

THE WEATHER

Fair and slightly colder in the east tonight. Thursday fair with rising temperatures in the extreme west. Probably light frost in exposed places in the east and central portion.

Claud Clemmons Found Not Guilty On Arson Charge

To be Tried Tomorrow for Murder; Evans Miller Given 25 to 30 Years on a Murder Charge.

Claud Clemmons, 50 year old negro, of the Stokes community was found not guilty on an arson charge in Superior Court here yesterday after the jury had had the case for deliberation less than an hour. Another negro drew a sentence of 25 to 30 years on a second degree murder charge and Mack Potter, white man, entered a plea of guilty to automobile stealing and reckless driving but sentence was not passed by Judge Frank Daniels, who is presiding over the court.

Clemmons now faces three first degree murder charges growing out of the alleged burning of a house in which three negro children lost their lives and the trial on the murder charges has been set for tomorrow morning.

The charges against Clemmons were the outgrowth of the burning of a tenant house on the farm of Heber Whitchard, white man, of the Stokes community. At the time of the fire Clemmons' estranged wife was living in the tenant house which another ally and the prosecution presented evidence to the effect that Clemmons had wished his wife to return home and had made threats against her as well as against Whitchard on whose land they lived. The defense offered no testimony.

While the circumstances pointed to Clemmons having committed the act his actual connection with the firing of the building was not definitely established by the prosecution and the jury returned the verdict of "Not Guilty."

Immediately following return of the verdict Solicitor Clark announced that he would pass the murder charges against Clemmons and a special venire of 75 was summoned to report at the opening of court tomorrow morning.

The charge against Evans Miller, negro, was the outgrowth of the defendant having shot a negro woman while he was on a drunken spree at a church meeting near Grifton about the first of this month. Miller was reported to have flashed his gun in the crowd near the church and when the negro ran he fired upon her. She ran a few steps and fell upon her face and when he ran to her and shot her twice in the back. After lingering for more than two weeks the woman died of her wounds on April 17 and the murder charge was immediately filed against Miller. He pleaded guilty to second degree murder and was sentenced to 25 to 30 years in state prison.

Mack Potter, white man, plead guilty to a charge of stealing an automobile and reckless driving but sentence was not announced. Potter was charged with stealing a car for a trip to Kinston and while enroute to this city from Kinston wrecked his car seriously injuring some of the passengers in the car.

The hearing of all cases got underway this morning with indications that the docket would be cleared up in time for the taking up of the Clemmons case tomorrow morning.

Tobacco Growers Will Organize

Tifton, Ga., April 25.—(AP)—Georgia bright leaf tobacco growers definitely have determined to fight for their interests, especially in Washington.

Permanent organization of the Georgia Tobacco Growers Association is to be formed May 10 at Nashville.

It was brought out at a conference here yesterday attended by some 250 growers, federal agents and state extension workers that Georgia wants a representative permanently in the office of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at Washington.

The Georgia growers protested the opening of the markets in the Carolinas near the close of the Georgia season contending that such action was detrimental to this state.

J. C. Lanier, head of the flue cured section of the AAA told the growers the government would fix the dates for the 1934 auction markets, heretofore set by the buyers themselves through the United States Tobacco Association.

Annual Weddings For This Couple
Durant, Okla.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rutherford of Sherman, Tex., remarried here on the first anniversary of their wedding in San Antonio, announced they plan to have similar observance each year on a different state. New Mexico has been selected as the locale of their 1935 remarriage, the said.

NATIONS ARE UPSET OVER JAP WARNING

Warning of "Hands Off Policy" in China Arouses the Other Powers.

Washington, April 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt intends to ask authority in a forthcoming supplemental appropriations bill to start actual naval construction to bring the United States fleet up to treaty limits.

DILLINGER IS YET AT LARGE

Five thousand Officers Taking Part in Intensive Search for the Desperado.

Merced, Wis., April 25.—(AP)—America's million dollar murderer with a pony $25,000 and a blood of 13 men across his bullet blazed trail-smoked today an army of more than 5,000 officers who hunted him.

"We'll have John Dillinger," before long said the Department of Justice through its division of investigation at Chicago. The earnestness was witnessed both by the great number and high caliber of the agents it threw into the hunt but there was no word of the desperado despite the intensive hunt.

Rumors flew but all simmered down to John Dillinger vanished Sunday from a little Bohemian resort near here and has been unreported since.

Violate Fishing Laws, Twenty-One Arrested
New Bern, April 25.—Twenty-one arrests were made during the weekend of fishermen at Lake Mattamuskeet for fishing without proper licenses or for exceeding the bass bag limits. It has been learned here from Larry E. Warrington, district warden, who assisted with the arrests, with Harry Latham, deputy county warden of Hyde county; E. B. Kusler, Beaufort county warden, and W. L. Birsch, United States game protector. All the arrested persons were taken before a justice of the peace, convicted and fined. Last week there were five arrests, and the preceding week here were 12 arrests.

Rocky Mount, April 25.—With contracts secured from the Federal Government, local city officials are preparing to push the work on the municipal filtering plant and reservoir, which will be erected here this summer at a cost of approximately $310,000.

City Manager Leslie B. Aycock said today that the city's next move will be to prepare the bonds and deliver them to the government authorities at Washington.

Candidate Admits It Was His "Own Idea"
Park River, N. D.—(AP)—Harry O'Brien, publisher of a newspaper here, said in announcing his candidacy for state senator: "Nobody asked me to become a candidate; it was my own idea."

He refused to kiss babies except a limited number of "female babies no less than 16 years of age."

He made no campaign promises and suggested voters take a gamble chance that he will make good.

Washington, April 25.—(AP)—The trial of Bishop James Cannon, Jr. approached an end today in District of Columbia Superior Court as opposing attorneys sought specific instructions to the jury preparatory to beginning argument.

The southern Methodist churchman is on trial with Miss Adl. Burroughs on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Federal Corrupt Practices Act by failure to report all contributions received for his 1928 campaign against the presidential candidacy of Alfred E. Smith. It was expected the jury would begin deliberations tomorrow afternoon after completion of argument. Each side has been allotted four hours.

Winston-Salem, April 24.—(AP)—Representatives of practically every college and university in the state have indicated they will attend the fifth annual Congress of the N. C. Federation of Students at Salem College Friday and Saturday. Dean J. H. Herring of Duke will be the principal speaker. A masquerade ball will conclude the program Saturday evening.

Wilmington, April 25.—Congressman J. Bayard Clark, Fayetteville, made it plain from the witness stand in New Hanover Superior Court here yesterday that he has no purpose to debate L. Clayton Grant, Wilmington attorney, who is opposing the Seventh District Congressional representative for the Democratic nomination in June.

Mr. Clark was testifying in behalf of the plaintiff in a civil action. During a lull in the proceedings, George Rountree, Sr., of counsel for the defendant, said jokingly to the witness: "I'll help you get the courthouse if you want to make a speech tonight."

"No, thank you," answered the congressman, "I have no desire to make a speech."

Mr. Grant, from the plaintiff's stand, said: "I'll do my part by making the courthouse. If Mr. Clark will speak."

Congressman Clark last week "repeatedly" declined an invitation to debate in a challenge issued by Mr. Grant.

That satisfied the expansionists for the time being, although some of them suspected the President never really intended to exercise, except sparingly, the new powers thus thrust upon him.

The present revival of silver talk is based, by and large, on a contention that these powers should have been used more freely, particularly for the rehabilitation of silver. The effort is to make mandatory some of the things merely authorized last year.

Business Houses To Close For Funeral

President L. A. Stroud of the Chamber of Commerce, requests all merchants and business houses to close their places of business for one hour tomorrow during the funeral of Dr. Robert H. Wright. The hour for the closing is between three and four o'clock.

GIVES NAMES POLLHOLDERS FOR PRIMARY

Members of the Pitt County Board of Elections today announced the names of officials for Greenville and Chocollu polling places in the primary June 2 which completes this phase of the board work the list for the other townships having already been announced.

Officials for the Greenville precinct are as follows: Registrar, R. A. Tyson, Jr.; judges, H. J. Sawyer, alternate Mrs. Alex. Viola.

Chocollu township: Registrar J. L. Outlaw; judges, Democrat R. L. Little, Republican Mathew Godley; alternate Robert Wilson.

The reason for the delay in announcing the officials for these two precincts was because of the fact that the election board had under consideration a division of these two large precincts with new registrations.

After going into the matter, it was explained, it was found to be impossible to get new registration before the coming primary so the matter was deferred until after the primaries are over.

A division of these two large precincts into more polling places with new registrations before the November election this year, is assured by the election board.

Wilmington, April 25.—Congressman J. Bayard Clark, Fayetteville, made it plain from the witness stand in New Hanover Superior Court here yesterday that he has no purpose to debate L. Clayton Grant, Wilmington attorney, who is opposing the Seventh District Congressional representative for the Democratic nomination in June.

Up to a few weeks ago, the administration believed it could prevent this movement from becoming serious at this session of Congress.

During the President's absence on vacation however, the silver advocates in the House suddenly became very active. So far as appeared, the Democratic House leadership not only did nothing to head off the movement, but actually gave it encouragement.

It was the one subject on which Mr. Roosevelt, as he surveyed the wreckage of his legislative program on his return to Washington showed a willingness to make concessions. That was an undeniable recognition of the strength of the silverites.

The administration problem now is, again, to pacify the expansionists, and at the same time defeat mandatory action along any line which the President would consider insound.

The whole administration financial program, with its continuation of orthodox liberty bond refunding, is geared to an expectation that there will be no violent changes in the monetary situation during the next few months.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Governor Expresses Regret
Raleigh, April 25.—(AP)—Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus today expressed deep regret upon being notified of the death of President R. H. Wright of East Carolina Teachers College, and said the state had suffered a great loss. Only last Saturday the governor related, Dr. Wright had held a long conversation with him regarding the proposed annexation of Governor Ehringhaus at the commencement exercises at the college this year.

Immediately upon returning to his office after spending several days in Norfolk Va., where his daughter underwent an appendix operation Monday, Governor Ehringhaus had prepared a message to the family expressing his regret to learn of the death of the doctor. Before his message could be telegraphed word was received that the doctor had died. (Continued on Page Four)

MANY ENTER MISPELLED WORD CONTEST

Reflector readers showed much interest in the "Misspelled Word Contest" in last Wednesday's issue of the paper and a large number of answers had been received when the time limit expired Monday afternoon. Another group of contest advertisements appears in today's issue and readers are invited to again try their skill at proof reading and get your answers in by five o'clock next Monday afternoon in order to compete for this week's prizes.

Prize winners for last week's contest were:
First prize $250 Lula May Baker, 418 East Third Street, Greenville, N. C.
Second prize $150 J. P. Brinkley, Jr., Star Route, Mayesville, N. C.
Third prize $100 Mrs. S. B. Tucker, I. P. U. No. 2, Greenville, N. C.

Out of the 150 answers received to last week's contest it was noticeable that there was not in the whole group a single reply that was absolutely correct in its every detail. There were a great many containing just one error and among these the most prevalent error was of the word misspelled in the announcement headline, the largest line in the whole contest. Other errors in the replies included failure to note the misspelling of the word "Frigidair" in the advertisement of Smith Electric Company.

The word was misspelled twice while many of the replies noted it only one time.

There also appeared to be much uncertainty as to the proper placing of the apostrophe for "Lautares". Many contestants changed the name of Waldrep in Williams and Waldrep signature to Waldrop, Waldrep is correct.

These are just a few of the errors that were made in the replies received and they are called to your attention in order to make it easier for you this week. Attention is also called to the fact that it is not necessary to look for the errors appearing in the portion of the page above the heavy rule that encloses the contest announcement.

GIVES HEALTH TALK BEFORE ROTARY CLUB

Dr. Winstead Presents Facts About Health Condition In Pitt County.

Infant mortality is higher in North Carolina than in any state in the Union and in Pitt county higher than in any other county in North Carolina. Dr. John Winstead told the members of the Rotary club Monday night at their weekly meeting at the Rotary club. He explained that this "highest" rate for Pitt county was due in part to the fact that some people in the county did not believe in doctors. Instead, he said, they used the advice of grandmother or neighborhood quack or just themselves. If they call a doctor it is too late usually. Even when the doctor advises they do not follow his advice but do as they think best.

In opening his remarks about "Community Health" Dr. Winstead gave expression to some interesting facts about the common cold, its treatment and effects. It passes all other diseases in frequency of occurrence. Most people are readily susceptible to catching a cold.

It opens the way for more serious diseases and so "should be carefully and diligently" treated. It is not so dependable for occurrence on weather and adenoids as is commonly supposed. "Colds are invariably due to infection," it is also possible to become so exhausted as to catch a cold without infection.

"Outdoor life does not predispose for colds so much as indoor life." Things to watch are proper bathing, proper clothing, weather, exposure, proper heating and ventilation of rooms. Exposure to dampness and wind predisposes to colds.

Treatment lies in reducing the increased temperature that accompanies a cold, increasing catharsis, increasing perspiration. "Castor oil is good, that sounds bad, though," Dr. Winstead said.

The next most frequent diseases indicated was Gastric and intestinal disorders due mostly to over-eating and over-drinking. Venereal diseases are hard to check because people try to treat themselves, depend on drug store, or go to "concupiscence doctors". Tuberculosis has been cut 33 and 1-3 per cent in the state since 1924 but in Pitt county it has increased 10 per cent. Most other common diseases like mumps, typhoid etc. have been reduced in Pitt county.

Ralph Collins, a student from the College told of his travel in France and Italy. He told how he enjoyed the hospitality of a French family, up the Pyrenees on a donkey, seeing a bull fight in the course of which fight bulls were killed, and motoring on a motorized bicycle. He was impressed he said with the way a German druggist for his holiday tied a neck on his back and tramped off to the mountains in Germany and the way youths bandaged together and went about singing.

The program was in charge of Steve Wilkerson, chairman of the Health and Happiness committee and Kitchin Co. club president presided since new officers do not get into business until July. Prizes for the evening were given by Simpson and Dick Forest. Attendance prizes were won by Wynne, Ed Harvey and Wesley Harvey.

Dr. R. H. Wright Died This Morning After Brief Illness

College President Suffered Heart Attack While On Duty In His Office Monday; Funeral Services Tomorrow

College President Suffered Heart Attack While On Duty In His Office Monday; Funeral Services Tomorrow

Dr. Robert H. Wright, president of East Carolina Teachers College, since that institution came into being 25 years ago, and one of the state's foremost educators and citizens, died at 10:25 o'clock this morning at Pitt County hospital from complications following a heart attack suffered Monday morning as he went about his duties in his office at the college. Up until that time Dr. Wright had been in the best of health and his collapse and subsequent death came as a distinct shock to this community.

Funeral services will be conducted at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Campus Building at the college followed by interment in Greenwood cemetery. The services will be conducted by Dr. G. R. Coombs, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church here, assisted by Dr. Frank Dean, pastor of the Episcopal church in Wilson. The body will lie in state at the Campus building from one o'clock tomorrow.

Active pall bearers will be: S. T. White, R. G. Fitzgerald, L. R. Meador, Dr. K. B. Pace, J. E. Winslow, J. C. Gaskins, H. J. Minnis, E. G. Flanagan.

Dr. Wright is survived by his wife Mrs. Pearl Murphy Wright, two sons Dr. Robert H. Wright, Jr., of Phoenix, Va., and William A. Wright, of this city; two daughters Mrs. M. Donald Cadman of Chesapeake, New York, and Mrs. Darward Parker of Wilson. Other survivors include four brothers, Dr. John B. Wright, Raleigh; Isaac C. Wright, Wilmington; William I. Wright, Inglewood; and Benjamin V. Wright, Portland, Oregon, and three sisters, Mrs. H. B. Smith, New Bern, Mrs. L. R. Wilson, Chicago University, and Mrs. George B. Thomas, Maplewood, N. J.

Robert Herring Wright was born in Sampson county, May 21, 1870, the son of the late John C. and Betsey Vaden (Herring) Wright. His entire boyhood was spent in the community in which he was born and his early educational training was received in a private school operated by his mother. After further training in the public schools of Sampson county he became a student of Oak Ridge Institute but left there in 1891 to teach school in Bladen county, North Carolina four years after which he taught in Marion county, South Carolina. In January 1894 he entered the University of North Carolina where he received his degree of Bachelor of Science in 1897 completing his four years course in three and a half years with honors. During 1897 and 1898 he was principal of Stranhoppe public schools in Nash county and from 1898 to 1901 he was instructor in English and mathematics at Oak Ridge Institute. Entering Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, as a graduate student he specialized there in philology and economics during 1901 and 1902, and from 1902 to 1906 he was teacher of history and economics at the City College, Baltimore.

On December 31, 1907 Dr. Wright married at Tomahawk, Sampson county, Mrs. Pearl Murphy, which union was blessed by four children all of whom survive him.

In the summer of 1908 he attended Teachers College, of Columbia University, New York City and in the subsequent fall became principal of Eastern High School, Baltimore, where he remained through 1909. In the latter year he came to Greenville and became the first president of East Carolina Teachers Training School now East Carolina Teachers College.

During the 25 years of existence under Dr. Wright's guidance the college has grown from an institution of 174 students with a faculty of 12 members to an institution of more than one thousand men and women and a faculty of 75 able instructors.

Dr. Wright had a national reputation. (Continued on Page Four)

BRUMMITT TO TALK HERE SAT.

Attorney General To Discuss Proposed Changes in the Constitution.

Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt will address the people of Pitt county at the court house here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at which time he will discuss North Carolina's constitution and the proposed new constitution.

At the coming November election the voters of the state will have the opportunity to vote for or against this new constitution and it is necessary that they be well informed in order to intelligently express their wishes through their ballot. Mr. Brummitt is recognized as one of the outstanding authorities on government in the state and his views should prove worthwhile to the citizens. It is expected that a large crowd will be present to hear his address.

Roanoke Rapids, April 25.—Howard or "Shorty" Carter, 26, got the worst of an affray when he grappled with Ben Gray, a man of about 75 years, and was taken to the local hospital for treatment.

He received knife wounds, the more serious of which was a long throat slash, requiring several stitches. The man is said to have bled profusely.

SILVER QUESTION AGAIN IS PUZZLING ADMINISTRATION

By BYRON PRICE
No other feature of the revised Roosevelt legislative program is causing more puzzlement and confusion than the resurrected silver question.

The plain indications are that, for a second time since the present administration began, silver advocates and inflationists are getting out of hand, threatening to force the White House into steps it would rather avoid.

A year ago, when agitation for sweeping currency expansion grew too strong, Mr. Roosevelt was able to effect a compromise. He accepted a blanket grant of authority, permitting him to exercise almost unlimited power over monetary policy.

That satisfied the expansionists for the time being, although some of them suspected the President never really intended to exercise, except sparingly, the new powers thus thrust upon him.

The present revival of silver talk is based, by and large, on a contention that these powers should have been used more freely, particularly for the rehabilitation of silver. The effort is to make mandatory some of the things merely authorized last year.

Up to a few weeks ago, the administration believed it could prevent this movement from becoming serious at this session of Congress.

Hearing On River Project to be Held

Announcement was made here this afternoon that the hearing on the Tar River project to be held before government engineers tomorrow morning would be held as scheduled. Dr. R. H. Wright, who died early today, was chairman of the local committee, and members of his family, knowing how vitally interested he was in the project, asked that the meeting be held as scheduled. The hearing will be held in Sheppard Memorial Library at 10:30 o'clock, it was announced.

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

Chapter One
AMBUSH

TATE TROOPER WATSON was in anything but an amiable mood. To begin with, he had been out nearly the whole of the night before on a special detail that had turned out to be a wild-goose-chase, and now he was tired, chilled and disgruntled.

He ran his motorcycle off the macadam road and onto a level patch of hard, frozen ground. Balancing himself on the tilted machine by one out-thrust leg, he pulled off his heavy gauntlets and reached inside his coat. As his numbered fingers drew forth the plug of strong tobacco he gazed bitterly around him at the bleak landscape.

"For once the papers are right, it's going to snow," he grumbled to himself, eyeing the gray pall closing in from the north-west. "Rum Boulevard" was the nickname given this stretch of lonely highway, and it was along here that Watson and his confreres had spent their fruitless vigil, having

DUFRESNE's raised hand cut short Watson's flow of words, and a slow smile transformed his drawn features with a kindly charm. "No harm done, Officer, and no need to apologize for doing your duty—but we're not all bootleggers."

Watson threw him a keen look. "I'll ride back there and see what I can find," he said. "Can you remember the exact spot, Mr. Dufresne?"

The motorist looked off into the distance, his brows knitted in concentration. "I had just passed under a concrete bridge, a railroad bridge, I think it was. There was a long dip in the road, then a rising curve. There were high banks on each side of the road. I had just topped the rise—"

Watson nodded. "I know the place, Mr. Dufresne. It's a good place for an ambush, and it's been used before. Just one thing more, sir. I've got to turn in a report on been "tipped off" that a "whiskey caravan" was coming through.

Far ahead, breasting one of those rolling swells, an automobile came into sight. With languid eye the State Trooper stooped over to make a minor adjustment to the motor feed-line, which had been giving trouble and when he straightened up again he was surprised to see that the approaching car was much nearer the spot at which he had halted than was possible with any regard for the State Speed Law.

Officer Watson started to swing his motorcycle around to the road. But before he could complete the maneuver the onrushing car came hurtling by, the sole occupant crouched over the wheel like a man racing against death.

The State Trooper's whistle sounded in frantic blasts as his motor roared into action and he darted after the reckless driver. Somewhat to his surprise, his shrill warnings were heeded. The car ahead came to a swaying, screeching halt, with brakes squealing and skidding tires scoring the road.

Officer Watson saluted majestically alongside the driver and rested one foot on the running board. The car was a gleaming brown coupe of expensive make, with an unusually powerful motor under its hood. The window at the left was down, despite the nipping chill of the air, and the driver's head and shoulders projected, awaiting the Trooper's approach.

Watson saw a distinguished-looking gentleman of early middle age, his fine, clear-cut features graced by a meticulous moustache and goatee. His face was vaguely familiar to the Trooper, but the license-plate on the machine bore no sacred numerals.

However, the Trooper did not bring forth any of the time-honored greetings from traffic officer and speedster, such as, "Say, where d'you think you're goin'?" or "Where's the fire?" Instead, he flipped open his little book and produced a pencil stub from the band of his cap. "Well, Mister, what's the story this time?" he inquired with a deceptive show of patience.

bullet had certainly winged its way through there at an angle that must have missed the driver's head by the narrowest of margins.

"There were three shots before I pulled out of range," the driver explained. "That first one nearly got me! After that I put on speed, but I heard the others hit the car. Let's look."

An investigation soon revealed the course of the other bullets. One had sizzled off the left door, the gouged brown enamel marking its path, while the third had splintered one corner of the luggage grid. Officer Watson looked with renewed interest at this dapper man who had ridden through a deadly ambush. "Did you catch sight of the shooter?" he asked.

The motorist looked at him indignantly. "Do you suppose I would get out and look for this armed person who was trying to murder me?" he demanded with biting sarcasm. "I kept going at top speed. There were no other cars in sight and I saw no one by the roadside," he added, in more reasonable tones.

The Trooper posed his usual question. "Got any liquor in that car?"

"See here, Officer," Dufresne protested vigorously, "this is ridiculous. You'd be far more usefully employed in going back along that road and trying to catch the person who takes pot shots at passing cars. This was no careless boy with an air rifle. I'm going through Edge Hill. I'll report this to the police there, and show them the car. Captain Robinson knows me."

The driver brought out his wallet and extracted two cards. One was the regulation driver's license, the other his personal calling card. The light of recognition dawned in Watson's eyes, and his whole manner changed. He returned the cards and his hand went up to his cap in ready salute. "Sorry, Mr. Dufresne," he apologized, thankful that he had heeded the cautious impulse. "I thought your face looked familiar, but I couldn't place you for the moment. If you'd been driving your big car the plate number would have put me wise. I know your tag's in the 40's—"

"Forty-seven, Officer. This is Mrs. Dufresne's car."

"You see, Mr. Dufresne, we've been having a bit of trouble out this way with hijackers. It's a real tough stretch of road—"

The driver's reply was as calmly uttered as his heavy and labored breathing would permit. His cheeks were whipped with color and his exhaled breath formed a frosty stream. "Do you carry a gun in your car? Just a matter of form, you know."

Dufresne saluted. "No gun, Officer, and no liquor."

Watson saluted. "That's O. K., Mr. Dufresne. If I meet any cars coming this way I'll look them over carefully. You'll hear from us."

Less than fifteen minutes' drive along the undulating road brought Dufresne into the quiet town of Edge Hill. He drove directly to the Police Station and drew up at the curb.

Dufresne walked briskly up the cemented path and entered the building. He turned into a room to the right of the corridor, marked "Roll Room." A rookie policeman was busy at a typewriter, filling in some tabulated form. The young officer looked up inquiringly.

"Is Captain Robinson here?"

The Captain was indeed in his office, with the door ajar, and, bearing his name spoken, looked out. Recognizing his visitor, he advanced smilingly to shake hands.

"Well, well, Mr. Dufresne," he beamed, "what brings you out here?"

"Trouble!" was the terse answer. Captain Robinson noted the genuine gravity of his visitor's demeanor, and his face became serious at once. "Come in here," he invited, motioning toward his office.

"Now, Captain, take a good long look out that window. I don't want to cause you any embarrassment in your line of duty."

The rotund police chief chuckled as he obeyed this whimsical order. He went to the window, turning his back on the room. He heard little gurgling noises behind him, followed by a smothered cough. When he turned around Dufresne was just stowing away a flat silver flask in the inside pocket of his overcoat.

"I needed that," he observed. "So would you, Robinson, if you'd just had my experience. Come outside with me for a minute, I want to show you something."

They walked out to the car. Dufresne pointed out the marks left by the bullets. Robinson was greatly perturbed by the sight. "Don't tell me somebody has 'put the finger' on you?" he gasped, using the gangster argot meaning "marked for death."

Chapter 45
NORMAN'S STORY

"YOU'RE here," whispered Judith to Norman, "It's all I care about now."

"Better take the stand, Norman," said Cunard, and to Judith, "You'll have the rest of your life to talk to him."

Judith watched his quick, firm step as he strode to the witness stand.

"I—I object!" roared Lampere, pose forgotten, fury in his face.

"On what grounds?" inquired Morgan. "You said in your closing words that you wished you had him here to present. Well, I've brought him and when he gets through testifying for me you can spend the night with him."

"Mr. Dale, you are no longer associated with Mr. Lampere, are you? Will you give the date that you severed connections there?"

"July 21."

"Will you give your reasons for leaving?"

"May I say broadly, that I learned of certain conditions which made it impossible for me to remain conscientiously."

"Did you learn of these conditions from inside of the office, or—"

"I was approached from the outside. I gave Mr. Lampere no reason for leaving because I wanted first to make sure that the party to whom I had talked was right."

"Your wife hadn't previously told you certain facts that she, as former stenographer to Tom Bevins, knew?"

"She tried to, but I had allowed my mind to become so poisoned against her theories . . . not against her, I want you to understand, but against her theories, that I would not listen."

"Where have you been since you left your firm, Mr. Dale?"

"In the valley of the Rio Diablo. I went there to check the statements of the man who approached me while I was still acting with Mr. Lampere."

"Did Mrs. Dale know of your presence?"

"I believe not. I think at one time she half recognized me. I was working at the Scatborne oil fields at the time. The first well had just come in and she drove over to see it. It was dark, and after the first shock of seeing her look at me with half-recognition, I hurried away."

"Why were you there incognito?"

"Because I wanted to carry on my investigation unobserved by any one."

"Why did you begin at Scatborne field?"

"Scatborne, as you know, is subsidized by Morton Lampere. Mr. Lampere's capital developed the field."

"I object, I demand that statement be stricken from the records . . . I demand—"

"Mr. Morgan," said the Judge, who was leaning over his desk with interest, "proceed with your witness."

"Mr. Morgan," he turned to Judge Morgan, "that question was completely unethical but," he coughed irascibly, "proceed and watch your words . . . er, just a moment, bailiff, catch that man going through the door. I would like to question him further and if we can prove perjury—there . . . now proceed."

But they didn't proceed. Such confusion arose at the bailiff's attempt to capture his man, that the Judge called a recess and when court again convened, word was sent in that Morton Lampere had become violently ill and asked the session be adjourned until the following day.

Judith and Norman left the courthouse together. When they paused on the steps for photographs, they were asked for interviews.

"Give us a chance to talk," pleaded Norman, "we haven't had time to say more than hello."

His roadster waited at a nearby garage. Silently they got into it and drove out to Hillendale.

"The DeMaos are in Galveston for the week; they turned the house over to us."

"That was nice."

They paused outside the door. "I planted your stocks," Norman said, as he fumbled for the right key.

"Yes, I saw you."

"You—what?"

"I thought it was you even though Delphy said you were the new gardener." She looked at the wrought iron console table, caressed it needlessly. "Let's get some glads for that bowl, these look rusty around the edge."

THEY went out into the garden, seeing it through the amber light of the setting sun. They cut long spikes of cream and salmon pink blossoms, saying nothing because there was so much to be said between them.

Judith heard Delphy singing in the kitchen. She wasn't surprised, everything was as it should be.

"Why didn't you sell Hillendale?" she inquired as they inspected the dahlias.

"I'd as soon put a child on the auction block," he admitted, "and when I found you weren't through with me I found these folks who leased it."

"I wish I never had to go to that old court again," Judith said from the comfort of Norman's arms.

"Don't have to," he answered. "We're giving Lampere a chance to leave the country tonight. Slim Safford will fly him down to some place in Mexico and from there he'll go abroad. Mrs. Bevins has asked Morrison to appear in court and ask for a dismissal of the case. You'll find Mathie and the Missus heading for Europe where they'll meet Lampere, who will marry Mathie as soon as Mrs. Lampere can get a Reno divorce."

"Dinner, Ma'ss No'man an' Miss Judy."

"Coming," they answered.

It was wonderful, Judith thought, to sit across the table from Norman, looking at him across a blue bowl of yellow roses from their own garden. She fingered her cup, lovingly. They'd purchased that on their honeymoon.

Soon they would go out and sit on the terrace and watch the little spike moon slide down to the west, all mixed up with oak tree limbs and stars.

Judith wondered if Lige's smile wasn't endangering his ears, it stretched so far, and when she asked him, it stretched even further. Rosa, delighted at meeting Lige's folks, was helping him in the dining room, a needless service. And Delphy waddled in from the kitchen every so often to see that things were as they should be.

They were out on the terrace and Judith was curled in Norman's arms, protected by his arms against . . . everything, when a thought came.

"Norman," she cried in sudden pain, "I've got to go back to the dam. I can't leave it half-finished."

"That's all right," he said, "your house is big enough for two, isn't it? Delphy's marrying Rosa's stepmother's uncle by marriage, and you can't live alone, besides," he added, "one clause in Big Tom's will read that after I had become convinced of Lampere's duplicity, I was to be retained as legal adviser of the Bevins Construction Company, and I think, Judith, that I should be on the ground, don't you?"

"Oh, I do, I do," and busily her mind constructed scenes of the little wooden house above the dam with cold winter winds blowing and inside Norman and herself, facing the future together. No longer the promising young attorney and the aspiring stenographer, just Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dale.

"The Fleet's In," a CWA artist's conception of how sailors conduct themselves when ashore, no longer hangs on the walls of the navy department at Washington. Secretary Claude A. Swanson ordered it removed after he had received complaints. "It was right artistic, but it was not true of the navy," Secretary Swanson commented. The painting, depicting a group of drunken sailors with a number of women, was the work of Paul Cadmus. "Not artistic, but absolutely true," said Cadmus. (Associated Press Photo)

Business Better In March, April Has Seasonal Gains

(By The Associated Press)

General business activity in the United States increased strongly in March and the first part of April, it is shown in the report of the conference of statisticians of the National Industrial Conference board.

Production of automobiles and trucks in the United States and Canada in March increased 40 per cent over February of this year and 173 per cent over March of last year.

Building and engineering construction, with an increase in March of 85 per cent over February, had almost double the usual seasonal gains. Residential contracts awarded in March advanced 93.5 per cent over February and non-residential awards increased 100 per cent.

Steel production continued to expand last month, after recording a sharp increase in February. Average daily output in March was 12.3 per cent over the February average and 207.4 per cent above that of a year ago. Operations in March were 42.6 per cent of capacity compared with 34.1 per cent in January.

Talks to parents

Spring Fever By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

The frequently sudden change to warm weather in the spring means little to parents as far as clothes are concerned. They slip on a light-weight coat or a thinner dress, and there they are.

No one watches them to see that they do not make too sudden and complete a change, or that they have on overshoes.

Children are faced with a different problem. Someone is forever at their heels, swathing them in warm clothes and warning them against taking off extra wraps, and only they themselves know the trials of an active life with too much on.

Before the day of the sweater there was more excuse for the discomfort to endure in the spring. Today wraps can be more exactly suited to temperature and occupation. To ask a boy to try to play baseball in a winter coat is to ask the impossible. He will be sure to play in his shirt-sleeves, and then, hot and perspiring, sit in a draught. If he is supplied with a sweater he is protected against such a contingency.

In this day of universal athletics, girls are quite as handicapped as boys by excessive clothing during the warm days of early spring. An extra sweater kept in the school locker, or carried with her books, is an insurance against many of the spring colds.

Children should be made to feel that their comfort is being considered, and that they are not hedged about by hard and fast rules which to them seem unreasonable or merely a display of the usual parental ignorance of facts. Then they probably will cooperate with their elders in using at least some precaution about wraps.

Tips on CONTRACT

By TOM O'NEIL

Cashing A Fit Great is the slim potentiality of a powerful two-suited hand. Once the lucky holder finds which of his suits has the more support from partner, he can proceed toward the heights with confidence.

Some players do not make original bids of two of a suit with more than two losing tricks if the suit is a minor or more than three losing tricks if the suit is a major.

Another school will make open bids of two freely with hands containing about five high card tricks or less if the suits have length and strength without regard to the proportion of possible losers and the number of tricks necessary for game or slam. These bids work out well usually when a fit is found and there is primary control in the big hand of three suits and secondary control of the other.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — Politicians have turned their eyes to the south — to Alabama — for the next major political engagement of the by-election year.

Five of the state's nine representatives in congress have opposition in what promises to be one of the most colorful primaries held in the south this year. The issue will be settled on Tuesday, May 1.

Democratic stalwarts of the house are involved in this Alabama contest. The staid and serious Oliver veteran of 20 years' service, is being opposed for the first time since he came to congress. Huddleston, another 10-termer and ranking democrat of the important committee on interstate and foreign commerce faces stiff opposition.

Jeffers, chairman of the house civil service committee and a member of the house for 14 years, is reported to be having the fight of his political career for re-election.

He explained that a few minutes before the conference he had been informed his daughter had fallen from her horse and been injured. "I didn't know how badly," he explained. "That's why, I suppose, I spoke so sharply."

TAR HEEL HOSIERY MEN ON CODE COMMITTEE High Point, April 25. — Three prominent North Carolina hosiery manufacturers are among the seven representatives of the hosiery industry designated as a special sub-committee to consider the matter of possible revision of the present minimum wage rates as defined by the hose code. They are Charles L. Amos of High Point; C. W. Gaddy of Alberarle, and John K. Voehringer of Greensboro. More than two score North Carolina hosiery mill owners are in Philadelphia this week attending important meetings affecting the industry and also the 30th annual Knitting Arts Exhibit being held there. Important action affecting the entire industry will probably come from the deliberations, and the Hosiery Code Authority is meeting also in connection with the presence of such a large part of the industry for the exposition. Marshall N. C. built on a shelf between mountain bluffs and the French Broad river, is so narrow that only one street extends the length of the City.

DR. ROBERT H. WRIGHT

In the death of Dr. Robert H. Wright here today not only this city and county lost one of its foremost citizens but the state as a whole has suffered a great loss. Who Dr. Wright was and what he did needs no word from us for he was known in educational circles throughout the state and nation and when there was work to be done that meant betterment of conditions for the future generations Dr. Wright was always listed as among those in the thick of the task.

During his quarter of a century as head of the college here he has instilled higher and nobler ideals in the minds of thousands of young women and young men who have gone out into the profession of training others and even in the generations yet unborn there will no doubt be reflected ideals inspired by him here as he went about his daily tasks of seeing to the operation of his school.

Not only was Dr. Wright interested in education for as a churchman he taught by word and example the Christian life and leaves behind him a high example for others to follow. And aside from this there was no movement for the betterment of conditions in order to make his community a better and happier place in which to live that he did not take a vital interest. During his last days he gave considerable time and effort to a project of civic development here that if carried to completion will mean hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the people of this immediate community.

It is needless to endeavor in a short time and space to cover the activities and achievements of this great man. It should suffice to say that truly the state and especially this immediate community is a better place for his having lived.

tation in educational circles and served as president of the National Association of Teachers Colleges in 1926 and 1927. He had likewise served upon important committees in the National Education Association. In this state he has served as both president and vice-president of the North Carolina Education Association and was for many years on the executive committee of that organization. He was a member of a special committee for codifying the educational laws of North Carolina and did important work in standardizing certifications of teachers. Not only was Dr. Wright interested in the North Carolinians of college age for his oft expressed wish was for ample opportunity for every child in North Carolina to receive an adequate education at the hands of competent and well qualified teachers.

Dr. Wright did not confine his activities to educational circles alone. From a religious standpoint he was a devout Christian and was active in church work. He was a staunch member and supporter of Jarvis Memorial church and a member of the board of stewards and board of trustees.

For years he had been teacher of the men's bible class of the Sunday School and last Sunday enjoyed the pleasure of aiding in the celebration of the payment of the debts incurred when the church erected a handsome Sunday School structure. From a civic standpoint, Dr. Wright's activities were wide and varied. In addition to being a member of several fraternal orders he was a charter member of the Greenville Rotary Club, had served as local president of the organization and had likewise had a part in the affairs of Rotary in the state and nation. There was no movement for the betterment of Greenville and Eastern North Carolina in which Dr. Wright did not take an active interest and just a few months ago he consented to become the head of Eastern North Carolina, Incorporated, an association formed to carry on various movements for the benefit of the people of this section. He was greatly interested in the development of natural resources and was almost solely responsible for the revival of the movement to get the federal government to reconsider the dredging of Tar river to this city to provide our people with the benefits of water transportation. Dr. Wright's organization had been actively engaged in getting together necessary data for this project, and tomorrow morning he was scheduled to appear before government engineers at a special meeting to present the matter to them.

Over Million To Growers

Washington April 25 (AP)—Farm Administration announced today that it had mailed $6,379 checks representing $2,626,522 in rental and price equalization payments to the blue-cured tobacco growers up to April 24. Of the total checks issued, 32,390 representing $1,359,975 were in payment for acreage rentals, while 13,939, totaling $1,266,546 were for price equalization payments. North Carolina growers receive $703,899 as rental payments and $325,561 as price equalization payments.

Blue-cured tobacco growers will receive in 1934 more than $17,000,000 of which amount more than $8,000,000 will be paid this Spring.

Defends Administration

Washington, April 25 (AP)—Chairman Black of the air mail investigating committee told the Senate today that the air mail contracts involved a network of intrigue, chicanery, manipulation and fraud, and claimed the public on the issue is being misled. In taking up debate for the McKellar-Black air mail bill, the Alabama democrat contended that cancellation of the contracts was not only right, but the duty of the administration. "There has been a deliberate effort on the part of certain groups in America to mislead the public, not only as to the right to cancel but the duty of doing so," he said.

"There has been a consistent effort on the part of certain subsidized editorial writers to confuse the public, and leave the impression that something had been done out of the ordinary. We have heard the word 'Un-American' from those who know nothing about law. It was the duty of the administration to cancel the contracts as soon as fraud was discovered."

The Darlings

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER "My darlings, my darlings!" cried Honey Bear as she rushed toward the cubs and took them into her arms.

"Oh, my little baby Jupiter, my dear little Blacky," she kept repeating over and over.

Everyone was feeling happy again. It had been dreadful to think the cubs might have been lost. They looked like real little bears now, so different from the way they had looked when the Puddle Muddlers had seen them in the cave with their eyes shut and without any fur.

"Did some dreadful creature try to get you?" Honey Bear asked. "How did you escape, my darlings?" "No one tried to get us," answered Jupiter, the smaller of the two cubs. "We felt like going out to see the world and so we just walked out of the cave. No one was around and we took a walk by ourselves and sniffed the air and found a few nice bites of food to eat."

"You see!" exclaimed Honey Bear. "They are bright as bright can be. They knew, the little darlings, that it was time for them to leave the cave and learn to understand the big world outside. Oh, my darlings are so bright!" And she hugged them again.

But all of a sudden she stopped hugging them. "What did you eat?" she asked. "Do you feel all right? You shouldn't touch anything to eat, you know, without Mother Bear telling you whether it is good for you or not. If you do anything like that again I'll have to spank you." The Puddle Muddlers were amazed at the change in Honey Bear.

What, they wondered, had come over her?

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Of the new or only partly used talent about to blossom forth in major league baseball company this spring, it is noteworthy that virtually the entire crop consists of infield replacements.

It may have been simply that a lot of creaking arms and wooden legs developed simultaneously among the veterans or it may be that 1934 happens to be a fine vintage year for youthful infielders. It may be a combination of both. The fact remains however, that no less than seven of the eight American league clubs and at least two of the National league outfits are moving toward the opening ceremonies with unusually talented young men available for the inner line of defense.

Around The Horn

Here are the leading prospects among the newcomers:

Yankees—A sensational new key stone combination in Robert Rolfe, the red rover, at shortstop, and Cap per Dan Heffner at second base.

Browns—Alan Strange, an apparent fixture at short, and Harland Clifton, promising young third baseman.

White Sox—Zeke Bonura, a great javelin heaver in his school and college days, now the successor to Manager Lew Fonseca at first base.

Cleveland—Hal Trosky, first baseman, rounding out an infield in which the reliable Willie Kamm is the only veteran.

Tigers—Hopeful but none too confident that Salty Parker, a sweet-fielding shortstop, will make it possible to shift Bill Rogell to third and thereby solve a big problem for Mickey Cochrane.

Senators—Same old lineup but a star understudy for Ossie Bluege at third base in Cecil Travis.

Red Sox—Bucky Walters, supplying enough youth for the whole infield at third base.

Phillies—Two replacements, Marty Hopkins at third and Irvine Jeries at second, with a third rookie Lou Chiozza, due for utility infielding.

Dodgers—Long John McCarthy, first base "find" from the semi-pro ranks, who may be farmed out for the season unless something happens to Sam Leslie.

Another Miracle Brewing?

To replace Rabbit Maranville, a battlefield casualty, the Boston Braves will rely on young Dick Gyselman, 20 years younger and nearly a foot taller than the Rab, unless Manager McKechnie can swing a deal with the Brooklyn Dodgers for a more seasoned second baseman.

Gyselman, while not exactly a rookie, scarcely can be classed as an experienced performer, either. He was bought from the Missions two years ago and was tried first at third base, where his lankiness is less of a handicap than it is around the keystone kiosk.

The doctors report, meanwhile, that Maranville should make a complete recovery from his broken leg but it will be another miracle achievement by the grand little man if he gets back into the game at all this year.

TWO GIRLS RUN AWAY, ARE FOUND IN DURHAM

Durham, April 25.—Virginia Anderson, 15, and Margaret Cox, 16, of well-to-do, Washington (D. C.) families, were jailed Monday by local police pending the arrival of their parents. They left their homes on Saturday because Mrs. Anderson scolded Virginia for having a package of cigarettes in her purse. In Durham they were apprehended at the home of Mrs. Maggie Couch, Virginia's aunt. The girls' funds amounted to $1.35 when they arrived here by train. Their parents were expected to arrive today.

Dogs Menace Cattle

Amarillo, Tex. (AP)—Packs of dogs prowling at night now menace cattle and sheep more seriously than coyotes did before methods of extermination were developed. Panhandle ranchers assert. The ranchmen say that packs consist mainly of "town" dogs which stray into the country and "gang up" for raids on livestock.

Delegates Calls Alaska Helpless To Defend U. S.

By H. C. HUNTER

Washington (AP)—Anthony J. Dimond, congressional delegate from Alaska, contends the next theater of war for the United States will be "Alaska, the helpless."

In that way he described Uncle Sam's northernmost territory in connection with his bill to establish an army air corps training and defense base near Fairbanks. The site would be chosen by military aviation strategists and the post staffed with a full complement of officers and men equipped with bombers and observation, pursuit and patrol planes.

Dimond said he was not an alarmist and not fearful of war, but contended that if there were any danger to the United States it lay across the Pacific rather than the Atlantic ocean.

"In Alaska," he said, "we have a string of islands (Aleutian) running towards Asia. They contain one of the finest harbors in the world for a hostile power to base fleet operations and we have agreed not to put any fortifications out there. It is the strategic position of Alaska, now absolutely defenseless, which makes it imperative that an air base be established there and well manned."

Referring to the millions of dollars spent for military defense in the Hawaiian Islands, Dimond said:

"We have locked one doorway against aggression but have left the other, which would be the main entrance in case of war on the Pacific wide open and unguarded. An enemy operating from Hawaii would be 2,200 miles from continental United States but he would be only 1,400 miles away if he operated from the Alaskan harbors."

Declaring that a fleet starting from the northern tip of Japan could cover the 1,800 miles to Attu Island, western tip of the Aleutians before a fleet starting at the same time from Seattle, Dimond says an air force stationed at Fairbanks would have to fly only 1,200 miles to protect the territory.

Emphasizing hazardous flying conditions in the north, the delegate described the rugged mountains, the vast expanses of tundra lands, the freezing cold of arctic and sub-arctic winter as ideal conditions of army fliers.

He included in the measure a plan for rotating all pilots to give them experience in the north.

"Forced to combat the elements of our northland," he said, "I am certain army fliers and designers would develop new equipment which would make their work easier and safer and at the same time rescue Alaska from the danger of becoming the battleground of two nations if war between the United States and a Pacific power ever came."

WOMAN'S SKULL FOUND ON AN ISLAND MARSH

Kinston, April 24.—A woman's skull found in a marsh on Cedar Island is believed to be that of a victim of a severe storm nearly 35 years ago.

When a gale swept the Carolina coast in August, 1899, a small vessel capsized near the island, in Core sound. The crew and the captain's wife, a passenger, were drowned. The body of the woman was not recovered, it is understood. Fishermen found the skull believed to be hers. They turned it over to Mrs. T. S. Payne, director of relief in Hyde county, when they met her at Ocracoke. The vessel wrecked in '99 was the Hardcastle, said to have been a schooner or sloop of moderate tonnage.

HIGHWAYMEN SHOOT WAY OUT OF CAPTURE

Winston-Salem, April 24.—(AP)—Police yesterday had no clues to the identity of two negro highwaymen who shot their way out of almost certain capture Saturday night after falling in their efforts to hold up H. B. Anderson at his filling station here.

The two negroes appeared with a car and asked for some gasoline, and as Anderson walked to the pump, they both drew revolvers. A Trent, who was inside the station saw what was happening, took a pistol from a desk drawer and fired on the pair. About 25 shots were exchanged, but the negroes made their escape.

ONE GALLON could lift the Empire State Building 1 3/4 inches!

99 Million Foot-Pounds* per Gallon

Amazing as it may seem, there is enough energy stored up in a single gallon of the powerful new H-C, if it could be fully utilized*, to hoist the world's tallest building 1 3/4 inches in the air. Here is more power for your car than you ever dreamed could be found in a gallon of gasoline. Here is the power that will give you surprising mileage. And with this power is combined high anti-knock, quick starting and flashy get-away. All at the price of regular gasoline! Try the new, powerful H-C for 30 days in your car. All we ask is that you keep a careful record of the results. Ask the Sinclair dealer for a folder which will fully explain how one gallon of the new H-C could hoist the Empire State Building 1 3/4 inches.

*Foot-Pound: The amount of work required to lift one pound one foot. Due to friction and other losses no machine yet built can convert into useful work all the potential energy in any gasoline. Friction alone steals millions of foot-pounds of work from every gallon of gasoline you buy. To keep friction loss in your engine at a minimum be sure to use either Sinclair Opaline or Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil.

MINNESOTA FARM HAS LEMON TREE DESPITE THE COLD

Bird Island, Minn.—(AP)—Out of keeping with its frigid reputation, Minnesota weather is producing lemons which rival the choicest of the tropics.

Mrs. Frank Fernkees, farm homemaker south of Bird Island, has a tree about four feet tall which has been productive for several years.

This year the tree has five lemons, the largest 13 1/2 inches in circumference and weighing one and one-half pounds.

METHODIST OAK FELLED: ASBURY'S PULPIT IN 183

Marion, S. C.—(AP)—Marion's famous "Methodist Oak", under which Bishop Francis Asbury held religious services while visiting America in 1783, stands no longer.

Rot had reduced it to a shell and workmen felled it the other day.

Historians say the tree had reached full growth when the bishop stopped here on his tour to spread the doctrine of Methodism.

KANSAS TO HONOR WOMAN LOBBIST IN SUFFRAGE FETE

Kansas City, Kas.—(AP)—The memory of Kansas' first woman lobbyist, who battled for woman suffrage 75 years ago, will be honored at the festival marking the diamond anniversary of the Wyandotte constitution, May 10-14.

She was Mrs. Clarinda Irene Howard Nichols, a Vermonter by birth and a Kansas by adoption and an associate.

THE SEED YOU PLANT

is, in a large measure, responsible for the results you achieve in your garden. To insure results of the kind that will afford the utmost satisfaction to you, care in the selection of your seed is a prerequisite. Whether you plant vegetable or flower seed, you can't buy better seed for the purpose than ours.

The way tobacco is cut has a lot to do with the way Chesterfield burns and tastes

There are many different ways of cutting tobacco. A long time ago, it used to be cut on what was known as a Pease Cutter, but this darkened the tobacco, and it was not uniform. The cutters today are the most improved, modern, up-to-the-minute type. They cut uniformly, and cut in long shreds. The tobacco in Chesterfield is cut right—you can judge for yourself how Chesterfields burn and how they taste. Everything that science knows is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder... the cigarette that tastes better.
