LAKE CITY, S. C., BANK ROBBED OF $100,000 TODAY

Bank President And Family Held During Robbery

THREE GUNMEN TAKE PART IN DARING RAID

Robbers go to Home Of President Carter, Tie Two Children to Beds and Force Banker and Wife to go to Bank to Open Safe; Cashier Has Safe Open; Robbers Scoop up Money and Force Three to Accompany Them; All Later Released

Lake City, S. C., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Three men robbed the Palmetto Bank of Lake City of $100,000 today after kidnaping J. H. Carter, president of the bank and his wife from their home and tying Carter's two children to their beds.

The three robbers entered Carter's home about 8:14 a. m. 45 minutes before the opening hour of the bank and held up the family with pistols.

The two Carter children, the eldest a 16-year-old girl, were bound to their beds with adhesive tape and Carter's wife was forced to accompany the robbers to the bank.

Enroute there the leader of the trio, gunman, a young red-haired man, told Carter they were taking him to open the vault after the time lock had made it possible.

At the bank they found Fred Stalvey, the cashier, had already opened the vault. Taking what money was in the vault the robbers then forced Stalvey, Carter and Mrs. Carter in their car and left.

Three blocks from the bank Mrs. Carter was put out and the robbers left with Carter and Stalvey. Mrs. Carter ran home and released her children and then advised police of the robbery.

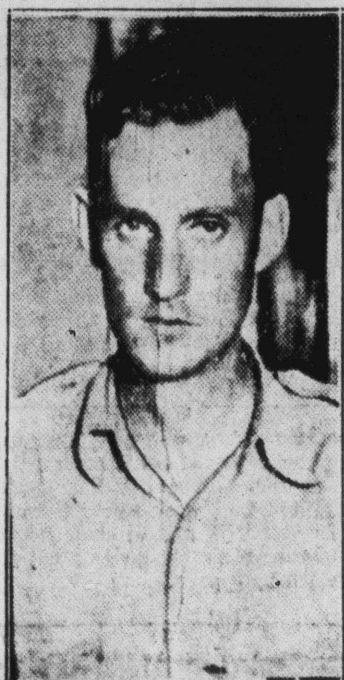

By that time the bank robbers were out of Lake City and word of their again came from Lamar, 30 miles from here they had been released unharmed.

LEAF PRICES PICKUP HERE

Average of $27.25 Per Hundred Established on Local Market Yesterday

Tobacco prices continued to swing upward on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday and the official report of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, indicated that one of the best averages of the season was established.

Mr. Cobb said the market handled a total of 917,386 pounds of leaf for $249,987.36 at an average of $27.25 per hundred pounds.

The supervisor said "better grades were getting better" each day with indications of continued improvement as the quality of leaf increases. The market floors were cleared during the late afternoon to receive comparatively heavy offerings today. However, work was expected to be completed during the late afternoon with the market being in fine shape to receive large amount of the golden leaf tomorrow.

Tobacco men have advised farmers all along to keep their tobacco free of strings and this warning was repeated today in the hope of helping the growers receive better prices than those paid for tobacco with strings and not properly graded.

On a second similar charge he was given a six months' concurrent sentence.

Around twenty cases were disposed of in the opening session and a similar number were expected to be cleared from the docket in the sitting today.

It was the first sitting of the court in two weeks by reason of the two weeks' session of Superior court, which was adjourned here last Friday afternoon.

Several of the actions facing this session of the lower court had been sent to the higher court but were returned for final disposition.

The cases yesterday involved charges of larceny, violation of prohibition laws, assault and driving drunk. Numbers of the defendants found their way to the roads while others were released on the payment of fines. The remainder of the actions handled during the day follow:

To Meet On Cotton Situation. Washington, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Heads of the silk, woolen and cotton industrial organizations announced they would meet today in an effort to effect a plan of defense against alleged intimidation forcing workers who desire to remain at their jobs to walkout.

At the conference will be George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Arthur Desse, president of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers, and Peter Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles.

Governor To Enforce Law

Raleigh, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Governor Ehringhaus shortly after one o'clock this afternoon telegraphed R. R. Lawrence, president of the State Federation of Labor, at Gastonia, that he would take "drastic measures" and use the full force of the law unless he was immediately assured that non-striking textile employees would be free from molestation by flying squadrons of strikers or others. He requested an answer immediately.

Just after the governor dispatched his warning message he was called on long distance phone by President Lawrence and read the telegram to him. When the governor completed reading the message he said Lawrence assured him he would do his level best to curb the unlawful activity of flying squadrons and others in the ranks of the strikers.

Appealing for protection of workers who desire to continue on their jobs the governor telegraphed in part:

Federal Inspector To Visit Pitt Today To Decide On Shipment Of Drought Stock

The prospect of Pitt county obtaining an assignment of drought cattle appeared somewhat brighter today with announcement that a federal inspector was expected here sometime today to look over the situation.

R. L. Little, emergency farm director, said today he had been informed by Raleigh that the inspector would reach the city sometime today to look over available pasture land and pass on whether or not the county is in line for a shipment of the cattle which the government is taking out of western drought districts and shipping to fertile pastures of this part of the country.

Mr. Little said he had just completed a survey of pasture lands in all sections of the county and found that 2,500 acres are available at this time. Sometime ago it was announced that 1,000 acres were obtainable. Since that time, however, Mr. Little said numbers of farmers had signified a desire to turn over their land for this purpose.

The county has already put in its (Continued on Page Four)

S. C. BECOMES FOCAL POINT OF WALKOUT

Five National Guard Companies Called Out to Take Care of Situation

Charlotte, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Greenville, S. C., with five national guard companies on duty and two more enroute today became the focal point of southern strike resistance as "flying squadrons" of unionists continued to force close downs in numerous points in the Carolinas.

Two national guards companies from Rock Hill where cotton mills are tightly closed passed through here early today enroute to join other companies already on duty in the Greenville area.

At mills in the Greenville urban area continued operation in the face of reports that flying squadrons were mobilizing from both states in an effort to extend strike control over 6,500 workers who remained on their jobs in Greenville county.

An independent survey of the two states this morning showed approximately 92,000 workers were on strike or idle because of the close downs.

Figures compiled by the North Carolina Department of Labor revealed the percentage of idle in that state was not so great as had been indicated by unofficial figures. The department records showed 111,000 in the state subject to strike call. Of these 97,000 are in the cotton textile industry, 12,000 in the silk and rayon industries and 2,000 in woolen mills. Of the total 58,000 were were out.

The Associated Press survey indicated 284 mills closed in the two states, more than a score open with only skeleton forces inside and in the neighborhood operating normally.

Close down reports continued to come from scattered points, some 10,000 workers being added to the list of idle late yesterday and early today.

Mills closed early today included the Hart Plant at Tarboro, forced out by a flying squadron from Roanoke Rapids.

Three of four plants closed by a flying squadron which reached Lexington yesterday tried to reopen today but without success as workers declined to report.

A citizen's committee of 25 organized a protection force at Marion, N. C., last night determined to have no repetition of disorders such as those in 1929 when six pickets (Continued on Page Four)

FORGER FACES NEW CHARGES

Charles Yountz Charged With Forging Checks on State Highway Body

Charles R. Yountz of Thomasville arrested by police here over the week-end on a charge of forging checks in various parts of the country, is also wanted on a charge of forging checks on the State Highway Commission. It was made known today by Chief of Police George Clark.

Yountz, who sailed under several aliases while practicing his unlawful business, was returned to Wilson yesterday where he was charged with passing several checks on the Highway Commission as well as on Wilson firms.

The total amount of forged checks passed by the man was not determined, Chief Clark said, by reason of the fact that it was impossible to obtain a definite check on his activities in the several places where he is wanted.

Yountz was said to have served two years in state prison for forgery in Durham.

He was nabbed by local authorities after information concerning his activities had been sent here by the Wilson police department.

Chief Clark said the man was taken into custody here before he had a chance to get lined up in the check-forging business.

INQUIRY ALSO TO BE MADE IN MILL WALKOUT

Board Consisting Of Three Members to Attempt to Settle Differences in General Walkout; Action Requested in Letter From Labor Relations Board; Effectiveness of Strick Matter of Doubt

Hyde Park, Sept. 5.—(AP)—President Roosevelt determined today to name immediately a special board to inquire into and mediate the wide-spread textile strike.

The president acted upon the request of the national labor relations board. He will name aboard probably three members and the personnel will be announced very shortly.

The national labor board, asked to withdraw from the strike negotiations, is to serve in the capacity of a court of appeals in the labor dispute.

"From our knowledge of the situation," said the labor board in a letter to the president, "we are satisfied that meditation looking toward a termination of the strike can best go forward by your creating a special board under public relations 44 with full authority to probe the cause of the strike and to propose a basis for settlement."

Aside from this move however, the president is contemplating no federal interference in the strike involving thousands of workers. He undoubtedly will wait to receive the first hand report of the special board.

The letter asking the board was signed by Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman. Meanwhile sporadic violence broke (Continued on page four)

CITY FATHERS TO MEET HERE

Regular Monthly Meeting of Board of Aldermen Scheduled For Thursday Night

The Board of Aldermen will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow night, but it was said today that nothing of any importance had developed for consideration.

The board last month completed its budget, obtained funds to finance completion of the swimming pool and tomorrow night will confine its attention largely to consideration of routine business.

Mayor R. C. Flanagan who has taken a week off at Seven Springs since the last meeting, returned home considerably rejuvenated but not entirely recovered from the illness which has been giving him much trouble for the last several months.

Barring a relapse, he is expected to preside over tomorrow night's deliberations.

The board is prepared to begin the new year firmly determined to stay within its budget as it did the past year and to save taxpayers as much money as possible. In spite of slight increase in the cost of operating the government, the board reduced the tax rate one cent this year while other cities of similar size were increasing theirs.

MONSTER SHARK IS CAPTURED IN HYDE

Kinston, Sept. 5.—A report from Belhaven today said a 435-pound shark, undrestood to have been taken in Pamlico sound or adjacent waters, was dragged ashore at a Hyde county point by men who caught it. The fish was the largest seen in the section in years. It was not classified, but was believed to have been a fa man-eating species.

Numerous sharks have been hooked around Swansboro and Cape Lookout this season, some of dangerous species but none of large size.

RIVER HERE NOW NORMAL

Tar River at Six Foot Stage After Going On Big Rampage The Past Week

No further danger of a second rise of Tar river, which was well within its banks today, was seen, by B. T. Clark, local weather observer.

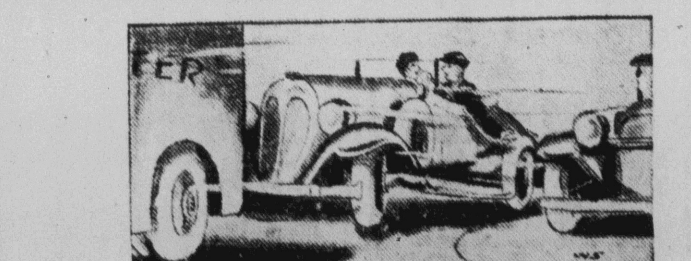

Mr. Clark said the muddy water was at a six foot stage today after having gone above 14 feet last week in the first freshet in several months.

The river has been falling gradually since it reached its crest the latter part of last week and today was standing just about normal.

With continued rainfall the first of the week, Mr. Clark expressed fear of a second rise of the water but the situation was relieved with slight precipitation Monday night and clearing skies yesterday.

Had rain fall in other sections been as heavy as they were here over the week-end the river probably would be out of its banks now but such was not the case and the stream for the first time in over a week was normal today permitting cattle to return to lowgrounds which were flooded with several feet of water last week.

DRIVE CAREFULLY TODAY

WHEN TO SLOW DOWN

The lowest priced car you can buy today will go 70 miles per hour. It is being operated upon roadways which encourage a high speed. But conditions and circumstances frequently require a slow speed if accidents are to be avoided. This requires a great deal of ability and judgment on the part of the operator. Inattention to driving at high speed increases the potential danger greatly. At 60 miles per hour the car will travel 88 feet in one second; less time than it takes to turn you head to look at something interesting along the roadway.

SENATOR SIMMONS RIGHT

In a statement in opposition to the proposed new constitution upon which the people of North Carolina will vote at the coming November election, former Senator F. M. Simmons covers the whole thing in a few words when he says:

"Beyond all dispute there are many admirable and desirable provisions in the proposed new Constitution, but their importance pales before the dangers of its obnoxious provisions."

We agree heartily with the Senator that there is much in the proposed new Constitution that would be obnoxious to the people of this State for some of its provisions have already been voted down by the people on several occasions. There is no doubt that there are some provisions of our present Constitution that need changing but the way to get them changed is to submit them to the people in the form of individual amendments rather than this effort to cover up a lot of bad features with a few good ones and thereby place the fate of our State in the hands of a few people.

Again we urge our people to vote AGAINST the proposed new Constitution in the coming election.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE

(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Upton Sinclair's victory in California has stirred the interest of thoughtful politicians as no previous event in years.

A few scoff, choosing to regard the whole affair as a bubble. The majority take no such view. They see at least a possibility that something really vital, something historic and revolutionary, in the broadest sense, is happening among the voters.

To many, such questions as the effect on the "new deal," the possible embarrassment to Mr. Roosevelt, the obvious stimulus to a further breaking down of existing party lines, all appear incidental and rather unimportant.

The present thoughts of high political leaders go a great deal deeper than that.

They envisage the country facing a growing crystallization of sentiment on two sides of a battle front so extensive as to dwarf mere questions of parties, personalities or ordinary political expediency.

The Sinclair landslide was the second notable piece of evidence on that subject which has gone into the record within the space of a few days.

TIGER ISLAND A New Serial by Gouverneur Morris

SYNOPSIS. Ivy Green, who with Flint Bowers is the big game hunter, is cutting for a cargo of wild animals on the way to Singapore. And then Flint, radio operator of the S. S. Boldero follows Ivy to her cabin and tries to force her to hear his protestations of love.

Chapter 19 SIMPLE RUSE

"Who's going to know?" said Flint hoarsely. "Be a sport. She had said that if he did not at once open the door she would start screaming. He had not opened the door and she had not started to scream. He was inexperienced and these facts gave him hope.

He advanced a short step and she drew back an equal distance and a little more to the right, a little nearer to the water-bottle.

Her entire manner changed. Her eyes softened and he thought that she was going to be what he had called a sport. A good yielding sport. Her next words convinced him that this was the case. She spoke in a quick half-whisper.

"Isn't it better to bolt the door?" she asked.

It is doubtful if any man in history ever turned more quickly to the bolting of a door, yet the business

The light began to fall but the simple washdress upon which she had been engaged was finished. She had planned to make several more but Bowers dissuaded her. This one would do to go ashore in, and once she was ashore, she would no longer have to sew for herself. Others would see to that.

Helen joined them, climbed lightly to Ivy's shoulder and chattered in her ear.

"What's she saying?" asked Bowers with a smile.

"She's been talking to the caged monkeys," said Ivy, "and they've insulted her because she's free and has hats and frocks and a trunk and suitcase all her own. She says that they're nothing but low-down monkey-trash."

BUT Ivy's attention was on neither Helen nor Bowers. It was almost time for the "Get Ready" gong, when she and Bowers would both go below to change for dinner and her attention was on the door by which Flint, if and when he recovered consciousness, might be expected to emerge.

It would be altogether unpleasant if Bowers were to discover him prone on the floor of Ivy's cabin. Explanations would not fit the case. The truth would have to be told, and required two hands. The door itself had sagged on its hinges and had to be lifted by the handle so that the bolt could be shot. The door was heavy and required a strong lift.

As Flint strained eagerly upward on the brass doorknob, Ivy swung the heavy water-bottle and brought it down with stunning concussion on the top of his head. He dropped in a heap, his fingers twitching. She recovered her sewing materials, stepped across the unconscious man, opened the cabin door and went on deck.

Ivy's face was untroubled and her first thought on gaining the deck was how much fresher the air was than it had been down in that hot stuffy cabin. Flint was not the first man to be quieted and brought to order by a blow on the top of the head with a bottle or a carafe.

She did not think that she had killed him and she did not much care. His devotion which had really touched her had all ended in beastliness. Men like Flint were probably better dead. What was he doing anyway under the Chinese flag? Didn't he have a flag of his own?

WHEN presently Bowers joined her, having been worsted, he admitted humbly, in his argument with Wong Bo, she made no mention of the unpleasant scene with the wireless operator. If Bowers learned what had happened, he would feel, manlike, that something drastic had to be done about it. Flint had been sufficiently punished.

She did not believe that he himself would talk about what had happened, or molest her again. On the other hand, she longed to tell Bowers.

They were on their honeymoon. She longed to tell him everything that she knew and there were many things of course, that she must never tell him, but still the strategy of getting Flint to bolt the cabin door while she cracked him over the head was immensely to her credit and she wanted her husband to know what a smart girl he had married in the sight of God.

the capitalistic system, is swept into the Democratic nomination for governor of California by a primary majority which obviously found many thousands of Republicans coming over to his support.

Here manifestly are two beacon lights of history. One shines for capitalism from the tradition-steeped eastern seaboard. The other beams from the Pacific coast across the newer west.

It is impossible to overlook the geographic aspect. Difficult it would be to imagine the Liberty League thundering from Idaho or Sinclair's EPIC program sweeping Vermont.

be a decisive test must depend in large degree on the course of events which human ingenuity has been unable, thus far, to control.

It was the depression which deepened the breach, which produced the tendencies against which the Liberty League is protesting, and stirred the unrest which gave Sinclair his victory.

If times grow definitely better, historical precedent would indicate a drawing-together again under the banner of a satisfying prosperity.

If times are worse, the natural expectation would forecast a growing estrangement—perhaps a struggle for mastery such as this nation never has seen before. One interesting thing about it is that in the present stage, such a large number of voters prefer to stand between the two extremes.

It may be that in the next phase we shall have in this country, not the two powerful basic political parties so long predicted, but three—the conservative, the liberal, and the radical. That would delay, but might not evade, the clear-cut decision toward which present events are pointing.

The World of Stamps

By QUINTON JAMES

Canada's third commemorative of the summer, a two-cent red brown stamp celebrating the 150th anniversary of the province of New Brunswick, has just had its mail inauguration.

Similar in size to the three-cent Cartier commemorative of Canada, it bears the seal of New Brunswick together with the dates 1784-1934.

What has been described as a "slight controversy" over the design to be used developed before the stamp came out. In its original announcement, the postoffice department said, "The stamp will carry a vignette to depict the original seal of New Brunswick which was prepared under the authority and direction of Queen Victoria."

People of New Brunswick thereupon declared the original seal was prepared in the time of George III, not of the queen. After a study of the question, postoffice historians agreed the seal was prepared in 1784 and granted by George III, not Queen Victoria.

They said that while the original seal of George III apparently is no longer in existence, subsequent seals granted the province were replicas of the original, including that issued under authority of Queen Victoria.

Britain's Newest The long-heralded reissue of the stamps of Great Britain finally is making its appearance. The photograph process is used but there is no basic alteration in the general design. However, the change in the method of printing does have the effect of throwing the king more to the forefront. At the same time the colors are intensified.

The original design of the stamps was first presented in 1912 and has continued in use since, with an occasional addition of a new value and with four changes in watermarks. In that time, however, there have been three special issues, the British Empire exhibition sets of two stamps each in 1924 and 1925 and the postal union congress issue of 1929. This later set contains five stamps.

WOMAN BUILDS CABIN; TREE IS 'REFRIGERATOR'

Fairview, Okla.—(AP)—Maida Rumsey, 40 years old, solved her own housing problem. On the banks of a canyon half a mile from the highway and an equal distance from her father's ranch house on the prairie of western Major county, a small log cottage was built under Miss Rumsey's supervision.

Red cedar logs were split and smoothed to make walls for the interior. Rough logs formed the exterior of the cabin. Enough dirt was placed on top of the structure to make the building cool and provide a flower garden.

The interior has a fireplace built of native sand rock. Close by the house is Miss Rumsey's natural refrigerator—the hollow trunk of a large oak tree, 18 feet in circumference. In it she keeps her fruits, vegetables, milk eggs and butter.

Turner was armed with a .45 calibre pistol when he was overhauled by the deputy and officers regarded him as a dangerous character.

FALL'S "WHEEL OF COLORS" REVOLVES AROUND BLACK

Fall fashions have made black the hub around which other colors revolve. Dramatic by itself, black is also highlighted by gleaming metallic accents, bright jewels or touches of white. The black crepe frock illustrated here displays three smart features—the new pencil silhouette, the simulated two-piece effect, and the medieval nun's collar and vestee. island, for those who like to watch the county against the town of Mebane.

The town of Mebane is bringing suit in an effort to force the county to take over the obligations of the town involving indebtedness for special school district expenditures.

Chairman Wade Huffman of the board has said that it is impossible for the county to assume the obligation or enter into a compromise on it, therefore a vigorous defense of the action is to be waged.

In the event the county had assumed the obligation, it is said, it would have set up a precedent that would have made it mandatory to assume the obligations of all special school district obligations voted by citizens within such districts as their own indebtedness.

"Full Flavor," by Doris Leslie (Macmillan): the long story of Catherine Ducron's progress through the Victorian era and almost up to the present; a leisurely "chronicle novel" about a Victorian who was not precisely according to the mode.

"The Tavern Rogue," by Robert Gordon Anderson (Farrar & Rinehart): a giddy story about the Earl of Essex, poet, broiler, fighter and lover in the England of Elizabeth.

"Reshaping Agriculture," by O. W. Wilcox (Norton): a fascinating story of the possible course of agriculture; Dr. Wilcox does not hesitate to give practical hints as well as theoretical analysis.

By JOHN SELBY

Hugh Walpole's "Captain Nicholas" returns Mr. Walpole and his readers to the present, with the purpose of contemplating at leisure what happens when a wholly conscience-less man settles himself in the midst of a who's-who content and thoroughly proper family.

And Mr. Walpole fulfills his purpose with his accustomed straightforwardness. Captain Nicholas is just no good. He has been living without a qualm and with complete dishonesty on his chum and whom-ever was convenient for 10 years. He has not written his sister Fanny And suddenly he arrives at her house.

Slowly Fanny, her husband Charles, her children, her mother-in-law and her brother are drawn into Nicholas' power. He subtly sets one against another, usually without anyone's realizing it. There is a counter theme in the experience of Nicholas' clever but vaguely reptilian daughter. There is a perfectly prepared climax—and the end.

Mr. Walpole has seldom written better prose than in "Captain Nicholas."

The Offer Explained

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Why had these two strange men come to visit Puddle Muddle? Willy Nilly could not understand. And why were they spending so much time chatting idly? Had they no other place to go?

They had complimented his animal friends, and they had congratulated the little man himself on having such a fine collection of friends. That, of course, was perfectly right, and his companions were the finest anywhere. But why did these men have to come here just now and tell him so?

"Your bears are fine bears, too," said the first man.

"Four bears must take up a great deal of room," added the second man.

"Oh, no," said Willy Nilly. "they don't take up much room. They have a fine, big cave and they wander everywhere. The cubs, Jupiter and Blacky, aren't very big anyway."

"But they're big for their ages, growl, growl," said Honey Bear, their mother, with pride.

"Yes, yes," agreed Willy Nilly. He was so puzzled by the men that he must find out what they were doing there.

"You said something about signing a paper," began Willy Nilly.

The two men looked very much pleased.

"That's the idea," one of them exclaimed. "Let's get right down to business and not waste too much time in talking."

"We want your two cubs to come with us and act for the movies."

"You will all share in their fame, and wealth will be yours, for we are ready to pay well for them."

Willy Nilly's Amazement

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"You want the cubs, Blacky and Jupiter to act for the movies?" asked Willy Nilly in amazement.

"That's the idea," agreed the first man.

"We've been wandering around the country taking a few pictures of country life, which explains why we have these two cameras with us," said the second man.

So that was the reason for the two queer objects they had carried along with them.

"And that explains, too, why we knew about these fine cubs of yours," said the first man. "We were talking to people here and there as we wandered about, and that was how we heard of you, Willy Nilly, and of Puddle Muddle."

"We were told about your animal friends and how the two cubs had been born last winter and were just the right age for playing and doing tricks."

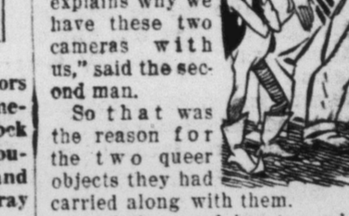

"We have been wanting two cubs for a picture that is to be made in a short time, and after that picture is finished there will be others where the cubs can be very useful."

"They don't do many tricks," said Willy Nilly.

"Oh, we can teach them more," said the first man, "and just seeing them as they are will really be almost enough. They can stand on their hind legs and roll about and eat out of tins and get into amusing scrapes. In fact, they'll be fine; we're sure of that."

"And, as we said before, we're ready to pay well for them," added the second man.

But Willy Nilly was too amazed to speak.

A Washington Day Book

Washington — There's one aspect of the fight for the speakership of the next congress which worries the forces of Byrns of Tennessee more than they will admit publicly.

It is the close personal friendship which exists between two avowed candidates for the post—Rayburn of Texas and Bankhead of Alabama—and a third powerful democrat in the house—McDuffie of Alabama, unsuccessful candidate for speaker in the last congress.

The friendship of these three men is proverbial on and off capital hill. Collectively they command wide power and prestige in the house. For years they have been members of that little group of men on the inside who really make the democratic wheels go round.

If the fight reaches the point where "deals" must be made it would seem logical for this triumvirate to be on the same side.

On The Bay State Stage.

The democratic high command here is watching with the keenest but at the same time most cautious interest the contest being staged in Massachusetts for the gubernatorial nomination among the democrats.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston and Gen. Charles H. Cole are engaged in a bitter scrap for the honor.

The administration's interest is particularly keen because James Roosevelt, the President's son, has had a lot to say about patronage in the Bay State, and Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, claims residence down Fall River way. Another reason is that Curley out of office because by statute a mayor cannot serve two successive terms, was the original Roosevelt man in 1932.

Cole has the endorsement of the state pre-primary convention and the support of Senator Walsh and Governor Ely. Curley has the not inconsiderable advantage of a strong Boston machine.

If Hugh Wilson, American minister to Switzerland since 1927 and Uncle Sam's foremost authority on all questions concerning disarmament conferences, has been looking for a document from China, it will arrive in the next diplomatic pouch from Washington.

It's been on the way for months. The document was mailed from Nanking to Wilson, addressed to Washington. It arrived at the post office here and was held for postage. Still in search of Wilson it was sent to the department of commerce. Then it went to NRA where it was dispatched to the newly-

BALL PLAYERS GET $57.54 IN FINAL SERIES

Players of the Greenville club of the Coastal Plain league left yesterday afternoon for their homes in various parts of the country after they had received a liberal slice from the receipts of the championship series which they won the day before by taking the fourth straight game out of six with the Kinston club.

R. L. Powell, secretary of the club, said this morning the players received sixty per cent of the receipts from the first four games, the funds from the other two games going to the clubs. The amount received by each player here was $57.54 after all expenses, including state and federal taxes had been deducted.

Members of the Kinston club received forty per cent of the gate receipts, but owing to the fact that the club had a considerable sum of money in the treasury at the end of the season, it was said they received almost as much as Greenville players.

Powell said the total amount taken in during the series was $3,132.05. He said the largest amount was represented in the Kinston game last Sunday when over two thousand people were on hand to see the Greenville club make it three out of five and pave the way to capturing the series the next day.

Both club officials and players were highly gratified by the way things panned out. Kinston went into the series the favorite to take at least four straight games. On paper, Dun Hearn's boys were booked to win six to one, but after taking the first two games of the series Greenville settled down to business and took four in a row to keep the flag on the home lot another season.

Kinston came out in first place the end of the season and Greenville second. Greenville captured the championship last season and the flag was raised here during the summer with a special day being set aside for the purpose.

G. V. Smith, president of the club expressed satisfaction over the final victory of his club and declared he hoped Greenville would be able to put another fast moving machine in the field next season to continue to keep the banner flying over Third Street school grounds as an indication of the city's supremacy in the field of the popular American sport.

How effective the strike had become was a matter of doubt for there was wide difference between estimates of employers and labor leaders as to the number of workers who had answered the strike call.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute said his report from cotton mills employing 246,000 of the 410,000 on the industry payroll showed 92,000 had gone on strike or 27 per cent.

While the equity list found a few more followers than in the previous dull session the proceedings were colorless. The metals lead the modest improvement.

The new shares of United Aircraft United Airlines and Boeing Airplane made appearances on a "when issued" basis but they were only moderately active.

Deaver Captured. Raleigh, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Dr. J. W. Ashby, superintendent of the State Hospital, was notified today by the chief of police of Pembroke that a man whose description tallied with that of Ed Deaver, who led seven criminals in an escape here last week had been arrested here.

Yesterday the state offered $200 reward for his capture.

Dr. Ashby said an officer who knew Deaver would be sent there to see if the man under arrest is the fugitive.

INDIANS' BLOOD SHRINE PERPETUATED BY ICEW Pipestone, Minn.—(AP)—The temple of tradition here—quarries where legend says Indian blood stained the rock red—is being perpetuated by government funds made available through the United States conservation work.
