average was $16.58 two cents higher than the figure set here last Monday on the sale of a million and a half pounds of weed.

The record was made on the sale of 1,389,008 pounds of leaf and farmers were paid a total sum of $23,263.62.

This brought the season's total sales to 29,661,668 pounds and the farmers received $4,004,832.39.

With prices moving nearer the parity level as agreed upon by tobacco buyers and government representatives recently at Washington talks on the local market next week were expected to be as heavy if not heavier than the present week. The market has sold over a million pounds of the weed a day this week and the price average has been well beyond the fifteen cent mark each day with the 17 cents parity level being nearly reached during two days of sales.

A considerable amount of common tobacco was in evidence on some of the sales and this, tobaccoists said, aided in holding the general market average down. Better qualities were in evidence here yesterday when prices bounded to the highest level registered here this season.

Farmers continued to register satisfaction with the new advance in the price situation, and this was expected to cause them to market their crop more rapidly next week than any time of the season.

Although the market has sold over a million pounds of tobacco every day this week, floors of all warehouses were cleared each afternoon permitting business to start the next day with a clean slate.

CUBA FACES NEW FLAREUP FROM LABOR
Havana, Cuba, Oct. 21.—(AP)—The locomotive and two baggage cars of the Santiago express were derailed early today when an explosion blew up nearly four hundred feet of track near the town of Empahama, Mantanzas Province, about 50 miles from Havana. There were no casualties.

Train Derailed Near Santiago By Explosion That Blows up Track

The explosion came amidst unsettled labor conditions that grow more serious steadily despite the government's vigorous move to settle the difficulty.

Railroad connections with Havana and points east of Mantanzas were stopped by a strike of railroad workers who seek annulment of rules which prevent transfer of employees of one division to another.

The strikers claim the rule prevents many veteran employees from taking jobs on other divisions on the basis of seniority in the event they are laid off because of lack of business in their own division.

DIVORCE OF GERMANY IS NOW COMPLETE

Geneva, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Germany's divorce from organized international life became complete today.

Explaining that she was retiring under article one of the covenant Germany likewise announced withdrawal from the labor organization which was held first at Washington.

Just a week after Germany stalled work by proclaiming her break with the disarmament conference and the league Germany's counsel General Kraul visited General J. A. M. Cavenol, league secretary general.

The visit was formal and there was no indication as to whether it had to do with the break from the league.

LEGION WILL BE HONORED IN NEW BERN

Big Group of Former Soldiers to Attend Installation Exercises Monday

A large group of members of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion will go to New Bern next Monday night where they will be signally honored for the fine showing made in the membership drive in progress here at this time.

The occasion will be the installation of Tom C. Dainel, of New Bern, as commander of the State Department of the Legion, and a grand parade and review in his honor.

It was announced yesterday by J. H. Waldrop, commander of the local unit of North Carolina National Guards, that the drillmen would go to New Bern to participate in the parade. Companies from Kinston, Washington and New Bern will also take part in the parade, which will be reminiscent of the days when thousands of young Americans marched off to war against Germany.

The battery will leave here at 2 o'clock for the Craven county capital and this will put them there in plenty of time to take part in the parade and review.

The Legion here has obtained 124 members during the drive ending the last of the month, as compared with 114 for the entire period last year. It is over a hundred per cent increase and considered a record probably unsurpassed in the state in view of the fact that the new year will not officially begin until the installation of the new state commander Monday.

As many members of the post as possible were urged to attend and help New Bern heap honors upon the son elected to head the state department during the new year.

ASSOCIATION BOOSTS THIS PART OF N. C.

Eastern Carolina Body Carrying Out Betterment Movement for Section

The Eastern North Carolina Association, Incorporated which was recently organized with headquarters here, is a voluntary association of individuals, firms and corporations located in eastern North Carolina and was organized for the purpose of promoting and carrying on a general betterment movement for the section.

Its organization was not a result of snap judgment but was a result of a careful study of the matters and problems now facing the section. It will be closely affiliated with the Carolina Shippers' Association, in fact, the latter will exist only as the traffic department of the new association. One membership will cover both organizations.

The Association will take part in any matter or proposition that will benefit the section and will use all its influence and efforts to prevent any actions or measures inimical or detrimental to the interest of the section. It will make surveys and studies to find out how the many problems now facing the section can best be solved and will use its efforts to solve them.

The program and affairs of the Association will be under the direction of some of the most prominent and successful professional and business men in the section, men who do good and have no selfish interest to satisfy. The representation on the governing board will be fairly distributed as each county will have a member on the board.

The success of the Association was assured from the beginning. The members of Carolina Shippers' Association knew that as well as did the other public spirited men who helped to organize it. The fact that it was to continue the work being carried on by the Shippers' Association placed it on a solid foundation. The achievements of the Carolina Shippers Association have been beyond all expectations, however, it has been handicapped in many respects. There are many problems of transportation that are interwoven with other problems and in order to solve them the program had to be enlarged. An organization confining its activities strictly to transportation matters would be at a disadvantage, hence, the new association.

To start with the Carolina Shippers' Association is a strong and influential factor in traffic and transportation matters affecting eastern North Carolina. It is a staunch and powerful advocate of shippers' rights. It procures for shippers and receivers of freight all manner of benefits, and prevents the fruition of proposed actions and measures detrimental to their interests. It is the organ of speech through which the shippers collectively can express themselves. It is their weapon.

LITVINOFF TO CONFER WITH ROOSEVELT

Soviet High Official To Visit Washington In Two Weeks to Talk Over Recognition; $100,000,000 Boon to Trade Expected as Result of Action

Washington, Oct. 21.—(AP)—A speedy recognition of Soviet Russia with a resultant boom in Russo-American trade was forecast authoritatively today close upon the receipt of word that the communistic state had been literally working to rush its representative to the White House.

In an informed but unofficial quarters it was stated that Maxim Litvinoff, the stocky, outspoken Soviet ambassador for foreign affairs, probably would sit down with President Roosevelt in about two weeks.

Litvinoff, by employing boats and the air, may be able to make the trip from Moscow in about ten days. The whirl of speculation set off by the President when he read to news men his letter to Mikail Kalinin, president of the Soviet Central executive committee that "the time had come to end the present abnormal relations between the two countries" today brought generally favorable reaction at the capital.

Some officials expressed opinion privately that should the Roosevelt conversations solve the difficulty, trade to the extent of $100,000,000 could be expected.

The chief executive warned that this letter to Kalinin did not in itself constitute recognition but from his administration came authoritative indication that this result could be expected in a little more than a month if not sooner.

Moscow, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Russia hailed as a boon to world peace and to better trade relations, its agreement with the United States to negotiate concerning American recognition of the Soviet Union.

Events moved swiftly after President Mikhail Kalinin announced he has accepted an invitation from President Roosevelt dated October 10 and added he would send Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff to Washington to represent the Soviets.

Plans were rushed for Litvinoff to depart for the United States within a few days. Government officials gathered to consider points around which the conference would be centered.

READ BEFORE YOU RIDE

On this the eve of another week-end, which no doubt will bring the usual number of automobile accidents unless motorists exercise more common sense and better judgment, we feel that every motorist will do well to read the following "Safety Commandments" recently published by the Columbia State.

Most any day would be an appropriate day to bring these "Safety Commandments" to the attention of our people but on the eve of the week-end we feel that the warning and advice is most timely.

The State says:

When you put the new license tags on the car don't throw the big brown paper envelope away until you have read the "Safety Commandments" printed on the back of it. Ten of them, in simple common-sense language. In case they've already got away, we print them here:

- 1. Don't pass on hills or blind curves—you might just as well drive blindfolded. 2. Don't challenge the right-of-way—if in doubt, take no chances. 3. Don't fail to signal all turns—the fellow behind is no mind reader. 4. Don't cut corners—that's the other fellow's territory and he might claim it. 5. Don't cut in sharply after passing—the driver you pass hates the ditch as much as you do. 6. Don't drive all over the highway—your half of the road is on the right. 7. Don't come to sudden stops without signaling—rear end crashes are costly. 8. Don't lag in traffic—you have no right to delay those behind. 9. Don't take a chance with faulty brakes or tires—it's a saving you'll regret. 10. Don't be reckless at any time—you endanger not only your life, but the other fellow's as well.

A certain visitor from Europe remarked not long ago that his most vivid impression of America was the carelessness of automobile drivers. The general disregard of safety rules by a people who called themselves progressive and intelligent was incomprehensible to him. He admired the progress in road development and in the mechanical perfection of the American car. Yet in the face of the favorable factors of fine roads, fine cars and highly organized traffic control systems, the country had an appalling injury and death rate from motor accidents.

He laid his finger at once on the chief causes of "accidents." Carelessness, an unthinking disregard for the rules of safe driving, so common as to appear to this observer as practically universal.

Outrageous Fortune

by Patricia Wentworth

Chapter 20 FRONT IN THE NIGHT. "How she would, Caroline! I could see no way of getting to Hale Place before Patsy Ann and the village were in bed and asleep. People in villages have terribly sharp eyes and a superhuman faculty for getting two and two together even when they don't really think.

As for Patsy Ann, she had got over being peevish and was affectionate, whimsical and conversational to the last degree. She sat up till dawn dabbled talking about Robert. This was the main theme, but it proved to be prolific in side shoots, so she would-it be tasteful to hang up new curtains and chairs? Robert's mother at a period when Robert's grandpa was considered the best word in elegance.

Before falling asleep Patsy had chalked on names for two children, a boy and a girl, to be called respectively Robert Lancelot and Patsy Elaine. In spite of the fact that she and Robert were dark, both these children were to have golden curls and eyes of forget-me-not blue. Caroline passed through the village and up the drive to Hale Place in the pitch dark. There was no moon, a thick haze covered the whole sky, and the air was heavy with damp. If she had not known every step of the way, she might have lost herself a dozen times.

She came round the house and felt her way through the yard to the back door. She did not mind the dark loneliness of the drive, but as she came near the house, its silence and its emptiness came to meet her. She felt cold and rather frightened.

She turned the handle of the back door and pushed it open. The darkness of the passage lay before her like the darkness of a cave. She stood on the threshold and called into the darkness softly. "Jim!" There wasn't any answer. What was she going to do if he didn't answer? He might be somewhere deep in the old house—he might be asleep—he might have gone away. No, he wouldn't have gone away, because he had promised.

She called again, and heard the silence smother his name. The really dreadful thought that she might have to wander through the dark house looking for him turned her perfectly cold. There were cockroaches. There were probably mice. There might easily be spiders. It was a grim business. A furry thing might run across one's foot. One might tread on something that squeaked.

She called once more, and no one answered her. She was a most perfect fool not to have brought a torch. There was nothing for it but to go on.

She felt her way to the kitchen, set down the basket she was carrying, and went on until her outstretched hands touched the green baize door that shut off the servants' wing. On the other side of it, she stood listening and searching the darkness.

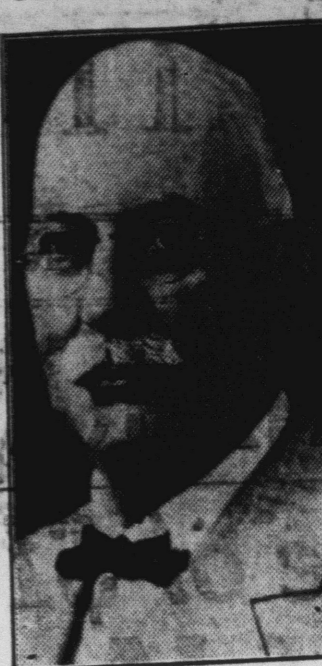

She was in the hall, with the staircase going up on her right, and beyond it a door leading into the drawing-room. On this side two doors, one into the dining-room and the other into the library. Both of these doors were locked on the outside.

She crossed the hall and tried the drawing-room door. That too was locked. She had her foot on the bottom step of the stairs, when suddenly away above her in the darkness a door banged. There was the momentary flash of a torch, just a sharp stab of light, and then the sound of someone running.

Caroline shrank back against the newel. The distant door that had banged was wrenched open. Jim called out. The running feet came down the stair and passed her. There was a sound of panting breath.

before frost, handled with care and are properly cured. Digging operations should be carefully supervised in order to avoid cuts and bruises. Injuries ruin the appearance of the potatoes for market purposes and also offer favorable conditions for the entrance of mold or rot. Some bruising will be avoided if the potatoes are placed directly in the storage container. Any delay after frost will mean a proportionate increase in storage loss, especially if rains come just before or just after frost. as soon as the potatoes are brought into the house and should continue at a temperature of 80 to 85 degrees until all the potatoes are properly cured. The ventilators should be kept wide open throughout the curing process. In no case should moisture be allowed to collect on the ceiling because of improper ventilation. It usually takes ten days to two weeks to cure sweet potatoes, depending on the amount of moisture in the roots at digging time. The appearance of sprouts on the potatoes and a velvety skin surface are fairly good indications that the roots are properly cured. At the close of the curing period the temperature should be allowed to fall to 50 degrees and kept as near this point as possible for the rest of the storage period. At no time should the temperature be permitted to fall below 40 degrees.

Plenty Of News

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER "I have news," said Top Notch. "If it weren't for me, no one would know anything."

there, too. She has white hair and she wears a shawl and she called the old man Grandpa Galump and he called her Grandma. "Are they going to live there?" Willy Nilly asked. "The house is so small."

"Oh, Top Notch, your news isn't a bit important," barked Rip. "Just a moment," interrupted Willy Nilly. "I don't know anything about these people of whom Top Notch speaks, but we don't want them to be our enemies. So I don't want you animals to go around and bother them. We want a little peace for awhile."

"We won't bother them," said Rip. "I have really important news. The animals in the next village have a football team and they want to play the Puddle Muddle team."

"But we have no team," said Top Notch. "That's just the point," barked Rip. "You have no sense," returned Top Notch. "We haven't a team now, but we can get one together and practice so that we can beat them."

"That's a fine idea," agreed Willy Nilly. Now the animals would be busy and they would not be curious and get in the way of Grandpa and Grandma Galump. "I'll make you helmets and shin pads," he said. Monday—"Puddle Muddle Football"

FARM NOTES

Harvesting Sweet Potato Crop. In harvesting sweet potatoes which are to be stored for winter use the most important rule is: Dig before the potatoes are damaged by frost. Results secured by the North Carolina Experiment Station over a period of 5 years show that the average loss in house storage from sweet potatoes dug before frost was only 5 per cent, compared with a loss of 44 per cent for potatoes dug after killing frosts occurred. It is possible to save sweet potatoes after killing frosts occur if the crop is dug immediately before frost and thus avoid all possibility of damage. Any delay after hard frosts occur will mean a proportionate increase in storage loss, especially if rains come just before or just after frost. Immature potatoes will keep just as well as mature potatoes if they are dug

When he recovered his purse from one of the women of the tribe the money was gone, he said.

JUMBOS U. S. NO. 1'S, AND CULLS

Cull potatoes are seldom worth the expense of storing. They are better left in the field or fed to livestock. Curing and Storing. Sweet potatoes can best be kept through the winter in a well-constructed house which is provided with good ventilation and a satisfactory heating unit. Moisture and temperature are the most important factors to control for successful storage. The crop is cured by driving off excessive moisture with artificial heat. Curing should start

TEACHERS ARE VICTIMS OF BABY 'DEACS'

Wake Forest College freshmen mixed a good passing game with a strong running attack to bowl over the East Carolina Teachers College 27 to 0 here yesterday.

Coach Eustace Mills of the victors used 23 players in all, and the various combinations made nine first downs to five for the Teachers.

Edens and Cecil, the latter an end, were the top boys in the victors' passing game. Moreau, fullback, turned in most of the gains for the Teachers and Waldrop featured at right end.

MAJOR TEST FACES DEVILS IN KENTUCKY

Durham, Oct. 21.—Another major test on the gridiron awaits the Blue Devils of Duke, conquerors of Tennessee, a week from today.

For on next Saturday the men of Wallace Wade are scheduled to meet the powerful Kentucky Wildcats in Lexington, Ky. in a game that may be the feature battle of the south and one of the main attractions of the nation.

If the two elevens come through their games today as they are favored to do, their battle next Saturday will be one of the first rank—a "natural" with all the trimmings.

High Defeated By Rocky Mount

Rocky Mount, N. C., Oct. 20.—Rocky Mount High School football team registered its first victory of the season yesterday, defeating the Greenville Highs, 6-0 in Rocky Mount.

James "Red" Ruffin, hard-driving half back, tallied on an eight-yard trip through the line after Mason and Rye had featured a drive putting the ball into scoring distance.

Rodges, quarterback of the visitors, turned in the feature run when he was shaken loose for a 40-yard gain on an off-tackle play.

POLICE COMMISSIONER TURNS REAL COP IN OFF HOURS

Omaha, Neb. —(AP)—To run a police department and run it right, says Police Commissioner Frank Myers of Omaha, "you've got to get out and be a real cop."

And he practices his idea by conducting raids and doing patrol duty at night after his day's desk work is done.

When Nebraska authorities recently believed they had cornered Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd 20 miles south of here, it was Myers, a high-powered rifle in his hands, who led the search.

Dogs Voice Complaints Denver —(AP)—A terrible com motion" in the basement of St. Mark's church, which neighbors reported, sent police on a hunt for vandals. Instead they found two police dogs that had fallen down an air "well" at the side of the building, and were complaining vigorously.

ILLINOIS AND ARMY ELEVENS CLASH AT CLEVELAND

One of West Point's rare football excursions to the midwest will take the cadet gridders to Cleveland October 21 to meet Bob Zuppke's revived University of Illinois team in an intercollegiate headliner.

SPORT SLANTS

When the New York Yankees came back from Chicago a year ago, after walloping the Chicago Cubs in four straight world series games, Joseph Vincent McCarthy was hailed as the ranking "master mind" of the big leagues, rewarded with a new three-year contract at a fancy figure and his team crowned with the wreath of invincibility.

And so, my friends, exactly one year later William Harold Terry trooped back to the Big Town from Washington with a band of howling, triumphant New York Giants, received a civic welcome and was promptly rewarded with a new five-year contract as all acclaimed him the new "miracle man" of baseball.

Meanwhile the Yankees and J. V. McCarthy had been crowned, if at all, with a wreath of razberries for 1933, all but forgotten in the rush to board the new baseball bandwagon and proclaim the greatestness of an aggregation that all but a few optimists regarded as a bunch of misfits and fugitives from the earthquake zone last spring.

People's Choice

No baseball turnover in twenty years has been so complete, so startling or so hugely enjoyable to a certain big section of the populace as the triumph of the Giants over all National League opposition and subsequently the proud Washington Senators.

As we suggested in advance, these Giants were and are the "people's choice." They boast comparatively few great names, though now the fame of Hubbell and Ott, as well as Terry, has spread far and wide. They have consistently defied all orthodox professional standards by playing baseball like a bunch of college boys.

They no longer have had a "master mind." When they were any deep strategy to be decided upon Manager Terry called a meeting in the center of the diamond, in the course of which Blondy Ryan probably would suggest "That guy is a cinch to hit into a double play." All hands would agree and the infield would go back to handle the twin killing. Or Memphis Bill might address himself as follows to a faltering pitcher: "Hey, will you get in there and bear down or will I have to call Papa Luque in from the bullpen?"

I do not mean to imply that the Gants played the blindfold, or catch-as-catch-can system far from it. They used common sense, direct methods, Terry's style of leadership drew the whole team into an intense feeling of being partners with him. They shared the arguments or participated in the decisions. Always they played to win, taking chances and forcing the breaks.

All Had A Hand

"We have some outstanding players on this ball club," said Terry, "but I have never been with a team where it was so true that every man contributed his share to the club success."

"We relied on great pitching, but we supported it with fine defense work an timely enough hitting to keep us on top. Any man in the lineup, from Joe Moore in the lead off position down to and including the pitcher, might drive in the winning run or pull off the decisive play in the field. This developed a rare feeling of team confidence and kept anybody from getting an exaggerated idea about his value or ability."

The Senate stock market probe committee next week for inquiry into a personal letter written by him about stock transactions in 1932 to Charlie McCain, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National Bank, found by committee agents in the bank's files.

The letter written in August, 1932 on R. F. C. paper, referred to stock transactions in the Seaboard Air Line Railroad. Investigators said the letter was not self explanatory and would need amplification to be understood.

It referred to previous telephone conversation between Conch and McCain without giving the subject of the conversation.

The committee probably would call Couch about the middle of next week.

Norris Not For Inflation

Washington, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Senator Norris of Nebraska, was authoritatively reported today to have telegraphed here he is back of the President's program save that in favor of currency inflation.

He is understood to have been asked his view on the farm strike movement by Edward Keating, former member of the House and now editor of the newspaper, Labor, published here.

Keating was not ready this afternoon to make public the Nebraskan's reply but it was said in other quarters familiar with the text that it recorded full support for the President's program.

Newton suffered a fractured skull and died before midnight.

Officers quoted Hilton as telling them he and Newton had been drinking.

Federal funds will be used if the plan is approved.
